WOODROFFE AND AMEER ALI'S

LAW OF EVIDENCE

APPLICABLE TO BRITISH INDIA

EIGHTH EDITION

BY

SIR JOHN WOODROFFE

READER IN INDIAN LAW TO THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, FORMERLY A JUDGE OF THE HIGH COURT AT CALCUTTA

CALCUTTA AND SIMLA

THACKER, SPINK & CO.

1925

broader in treatment than those which precede the Chapters, while these again exhibit less detail than is found in the notes appended to the sections. Elementary notions are explained and a general, and sometimes historical, survey of the subject of the sections is given in the several Introductions which also contain references to matters akin to, but not part of, the actual material of the Act. While these Introductions will, as the Authors hope, be of aid to students, the separation of their subject-matter from the commentary to which alone the profession will in general refer, should spare the practitioner in search of decisions bearing directly upon the meaning of the sections unnecessary reading. A short paragraph immediately follows each section presenting with all possible brevity the principle upon which it is founded and has been enacted. This paragraph is succeeded by a note of cognate sections, which in turn is followed by a collection of references to standard English, American, or Indian text-books dealing with the material of the section. The Authors are indebted in part for the idea of this arrangement to Mr. S. L. Phipson's work on the Law of Evidence. Next comes the Commentary proper on the section which elucidates its important words and phrases by the aid of the case-law and text-books.

The work as thus finished departs in many respects from the original and advertised plan of its Authors. At the outset they proposed to write a short Commentary for the use of the profession only and to collect therein the provisions of all other Acts on the Indian Statute-book which touch upon this branch of the law. They, however, realised in the course of their task that though a book so planned might be of assistance to members of the profession practising in the Presidency Towns with large libraries available for reference, it would yet be of little use to others in the mofussil. The attempt to serve a wider circle of readers has entailed a large increase in the bulk of the work beyond the limits originally proposed, while the length of time consumed in its preparation in its modified form has prevented the inclusion of that complete collection of provisions of other Acts bearing upon this branch of the law to which allusion has been made. The more important of these provisions (taken from more than a hundred Acts and Regulations) will, however, be found in the Commentary. We have retained and revised the former Appendices relating to the Places to which the Act has been applied, the Law Commissioners' Report and Proceedings in Council. But we have omitted the former Appendices on Stamps, Registration, Oaths and Banker's Books, as separate treatises exist on, at any rate, the first three subjects and it is necessary to make room for added matter in the eighth Edition of a book already bulky. The Proceedings in Council prior to the passing of the Bill, have, we think, been generally considered useful as they and the Introduction of Sir James F. Stephen, here reprinted, form a complete explanation of the Act by its chief framer and others who approved of, and were responsible for it.

The Authors desire to acknowledge the assistance they have derived from the standard works on the Law of Evidence: published in India, in England, and in America. In especial, much aid has been gained from the American text-books, amongst which are perhaps the most valuable and scientific works on this branch of the law. Amongst the text-books laid under contribution we wish particularly to indicate the work of Professor J. H. Wigmore (Treatise on Evidence: An Encyclopedia of Statutes and cases up to March 1904, 4 vols., Canadian Edition, containing English cases) a valuable and exhaustive book written in an original and modern spirit and thus free of what Bentham calls "grimgribber nonsensical reasons" for the rules of evidence. The Law of Evidence as it obtains in the Courts of the United States, is founded upon the English Law and is in nearly every respect identical with the law which prevails in England and in India; and though it is not of binding authority upon Indian Judges, yet the decisions of those Courts are, as Lord Chief Justice Cockburn said in England (Scaramanga v. Stamp, L. R., 5 C. P. D., 295, 303), and Sir Lawrence Peel observed in India (Braddon v. Abbot, Tailor and Bell's Reports, 342, 359, 360; Malcolm v. Smith, ib., 283, 288), of great value to a correct determination of questions for which our own or the English law offers no solution. Any unnecessary and therefore excessive citation of this foreign law is to be deprecated (See Misssouri Steamship Co., 42 Ch. D., 321, 330, 331). The Indian case-law has been examined up to the end of 1924. The Appendices have been revised to date and the Bibliography, which, so far as I know, is the only one of its kind, has been both revised and considerably enlarged. It is instructive in this connection to note how few are the cases on evidence in the English Law Reports of recent years as compared with the past. This circumstance is due to the growing sense of the inutility of many objections to evidence and to a desire to free all judicial enquiry of anything which, without sound and certain justification, may baulk or hinder it. The dictum of the Judicial Committee in Ameeroonissa Khatoon v. Abedoonissa Khatoon, 23 W. R., 208, 209, now represents also the views of other English Courts. It may, however, be necessary to add that a proper interpretation and liberal application of the law is not the same thing as the abrogation of it. In order, however, to find grist for the mills of the numerous Indian Journals a considerable number of cases are the subject of report which have not the importance which calls for it. This observation, however, applies to all branches of the law.

23*rd February*, 1925. J. W.

CONTENTS.

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

PART I.

RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

CHAPTER I

PRELIMINARY.

CHAPTER II.

PART II.

ON PROOF.

CHAPTER III.

CHAPTER IV

CHAPTER V.

CHAPTER VI.

PART III.

PRODUCTION AND EFFECT OF EVIDENCE.

CHAPTER VII.

SECTIONS. PAGE.

CHAPTER VIII.

CHAPTER IX.

CHAPTER X.

CHAPTER VI.

PART III.

PRODUCTION AND EFFECT OF EVIDENCE.

CHAPTER VII.

SECTIONS. PAGE.

CHAPTER VIII.

CHAPTER IX.

CHAPTER X.

CHAPTER XI.

APPENDIX.

ADDENDA OF CASES.

S. 3.—Proof in criminal cases A person cannot be convicted on circumstantial evidence unless the circumstances are such as to exclude all reasonable probability of his innocence Muhammad Yar v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 938 (1922). Standard of Proof, In re Motilal Ghose, 45 C., 160.

S. 8.—A statement by a girl alleging that she was raped, made immediately after the rape is admissible as an explanation of her act of crying under this section. Soosalal v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 1214, as also under s 157 by way of corroboration (ib.).

S. 11.—Evidence adduced to elucidate history and status of connected families. Sarada Prasanna v Umakanta, 37 C. L. J, 233

S. 14.—Where accused is charged with belonging to a gang of dacoits, evidence of offences other than dacoity is inadmissible Emperor v. Sher Mahomed, 46 B., 958; s c, 24 Cr. L. J, 867

Statement of accused immediately after occurrence is relevant to show state of his mind. Kalor v Emperor, 25 Cr L. J, 1005 (1924)

S. 21.—This section read with ss 9, 11, admits as evidence all previous statements made by an accused bearing on the question of his guilt to whomsoever the statement has been made. Madan v Emperor, 4 P L. T, 381; s. c., 24 Cr. L. J., 723.

Statement of accused as witness in a previous case is admissible under this section. Emperor v Banarsi, 25 Cr. L. J, 477 (1923).

Introduction, Admissions, Confessions.—A confession may be held proved even where the evidence gives only the substance, though not the actual words Nur Ali v. Emperor, 5 L., 140 (1924)

Evidence may be given of confession provided not expressly excluded, whether made to private person or Magistrate otherwise than in course of judicial enquiry. If proved, it must be so proved like any other fact In re Tangedypalli, 23 Cr L. J, 680 (1921)

[illegible] t be accepted as evidence of [illegible] given to it depends on circ[illegible] but its maker Emperor v. [illegible]

It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a retracted confession cannot be accepted without corroboration Moti Ram v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L J., 904 (1923), approving statement in this Text Book.

Retracted confession. Sukha Raul v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 17 (1923); Mahomed v. Emperor, ib, 574 (1920)

Proof of confession: See Nur Ali v. Emperor, 25 Cr L. J., 914 (1923).

S. 24.—Application of: Khilal v. Emperor, 21 All. L. J., 143 (1923).

A lambardar is a "person in authority." Muhammad Yar v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 939 (1922)

A confession under hope of pardon is inadmissible. Tara v Emperor, 45 A., 633 (1924); s. c., 24 Cr. L. J., 785.

"Person in authority" includes the prosecutor. Ashutosh v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J, 573 (1921).

S. 25.—In Burma a village headman is not a Police Officer. Nga Myin v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 924 (1923); s. c, 2 R, 31.

A statement which is not an admission of guilt is admissible. Jalal v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 811 (1922).

A confession to the Police is not to be used as against the person making it. It is not inadmissible for all purposes. Gulab v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., (1922)

Excise officers are not public officers within the scope of this section. Tillibai v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L J, 1223.

A confession is excluded under this section, but a statement to a Police Officer not amounting to a confession may be used against the accused. Ramhit v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J, 193 (1921)

A Kotwar in the Central Provinces is not a Police Officer. Sukhwaria v. Emperor, 25 Cr L J., 147 (1923).

S 26.—"Magistrate" includes those in Native States. Govinda v. Emperor, 23 Cr L. J, 673 (1920).

Ss. 26 and 27.—Meaning of "in custody" Maung Lay v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 380 (1923).

Application of. Manna Lal v. Emperor, 25 Cr L. J, 40 (1923).

Application of. In re Naina Malai, 23 Cr. L J, 697 (1921).

S. 30.—When two accused are tried jointly for a major offence, a confession by one implicating himself in a minor offence is admissible against the other accused. In re Manicka, 24 Cr. L. J, 385 (1921); Ramessan, J, diss.

The expression "proving a confession" is inapplicable to the procedure where the Judge asks questions and an accused gives explanations under a special section provided for that purpose. Mahadeo Prasad v. Emperor, 21 A. L J, 179, diss. from Emperor v. Chinna, 23 M., 121.

A confession recorded according to the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code is not inadmissible because it may contravene the instructions of a criminal circular. Such a confession may be considered under this section Govinda v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 673 (1920)

The case next cited draws attention to the fact that a statement can be used under this section only if its provisions are applicable Ramhit v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L J., 193 (1921)

What is contemplated by the section is formal proof by the prosecution of a confession previously made, and not a statement made in the dock by one accused against the other in a joint trial. Mahadeo v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 305 (1923)

"Confession" does not here include an inculpatory admission falling short of an admission of guilt. Sheo Amber v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 391 (1923).

A conviction of an accused based solely on the confession of a co-accused cannot stand without independent evidence entirely outside the confession. In re Lilaram, 25 Cr. L. J., 1041 (1924). The headnote to Hayat v Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 561 (1921) says that a confession by one accused should not be considered as regards another, where the confession was not intended to implicate the maker of it, but actually did so Sed quære if Court laid this down as a point of law and if so sed quære. The Act says "affecting himself" that is, it is submitted, affecting in fact whatever the intention may have been. The fact, however, that the confession was not intended to implicate the maker of it may go the weight of the evidence.

Application of s 30 See Radhi v. Emperor, 25 Cr L J, 13 (1923), Suka v Emperor, ib, 17 (1923), Sheo v Emperor, ib, 391 (1923) In re Lilaram, ib, 1041 (1924) Sheroo v. Emperor, ib, 1067 (1924), Mahadeo v Emperor, ib, 305 (1922). Mahmud v Emperor, ib., 574 (1920)

S. 32. (1)—Proof of dying declaration by person who heard it where Magistrate recording it has since died Emperor v Balaram, 24 Cr. L J, 221 (1921)

Gestures are admissible but the meaning of them is for the Court to say, not the witnesses. Chandrika v Emperor, 1 Pat, 401; s. c, 24 Cr. L. J, 129 (1923).

Nodding head and making signs amount to verbal statements Ranga v. Emperor, 5 L., 305

Mode of proof of dying declaration Call some witness who heard it made, who may refresh his memory as provided by the Act Kanj Lal v Emperor, 23 Cr. L J, 417 (1922), following Emperor v. Mathura Thakur, 6 C. W N, 72.

Signs are verbal statements Emperor v Sadhu, 25 Cr. L J, 529 (1921)

Statements made by a deceased several days before cause of death are inadmissible. Section also only refers to statements made by a deceased as to injuries Antar Singh v Emperor, 25 Cr L. J, 1140 (1923)

S. 32 (5,6)—Books kept up by family bards or priests containing entries of domestic events in the families to which the bards or priests are attached, admitted in evidence. Ananda v. Nand Lal, 46 A., 665 (1924).

S. 33.—Before evidence can be admitted the requirements of the Section must of course be complied with. Dwarka v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J, 828 (1921)

S. 33.—Inadmissible evidence may be perfectly good if admitted by consent of parties. In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution actual prosecution is not necessary. It is sufficient if the defendant has taken an active part. Radha Kissen v. Kedar Nath, 46 A., 815.

The section is not applicable to the deposition of a witness in a former suit, when the witness is himself a defendant in a subsequent suit and the deposition is sought to be used against him not as evidence given between the parties one of whom called him as a witness, but as a statement made by him whether he made it as a witness or on any other occasion. The sections of the Evidence Act applicable are those relating to admissions. Ali Mahomed v. Sheik Maharaj, 39 C. L. J., 186.

S. 35.—A certificate of a Magistrate recording the voluntariness of a confession is good primâ facie evidence, but not conclusive of the fact recorded. Nur Singh v. Emperor, 25 O. C., 229 (1922); s. c., 24 Cr. L. J., 561.

S. 57.(7)—The Court may take judicial notice of the signature of the Chief Secretary to Government. Cholancheri v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 403 (1923).

S. 58.—Admissions of Counsel in criminal trial cannot form the basis of a legal decision. Emperor v. Jaswant Rai, 5 L., 404 (1924).

S. 60.—Inasmuch as an accused cannot give evidence whilst on his trial, secondary evidence of an identification of a co-accused by him is inadmissible. Khetal v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 526; s. c., 45 A., 208.

Application of. Kalar v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 1095 (1924). Hearsay evidence excluded. Ashutosh Das v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 289 (1921).

Ss. 65, 74, 76 and 77.—Certified copies of income-tax returns do not come within the meaning of these sections and are not admissible. Anwar Ali v. Tafozal Ahmed, 2 R., 391 (1924).

Ss. 74 and 77.—Report of delivery of possession by process server is a public document of which a certified copy may be given. Ballu v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 917 (1924).

Ss. 74 and 80.—A confession recorded outside British India but in conformity with the Criminal Procedure Code is admissible under s. 80, and probably under s. 74. Govinda v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 673 (1920).

S. 78.—Application of. Mahomed v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 111 (1923); proof of order of Government sanctioning prosecution. Mahomed Ozioolah v. Beni Madhub, 36 C. L. J., 180; s. c., 50 C., 135.

S. 86.—Provisions of imperative. Murli Das v. Achut Das, 5 L., 105 (1923).

S. 91.—The section, even if it covers a deposition, merely excludes oral evidence of its contents but does not make the document itself inadmissible nor prevent its being otherwise proved. Feroza v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 781 (1922).

S. 91.—An unregistered document cannot be received in evidence and in such case s. 91 debars any other evidence of the transaction being given. But the document may nevertheless be admissible for a collateral purpose, such as to show possession. Maharani Janki v. Birj Bhilan, 3 Pat., 349 (1924).

Mortgage without registered deed. Sec. 91 of the Evidence Act bars other proof. Entries in authorized maps and revenue registers evidencing mortgage can be acted upon by Courts only when evidence other than documents is admissible. Maung Tun v. Maung Khan, 2 R., 441 (1924).

Omission to read over a deposition to a witness renders it inadmissible and oral evidence of its contents is excluded by this section. Emperor v. Nabab, 41 C., 236 (1923).

Nadapena Appanna v. Saripilli, 47 M., 203 (1923) follows Varada, 43 M., 242 as to the use of inadmissible document for a collateral purpose.

If a document constitutes the bargain, parol evidence is inadmissible; aliter if the document is merely the record of an already completed transaction. Velamakanya Krishnaiya v. Ponnuswami Aiyar, 47 M., 398 (1923).

Use of certified copy. Entisham v. Jamna, 24 Bom. L. R., 675 (1922).

Alleged agreement that apparent agreement would not be enforced; Bai Adhar v. Lalbhai, 24 Bom. L. R., 239 (1922).

S. 92 Prov. (1)—Whilst want or failure or difference in kind of consideration may be proved, evidence to vary the amount of consideration in a registered sale deed is inadmissible. Nor can a person set up his fraud. Annada Charan v. Har Gobinda, 27 C. W. N., 496.

[illegible]

A distinction must be drawn between the cases where the matter sought to be introduced by extraneous evidence is a condition precedent or a defeasance. It may be shown

A confession is excluded under this section, but a statement to a Police Officer not amounting to a confession may be used against the accused. Ramhit v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J, 193 (1921)

A Kotwar in the Central Provinces is not a Police Officer. Sukhwaria v. Emperor, 25 Cr L. J, 147 (1923)

S 26.—"Magistrate" includes those in Native States. Govinda v. Emperor, 23 Cr L. J, 673 (1920)

Ss. 26 and 27.—Meaning of "in custody" Maung Lay v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 386 (1923).

Application of Manna Lal v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L J., 49 (1923).

Application of In re Naina Malai, 23 Cr. L. J, 697 (1921).

S. 30.—When two accused are tried jointly for a major offence, a confession by one implicating himself in a minor offence is admissible against the other accused In re Manuka, 24 Cr L J, 385 (1921); Ramessan, J., diss.

The expression "proving a confession" is inapplicable to the procedure where the Judge asks questions and an accused gives explanations under a special section provided for that purpose. Mahadeo Prasad v. Emperor, 21 A. L. J, 179; diss. from Emperor v. Chinna, 23 M, 121

A confession recorded according to the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code is not inadmissible because it may contravene the instructions of a criminal circular. Such a confession may be considered under this section Govinda v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 673 (1920)

The case next cited draws attention to the fact that a statement can be used under this section only if its provisions are applicable. Ramhit v Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 193 (1921)

What is contemplated by the section is formal proof by the prosecution of a confession previously made, and not a statement made in the dock by one accused against the other in a joint trial. Mahadeo v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 305 (1923)

"Confession" does not here include an inculpatory admission falling short of an admission of guilt. Sheo Amber v Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 391 (1923).

A conviction of an accused based solely on the [illegible] without independent evidence entirely outside the [illegible] J, 1041 (1924). The headnote to Hayat v Emper[illegible] a confession by one accused should not be considered as regards another, where the confession was not intended to implicate the maker of it. but actually [illegible] Sed quære if [illegible] [illegible]g himself" [illegible] The fact, [illegible] may go the weight of the evidence.

Application of s 30. See Radha v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J, 13 (1923); Suka v. Emperor, ib., 17 (1923); Sheo v. Emperor, ib, 391 (1023) In re Lilaram, ib, 1041 (1924) Sheroo v. Emperor, ib, 1067 (1024); Mahadeo v. Emperor, ib, 305 (1922) Mahmud v. Emperor, ib., 674 (1920).

S. 32. (1)—Proof of dying declaration by person who heard it where Magistrate recording it has since died Emperor v. Balaram, 24 Cr. L. J, 221 (1921)

Gestures are admissible but the meaning of them is for the Court to say, not the witnesses Chandrila v. Emperor, 1 Pat., 401; s. c, 24 Cr. L. J, 129 (1923).

Nodding head and making signs amount to verbal statements Ranga v. Emperor, 5 L., 305

Mode of proof of dying declaration. Call some witness who heard it made, who may refresh his memory as provided by the Act. Kunj Lal v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J, 417 (1922), following Emperor v. Malkura Thakur, 6 C. W. N., 72.

Signs are verbal statements Emperor v. Sadhu, 25 Cr. L. J., 529 (1921)

Statements made by a deceased several days before cause of death are inadmissible. Section also only refers to statements made by a deceased as to injuries. Antar Singh v Emperor, 25 Cr L. J., 1140 (1923)

S. 32 (5,6)—Books kept up by family bards or priests containing entries of domestic events in the families to which the bards or priests are attached, admitted in evidence. Ananda v. Nand Lal, 46 A., 665 (1924).

S. 33.—Before evidence can be admitted the requirements of the Section must of course be complied with. Dwarka v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 828 (1921)

S. 33.—Inadmissible evidence may be perfectly good if admitted by consent of parties. In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution actual prosecution is not necessary. It is sufficient if the defendant has taken an active part. Radha Kissen v. Kedar Nath, 46 A., 815.

The section is not applicable to the deposition of a witness in a former suit, when the witness is himself a defendant in a subsequent suit and the deposition is sought to be used against him not as evidence given between the parties one of whom called him as a witness, but as a statement made by him whether he made it as a witness or on any other occasion. The sections of the Evidence Act applicable are those relating to admissions. Ali Mahomed v. Sheik Mahomy, 36 C. L. J., 186.

S. 35.—A certificate of a Magistrate recording the voluntariness of a confession is good primâ facie evidence, but not conclusive of the fact recorded. Nur Singh v. Emperor, 25 O. C., 229 (1922); s. c., 24 Cr. L. J., 561.

S. 57.(7)—The Court may take judicial notice of the signature of the Chief Secretary to Government. Cholancheri v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 403 (1923).

S. 58.—Admissions of Counsel in criminal trial cannot form the basis of a legal decision. Emperor v. Jaswant Rai, 5 L., 404 (1924).

S. 60.—Inasmuch as an accused cannot give evidence whilst on his trial, secondary evidence of an identification of a co-accused by him is inadmissible. Khetal v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 526; s. c., 45 A., 396.

Application of. Kalar v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 1095 (1924). Hearsay evidence excluded. Ashutosh Das v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 289 (1921).

Ss. 65, 74, 76 and 77.—Certified copies of income-tax returns do not come within the meaning of these sections and are not admissible. Anwar Ali v. Tafozal Ahmed, 2 R., 391 (1924).

Ss. 74 and 77.—Report of delivery of possession by process server is a public document of which a certified copy may be given. Ballu v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 917 (1924).

Ss. 74 and 80.—A confession recorded outside British India but in conformity with the Criminal Procedure Code is admissible under s. 80, and probably under s. 74. Govinda v. Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 673 (1920).

S. 78.—Application of. Mahomed v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 111 (1923); proof of order of Government sanctioning prosecution. Mahomed Ozioolah v. Beni Madhub, 36 C. L. J., 180; s. c., 50 C., 135.

S. 86.—Provisions of imperative. Murli Das v. Achut Das, 5 L., 105 (1923).

S. 91.—The section, even if it covers a deposition, merely excludes oral evidence of its contents but does not make the document itself inadmissible nor prevent its being otherwise proved. Feroza v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 781 (1922).

S. 91.—An unregistered document cannot be received in evidence and in such case s. 91 debars any other evidence of the transaction being given. But the document may nevertheless be admissible for a collateral purpose, such as to show possession. Maharani Janki v. Birj Bhikan, 3 Pat., 349 (1924).

Mortgage without registered deed. Sec. 91 of the Evidence Act bars other proof. Entries in authorized maps and revenue registers evidencing mortgage can be acted upon by Courts only when evidence other than documents is admissible. Maung Tun v. Maung Khan, 2 R., 441 (1924).

Omission to read over a deposition to a witness renders it inadmissible and oral evidence of its contents is excluded by this section. Emperor v. Nabab, 41 C., 236 (1923).

Nadapena Appanna v. Saripilli, 47 M., 203 (1923) follows Varada, 43 M., 242 as to the use of inadmissible document for a collateral purpose.

If a document constitutes the bargain, parol evidence is inadmissible; aliter if the document is merely the record of an already completed transaction. Velamakanya Krishnaiya v. Ponnuswami Aiyar, 47 M., 398 (1923).

Use of certified copy. Ehtisham v. Jamna, 24 Bom. L. R., 675 (1922).

Alleged agreement that apparent agreement would not be enforced; Bai Adhar v. Lalbhai, 24 Bom. L. R., 239 (1922).

S. 92 Prov. (1)—Whilst want or failure or difference in kind of consideration may be proved, evidence to vary the amount of consideration in a registered sale deed is inadmissible. Nor can a person set up his fraud. Annada Charan v. Har Gobinda, 27 C. W. N., 496.

A distinction must be drawn between the cases where the matter sought to be introduced by extraneous evidence is a condition precedent or a defeasance. It may be shown that an instrument was not meant to operate until the happening of a given condition, but it cannot be shown by parol evidence that the agreement is to be defeated on the happening of a given event. Ali Jawad v. Kulanjan Singh, 44 A., 421 (1922), referred to Ramjiban Serowjy, 25 C., 401 (1897)

S. 92. Prov. (3)—Application of. Agreement contemporaneous with a promissory note—admissibility of. Manickjee v. Maung Po Han, 2 R., 483 (1924)

S. 92.—The Privy Council admitted evidence to show that a document, ostensibly a sale, was a mortgage, observing that they did not subscribe to the view taken by the High Court. But as appears from the judgment (738) the case was disposed of on fact without reference to any oral evidence, other than that of surrounding circumstances Narasinghji v Panuganti, 47 M., 729 (1924) Where a deed of partition is inadmissible the fact of partition may be proved by parol, but not the terms of partition Jai Ram v. Rajnarain, 45 A., 21 (1923) referred to, Chhotalal v Bai Mahakore, 41 B., 466

Where all the terms of a contract have not been reduced to writing the terms left unembodied can be proved by oral evidence Coalfields of Burma v. Johnson, 2 R., 575.

Ss 92 and 93.—Notwithstanding the latter section, Proviso (1) to the former section allows, in proof of fraud or mistake, evidence to fill in a blank in a document Maung Gyi v. Hakim Ally, 2 R., 113 (1923)

Ss.* 101 and 104 — Onus of proving permanent right of occupancy. Narnapillai v Ramanathan, 47 M., 337 (1923)

Onus of proving sanity of accused in an enquiry under s 465 (1) Criminal Procedure Code is on the Crown Emperor v. Gopi Saha, 51 C., 827 (1924)

S 105. —A Court cannot be bound to presume the absence of circumstances which the Prosecution evidence itself proves to have been present Mir Alam v Emperor, 23 Cr L. J., 726, 728 (1922)

The onus of proving a case to be within Exception (1) to s 300, Indian Penal Code, is on the accused Kakar v Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 1005 (1924)

S. 105 says nothing about pleas but only enacts a rule of onus of proving certain circumstances But if the prosecution has already preformed that task for the accused, it is not necessary for the latter to do it over again Mangal v. Emperor, 25 Cr L J, 1077 (1924).

The section does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. The circumstances to be proved may otherwise appear from the record Anandi v Emperor, 45 A., 329 (1923), s c., 24 Cr L J, 225.

As to application of section, see Narain v Emperor, 23 Cr. L. J., 513 (1922) It applies only to criminal prosecutions for defamation. Ma Mya Shwe v Maung Maung, 2 R., 333 (1924)

As to application of section as regards provocation and self-defence, see Nga Po Thaik v Emperor, 2 R., 558

S. 106.—Application of section to proof of mesne profits As to those actually received, onus is on person receiving them, but as to profits which might with diligence have been received, onus is on person claiming them. Ramakka v Nagesam, 27 M., 800 (1923).

S. 106. Illus. (a).—Application of. See Khetramani v Emperor, 24 Cr L. J., 104, 106 (1922).

S. 111.—Meaning of pardanashin Sri Ram v. Nand Kishore, 5 L., 465

S. 112.—Applies irrespective of the question whether the mother was a married woman or not at the time of the conception. Palani v. Sethu, 27 M., 706 (1924).

S. 114.—Possession of stolen property. Presumption Bharos v. Emperor, 25 Cr. L. J., 912 (1923); Ramudra v. Emperor, 24 Cr. L. J., 426 (1922).

S 115.—No estoppel because no alteration of position. William Jacks v. Jorab Mahomed, 48 B., 38 (1923).

S. 115.—Statement prior to suit that property valued more than Rs 100 had been sold does not estop person making it where there is no registered deed. Maung Po Tin v. Maung Tet Tu, 2 R., 459 (1924).

S. 115 [illegible]
and pa [illegible] title. [illegible]
from d [illegible]
Kanwar, 46 A., [illegible] (1924)

Dispute settled without legally binding document parties act upon it mutually and nothing remains to be done on either side. Courts in India applying Equit [illegible] hold parties and their representatives estopped from challenging the settlement. K [illegible] jraj Tewari, 46 A., 847 (1924).

TABLE OF CASES CITED

F

G

TABLE OF CASES CITED.

K

S

W

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

THE Bibliography here given is by no means strictly complete. Omitted therefrom are · (1) Works on psychology, logic and rhetoric; (2) Works of the civilian and scholastic jurists [such as the Corpus Juris Glossatum, Heineccius on the Pandects, Mascardus De Probationibus, Menochius De Præsumptionibus, Endemann's Beweislehre, Weiske's Rechtslexicon, Savigny's Romische Recht, Puffendorf, Grotius, Cujaccius Voet, Hertius, Strykius, Puchta, Helter and others]; (3) Works on Continental law; (4) Works incidentally, but not specifically and directly, dealing with the subject of Evidence [as, for example, Russell on Crimes, Foster's Crown Law, Hawkin's Pleas of the Crown, Blackstone's Commentaries, Collinson, Pope, and Shelford on Lunacy, Bishop on [illegible] her works treating of the [illegible] ally much matter relating [illegible] gest sub voc 'Estoppel';
[illegible] Magazines [of which there [illegible] most part well known practical works specifically dealing with the subject, and in present or past use by the profession.—Ed.

(A) CHRONOLOGICAL CLASSIFICATION.

(WORKS ON THE ENGLISH, SCOTCH AND AMERICAN LAWS OF EVIDENCE.)

1735. The Law of Evidence wherein all the cases that have yet been printed in any of our Law Books or Trials, and which in any wise relate to points of Evidence are collected and methodically digested under their proper heads, with necessary table to the whole 2nd Ed., London, 1735.

[The anonymous author observes in his Preface that prior to this collection there was nothing of this nature extant besides the 11th Chapter of a Book entitled Trials per Pais which was very defective. Ed]

1744. NELSON (W)—The Law of Evidence. Third Edition.

London, 1744.

1756. GILBERT—The Law of Evidence, by Lord Chief Baron Gilbert.

London, 1756.

[2nd Ed (*); 3rd Ed, 1769, 4th Ed, 1777, 5th Ed, 1791—1796, 6th Ed., 1801, by James Sedgwick This is the first of the recognised text-books on the subject. Mr. Best (Ev, p 70) says, that it is to Lord Chief Baron Gilbert, that we are principally indebted for reducing our law of evidence into a system. Ed]

1761. Theory of Evidence.

[This anonymous work is in substance Part VI of the anonymous first edition (1767) of what afterwards appeared as Buller's Nisi Prius; it is found also in all subsequent editions Thayer's Cases on Evidence, p. 1028]

London, 1761.

1801. PEAKE—A Compendium of the Law of Evidence, by Thomas Peake.

London, 1801.

1802. McNally—The Rule of Evidence on Pleas of the Crown illustrated from Printed and Manuscript Trials and Cases, by Leonard McNally, 2 vols.

London and Dublin, 1802.

1810. Swift—A Digest of the Law of Evidence in Civil and Criminal Cases, by Zephaniah Swift, one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the State of Connecticut.

Hartford, 1810.

1812. McKinnon—The Philosophy of Evidence, by Daniel M'Kinnon.

London, 1812.

1814. Phillips and Ames—A treatise on the Law of Evidence, by the Right Hon. S. March Phillips and Ames, and (subsequently) Thomas James Arnold

London, 1814.

[2nd Ed., 1815; 3rd Ed., 1817; 4th Ed., 1820; 5th Ed., 1822, 6th Ed., 1824; 7th Ed., 1829, 8th Ed., 1838, 9th Ed., 1843; 10th Ed., 1852 (latest) Ed.]

1820. Glassford—An Essay on the Principles of Evidence and their application to subject of judicial enquiry, by James Glassford.

Edinburgh, 1820.

1824. Starkie—A practical treatise on the Law of Evidence, by Thomas Starkie, 3 vols.

London, 1824.

[2nd Ed., 1833 (2 vols), 3rd Ed., 1842 (3 vols.); 4th Ed., 1853 (latest), by George Morley Dowdeswell and John George Malcolm. There is an American Edition (10th, 1876) taken from the fourth English Edition with references to American Cases by George Sharswood Philadelphia, 1876. Ed.]

1825 Bentham—A treatise on Judicial Evidence extracted from the Manuscripts of Jeremy Bentham, Esq., by M. Dumont, Member of the Representative and Sovereign Council of Geneva. Translated into English.

London, 1825.

[A translation of Dumont's "Traite des Preuves Judiciares," published in 1823; v. post, 1827 Ed.]

1825. Espinasse—A practical treatise on the settling of evidence for trial at Nisi Prius and on the preparing and arranging the necessary proofs, by Isaac Espinasse

London, 1825.

[This is a 2nd Ed.: quære date of first. Ed.]

1825 Uniacke—Evidence forming a title of the Code of legal proceedings according to the plan proposed by Crofton Uniacke, Esq., by S. B. Harrison.

London, 1825.

[An early attempt at codification. Ed.]

1827. Bentham—Rationale of Judicial Evidence specially applied to English Practice from the Manuscripts of Jeremy Bentham, Esq., Bencher of Lincoln's Inn, in five volumes. Ed. John S. Mill.

London, 1827.

[The ... times ... on al. ... Law ... of th. ... form), an As Professor Wigmore says, in less than three generations nearly every reform which Bentham advocated for the Law of Evidence has come to pass. Law of Evidence, vol. iv, § 2251. Ed.]

1827. MATHEWS, (J. H.)—A treatise on the doctrine of presumption and presumptive Evidence as affecting the title to real and personal property.

London, 1827

1827. ROSCOE—Roscoe's Digest of the Law of Evidence on the trial of Actions at Nisi Prius.

London, 1827.

[Quœre title of first edition ; 2nd Ed , 1831 , 3rd Ed , 1834 ; 4th Ed , 1836 , 5th Ed , 1839 ; 6th Ed , 1844 ; 7th Ed , 1849 ; 8th Ed , 1851 ; 9th Ed , 1858 ; 10th Ed , 1861 , 11th Ed , 1866 ; 12th Ed , 1870 , 13th Ed , 1875 , 14th Ed , 1879 , 15th Ed , 1884 , 16th Ed., 1891 , 17th Edn 1900 ; 2 vols , 18th Ed 1907 : by Maurice Powell Ed]

1830 GRADE—A practical treatise on the General Principles and Elementary Rules of the Law of Evidence, by Richard Grade.

London, 1830.

1831. WIGRAM—An Examination of the Rules of Law respecting the admission of extrinsic evidence in aid of the interpretation of wills, by the Right Hon. Sir James Wigram

London, 1831.

[2nd Ed , 1835 , 3rd Ed , 1840 , 4th Ed , 1858 (latest), by W Knox Wigram Ed]

1834. TAIT—A treatise on the Law of Evidence in Scotland by George Tait.

Edinburgh, 1834.

[This is the 3rd Edition by Adam Urquhart Ed]

1835. ROSCOE—Roscoe's Digest of the Law of Evidence in Criminal cases.

London, 1835.

[Quœre title of first edition , 2nd Ed , 1840 , 3rd Ed , 1846 , 4th Ed , 1857 , 5th Ed , 1861 , 6th Ed , 1862 , 7th Ed 1868 , 8th Ed , 1874 , 9th Ed , 1878 , 10th Ed , 1884 , 11th Ed , 1890 , 12th Ed by A. P. Percival Keep, 1898, 1 vol Ed , 13th Edn , (1908) by Herman Cohen]

1836. GRESLEY—A treatise on the Law of Evidence in theCourts of Equity by Richard Newcombe Gresley.

London, 1836.

[A work dealing with the system of evidence prevalent in the Court of Chancery, 2nd Ed , 1847 (latest), by Christopher Alderson Calvert. Ed]

1838. WILLS—An Essay on the Principles of Circumstantial Evidence, by William Wills.

London, 1838.

[Quœre date of 2nd Ed , 3rd Ed., 1850 ; 4th Ed , 1862 , 6th Ed., edited by Alfred Wills Ed]

1842 GREENLEAF—A treatise on the Law of Evidence, by Simon Greenleaf, LL.D.

Philadelphia, 1842

[1st Ed., in one vol. ; 2nd Ed., 1844—1846 ; 3rd Ed , 2 vols., 1846; quœre as to subsequent editions until 1896, the date of the last edition in 3 vols., revised with additions by William Draper Lewis, who states in his preface that in upwards of 20,000 cases on evidence the Courts have referred to some section of Mr. Greenleaf's work to support their decisions. Ed.]

1861. RAM—A treatise on Facts as subjects of Enquiry by a Jury, by James Ram.

London, 1861.

[illegible]

1861. WORSLEY (F.)—Expediency of passing an act to permit defendants in criminal Courts and their wives or husbands to testify on oath.

London, 1861.

1863. BLUNDELL—(B) Testimony on Oath in Criminal Cases. 1863.

1863. STEPHEN (Sir J. F. J.)—On trial by jury and the evidence of Experts.

London, 1863.

1865. BADDELY—Privilege of confessions, religions, by Baddely.

1865. WADDILOVE (A.)—On the amendment of the Law of Evidence, in order to admit the testimony of parties in all Civil Suits and of defendants in Criminal Trials.

London, 1865.

1868. BURRILL—A treatise on the Nature, Principles and the Rules of Circumstantial Evidence, especially that of the presumptive kind in criminal cases, by A. M. Burrill.

New York, 1868.

1868. NORTON (J. B.)—Notes on evidence extracted from the works of Best, etc. 1868.

1870. KERR (W. W.)—The Law of Discovery,

London, 1870.

1871. HOPWOOD (E. H.)—On the law relating to Confessions in Criminal Cases.

London, 1871.

1871. MAURICE (F. D.)—Ought any person to be excluded from giving evidence on the ground of religious unbelief.

London, 1871.

1872. BIGELOW—A treatise on the Law of Estoppel and its application in Practice, by Melville M. Bigelow.

Boston, 1872.

[Quære date of 2nd and 3rd Ed.; 4th Ed., 1886, 5th Ed., 1890 (latest) Ed.]

1876. STEPHEN—A Digest of the Law of Evidence, by Sir James Fitzjames Stephen.

London, 1876.

[illegible] 1876, December, 1876, with many [illegible] Ed., 1893 (latest) There is also [illegible] English Edition, with Notes from [illegible]

1877. WHARTON—A Commentary on the Law of Evidence in Civil Issues. by Francis Wharton, LL.D.

Philadelphia, 1877.

[2nd Ed., 1879, 3rd Ed., 1888 (latest) Ed.]

1879. NASMITH (D.)—The institutes of English adjective law (procedure in Court) embracing an outline of the Law of Evidence.

London, 1879.

1879. PHILLIPS—Famous cases of Circumstantial Evidence, by S. M. Phillips.
Jersey, 1879.

[This is the 4th American Edition of the English work by the author of Phillips on Evidence. Ed.]

1880. BEST—An Exposition of the Practice relative to the Right to Begin and Reply, by W. M. Best.
Burlington, N. J., 1880.

[This is an American Edition of the English work. Quære date. Ed.]

1880. WHARTON—A treatise on the Law of Evidence in Criminal Issue, by Francis Wharton, LL.D. 8th Ed.
Philadelphia, 1880.

[8th Ed. 1880; 9th Ed, 1884; 10th Ed, 1912 Previous to 1880, the date of the 8th [illegible] Law, the [illegible] 4th Ed, [illegible] Wharton's [illegible] the date [illegible] Ed.]

1882. KIRKPATRICK (J.)—Digest of the Scottish Law of Evidence. 1882.

1883. REYNOLDS—The Theory of the Law of Evidence as established in the United States and of the Conduct of the Examination of Witnesses, by W. Reynolds Chicago, 1883.

[2nd Ed, 1890; 3rd Ed, 1897 Ed.]

1883 ROGERS—The Law of Expert Testimony, by H. W. Rogers, LL.D.
St. Louis, Mo., 1883.

[2nd Ed, 1891, re-written and enlarged. Ed]

1884 EVEREST AND STRODE—The Law of Estoppel, by L. F. Everest and E. Strode
London, 1884.

1885. GRAY—A treatise on Communication by Telegraph, by Morris Gray.
Boston, 1885.

[A fourth of this book deals with the subject from the point of view of the Law of Evidence. Ed.]

1886 LAWSON—The Law of Presumptive Evidence including presumptions, both of law and of fact, and the burden of proof both in Civil and Criminal cases, by John D. Lawson
San Francisco, 1886.

[The law of presumptive evidence is here reduced to definite rules. Ed.]

1886. LAWSON—The Law of Expert and Opinion Evidence reduced to rules, by John D. Lawson.
San Francisco, 1886.

1886. WOOD—Practice Evidence for ready use in the trial of causes, by H. G. Wood
New York, 1886.

1887. RAPALJE—A treatise on the Law of Witnesses, by Stewart Rapalje.
New York, 1887.

1887. SICHEL—The Practice relating to Witnesses in all matters and proceedings, Civil and Criminal, at, after and before the trial, or hearing, both in the superior and inferior Courts, by Walter S. Sichel.
London, 1887.

1887. WARNER—Law of Evidence under the Code of Civil Procedure of the State of New York, by Henry E. Warner.

Albany, 1887.

1888. CABABÈ—An Essay on the Principles of Estoppel, by M. Cababè.

London, 1888

1889. HAGEMAN—Privileged Communications as a branch of Legal Evidence, by John Frelinghuysen Hageman.

New Jersey, 1889.

1889. JAMES—The Ohio Law of Opinion Evidence, expert and non-expert, by Francis B. James.

Cincinnati, 1889.

1891. ABBOTT—A brief on the modes of proving the facts most frequently in issue or collaterally in question on the trial of Civil or Criminal cases, by Austin Abbott of the New York Bar.

New York, 1891.

[3rd Ed, 1912.]

[By the same author "A brief for the trial of civil issues before a jury" and "A brief for the trial of criminal cases." See also 1895. Ed]

1892 HARRIS—A treatise on the Law of Identification, by G E. Harris.

Albany, 1892

[Identity of persons and things—animate and inanimate—living and dead—Mistaken identity—corpus delicti—opinion evidence The author omits the subjects of poisoning and drowning Ed]

1892. PHIPSON—The Law of Evidence, by Sidney L Phipson.

London, 1892

[2nd Ed, 1898; 3rd Ed, 1902; 4th Ed, 1907, 5th Ed, 1911, 6th Ed, 1921]

1892. RICE—The General Principles of the Law of Evidence with their application to the trial of civil actions and criminal cases, 3 vols., by Frank S. Rice

Rochester, N. Y., 1892.

[The first two volumes deal with civil actions and the third with criminal cases Ed.]

1892. THAYER—Select Cases on Evidence at the Common Law with notes, by J. B. Thayer, LL.D, Professor of Law at Harvard University.

Cambridge, 1892.

["The only writer who has added much to our knowledge of the principles of evidence since Bentham:" Sir William Markby in Preface to his Indian Evidence Act]

1893. BROWNE—A treatise on the Admissibility of Parol Evidence in respect to written instruments, by Irving Browne.

New York, 1893

1894. HAGAN—A treatise on Disputed Handwriting and the determination of genuine from forged signatures. The character and composition of inks and their determination by chemical tests. The effect of age on documents, by W. E. Hagan, Expert in Handwriting.

New York, 1894

[See also Le Faux—Maquillage, Decalquage Graphotypie par Gustave Hasse, Paris 1898. Ed.]

1894. WILLS—The Theory and Practice of the Law of Evidence, by William Wills.

London, 1894.

1895. Abbott—Select cases in the Law of Evidence as applied during the examination of witnesses, by Austin Abbott, LL.D.
New York, 1895.

1895. Williams and Macklin—The taking of Evidence on Commission, by W E Hume Williams and A Romer Macklin.
London, 1895.

1896. Jones—The Law of Evidence in Civil Cases, by Burr. W. Jones, 3 vols
San Francisco, 1896

1896. Thayer—A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law, Part I, Development of Trial by Jury, by J B Thayer, LL.D.
Boston, 1896.

1896 Will—A treatise on the Law of Circumstantial Evidence, by Arthur P. Will.
Philadelphia, 1896

1897. Browne—Short Studies in Evidence, By I. Browne.
U. S., 1897.

1897. Gillett, (J H.)—Indirect and Collateral Evidence,
U. S., 1897.

1898. Allen, (W. B.)—The Criminal Evidence Act, with a short history of the Act by Sir H. B. Poland, 1898.

1898. Bradner—Rules of Evidence as prescribed by the Common Law for the trial of actions and proceedings, by George W. Bradner.
Chicago, 1898.

1898 Butterworth—The Criminal Evidence Act. By A. R. Butterworth
London, 1898.

1898. Jelf—The Law of Evidence in Criminal cases under the Act of 1898, by Ernest Arthur Jelf.
London, 1898.

1898. Morgan, (C. B.)—Criminal Evidence Act, 1898

1898. Stephen, (Sir H.)—Prisoners on Oath, present and future.
London, 1898.

1898. Thayer—A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law, by James Bradley Thayer, LL.D.
London, 1898.

[This is the full work of which the volumes published in 1896 contained the first four Chapters Ed.]
London, 1898.

1899. Straker—Compendium of Evidence, by D. Augustus Straker.
Detroit, 1899.

1900. Ewart, (J. S.)—Exposition of the Principles of Estoppel by misrepresentation.
1900.

1902. Canada—The Criminal Code of Canada and the Canadian Evidence Act. Montreal, 1902 and Toronto, 1910.

1902. EWBANK, (L. B.)—Indiana Trial Evidence.

Indianapolis, 1902.

1902. TREMECAR, (W. J.)—Criminal Code and Law of Criminal Evidence in Canada.

Toronto, 1902.

1903-10. CAMP, (E. W.) AND CROW, (J F.)—Encyclopædia of Evidence, 14 volumes.

U. S., 1903-10.

1903 WELLMAN, (F. L.)—The art of cross-examination.

N. Y., 1903.

1904. BODINGTON—Outline of the French Law of Evidence, By O. E. Bodington.

1904.

1904 ELLIOTT, (B K andW F)—Treatise on the Law of Evidence. 4 vols.

Indianapolis, 1904-5.

1904. WIGMORE, (J. H)—Treatise on the Law of Evidence 1904-15. 5 vols.

1904. WIGMORE—Treatise on Evidence An Encyclopædia of Statutes and cases until March 1904. Canadian Edition in 4 vols, by J H Wigmore, 5 vols. 1905.

1905. GULSON (J. R.)—Philosophy of Proof in its relation to the English Law of Judicial Evidence. 1905

1905. KNOWLES (V. D.)—Evidence in Brief 1905

[2nd Ed, 1910.]

1906. CHADMAN (C. E.)—Criminal Procedure and Evidence

1906

1906. HUGHES (T W.)—Illustrated Treatise on the Law of Evidence.

U. S., 1906

1906. KENNEDY (R L.)—Trial Evidence.

U S., 1906

1906. WILSHERE (A N. M.)—Outlines of evidence and procedure in an action in the King's Bench Division. 1906.

[2nd Ed, 1913]

1907. COCKLE—Leading Cases on the Law of Evidence. By E. Cockle

1907.

[2nd Ed., 1911, 3rd Ed, 1915]

1907. HAMMON (L L.)—On Evidence

U. S., 1907

1907. MCKELVEY (J. J)—Handbook of the Law of Evidence, 2nd Edition. U. S., 1907

1907. REYNOLDS (A E.)—Brief Summary of the Law of Evidence 1907

1908. KINGSFORD (R. E.)—Evidence and Practice at Trials in Civil Cases. Toronto, 1908.

[Another Ed., in 1911.]

1908. PHIPSON (S. L.)—Manual of the Law of Evidence, 1908.

[2nd Ed., 1914; 3rd Ed., 1921.]

1910. UNDERHILL (H. C.)—Treatise on the Law of criminal evidence. Indianapolis, 1910

1911. CHAMBERLAYNE—Treatise on the Modern Law of Evidence. By C. F. Chamberlayne. N. Y., 1911.

1911. DE COLYAR (H. A.)—Notes on the Presumption of Death. London, 1911.

1911. MAUDE (W. C.)—Justice's Handbook of the Law of Evidence. 1911.

1912. HIBBERT (W. N.)—Law of Evidence. 1912.

[2nd Ed, 1915; 3rd Ed., 1920; 4th Ed, 1922]

1912. REYNOLDS (W.)—Trial Evidence: The Rules of Evidence and the Conduct of Examination of Witnesses. U. S., 1912.

1912. RICHARDSON (W P.)—Outlines of Evidence. U. S., 1912

1913 THROCKMORTEN (A H)—Illustrative Cases on Evidence. U. S., 1913

1913. TURNER (F. G)—New Jersey Law of Evidence. U. S., 1913.

1913. WIGMORE (J. H.)—Principles of judicial proof. U. S., 1913

1913. WIGMORE (J. H)—Select Cases on the Law of Evidence, Second Edition U. S., 1913.

1914. CARLSON (M.)—Handwriting Testimony and kindred subjects. California, 1914.

1914. HENRY (J. M.)—Pensylvannia Trial Evidence. U. S., 1914.

1914. MACNEAL (J. A.)—Law of Evidence in Civil and Criminal Cases. U. S, 1914.

1915. LOCKHART (W. S.)—Handbook of the Law of Evidence for North Carolina. U. S., 1915.

1915. PERKINS (W. D.)—Evidence by Survivor. U. S., 1915.

1915. TREGARTHEN (J. B. C.)—Law of Hearsay Evidence. 1915.

1915. WIGMORE (J. H.)—Pocket code of the rules of evidence in trials at law. U. S., 1915.

1915. Wrottesley (F. J.)—Examination of witnesses in Court, including examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination. 1915.

1916. Carter (J. P.)—Law of Evidence.

U. S., 1916.

1916. Willis (J. W.)—A digest of the rules and practice as to interrogatories for the examination of witnesses in Courts of Equity and Common Law with precedents.

London, 1916.

1917. Holt, (L. V.) Outlines of the Rules of Evidence. 1917.

1917. Hughes (T. W.)—Pocket Digest of Evidence.

U. S, 1917.

1917 . Watson (C. S)—Inquiry into the basis and development of the principal rules of evidence in English Law. 1917.

1918. Abbott—Trial Evidence By A. Abbott. 3rd Edition. 3 vols.

U S., 1918.

1919. Archer—The Law of Evidence By G. L. Archer.

U. S, 1919.

1919. Chamberlayne—Handbook on Evidence. By C. F. Chamberlayne. U. S, 1919

1921. Hughes (T. W)—Cases on the Law of Evidence.

U. S, 1921.

1921. Medina (H. R.)—Summary of the Law of Pleading, Practice and Evidence in the State of New York. 4th Edition

U S, 1921.

Works on the Law of Evidence in India

1858. Norton—The Law of Evidence applicable to the Courts of the Late East India Company explained in a course of lectures delivered by the Hon'ble John Bruce Norton, Barrister-at-Law, Advocate-General of Madras.

Madras, 1858.

[2nd Ed , 1859 ; 3rd, quære date ; 4th Ed , 1863 , 5th Ed , quære date , 6th Ed , 1868 , 7th Ed , 1869. This book contains the substance of the lectures the author delivered as Professor of Law in the Madras Presidency College]

1862 Goodeve—The Law of Evidence as administered in England and applied to India, by Joseph Goodeve, Barrister-at-law Acting Master of the Supreme Court of Calcutta, and Lecturer on Law and Equity in the Presidency College.

Calcutta, 1862.

[In the preface the author says —" Some progress had been made in the work before [illegible] there was still abundant room for each , and the author persevered in his original design . ... . . it is trusted that the practical character to which at the same time it aspires will not make it useless to those of more advanced position " The author subsequently, and in 1872 after the passing of the Evidence Act, published a Supplement to this book Ed.]

1862. KINDERSELY—A Manual of the Law of Evidence of the Madras Province, by J. R. Kindersely, Madras Civil Service and of Lincoln's Inn.

[This is the date of the 2nd Edition : 3rd Ed , 1865. Ed.]

1867. FIELD—The Law of Evidence in British India, by C. D. Field.

Calcutta, 1867.

[2nd Ed , 1873 , 3rd Ed , 1878 ; 4th Ed., 1884 , 5th Ed., 1894 ; 6th Edn , 1907. The [illegible] relevant) having been recast in a new shape " Ed.]

1869. LE FANU (HY.)—Manual of Question and answer upon the Indian Penal Code, the Law of Evidence, etc.

Madras, 1869.

1872. CUNNINGHAM—The Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872), together with an Introduction and Explanatory Notes, Rulings of the Courts and Index, by Sir Henry Stewart Cunningham, K C I.E

Madras, 1872.

[4th Ed , 1878 , 9th Ed , 1891 ; 10th Ed , 1899 ; 11th Ed., 1908.]

1872. GOODEVE—The Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) being a Supplement to " The Law of Evidence as administered in England and applied to India." by Joseph Goodeve

Calcutta, 1872.

[See ante 1868 for author's principal treatise. Ed.]

1872. STEPHEN—An Introduction to the Evidence Act. The Principles of Judicial Evidence, by James Fitzjames Stephen, Q C.

London, 1872.

[Several times reprinted ; last reprint, Calcutta, 1904. Ed.]

1873. NORTON—The Law of Evidence applicable to India adapted to the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872), by John Bruce Norton, late Advocate-General of Madras.

Madras, 1873.

[8th Ed , 1873 ; 9th Ed , 1877. Edited by W M Scharlieb The 8th and 9th Editions are apparently so styled in continuation of the editions of the author's previous work first published in 1858]

1875. WHITWORTH—The Theory of Relevancy for the purpose of Judicial Evidence, by George Clifford Whitworth, Bombay Civil Service.

Bombay, 1875.

[2nd Ed , 1881. Ed.]

1882. LEWIS—The Indian Evidence Act with speeches delivered by the Law Member, with reference to the Indian Evidence Bill, etc., by C. G. Lewis.

Calcutta, 1882.

1890. GRIFFITH—The Indian Evidence Acts (I and XVIII of 1872) with an Introduction on the Principles of Judicial Evidence and Commentaries, by William Griffith, Barrister-at-Law.

London, 1890.

1893. BROUGHTON—Estoppel by Matter of Record in Civil suits in India, by L. Broughton

London, 1893.

1893. CASPERSZ—The Law of Estoppel in British India (Tagore Law Lectures, 1893), by Arthur Caspersz.

Calcutta, 1893

[A second edition was published in 1896 under the title "Estoppel by representation and Res Judicata" 3rd Ed, 1909; 4th Ed, 1915 Ed]

1894. CHAND—A treatise on the Law of Res Judicata, by Hukm Chand,

London, 1894.

[Printed at Bombay, Ed.]

1894. MITRA AND SIRKAR—The Case-noted Evidence Act, by Bijay Keshab Mitra and Ashutosh Sirkar, B L.

Calcutta, 1894.

1894. RAHA (P. K.)—Analysis of Best's Principles of the Law of Evidence.

1894 SARKAR—The Indian Evidence Act with notes, illustrative cases and other explanatory remarks and comments, etc., by Kishori Lall Sarkar, M A., B L.

Calcutta, 1894.

[2nd Ed, 1894 Quære date of 1st Edition Ed]

Calcutta, 1894.

1895. MITRA—The Law of Evidence in British India with Notes, etc, by A. C. Mitra

Calcutta, 1895.

1895. MORISON (H. N.)—Advocacy and Examination of Witnesses.

Calcutta, 1895.

[2nd Ed., 1905.]

1896. BANERJI—The Indian Evidence Act (No. I of 1872 as amended by Act XVIII of 1872), together with an Introduction and Explanatory Notes, Rulings of the Courts and Index, by Tarapada Banerji, B L.

Calcutta, 1896.

1897. MARKBY—The Indian Evidence Act with notes, by Sir William Markby K C.I.E., late a Judge of the High Court of Judicature at Calcutta; Reader in Indian Law in the University of Oxford

London, 1897.

1898. VIJAYARANGA PILLAI—Guide to the Indian Evidence Act 1872 as amended 1898.

1903. CHAUDHURI (PRASANNA NARAYANA)—Confession and Evidence of Accomplice.

Calcutta, 1903.

1906. ARNOLD—Psychology applied to Legal Evidence.

Calcutta, 1906.

[2nd Ed., 1913.]

1907. MONNIER (E. R.)—The Law of Confessions.

Calcutta, 1907.

1908. JANAKI NATHA PALA—Indian Evidence Act of 1872. 1908.

1908. THIKAMLAL RANCHODLAL DESAI—Law of Evidence, English and Indian.

Bombay, 1908.

1912. Guide to the principles of the Law of Evidence and the Indian Evidence Act.

Madras, 1912.

1913. CRANENBURGH (D. E.)—Criminal Evidence: being the Indian Evidence Act.

Calcutta, 1913.

1913. TARAPADA BANDYOPADHYAYA—Indian Evidence Act as amended to 1899.

Calcutta, 1913.

1914. KINNEY (A. P.)—Students' Guide to the Law of Evidence in India.

Calcutta, 1914.

1914. NARASIMHACHARI—Law relating to burden of proof in British India.

Madras, 1914.

1915. EGGAR (A.)—A pocket book of Common Sense extracted from the case law relating to Evidence in British India Rangoon, 1915.

1915. MAHIMA CHANDRA SARKAR—The Students' Indian Evidence Act, 1872

Calcutta, 1915.

1915. PRANASANKARA TRIPURASANKARA—The Law of Evidence simplified

Surat, 1915.

1916. EGGAR (A.) Evidence.

Madras, 1916.

1916. KAMALANANDA—Guide to the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Gorakhpur, 1916.

1918. DONOGH (W. R.)—Principles of Circumstantial Evidence applicable to British India.

Calcutta, 1918.

[2nd Ed., 1922.]

1918. HARENDRA NATH MAITRA—Case noted Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Sibpur, 1918.

1919. RATANLALA RANCHHODDARA AND DHIRAJLALA KESAVLALA THAKURA—The Indian Evidence Act.

Bombay, 1919.

(B) CLASSIFICATION BY NAMES OF AUTHORS.

NOTE—For the works of the authors, see the entry given in the previous list against the date mentioned in this

(AUTHORS OF WORKS ON THE ENGLISH, SCOTCH AND AMERICAN LAWS OF EVIDENCE.)

Abbott, 1891, 1895
Allen, 1898
Anonymous, 1735, 1761.
Archer, 1919
Bentham, 1825, 1827
Best, 1844, 1849, 1880, 1911.
Bigelow, 1872.
Bodington, 1904.
Bradner, 1898
Browne, 1893, 1897
Burrill, 1868
Butterworth, 1898
Cababè, 1888.
Camp, 1903
Canadian Act, 1902
Carter, 1916
Chadman, 1906
Chamberlayne, 1911, 1919.
Cockle, 1907, 1915
Davis, 1857
Dickson, 1855
Elliott, 1904
Espinasse, 1825
Garde, 1830
Gilbert, 1756
Gillett, 1897
Glassford, 1820
Gray, 1885.
Greenleaf, 1842
Gresley, 1836
Hagan, 1894
Hageman, 1889
Hammon, 1907.
Harris, 1892
Harrison, 1825
Hibbert, 1912
Holt, 1917.
Hughes, 1906
Hughes, 1917, 1921
Indemaur & Thwaites.
James, 1889.
Jelf, 1898.
Jones, 1896.
Joy, 1842
Kingsford, 1908
Kirkpatrick, 1882.
Lawson, 1886
Lockhart, 1915.
Lowndes, 1843.
Macklin, 1895
Mac Nally, 1802.
Mac Neal, 1914.
Maude, 1911
Maurice, 1921.
Mc Kelvey, 1907
McKinnon, 1812
Morgan, 1898.
Nasmith, 1879
Nelson, 1744.
Norton, 1868
Peake, 1801.
Phillimore, 1850
Phillips, 1843, 1852, 1908.
Phipson, 1892.
Powell, 1858, 1910.
Pam, 1861.
Rapalje, 1887
Reynolds, 1907.
Rice, 1892.
Richardson, 1912
Rogers, 1883
Roscoe, 1827, 1835, 1908
Starkie, 1824
Stephen, 1876, 1922
Straker, 1899.
Swift, 1810.
Tait, 1834.
Taylor, 1848, 1906, 1920
Thayer, 1892, 1896, 1898
Throckmorton, 1913
Tremecar, 1902
Turner, 1913
Underhill, 1912
Wadelove, 1865
Warner, 1887
Watson, 1917
Wharton, 1877, 1880
Wigmore, 1905, 1913, 1915
Will, 1896
Williams, 1895
Wills, 1838, 1894, 1907.
Wilshere, 1906
Wood, 1886.

(AUTHORS OF WORKS ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE IN INDIA.)

Banerji, 1896
Broughton, 1893.
Caspersz, 1893
Cranenburgh, 1913
Cunningham, 1872
Desai, 1908
Eggar, 1915, 1916
Field, 1867
Goodeve, 1862, 1872
Griffiths, 1890
Guide to, 9121.
Hukm Chand, 1894.
Kamalananda, 1916
Kindersley, 1862
Kinney, 1914
Le Fanu, 1869
Lewis, 1828
Maitra, 1918
Markby, 1897
Mitra (A. C.), 1895.
Mitra and Sircar, 1894.
Norton, 1858, 1877.
Pala, 1908.
Pillai, 1898.

Pranasankara, 1916.
Raha, 1894
Ratanlala, 1919
Sarkar, 1915.
Sircar, 1894.
Stephen, 1872.
Tarapada, 1913.
Whitworth, 1875.

(C) CLASSIFICATION BY SUBJECTS TREATED OF.

NOTE.—For the works of the authors, see the entry given in the Chronological List against the date mentioned in this.

ACCESSORIES AND ACCOMPLICES.

Blundell, 1863.
Chaudhuri, 1903.
Maunsell, 1850.

ADVOCACY.

Morison, 1895.

BURDEN OF PROOF (See Act I of 1892, ss. 101—111)

Best, 1880.
Gulson, 1905.
Lawson, 1886
Narasimhachari, 1914.
Wigmore, 1913

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Burrill, 1868
Donogh, 1918
Phillips, 1879.
Will, 1896.
Wills, 1838.

COMMENTARIES ON THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT (Act I of 1872)

Banerji, 1896
Broughton, 1893
Caspersz, 1893
Cunningham, 1872
Field, 1873, 1894
Goodeve, 1872
Griffiths, 1890.
Lewis, 1882
Markby, 1897
Mitra (A C.), 1895
Mitra (B K.), and Sirkar, 1894.
Norton, 1873
Sarkar, 1894
Stephen, 1872
Whitworth, 1875

COMMUNICATION BY TELEGRAPH

Gray, 1885

CONFESSIONS AND CHALLENGE OF JURORS (See Act I of 1872, ss 24—30).

Baddeley (Religions), 1865.
Chaudhuri, 1903
Hopwood, 1871
Joy, 1842
Monnier, 1907

Notes —See also works on Criminal Evidence.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

Wellman, 1903.
Wrottesley, 1913

ESTOPPEL (See Act I of 1872, ss 115—117)

Bigelow, 1872
Broughton, 1893
Cababé, 1888
Caspersz, 1893
Everest and Strode, 1884.
Ewart, 1900
Hukm Chand, 1894

EVIDENCE IN COURTS OF EQUITY

Gresley, 1836

EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL CASES

Allen, 1898.
Burrill, 1868.
Cranenburgh, 1913.
Jelf, 1898.
MacNally, 1802.
Rice, 1892.
Roscoe, 1835
Tremear, 1902.
Underhill, 1910
Wharton, 1880

EVIDENCE ON COMMISSION

Hume, Williams & Macklin, 1895

EVIDENCE UNDER THE NEW YORK CODE

Warner, 1887.

EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE (See Act I of 1872, ss 45—51)

Harris, 1892.
James, 1889
Lawson, 1886.
Rogers, 1883.
Stephen, 1863.

EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE AS AFFECTING DOCUMENTS

(See Act I of 1872, ss 91—100.)

Browne, 1893
Wigram, 1831

FRENCH LAW OF EVIDENCE

Bodington, 1904.

GENERAL WORKS ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE

Anonymous, 1735, 1761
Bradner, 1898
Bentham, 1825, 1827
Best, 1849
Dickson, 1855
Garde, 1830
Gilbert, 1756
Glassford, 1820
Greenleaf, 1842
Harrison, 1825.
Jones, 1896
Knowles, 1905
M'Kinnon, 1812
Peake, 1801
Phillips, 1814
Phipson, 1892.
Powell, 1856
Ram, 1861
Reynolds, 1883
Rice, 1892
Starkie, 1824
Stephen, 1876, 1919
Straker, 1899
Swift, 1810
Tait, 1834.
Taylor, 1848
Thayer, 1892, 1896, 1898
Wharton, 1877, 1880
Wigmore, 1904
Wills, 1804
Wood, 1886

HANDWRITING.

Carlson, 1914
Hagan, 1894

HEARSAY EVIDENCE

Tregarthen, 1915

HISTORY OF THE LAW OF EVIDENCE

Phillimore, 1850
Poland, 1898

IDENTIFICATION

Harris, 1892.
Ram, 1861

INTERROGATING

Stephen, 1858
Sichel, 1883
Wills, 1916

NISI PRIUS EVIDENCE

Abbott, 1891, 1895.
Archbold, 1844
Espinasse, 1825
Peake, 1801
Roscoe, 1827

PRESUMPTIONS (See Act I of 1872, ss. 79—90, 101—114).

Best, 1844
Burrill, 1868
DeCottyar, 1911
Lawson, 1886.
Mathews, 1827

PRISONERS ON OATH

Stephen, 1898.
Worsley, 1861

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS (See Act I of 1872, ss. 121—132)

Hageman, 1889

PSYCHOLOGY APPLIED TO EVIDENCE.
Arnold, 1906.

RELEVANCY (See Act I of 1872, ss 5—16).
Whitworth, 1875.

RIGHT TO BEGIN AND REPLY
Best, 1880

RULES OF EVIDENCE.
Holt, 1917.
Watson, 1917.

TESTIMONY
Blundell, 1863
Carlson, 1914
Tozer, 1844.
Worsley, 1861

TEXT-BOOKS ON INDIAN LAW OF EVIDENCE PRIOR TO ACT I OF 1872
Field, 1867
Goodeve, 1862.
Kindersley, 1862
Norton, 1858.

TRIAL EVIDENCE.
Abbott, 1918.
Ewbank, 1902.
Henry, 1914
Kennedy, 1906
Reynolds, 1912.

WITNESSES (See Act I of 1872, ss. 118—166).
Best, 1849.
Morison, 1895.
Ram, 1861
Rapalje, 1887.
Reynolds, 1883.
Sichel, 1887.
Wills, 1916.
Wrottesley, 1910

THE

LAW OF EVIDENCE

APPLICABLE TO BRITISH INDIA.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION.

PRELIMINARY.

Evidence a branch of adjective law

The substantive law of this country defines the rights, duties and liabilities, the ascertainment of which is the purpose of every judicial proceeding. The Criminal branch of that law is contained in the Indian Penal Code, as also in various special and local laws dealing with the subject. The substantive Civil law of India has not as yet been codified. Generally speaking, it is to be found in various Acts of the Indian Legislature, in the English Statutes extending to India and in the personal law of the Hindus and Mussalmans. In cases for which no special provision exists, the Courts are enjoined to act according to justice, equity and good conscience. Adjective law defines the pleading, procedure and proof by which the substantive law is applied in practice. It is the machinery by which that law is set and kept in motion. The rules relating to ... Criminal Procedure Codes ... defined, is the sufficient ... actically considered, it is the establishment of facts in issue (ascertained in each particular case by the plead... to the satisfaction of the (... the law relating to whicl ... whatever subject it may ... "proof" and "evidence ... or result of evidence, while evidence is the medium of proof.(3) The facts out of which the rights and liabilities arise must be determined correctly. Facts which come in question in Courts of Justice are enquired into and determined in precisely the same way as doubtful or disputed facts are enquired into and determined by men in general, except so far as positive law has interposed with rules to secure impartiality and accuracy of decision or to exclude collateral mischief likely to result from the investigation.(4) Some portions of the law of Evidence, such as those which deal with the relevancy of facts, are intimately connected with the whole theory

(1) Wharton, Ev, § 1, id., Cr Ev, § 2
(2) Best, Ev., § 10
(3) Ib
(4) Ib., § 2: Whether all these rules are effective for the purpose for which they were enacted or are necessary is, of course another question of human knowledge and with logic as applied to human conduct.(1) Other rules are of a technical character designed to secure the objects mentioned or are based on principles of general policy.

ning of n "Evi- e"

The ambiguity of the word "evidence" has given rise to varying definitions. Bentham used it in its broadest sense when he defined it as "any matter of fact the effect, tendency, or design of which is to produce in the mind a persuasion affirmative or disaffirmative of the existence of some other matter of fact"(2) It is, however, clear, that the term as used in municipal law must have a very m having, it may Courts are c

nd of litigation.(3) The great bulk, consists of negative rules declaring dence."(4) In its legal and most general acceptation, "evidence" has been defined to include all the means, exclusive of mere argument, by which any alleged matter of fact, the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved to the satisfaction of the Court (5) According to the concise definition of the California Code, "Judicial Evidence is the means, sanctioned by law, of ascertaining in a judicial proceeding the truth respecting a question of fact"(6)

Judicial evidence is thus a species of the genus "evidence," and is for the most part nothing more than natural evidence, restrained or modified by rules of positive law.(7) "A law of evidence properly constructed would be nothing less than an application of the practical experience acquired in Courts of Law to the problem of enquiring into the truth as to controverted questions of fact."(8) The law of evidence (which is contained mainly in Act I of 1872) (9) determines how the parties are to convince the Court of the existence of that state of facts which, according to the provisions of the substantive law, would establish the existence of the right or liability which they allege to exist.(10) This law, in so far as it is concerned with what is receivable or not, is founded, in the words of Rolfe, B (11): "on a compound consideration of what, abstractedly considered, is calculated to throw light on the subject in dispute, and of what is practicable. Perhaps, if we lived to the age of a thousand years, instead of sixty or seventy, it might throw light on any subject that came into dispute, if all matters which could by possibility affect it were severally gone into, and enquiries carried on from month to month as to the truth of

(1) Steph. Introd., 1, 2 The same learned author (Dig xi) stated that Chief Baron Gilbert's work on the Law of Evidence (1756), the first of the recognised English text-books on the subject, is founded on Locke's Essay, much as his own work is founded on Mill's Logic

(2) Benth, Jud. Ev., 17.

(3) Bur Jones, Ev, § 1.

(4) Steph. Introd.: these rules are closely connected with the institution of trial by jury: see Thayer's Cases on Evidence, 4; and Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law: Part I, Development of Trial by Jury, and per Lord Mansfield in the Berkley Peerage Case, 4 Camp, 414.

(5) 1 Greenleaf, Ev., § 1; Best, Ev., § 11, p. 19; Steph. Introd, 7; as to the definition of the word as used in the Act, see Notes to s 3, post See also Steph. Dig, Art 1 Taylor, Ev, § 1, and the definition given by Prof Thayer in his Cases on Evidence, p 2

(6) Cal Code, s 1823 See observations on the definitions given in the California Code (which are said to express and typify the judicial sentiment of the American Judiciary) in Rice's General Principles of the Law of Evidence, p 9.

(7) Best, Ev, §§ 34, 79.

(8) Speech in Council of the Hon. Mr Stephen, Gazette of India, 18th April, 1871, p 42 (Extra-Supplement).

(9) Other Acts also contain provisions relating to evidence, as to this see s. 2, post

(10) Steph Introd, 10.

(11) In the Attorney-General v. Hitchcock, 7 Exch, 91, 105.

everything connected with it. I do not say how that would be; but such a course is found to be impossible at present."(1)

What th law of E dence d mines

Rules respecting judicial evidence may be generally divided into those relating to the quid probandum, or thing to be proved, and those relating to the modus probandi, or mode of proving.(2) It has been said that there is but one general rule of evidence, the best that the nature of the case will admit.(3) This rule does not require the production of the greatest possible quantity of evidence, but is framed to prevent the introduction of any evidence which raises the supposition that there is better evidence behind, in the possession, or under the control, of the party, by which he might prove the same fact. The two chief applications of this principle are as follows: (a) With regard to the quid probandum, the law requires as a condition to the admissibility of evidence (either direct or circumstantial) an open and visible connection between the principal and evidentiary facts.(4) If the belief in the principal fact which is to be ascertained is to be, after all, an inference from other facts, those facts must, at all events, be closely connected with the principal fact in some of certain specific modes (5) This connection must be reasonable and proximate, not conjectural and remote. This, which is the theory of relevancy, is dealt with in the first Part of the Evidence Act (6) The first question therefore which the law of evidence should decide is . what facts are relevant and may be proved. (b) With regard to the modus probandi, the law rejects derivative evidence, such as the so-called "hearsay evidence"(7), and exacts original evidence, prescribing that no evidence shall be received which shows, on its face, that it only derives its force from some other which is withheld (8) In other words, the best evidence must be given. If a fact is proved by oral evidence, it must be direct, that is to say, things seen must be deposed to by some one who says he saw them with his own eyes. things heard by some one who says he heard them with his own ears (9); and original documents must be produced or accounted

In addition to ion of the law of allegations, but it will be sufficient if the substance of the issues be proved The rights of parties litigating must be determined secundum allegata et probata (according to what is averred and proved). This rule has not been incorporated in the Act, as it is one, strictly speaking, rather of the law of procedure proper than of evidence (11)

---

(1) See also R v Parbhudas, 11 Bom. H C R, 91 (1874), per West, J "One of the objects of a law of evidence is to restrict the investigations made by Courts within the bounds prescribed by general convenience" As to the utility of the rules, see Best, Ev, §§ 35, et seq, Field, Ev, 13, et seq, sanctions, Best, Ev, §§ 16, et seq, securities for insuring veracity and completeness of evidence, ib, §§ 54, et seq, 100

(2) Best, Ev., § 111, Mr Stephen said in his above-mentioned speech of the 18th April, 1871 —"The main feature of the Bill consists in the distinction drawn by it between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts"

(3) Per Lord Hardwicke, Ch in Omychund v Barker, 1 Atk, 21, 49 See Ramalakshmi v Sivanatha, 14 M. I. A., 570, 588 (1872), Baboo Bodhnarain v Baboo Omrao, 13 M I A, 519, 527 (1870), s. c., 15 W R 1, P C, Baboo Gunga Pershad v Baboo Inderjit, 23 W R 390, P C (1875), Moheema Chunder v Poorno Chunder, 11 W R, 165, 167 (1869), Dinomoyi Debi v Luchmiput, 7 I A, 8 As to the meaning of the rule, see Norton, Ev, 69 Best, Ev, pp 70-73, 87, 88, 91-93, 96, 215, 216, 89 431, 434 416 275 489, 251, 252, Steph Introd, 3, 7

(4) Best, Ev, §§ 90, 38.

(5) Gazette of India, 18th April, 1871, supra

(6) v post, Introduction to Ch II

(7) See Steph. Introd, 4, 6, Best, Ev., §§ 495, 112.

(8) Best, Ev, § 9 Doe d Welsh v Langfield, 16 M & W., 497; Doe d Gilbert v Ross, 7 M & W, 102, 106, Macdonnell v Evans, 11 C B, 930, 942

(9) v ss 59, 60, post.

(10) v ss 59, 61, 64, post

(11) See cases cited in Field Ev 357-369

The law of evidence thus determines :—(a) The relevancy of facts(1), or what sort of facts may be proved in order to establish the existence of the right, duty, or liability defined by substantive law. (b) The proof of facts(2), that is ... e production of proof of ... is to be given ; and the ... (see post).

The sufficiency of evidence must be distinguished from its competency. By competent evidence is meant that which the very nature of the thing to be proved requir ... case, such as the productio ... enquiry. By satisfactory, ... that amount of proof which ordinarily satisfies an unprejudiced mind beyond reasonable doubt The circumstances which will amount to this degree of proof can never be previously defined ; the only legal test of which they are susceptible is their sufficiency to satisfy the mind of an ordinary man, and so to convince him that he would venture to act upon that conviction in matters of the highest concern and importance to his own interests.(5) The effect of evidence, considered from the point of view of the weight which should be attached to it, cannot be regulated by precise rules as the admissibility of evidence may be.(6) For these reasons considerations upon the sufficiency of evidence have no place in the Act.

ıfficiency f Evidence

The weight of evidence cannot be regulated by precise rules as the admissibility of evidence may be(7) : it depends on ... weight of the aggregate of many such pieces c ... much greater than the sum of the weight of ... separately (9) The Draft Bill contained the ... it was not thought necessary to retain it in the Act, must still be borne in mind : " when any fact is hereinafter declared to be relevant, it is not intended to indicate in any way the weight, if any, which the Court shall attach to it, this being a matter solely for the discretion of the Court." So also the Law Commissioners, in the second paragraph of their Draft Bill, said . " Whenever any evidence is said to be admissible, it is not meant that it is to be regarded as conclusive, but only that the weight, if any, which the deciding authority may consider due, shall be allowed to it." In this connection a few dicta of general application may be here cited. When one witness deposes to a certain fact having occurred, and another witness, stating that he was present at the same time, denies that any such fact took place, greater weight, other things being equal, is to be attached to the witness alleging the affirmative (10) " Upon

---

(1) Evidence Act, Part I ; v. post, s 3, and Introduction to Chapter II.

(2) Evidence Act, Part II , v. post and Introduction to Part II

(3) Evidence Act, Part III ; see Introduction to this Part, post.

(4) Steph Introd, II.

(5) Greenleaf, Ev., § 2.

(6) See Farquharson v. Dwarkanath, 8 B L R., 504, 508 (1871) ; Lord Advocate v Lord Blantyre, L. R., 4 App. Cas , 792 ; R v. Madhub Giri, 21 W. R., Cr., 13, 19 (1874) , Townsend v. Strangroom, 6 Ves , 333, 334 ; O'Rorke v. Bolingbroke, L. R., 2 H. L., 837 ; Best, Ev., § 81.

(7) Farquharson v. Dwarkanath, 8 B. L. R., 504, 508 (1871) ; Best, Ev., § 81.

(8) Lord Advocate v. Lord Blantyre, L. R., 4 App. Cas , 792, per Lord Blackburn : "For weighing evidence and drawing inferences from it, there can be no canon. Each case presents its own peculiarities, and common-sense and shrewdness must be brought to bear upon the facts elicited in every case—which a Judge of fact in this country, discharging the functions of a jury in England, has to weigh and decide upon : " R. v Madhub Giri, 21 W. R., Cr , 13, 19 (1874) "This inconvenience," says Lord Eldon in Townsend v. Strangroom (6 Ves , 333, 334), "belongs to the administration of justice, that the minds of different men will differ upon the result of the evidence, which may lead to different decisions upon the same case" See also remarks of Lord Blackburn in O'Rorke v Bolingbroke, L. R., 2 H L, 837.

(9) Lord Advocate v Lord Blantyre, supra, 792.

(10) Deby Persad v. Dowlu Singh, 3 M I. A., 347, 357 (1844) ; s. c., 6 W. R. (P. C.), 55 ; Wills, Circ. Ev., 290.

general principles affirmative is better than negative evidence. A person deposing to a fact which he states he saw, must either speak truly, or must have invented his story, or it must be sheer delusion. Not so with respect to negative evidence; a fact may have taken place in the very sight of a person who may not have observed it: and if he did observe may have forgotten it "(1) As a general rule, witnesses should be weighed, not numbered.(2) More weight should be attached to the evidence given of men's acts than of their alleged words which are so easily mistaken or misrepresented.(3) A Judge, however, cannot properly weigh evidence who starts with an assumption of the general bad character of the prisoners (4)

Judicial discretion. The Act in many of its sections leaves matters dealt with thereby to the discretion of the Court.(5) "Discretion, when applied to a Court of law, means discretion guided by law It must be governed by rule and not by humour. It must not be arbitrary, vague, and fanciful, but legal and regular."(6) "In using a judicial discretion, the Courts have to bear in mind not only the Statutes, but also the great rules and maxims of the law, such, for example, as those of logic or evidence, or public policy The right discretion is not scire quid sit justum, but scire per legem, as Coke insisted (7)"

The English system. The English system of Judicial evidence is comparatively of very modern date (8) Its progress is marked by the discarding of those restrictions of scholastic jurisprudence which firstly compelled much that was material to be excluded from the issue and then when the issue was thus arbitrarily narrowed shut out much evidence that was relevant and attached to the evidence received certain arbitrary valuations which the Courts were required to apply.(9) The progress has, as in all cases of legal reform, been a slow one (10) But it has been said in England, where the traditional theories still possess some strength, that artificial rules upon matters of evidence are better avoided as much as [illegible] that, with a few exceptions on the ground [illegible] light on the disputed transaction is ad- [illegible] be regarded as being itself an application [illegible]vidence Act admissibility is the rule and exclusion the exception, and circumstances which under other systems might operate to exclude, are, under the Act, to be taken into consideration only in judging of the value to be allowed to evidence when admitted."(13) Accordingly, where a Judge is in doubt as to the admissibility of a particular piece

(1) The passage in quotation-marks is per Sir H. Jenner, in Chambers v The Queen's Proctor, 2 Curt, 415, 434, see also Williams v. Hall, 1 Curt, 606

(2) See notes to s 134, post

(3) Meer Usdoollah v Beeby Imaman, 1 M I A, 42, 43 (1836)

(4) R v. Kalu Mal, 7 W. R, Cr, 103 (1867), see further, notes to s 165, post

(5) See ss 32, 33, 39, 58, 60, 66, 73, 86-88, 90, 114, 118, 135, 136, 142, 148, 150, 151, 154-156, 159, 162, 164-166

(6) Per Lord Mansfield in Wilke's case, 4 Burrough's Rep, 2539, cited in Harbans Sahai v Bhairo Pershad, 5 C, 259, 265 (1879).

(7) R v. Chagan Dayaram, 14 B, 331, 344, 352, per Jardine, J (1890), Best, Ev, § 86

(8) Best, Ev, §§ 109, 110 See Phillimore's History and Principles of the Law of Evidence (1850), pp 122, et seq.

(9) Wharton, Ev, § 5.

(10) See remarks of Lord Coleridge, C J, in Blake v Albion Life Assurance Co, 4 C P D, 109 (1878) "In any but an English Court and to the mind of any but an English lawyer the controversy whether this evidence is or is not evidence which a Court of Justice should receive would seem I think supremely ridiculous because every one would say that the evidence was most cogent and material to the plaintiff's claim"

(11) Per Wills, J, in Hennessy v. Wright, L R, 21 Q B D, 518 (1888)

(12) Per Lord Coleridge, C J., in Blake v Albion Life Assurance Co, L. R., 4 C P D, 109 (1878), adding —"Not, of course, matters of mere prejudice not anything open to real, moral or sensible objection, but all things which fairly throw light on the case" of evidence, he should declare in favour of admissibility rather than of non-admissibility.(1) The principle of exclusion enacted by the fifth section of this Act should not be so applied as to shut out matters which may be essential for the ascertainment of truth.(2) The Privy Council in Ameeroonissa Khatoon v. Abedoonissa Khatoon(3) said: "Objections made with the view of excluding evidence are not received with much favour at this Board." But it must not be assumed either that all technical rules are unnecessary, or that all the rules of evidence are technical. It may be safely asserted that the enforcement of most of such technical rules as are contained in this Act is necessary, and that many other rules possess no element of technicality whatever. Thus as the Judicial Committee have also observed: "It is a cardinal rule of evidence, not one of technicality but of substance, which it is dangerous to depart from, that where written documents exist, they shall be produced as being the best evidence of their own contents"(4) And other instances might be adduced than those covered by what is technically known as "the best evidence" rule. The Act would have been better had it not attempted to define what is Evidence and had limited itself to a declaration of what is not admissible In that case all that was probative would go in without discussion unless the objector could show that it was forbidden by the provisions of the Act.

(13) R v Mona Puna, 16 B 661 668 (1892); per Jardine, J., citing Romesh Chunder Mitter and Field, JJ., and see cases cited, post.

ry of law of nce in country

The English rules of evidence were always followed in the Courts established by Royal Charter in the Presidency Towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, Such of these rules as were contained in the Common and Statute law which prevailed in England before 1726, were introduced by the Charter of that year; some others were rules to be found in subsequent Statutes expressly extended to India; while others, again, had no greater authority than that of use and custom (5) In the Courts outside the Presidency Towns no complete rules of evidence were ever laid down or introduced by authority.(6) The law on this subject rested in a state of great indefiniteness In the Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of the Queen v Khyroolah(7), decided in 1866, it was held that the English law of evidence was not the law of the Mofussil, that at that time the Mahommedan criminal law, including the Mahommedan law of evidence, was no longer the law of the country, and that by the abolition of the Mahommedan law, the law of England was not established in its place The Mofussil Courts were thus not required to follow the English law, although they were not debarred from following it where they regarded it as the most equitable.

The first Act of the Governor-General in Council which dealt with evidence, strictly so-called, was Act X of 1835, which applied to all the Courts in British India and dealt with the proof of Acts of the Governor-General in Council.(8) This was followed by eleven enactments passed at intervals during the next twenty years, which effected various small amendments of the law and applied

---

(1) The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari, 12 A, 26 (1889)

(2) R v. Abdullah, 7 A, 40 (1885), see observations of the Hon Mr. Maine in moving the reference of the Evidence Bill to Committee [illegible] practically to leave the Court without the materials for a decision."

(3) 23 W. R., 208, 209, P. C. (1875)

(4) Dinomoyi Debi v. Roy Luchmiput, 7 I. A., 8, 15 (1879).

(5) Field, Ev., 15; Whitley Stokes, Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol II, 812. See Report of Law Commissioners, Appendix.

(6) Regulations made between 1793 and 1834 contained a few rules · others were derived from a vague customary law of evidence, partly drawn from the Hedaya and the Mahommedan Law Officers; others from English text-books, Whitley Stokes, II, 812, 813; and see Act XIX of 1853 to the Courts in India several of the reforms in the law of evidence made in England (1) In 1855, an Act was passed(2) for the further improvement of the law of evidence, which contained many provisions applicable to all Courts in British India.(3) These provisions were repealed and re-enacted with certain modifications and alterations by the present Act. While, therefore, within the Presidency Towns the English law of evidence was in force, modified by certain Acts of the Indian Legislature, of which Act II of 1855 was the most important; the Mofussil Courts, on the other hand, had, down to 1872, hardly any fixed rules of evidence save those contained in Acts XIX of 1853 and II of 1855.(4) Before and even for some time after 1872 the lax character of the evidence in the Mofussil Courts was the subject of frequent judicial comment.(5) To remedy this unsatisfactory(6) state of the law a Draft Bill was drawn up by Her Majesty's Commissioners and introduced by Sir Henry Summer Maine, then the Legal Member in Council. This first Draft Bill did not, however, meet with approval A new Bill was therefore prepared by Sir James Fitzjames Stephen which was ultimately passed as Act I of 1872 (The Indian Evidence [illegible] lia (7) [illegible] a re- [illegible] from [illegible] quent [illegible] British India (10)

(7) B L R, Sup Vol App. 11; s. c. 6 W R, Cr., 21; Field, Ev, 16-18; Whitley Stokes, supra, and see R. v. Ramswami, 6 Bom. H. C. R, Cr., 49 (1869)

(8) Whitley Stokes, II, 813.

It has been said that with some few exceptions the Indian Evidence Act was intended to, and did, in fact, consolidate the English law of evidence(11);

(1) Ib, Act XIX of 1837 (abolished incompetency by reason of conviction), Act V of 1840 (affirmations), see also Acts XVIII of 1863, s 9, VI of 1872, X of 1873; Acts IX of 1840, VII of 1844 (incompetency by reasons of crime or interest); XV of 1852 (competency of parties and other matters), Act XIX of 1853 extended several of these reforms to the Civil Courts of the East India Company in the Bengal Presidency

(2) Act II of 1855 As to this Act, see R v Gopal Dass, 3 M, 271, 282.

(3) The following Acts were subsequently passed X of 1855 (Attendance of Witnesses), VIII of 1859 (Civil Procedure, contained like the present Code provisions as to witnesses), XXV of 1861 (Criminal Procedure; contained provisions as to witnesses, confessions, police-diaries examination of accused and Civil-Surgeon reports of Chemical officers, and dying declarations, which have been re-enacted in the present Act or in the present Code); XV of 1869 (evidence of prisoners), see Whitley Stokes, 817

(4) Whitley Stokes, 817 Field, Ev, 17 18, 19 See Report of Law Commissioners

(5) See observations in Unide Rajaha v Pemmasamy, 7 M I A, 128, 137 (1858), s c, 4 W R, P C. 121, Hurrchur Mojumdar v Churn Majhee, 22 W. R, 355 356, 357 (1874), Naragunty v Vengama, 9 M I A 90 (1861); s c., 1 W R, P C, 30 Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall 6 C, 193 (1880)

Even as late as 1881, Stuart, C J, had cause to complain Phul Kuar v Surjan Pandey, 4 A, 249, 250

(6) See remarks of Privy Council in Bunwaree Lal v Maharajah Hetnarain, 7 M I A, 148, 168 (1858), s c, 4 W R., P C, 148, Unide Rajaha v Pemmasamy, 7 M I A, 128, 137 (1858), s c, 4 W R., P. C, 121, Ajoodhya Proshad v. Baboo Omrao, 13 M I A, 519 (1870), s c., 15 W R, P C, 1

(7) Report of Select Committee "It is little more than an attempt to reduce the English law of evidence to the form of express propositions arranged in their natural order, with some modifications rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of India" Steph Introd, 2 The differences between the Indian and English law will be found hereafter noted in the Commentary to the sections see also Whitley Stokes, p 827, Vol II, and Wilson's Comparative Tables of English and Indian Law 1890, p 14 As however pointed out later, fundamental distinctions exist in the mode of treatment between English and Indian law

(8) See last note and Ranchoddas Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar, 10 B, 439 442 (1886), Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, 12 A, 1, 37 (1889), R v Abdullah, 7 A, 400, 401,

(9) S 2 post

(10) See note to s 2, post

(11) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 171 188 (1880), per Garth, C J.

that the Act itself is little more than an attempt to reduce the English law of evidence to the form of express propositions arranged in their natural order, with some modifications rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of India(1); and that it was drawn up chiefly from Taylor on Evidence.(2) It is true that, although the Code is, in the main, drawn on the lines of the English law of evidence, there is no reason to suppose that it was intended to be a servile copy of it(3), and indeed, as already stated, it does in certain respects differ from English law. Moreover these dicta do not recognise the undoubted original character of sections (5-16) dealing with the relevancy of facts.

Although as all rules of evidence which were in force at the passing of the Act are repealed, the English decisions cannot be regarded as binding authorities, they may still serve as valuable guides; though of course English authorities upon the meaning of particular words are of little or no assistance when those words are very different from the ones to be considered (4)

Even where a matter has been expressly provided for by the Act, recourse may be had to English or American decisions if, as is not infrequently the case, the particular provision be of doubtful import owing to the obscurity or incompleteness of the language in which it has been enacted. Authority abounds for the use of the extraneous sources to which reference has been made in cases such as these (5). As was observed by Edge, C. J., in The Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari Singh(6) "No doubt, cases frequently occur in India in which considerable assistance is derived from the consideration of the law of England and of other countries. In such cases we have to see how far such law was founded on common-sense and on the principles of justice between man and man and may safely afford guidance to us here."

It must not, however, be forgotten that the Indian Evidence Act is a Code which not only defines and amends but also consolidates the Law of Evidence, repealing all rules other than those saved by the last portion of its second section (7). The method of construction to be adopted in the case of such a Code

---

(1) Smith v. Ludha Ghella 17 B., 129, 141 (1892), per Bayley, C. J., adopting the words of Sir James F. Stephen, Introd., Ev. Act, 2.

(2) Mancherjshaw Bezonji v. New Dhurmsey Spinning & Weaving Company, 4 B., 576, 581 (1880), per West, J.; see remarks of Jackson, J. in R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, supra, 491; Taylor on Ev. referred to in R. v. Pyari Lall, 4 C. L. R., 508, 509; Gujju Lal v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 179; R. v. Rami Reddi, 3 M., 52; R. v. Rama Birapa, 3 B., 17 (1878); R. v. Fakirapa, 15 B., 502 (1890); Framji v. Mohansingh, 18 B., 279 (1893), and numerous other cases. Mr. Norton however, at p. iv of the Preface to his Edition of the Act, says that in his opinion it is a mere figure of speech to assert that the 167 sections of the Act contain all that is applicable in India of the two volumes of Taylor on Evidence and that a great mass of the principles and rules which Mr. Taylor's work contains will have to be written back between the lines of the Code.

(3) Ranchoddas Krishnadas v. Bapu Narhar, 10 B., 439, 442 (1886), per Sargent, C. J.; see The Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A., 1, 37 (1889); R. v. Abdullah, 7 A., 400, 401 (1885).

(4) Re Pyari Lall, 4 C. L. R., 508, 509; R. v. Ghulet, 7 A., 44 (1884), English cases irrelevant when Indian Legislature has not followed English law.

(5) See R. v. Vajiram, 16 B., 433 (1892); Pershad Singh v. Ram Pertab, 22 C., 8 (1894) and the cases cited, post.

(6) 12 A., 11, 12 (1889), and see also remarks of Straight, J., at pp. 19, 20, ib.; Framji v. Mohun Sing, 18 B., 280 (1893) [reference to American Case-law]; R. v. Elahi Bux, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., F. B., 459 (1866) [English, American and Scotch Law], 5 W. R., Cr., 59; [Best, Ev.; Gilbert on Ev., Chitty's Criminal law], 7 W. R., 338 F. B. [Civil law. Austin, Jur.; Goodeve, Ev.], 11 W. R., Cr., 21 [Roscoe, Ev.], R. v. Hedger, Mutty Lall and Michael (1852), p. 132 (Starkie on Ev.); and p. 144 (Paley); 1 B., 475, 11 B. H. C., 93 [Russell on Crimes]; 14 B., 335 [Phillip's Ev.], 4 B.; 581 [Gresley on Ev.]; B. L. R., F. B., Sup. Vol., 422 [Norton on Ev.]; and other cases too numerous to mention. Concerning the weight to be given to American decisions, see remarks of Cockburn, L. C. J., in Scaramanga v. Stamp, 5 C. P. D., 295, 303.

(7) The Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A., 35 (1889); and see post.

has been expounded by Lord Herschell(1) in terms which have been adopted by the Privy Council(2) and cited and applied in other cases in this country.(3)

A similar rule had been previously laid down in this country with reference to the construction of this Act. In the case of the R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty(4) it was said: "Instead of assuming the English Law of Evidence, and then inquiring what changes the Evidence Act has made in it, the Act should be regarded as containing the scheme of the law, the principles and the application of these principles to the cases of most frequent occurrence; but in respect of matters expressly provided for in the Act we must, so to speak, start from the Act and not deal with it as a mere modification of the law of evidence prevailing in England."

Questions, however, may arise as regards matters not expressly provided for in the Act. It has been held that the second section in effect prohibits the employment of any kind of evidence not specifically authorised by the Act itself(5), and that a person tendering evidence must show that it is admissible under some one or other of the provisions of this Act.(6) It is to be regretted that the Act was not so framed as to admit other rules of evidence on points not specifically dealt with by it as was in effect done by the Commissioners in the second section of their Draft. In that case whenever omissions occur (and some do in fact occur) in the Act, recourse might be had to the present or previous law on the point existing in England or the previous rules, if any, in this country.

---

(1) In Bank of England v. Vagliano Brothers, L. R., App. Cas. (1891), 107 (at pp. 144, 145).

(2) In Norendra Nath v. Kamalbasini, 23 I. A., 18, 26 (1896).

(3) Dagdu v. Panchom Singh, 17 B., 382 (1892); Damodara Mudaliar v. The Secretary of State for India, 18 M., 91 (1894); Kondayya Chetti v. Narasimhulu Chetti, 20 M., 103 (1896); Lala Suraj v. Golab Chand, 28 C., 517 (1901). This subject will be found fully discussed in the Author's Civil Procedure Code.

(4) 4 C., 941 (1878), per Jackson, J.

(5) R. v. Abdullah, 7 A., 385, 399 (1885); Muhammad Allahdad v. Muhammad Ismail, 10 A., 325 (1886); R. v. Pitamber Jina, 2 B., 64 (1876) and in next note.

(6) Lekhraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh, 7 I. A., 70 (1879); Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari Singh, 12 A., 11, 12, 19, 20, 34, 35, 43 (1889). And see last note. Though in R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbuty, 4 C., 491 (1878) it was said that where a case arises for which no positive solution can be found in the Act itself, recourse may be had to the English rules if any on the point.

CHAPTER I.*

GENERAL DISTRIBUTION OF THE SUBJECT

chnical d general ements of a

Almost every branch of law is composed of rules of which some are grounded upon practical convenience and the experience of actual litigation, whilst others are closely connected with the constitution of human nature and society. Thus the criminal law contains many provisions of no general interest, such as those which relate to the various forms in which dishonest persons tamper with or imitate coin, but it also contains provisions, such as those which relate to the effect of madness on responsibility, which depend on several of the most interesting branches of moral and physical learning. This is perhaps more conspicuously true of the law of evidence than of any other branch of the law. Many of its provisions, however useful and necessary, are technical; and the enactments in which they are contained can claim no other merit than those of completeness and perspicuity The whole subject of documentary evidence is [2]† of this nature Other branches of the subject, such as the relevancy of facts, are intimately connected with the whole theory of human knowledge and with logic, as applied to human conduct. The object of this introduction is to illustrate these parts of the subject by stating the theory on which they depend and on which the provisions of the Act proceed As to more technical matters, the Act speaks for itself, and I have nothing to add to its content.

elation f Evidence ct to English law of vidence

The Indian Evidence Act is little more than an attempt to reduce the English law of Evidence to the form of express propositions arranged in their natural order, with some modifications rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of India.

English law f evidence

Like almost every other part of English law, the English law of evidence was formed by degrees No part of the law has been left so entirely to the discretion of [illegible] ture till very recently interfered [illegible] interfere, it has done so principa[illegible] which related to the disqualification of witnesses by interest, and that which excluded the testimony of the parties, but it has not attempted to deal with the main principle of the subject

Its want of arrangement

It is natural that a body of law thus formed by degrees and with reference to particular cases, should be destitute of arrangement, and in particular that its leading terms should never have [3] been defined by authority; that general rules should have been laid down with reference rather to particular circumstances than to general principles, and that it should have been found necessary to qualify them by exceptions inconsistent with the principles on which they proceed

Difficulties of amending it

When this confusion had once been introduced into the subject, it was hardly capable of being remedied either by Courts of Law, or by writers of

---

* This and the following chapters down to p 78 are Sir James Fitzjames Stephen's introduction to the Evidence Act.

† This and the following numbers indicate the paging of the original book (Ed. 1893) as referred to in this commentary.

text-books The Courts of Law could only decide the cases which came before them according to the rules in force. The writers of text-books could only collect the results of such decisions. The Legislature might, no doubt, have remedied the evil, but comprehensive legislation upon abstract questions of law has never yet been attempted by Parliament in any one instance, though it has in several well-known cases been attended with signal success in India

Fundamental rules of English law of evidence

That part of the English law of evidence which professes to be founded upon anything in the nature of a theory on the subject may be reduced to the following rules :—

(1) Evidence must be confined to the matters in issue

(2) Hearsay evidence is not to be admitted

(3) In all cases the best evidence must be given

Each of these rules is very loosely expressed. The word 'evidence,' which is the leading term of each, is undefined and ambiguous

It sometimes means the words uttered and things exhibited by witnesses before a court of justice

[4] At other times, it means the facts proved to exist by those words or things, and regarded as the groundwork of inferences as to other facts not so proved.

Again, it is sometimes used as meaning to assert that a particular fact is relevant to the matter under inquiry.

The word 'issue' is ambiguous In many cases it is used with reference to the strict rules of English special pleading, the main object of which is to define, with great accuracy, the precise matter which is affirmed by the one party to a suit, and denied by the other

In other cases it is used as embracing generally the whole subject under inquiry.

Again, the word 'hearsay' is used in various senses Sometimes it means whatever a person is heard to say, sometimes it means whatever a person declares on information given by some one else, sometimes it is treated as being nearly synonymous with 'irrelevant'

Ambiguity of rule as to confining evidence to issue

If the rule that evidence must be confined to the matters in issue were constructed strictly, it would run thus. 'No witness shall ever depose to any fact, except those facts which by the form of the pleadings are affirmed on the one side and denied on the other' So understood, the rule would obviously put a stop to the whole administration of justice, as it would exclude evidence of decisive facts

A sues B on a promissory-note B denies that he made the note

A has a letter from B in which he admits that he made the note, and promises to pay it. This admission could [5] not be proved if the rule referred to were constructed strictly, because the issue is, whether B made the note, and not whether he admitted having made it.

This absurd result is avoided by using the word 'evidence as meaning not testimony but any fact from which any other fact may be inferred Thus interpreted, the rule that evidence must be confined to matters in issue will run thus: 'No facts may be proved to exist, except facts in issue or facts from which the existence of the facts in issue can be inferred', but if the rule is thus interpreted, it becomes so vague as to be of little use, for the question naturally arises, from what sort of facts may the existence of other facts be inferred? To this question the law of England gives no explicit answer at all though partial and confused answers to parts of it may be inferred from some of the exceptions to the rules which exclude hearsay.

For instance, there are cases from which it may be inferred that evidence may sometimes be given of a fact from which another fact may be inferred, although the fact upon which the inference is to be founded is a crime, and although the fact to be inferred is also a crime for which the person against whom the evidence is to be given is on his trial.

The full answer to the question, 'what facts are relevant,' which is the most important of all the questions that can be asked about the law of evidence, has thus to be learnt partly by experience, and partly by collecting together such crooked and narrow illustrations of it as the one just given.

Ambiguity of the rule excluding hearsay

[6] The rule that 'hearsay is no evidence' is vague to the last degree, as each of the meanings of which the word 'hearsay' is susceptible is sometimes treated as the true one. As the rule is nowhere laid down in an authoritative manner, its meaning has to be collected from the exceptions to it, and these exceptions, of which there are as many as twelve or thirteen, imply at least three different meanings of the word 'hearsay'

Thus it is a rule that evidence may be given of statements which accompany and explain relevant actions. As no rule determines what actions are relevant, this is in itself unsatisfactory, but as the rule is treated as an exception to the rule excluding hearsay, it implies that hearsay' means that which a man is heard to say. If this is the meaning of hearsay, the rule which excludes it would run thus 'No witness shall ever be allowed to depose anything which he has heard said by any one else' The result of this would be that no verbal contract could ever be proved, and that no one could ever be convicted of using threats with intent to extort money, or of defamation by words spoken, except in virtue of exceptions which stultify the rule.

Most of the exceptions indicate that the meaning of the word 'hearsay' is that which a person reports on the information of some one else, and not upon the evidence of his own senses. This, with certain exceptions, is no doubt a valuable rule, but it is not the natural meaning of the words 'hearsay is no evidence' and it is in [7] practice almost impossible to divest words of their natural meaning

The rules that documents which support ancient possession may be admitted as between persons who are not parties to them, is treated as an exception to the rule excluding hearsay. This implies that the word 'hearsay' is nearly, if not quite, equivalent to the word 'irrelevant.' But the English law contains nothing which approaches to a definition of relevancy.

Rules as to best evidence

The rule which requires that the best evidence of which a fact is susceptible should be given, is the most distinct of the three rules referred to above, and it is certainly one of the most useful. It is simply an amplification of the obvious maxim that if a man wishes to know all that he can know about a matter his own senses are to him the highest possible authority. If a hundred witnesses of unimpeachable character were all to swear to the contents of a sealed letter, and if the person who heard them swear opened the letter and found that its contents were different, he would conclude, without the intervention of any conscious process of reasoning at all, that they had sworn what was not true.

Ambiguity of the word 'evidence'

The ambiguity of the word 'evidence' is the cause of a great deal of obscurity apart from that which it gives to the rules above mentioned. In scientific inquiries, and for popular and general purposes, it is no doubt convenient to have one word which includes :—

(1) the testimony on which a given fact is believed,

[8] (2) the facts so believed, and

(3) the arguments founded upon them.

For instance, in the title of "Paley's Evidences of Christianity," the word is used in this sense. The nature of the work was not such as to give much importance to the distinction which the word overlooks. So, in scientific inquiries, it is seldom necessary (for reasons to which I shall have occasion to refer hereafter) to lay stress upon the difference between the testimony on which a fact is believed, and the fact itself. In judicial inquiries, however, the distinction is most important, and the neglect to observe it has thrown the whole subject into confusion by causing English lawyers to overlook the leading distinction which ought to form the principle on which the whole law should be classified. I mean the distinction between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts.

Effects of this ambiguity.

The use of the one name 'evidence' for the fact to be proved, and the means by which it is to be proved, 'has given a double meaning to every phrase in which the word occurs' Thus, for instance, the phrase 'primary evidence' sometimes means a relevant fact, and sometimes opposed to a copy. 'Circumstantial evidence'
But 'circumstantial evidence' usually means fact is inferred, whereas 'direct evidence' means testimony given by a man as to what he has himself perceived by his own senses. It would thus be correct to say that circumstantial evidence [9] must be proved by direct evidence—a clumsy mode of expression which is in itself a mark of confusion of thought The evil, however, goes beyond mere clumsiness of expression People have naturally enough supposed that circumstantial and direct evidence admit of being contrasted in respect of their cogency, and that different canons can be laid down, as to the conditions which they ought to satisfy before the Court is convinced by them. This, I think, confuses the theory of proof, and is an error due entirely to the ambiguity of the word 'evidence'

Merits of English law of evidence

It would be a mistake to infer from the unsystematic character and absence hat the substance ighest degree the
it is, is to what hat the ordinary conversation of a very clever man on all sorts of subjects written down as he uttered it, and as passing circumstances furnished him with a text, would be to the matured and systematic statement of his deliberate opinions It is full of the most vigorous sense, and is the result of great sagacity applied to past and varied experience.

Natural distribution of the subject.

The manner in which the law of evidence is related to the general theories which give it its interest can be understood only by reference [10] to the natural distribution of the subject, which appears to be as follows .—

All rights and liabilities are dependent upon and arise out of facts

Every judicial proceeding whatever has for its purpose the ascertaining of some right or liability. If the proceeding is Criminal, the object is to ascertain the liability to punishment of the person accused If the proceeding is Civil, the object is to ascertain some right of property or of status, or the right of one party, and the liability of the other, to some form of relief

In order to effect this result, provision must be made by law for the following objects :—First, the legal effect of particular classes of facts in establishing rights and liabilities must be determined This is the province of what has been called substantive law Secondly, a course of procedure must be laid down by which persons interested may apply the substantive law to particular cases. The law of procedure includes, amongst others, two main branches : (1) the law of pleading, which determines what in particular cases are the questions in dispute between the parties, and (2) the law of evidence, which determines how the parties are to convince the Court of the existence of that state of facts which, according to the provisions of substantive law, would establish the existence of the right or liability which they allege to exist ustra-

n

The following is a simple illustration: A sues B on a bond for Rs. 1,000, B says that the execution of the bond was procured by coercion.

[11] The substantive law is that a bond executed under coercion cannot be enforced.

The law of procedure lays down the method according to which A is to establish his right to the payment of the sum secured by the bond One of its provisions determines the manner in which the question between the parties is to be stated

The question stated under that provision is whether the execution of the bond was procured by coercion.

The law of evidence determines—

(1) What sort of facts may be proved in order to establish the existence of that which is defined by the substantive law as coercion?

(2) What sort of proof is to be given of those facts?

(3) Who is to give it?

(4) How it is to be given?

Thus, before the law of evidence can be understood or applied to any particular case, it is necessary to know so much of the substantive law as determines what, under given states of facts, would be the rights of the parties, and so much of the law of procedure as is sufficient to determine what questions it is open to them to raise in the particular proceeding

Thus in general terms the law of evidence consists of provisions upon the following subjects:—

(1) The relevancy of facts

(2) The proof of facts

(3) The production of proof of relevant facts.

The foregoing observations show that this account of [12] the matter is exhaustive For if we assume that a fact is known to be relevant, and that its existence is duly proved, the Court is in a position to go on to say how it affects the existence, na [illegible] certainment of which is the ulti [illegible] the Court has to do

The matter must, however, be carried further. The three general heads may be distributed more particularly as follows:—

Relevancy of facts

I The Relevancy of Facts.—Facts may be related to rights and liabilities in one of two ways,— Facts in issue.

(1) They may by themselves, or in connection with other facts, constitute such a state of things that the existence of the disputed right or liability would be a legal inference from them. From the fact that A is the eldest son of B, there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir-at-law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances, and with a certain intention or knowledge, there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B, and is liable to the punishment provided by law for murder.

Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue, unless their existence is undisputed.

Relevant facts

(2) Facts which are not themselves in issue in the sense above explained, may affect the [13] probability of the existence of facts in issue, and be used as the foundation of inferences respecting them, such facts are described in the Evidence Act as relevant facts.

All the facts with which it can in any event be necessary for Courts of Justice to concern themselves, are included in these two classes.

The first great question, therefore, which the law of evidence should decide is, what facts are relevant. The answer to this question is to be learnt from the general theory of judicial evidence explained in the following chapter

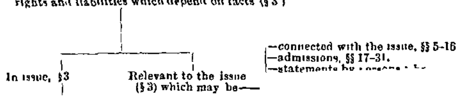
What facts are in issue in particular cases is a question to be determined by the substantive law, or in some instances by that branch of the law of procedure which regulates the forms of pleading, Civil or Criminal

Proof of relevant facts.

II. The Proof of Relevant Facts—Whether an alleged fact is a fact in issue or a relevant fact, the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist; and it is obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceeding in which its existence is to be determined. The question is whether A wrote a letter The letter may have contained the terms of a contract. It may have been a libel It may have constituted the motive for the commission of a crime by B. It may supply proof of an alibi in favour of A It may be an admission or a [14] confession of crime, but whatever may be the relation of the fact to the proceeding, the Court cannot act upon it unless it believes that A did write the letter, and that belief must obviously be produced, in each of the cases mentioned, by the same or similar means If the Court requires the production of the original [illegible] crime, there can be no reason why it should b[illegible] writing of the letter is a motive for a crime [illegible] fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact, and not on the relation of the fact to the proceeding.

1 Judicial notice 2 Oral evidence 3 Documentary evidence

Some facts are too notorious to require any proof at all, and of these the Court will take judicial notice, but if a fact does require proof, the instrument by which the Court must be convinced of it is evidence, by which I mean the actual words uttered, or documents, or other things actually produced in Court, and not the facts which the Court considers to be proved by those words and documents. Evidence in this sense of the word must be either (1) oral or (2) documentary. A third class might be formed of things produced in Court, not being documents, such as the instruments with which a crime was committed or the property to which damage had been done, but this division would introduce needless intricacy into the matter. The reason for distinguishing between oral and documentary evidence is that in many cases the existence of the latter excludes the employment of the former; but [15] the condition of material things, other than documents, is usually proved by oral evidence, so that there is no occasion to distinguish between oral and material evidence



It may be said that in strictness all evidence is oral, as documents or other material things must be identified by oral evidence before the Court can take notice of them. It is unnecessary to discuss the justice of this criticism, as the phrase 'documentary evidence' is not ambiguous, and is convenient and in common use The only reason for avoiding the use of the word 'evidence' in the general sense in which most writers use it, is that it leads, in practice, to confusion, as has been already pointed out.

Production of proof

III. The Production of Proof—This includes the subject of the burden of proof. the rules upon which answer the question, by whom is proof to be given The subject of witnesses the rules upon which answer the question, who is to give evidence and under what conditions? The subject of the examination of witnesses the rules upon which answer the question, how are the witnesses to be examined, and how is their evidence to be tested? Lastly, the effect upon the subsequent proceedings, of mistakes in the reception and rejection of evidence, may be included under this head.

The following tabular scheme of the subject may be an assistance to the reader. The figures refer to the sections of the Act which treat of the matter referred to :—

[16] The object of legal proceedings is the determination of rights and liabilities which depend on facts (§ 3)

They may be

This proof must be produced by the party on whom the burden of proof rests (ch. VII), unless he is estopped (ch VIII)

If given by witnesses (ch. IX) they must testify, subject to rules as to examination (ch. X) Consequence of mistakes defined (ch. XI)

[17] CHAPTER II

A STATEMENT OF THE PRINCIPLES OF INDUCTION AND DEDUCTION, AND A COMPARISON OF THEIR APPLICATION TO SCIENTIFIC AND JUDICIAL INQUIRIES.

The general analysis given in the last chapter of the subjects to which the law of evidence must relate, sufficiently explains the general arrangement of the Indian Evidence Act. To understand the substance of the Act it is necessary to have some acquaintance with the general theory of judicial evidence. The object of the present chapter is to explain this theory and to compare its application to physical science with its application to judicial inquiries.

Mr Huxley remarks in one of his latest works—"The vast results obtained by science are won by no mystical faculties, by no mental processes, other than those which are practised by every one of us in the humblest and meanest affairs of life. A detective policeman discovers a burglar from the marks made by his shoe, by a mental process identical with that by which Cuvier restored the extinct animals of Montmartre from fragments of their bones, nor does that process of induction and deduction by which a lady finding [18] a stain of a particular kind upon her dress, concludes that somebody has upset the inkstand thereon, differ in any way from that by which Adams and Leverrier discovered a new planet.* The man of science, in fact, simply uses with scrupulous exactness the methods which we all habitually and at every moment use carelessly." Mr. Huxley on physical science and judicial inquiries

These observations are capable of an inverse application If we wish to apply the methods in question to the investigation of matters of every-day occurrence, with a greater degree of exactness than is commonly needed, it is necessary to know something of the theory on which they rest This is [illegible] impose [illegible] when [illegible] rtance or their true significance, unless the theory on which they are based is understood. It appears necessary for these reasons to enter to a certain extent upon the general subject of the investigation of the truth as to matters of fact, before attempting to explain and discuss that particular branch of it which relates to judicial proceedings. Application of his remarks to law of evidence.

First, then, what is the general problem of science? It is to discover, collect, and arrange true propositions about facts Simple as the phrase appears, it is necessary to enter upon some illustration of its terms, namely, (1) facts, (2) propositions, (3) the truth of propositions General object of science.

First, then, what are facts?

[19] During the whole of our waking life we are in a state of perception Indeed, consciousness and perception are two names for one thing, according as we regard it from the passive or active point of view We are conscious of everything that we perceive, and we perceive whatever we are conscious of Moreover, our perceptions are distinct from each other, some both in space and time, as is the case with all our perceptions of the external world, others, in time only, as is the case with our perceptions of the thoughts and feelings of our own minds Facts.

* Lay Sermons, p. 78.

External facts.

Whatever may be the objects of our perceptions, they make up collectively the whole sum of our thoughts and feelings. They constitute, in short, the world with which we are acquainted, for without entering upon the question of the existence of the external world, it may be asserted with confidence that our knowledge of it is composed, first, of our perceptions, and, secondly, of the inferences which we draw from them as to what we should perceive if we were favourably situated for that purpose. The human body supplies an illustration of this. No one doubts that his own body is composed not only of the external organs which he perceives by his senses, but of numerous internal organs, most of which it is highly improbable that either he or any one else will ever see or touch, and some of which he never can, from the nature of things, see or touch as long as he lives. When he affirms the existence of these organs, say the brain or the heart, what he means is that he is led to believe from what he [20] has been told by other persons about human bodies, or observed himself in other human bodies, that if his skull and chest were laid open, those organs would be perceived by the senses of persons who might direct their senses towards them.

Internal facts.

There is another class of perceptions, transient in their duration, and not perceived by the five best marked senses, which are nevertheless distinctly perceptible and of the utmost importance. These are thoughts and feelings; love, hatred, anger, intention, will, wish, knowledge, opinion, are all perceived by the person who feels them. When it is affirmed that a man is angry, that he intends to sell an estate, that he knows the meaning of a word, that he struck a blow voluntarily and not by accident, each proposition relates to a matter capable of being as directly perceived as a noise or a flash of light. The only difference between the two classes of propositions is this: When it is affirmed that a man has a given intention, the matter affirmed is one which he, and he only, can perceive, when it is affirmed that a man is sitting or standing, the matter affirmed is one which may be perceived not only by the man himself, but by any other person able to see, and favourably situated for the purpose. But the circumstance that either event is regarded as being, or as having been capable of being, perceived by some one or other, is what we mean, and all that we mean, when we say that it exists or existed, or when we denote the same thing by calling it a fact. The word 'fact' is sometimes [21] opposed to theory, sometimes to opinion, sometimes to feeling, but all these modes of using it are more or less rhetorical. When it is used with any degree of accuracy it implies something which exists, and it is as difficult to attach any meaning to the assertion that a thing exists which neither is, nor under any conceivable circumstances could be, perceived by any sentient being, as to attach any meaning to the assertion that anything which can be so perceived does not, or at the time of perception did not, exist.

Definition of facts in Evidence Act.

It is with reference to this that the word 'fact' is defined in the Evidence Act (§ 3) as meaning and including—

(1) Any thing, state of things, or relation of things capable of being perceived by the senses; and

(2) Any mental condition of which any person is conscious.

It is important to remember with respect to facts, that as all thought and language contains a certain element of generality, it is always possible to describe the same facts with greater or less minuteness, and to decompose every fact with which we are concerned into a number of subordinate facts. Thus we might speak of the presence of several persons in a room at one time as a fact, but if the fact were doubted, or if other circumstances rendered it desirable, their respective positions, their occupations, the position of the furniture, and many other particulars might have to be specified.

Propositions.

Such being the nature of facts, what is the meaning of a proposition? A proposition is a [22] collection of words so related as to raise in the minds of those who understand them a corresponding group of images or thoughts.

The characteristic by which words are distinguished from other sounds is their power of producing corresponding thoughts or images I say thoughts or images, because though most words raise what may be intelligibly called images in the mind, this is true principally of those which relate to visible objects. Such words as 'hard,' 'soft,' 'taste,' 'smell,' call up sufficiently definite thoughts, but they can hardly be described as images, and the same is still more true of words which qualify others, like 'although,' 'whereas,' and other adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions.

Illustrations.

The statement that a proposition, in order to be entitled to the name, must raise in the mind a distinct group of thoughts or images, may be explained by two illustrations The words 'that horse is niger' form a proposition to everyone who knows that niger means black, but to no one else. The words 'I see a sound' form a proposition to no one unless some signification is attached to the word 'sound' (for instance, an arm of the sea), which would make the words intelligible

True propositions.

Such being a proposition, what is a true proposition? A true proposition is one which excites in the mind, thoughts or images, corresponding to those which would be excited in the mind of a person so situated as to be able to perceive the facts to which the proposition relates. The words 'a man is riding down the road on a white horse' form a proposition because they raise in the mind [23] a distinct group of images. The proposition is true if all persons favourably situated for purposes of observation did actually perceive a corresponding group of facts.

How true propositions are to be framed.

The next question is, How are we to proceed in order to ascertain whether any given proposition about facts is true, and in order to frame true propositions about facts? This, as already observed, is the general problem of science which is only another name for knowledge so arranged as to be easily understood and remembered Facts must be correctly observed and properly recorded.

The facts, in the first place, must be correctly observed. The observations made must, in the next place, be recorded in apt language, and each of these operations is one of far greater delicacy and difficulty than is usually supposed; for it is almost impossible to discriminate between observation and inference, or to make language a bare record of our perceptions instead of being a running commentary upon them To go into these and some kindred points would extend this inquiry beyond all reasonable bounds, and I accordingly pass them over with this slight reference to their existence Assuming, then, the existence of observation and language sufficiently correct for common purposes, how are they to be applied to inquiries into matters of fact?

Mr. Mill's theory of logic:—a fixed order prevails in the world.

An answer to these questions, sufficient for the present purpose, will be sup-what is said on the [24] subject by Mr Mill in ance of that part of it which bears upon the ; first great lesson learnt from the observation of the world in which we live, is that a fixed order prevails amongst the various facts of which it is composed Under given conditions, fire always burns wood, lead always sinks in water, day always follows night, and night day, and so on. By degrees we are able to learn what the conditions are under which these and other such events happen We learn, for instance, that the presence of a certain quantity of air is a condition of combustion, that the presence of the force of gravitation, the absence of any equal or greater force acting in an opposite direction, and the maintenance by the water of its properties as a fluid, are conditions necessary to the sinking of lead in water, that the maintenance by the heavenly bodies of their respective positions, and the persistency of the various forces by which their paths are determined, are the conditions under which day and night succeed each other.

Induction and deduction.

The great problem is to find out what particular antecedents and consequents are thus connected together, and what are the conditions of their connection? For this purpose two processes are employed, namely, induction and deduction. Deduction assumes and rests upon previous inductions, and derives a great part at least of its value from the means which it affords of carrying on the process of thought from the point at which induction stops. The questions,—What is [25] the ultimate foundation of induction? Why are we justified in believing that all men will die because we have reason to believe that all men hitherto have died? Or that every particle of matter whatever will continue to attract every other particle of matter with a force bearing a certain fixed proportion to its mass and its distance, because other particles of matter have hitherto been observed to do so? are questions which lie beyond the limits of the present inquiry. For practical purposes it is enough to assume that such inferences are valid, and will be found by experience to yield true results in the shape of general propositions, from which we can argue downwards to particular cases according to the rules of verbal logic.

Mere observation of facts insufficient.

True general propositions, however, cannot be extracted directly from the observation of nature or of human conduct, as every fact which we can observe, however apparently simple, is in reality so intricate that it would give us little or no information unless it were connected with and checked by other facts. What, for instance, can appear more natural and simple than the following facts? A tree is cut down. It falls to the ground. Several birds which were perched upon it fly away Its fall raises a cloud of dust which is dispersed by the wind and splashes up some of the water in a pond. Natural and simple as this seems, it raises the following questions at least ... [illegible] ... fall at all? [illegible] ... ey to fly away? [illegible] ... whereas the wa [illegible] ... To see in all these facts so many illustrations of the rules by which we can calculate the force of gravity, and the action of fluids on bodies immersed in them, is the problem of science in general, and of induction and deduction in particular.

Proceeding of Induction.

Generally speaking this problem is ... [illegible] ... of difference. Indeed the method of agreement is inconclusive, unless it is applied upon such a scale as to make it equivalent to the method of difference.

The nature of these methods is as follows:—

Methods of agreement and difference.

All events may be regarded as effects of antecedent causes.

Every effect is preceded by a group of events, one or more of which are its true cause or causes, and all of which are possible causes.

The problem is to discriminate between the possible and the true causes.

[27] If whenever the effect occurs one possible cause occurs, the other possible causes varying, the possible cause which is constant is probably the true cause, and the strength of this probability is measured by the persistency with which the one possible cause recurs, and the extent to which the other possible causes vary. Arguments founded on such a state of things are arguments on the method of agreement.

---

* 1—The method of agreement. 2—The method of difference. 3—The joint method of agreement and difference. 4—The method of residues 5—The method of concomitant variations

If the effect occurs when a particular set of possible causes precedes its occurrence, and does not occur when the same set of possible causes co-exist, one only being absent, the possible cause which was present when the effect was produced, and was absent when it was not produced, is the true cause of the effect. Arguments founded on such a state of things are arguments on the method of difference.

The following illustration makes the matter plain: Various materials are mixed together on several occasions. In each case soap is produced, and in each case oil and alkali are two of the materials so mixed. It is probable from this that oil and alkali are the causes of the soap, and the degree of the probability is measured by the number of the experiments, and the variety of the ingredients other than oil and alkali. This is the method of agreement.

Various materials, of which oil and alkali are two, are mixed, and soap is produced. The same materials, with the exception of the oil and alkali, are mixed and soap is not produced The mixture of the oil and alkali is the cause of the soap. This is the method of difference The case [28] would obviously be the same if oil and alkali only were mixed. Soap was unknown, and upon the mixture being made, other things being unchanged, soap came into existence.

Difficulties—Several causes producing the same effect—result as to method of agreement.

These are the most important of the rules of induction, but induction is only one step towards the solution of the problems which nature presents. In the statement of the rules of induction it is assumed for the sake of simplicity that all the causes and all the effects under examination are separate and independent facts, and that each cause is connected with some one single effect. This, however, is not the case A given effect may be produced by any one of several causes Various causes may contribute to the production of a single effect. This is peculiarly important in reference to the method of agreement. If that method is applied to a small number of instances, its value is small. For instance, other substances might produce soap by their combination besides oil and alkali, say, for instance, that the combination of A and B, and that of C and D would do so. Then, if there were two experiments as follows

(1) oil and alkali, A and B, produce soap;

(2) oil and alkali, C and D, produce soap, soap would be produced in each case, but whether by the combination of oil and alkali, or by the combination of A and B, or by that of C and D, or by the combination of oil, or of alkali, with A, B, C or D, would be altogether uncertain.

[29] A watch is stolen, from a place to which A, B and C only had access. Another watch is stolen from another place to which A, D and E only had access.

In each instance, A is one of three persons, one of whom must have stolen the watch, but this is consistent with it having been stolen by any of the other persons mentioned.

Weakness of the method of agreement—how cured.

This weakness of the method of agreement can be cured only by so great a multiplication of instances as to make it highly improbable that any other antecedent than the one present in every instance could have caused the effect present in every instance

For the statement of the theory of chances and its bearing on the probability of events, I must refer those who wish to pursue the subject to the many works which have been written upon it, but its general validity will be inferred by every one from the common observation of life If it was certain that either A or B, A or C, A or D, and so forth, up to A and Z, had committed one of a large number of successive thefts of the same kind, no one could doubt that A was the thief.

It is extremely difficult, in practice, to apply such a test as this, and the test when applied is peculiarly liable to error, as each separate alternative requires distinct proof. In the case supposed, for instance, it would be necessary to ascertain separately in each of the cases relied upon, first, that a theft had been committed; then, that one of two persons must have committed it; and [30] lastly, that in each case the evidence bore with equal weight upon each of them.

Inter-mixture of effects and interference of causes with each other

The intermixture of effects and the interference of causes with each other is a matter of much greater intricacy and difficulty.

It may take place in one of two ways, viz:—

(1) "In the one, which is exemplified by the joint operation of different forces in mechanics, the separate effects of all the causes continue to be produced, but are compounded together, and disappear in one total."

(2) "In the other, illustrated by the case of chemical action, the separate effects cease entirely and are succeeded by phenomena altogether different and governed by different laws."

In the second case the inductive methods already stated may be applied, though it has difficulties of its own to which I need not now refer.

In the first case, i.e., where an effect is not the result of any one cause, but the result of several causes modifying each other's operation, the results cease to be separately discernible. Some cancel each other. Others merge in one sum, and in this case there is often an insurmountable difficulty in tracing by observation any fixed relation whatever between the causes and the effects. A body, for instance, is at rest. This may be the effect of the action of two opposite forces exactly counteracting each other, but how are such causes to be inferred from such an effect?

A balloon ascends into the air. This appears, if it is [31] treated as an isolated phenomenon, to form an exception to the theory of gravitation. It is in reality an illustration of that theory, though several concomitant facts and independent theories must be understood and combined together before this can be ascertained.

The difficulty of applying the inductive methods to such cases arises from the fact that they assume the absence of the state of things supposed. The subsequent and antecedent phenomena must be assumed to be capable of specific and separate observation before it can be asserted that a given fact invariably follows another given fact, or that two sets of possible causes resemble each other in every particular with a single exception.

Deductive method.

It is necessary for this reason to resort to the deductive method, the nature of which is as follows: A general proposition established by induction is used as a premiss from which consequences are drawn according to the rules of logic, as to what must follow under particular circumstances. The inference so drawn is compared with the facts observed, and if the result observed agrees with the deduction from the inductive premiss, the inference is that the phenomenon is explained. The complete method, inductive and deductive, thus involves three steps,—

(1) Establishing the premiss by induction, or what, in practice, comes to the same thing, by a previous deduction resting ultimately upon induction;

(2) Reasoning according to the rules of logic to a conclusion;

[32] (3) Verification of the conclusion by observation.

Illustration.

The whole process is illustrated by the discovery and proof of the identity of the central force of the solar system with the force of gravity as known on the earth's surface. The steps in it were as follows :—

(1) It was proved by deductions resting ultimately upon inductions that the earth attracts the moon with a force varying inversely as the square of the distance.

This is the first step, the establishment of the premiss by a process resting ultimately upon induction

(2) The moon's distance from the earth, and the actual amount of her deflexion from the tangent being known, it was ascertained with what rapidity the earth's attraction would cause the moon to fall if she were no further off and no more acted upon by extraneous forces than terrestrial bodies are.

This is the second step, the reasoning, regulated by the rules of logic.

(3) Finally, this calculated velocity being compared with the observed velocity with which all heavy bodies fall by mere gravity towards the surface of the earth (sixteen feet in the first second, forty-eight in the second, and so forth in the ratio of the odd numbers), the two quantities are found to agree.

This is the verification The facts observed agree with the facts calculated ; therefore the true principle of calculation has been taken.

This paraphras show, in general, th
it aims at framing to the present purpose to follow the subject further Enough has been said to illustrate the general meaning of such words as "proof" and "evidence" in their application to scientific inquiry Before inquiring into the application of these principles to judicial investigations, it will be convenient to compare the conditions under which judicial and scientific investigations are carried on Judicial and scientific inquiries compared—resemblances.

In some essential points they resemble each other. Inquiries into matters of fact, of whatever kind and with whatever object, are, in all cases whatever, inquiries from the known to the unknown, from our present perceptions or our proceed upon the supposition that there is a general uniformity both in natural events and in human conduct, that all events are connected together as cause and effect ; and that the process of applying this principle to particular cases and of specifying the manner in which it works, though a difficult and delicate operation, can be performed.

Differences

There are, however, several great differences between inquiries which are commonly called scientific inquiries, that is, into the order and course of nature, and inquiries into isolated matters of fact, whether [34] for judicial or historical purposes, or for the purposes of every-day life These differences must be carefully observed before we can undertake with much advantage the task of applying to the one subject the principles which appear to be true

First difference as to amount of evidence.

The first difference is, that in reference to isolated events, we can never, or very seldom, perform experiments, but are tied down to a fixed number of relevant facts which can never be increased

In scientific inquiries unlimited

The great object of physical science is to invent general formulas (perhaps unfortunately called laws), which, when ascertained, sum up and enable us to understand the present, and predict the future course of nature These laws are ultimately deduced by the method already described from individual facts ; but any one fact of an infinite number will serve the purpose of a scientific inquirer as well as any other, and in many, perhaps in most, cases it is possible to arrange facts for the purpose. In order, for instance, to ascertain the force of terrestrial gravity, it was necessary to measure the time occupied by different bodies in falling through given spaces, and every such observation was an isolated fact. If, however, one experiment failed, or was interfered with, if an observation was inaccurate, or if a disturbing cause, as, for instance, the resistance of the atmosphere had not been allowed for, nothing could be easier than to repeat the process; and inferences drawn from any one set of experiments [35] were obviously as much to be trusted as inferences drawn from any other set. Thus, with re plied to a pr that the case that the cour ficial variatio nomy were made, the motions of the heavenly bodies were carefully observed and inferences as to their future course were founded upon those observations. Such observations would have been useless and unmeaning, but for the tacit assumption that what they had done in times past, they would continue to do for the future.

In judicial inquiries limited

In inquiries into isolated events this great resource is not available. Where the object is to decide what happened on a particular occasion, we can hardly ever draw inferences of any value from what happened on similar occasions, because the groups of events which form the subject of historical or judicial inquiry are so intricate that it can scarcely ever be assumed that they will repeat, or that they have repeated, themselves. If we wish to know what happened two thousand years ago, when specific quantities of oxygen and hydrogen were combined, under given circumstances, we can obtain complete certainty by repeating the experiment; but the whole course of human history must recur before we could witness a second assassination of Julius Cæsar.

It cannot be increased

[36] With reference to such events we are tied down inexorably to a certain limited amount of evidence. We know so much of the assassination of Cæsar as has been told us by the historians, who are to us ultimate authorities, and we know no more. Their testimony must be taken subject to all the deductions which experience shows to be necessary in receiving as true, statements made by historical writers on subjects which interest their feelings, and upon the authority of materials which are no longer extant and therefore cannot be weighed or criticized. Unless, by some unforeseen accident, new materials on the subject should come to light, a few pages of general history will for ever comprise the whole amount of human knowledge upon this subject, and any doubts about it, whether they rise from inherent improbabilities in the story itself, from differences of detail in the different narratives, or from general considerations as to the untrustworthy character of historians writing on hearsay, and at a considerable distance of time from the events which they relate, are and must remain for ever, unsolved and insoluble.

Object of scientific inquiries

Besides this difference as to the quantity of evidence accessible in scientific and historical inquiries, there is a great difference as to the objects to which the inquiries are directed. The object of inquiries into the course of nature is two-fold,—the satisfaction of a form of curiosity, which, to those who feel it at all, appens also to be one of the most gene-ure; and the attainment of practical f these ends can be attained unless and been solved; partially, it may be, but goes. On the other hand, there is no solution. Every scientific question is always open, and the answer to it may be discovered after vain attempts to discover it have been made for thousands of years, or an answer long accepted may be rejected and replaced by a better answer after an equally long period. In short, in scientific inquiries, absolute truth, or as near an approach to it as can be made, is the one thing needful, and is the constant object of pursuit. So any one ascertained inquirer neither is, ding the possibility of error, he is bound, to the extent, at least, of that possibility, to suspend his judgment.

Object of judicial inquiries.

In judicial inquiries (I need not here notice historical inquiries) the case is different. It is necessary for urgent practical purposes to arrive at a decision which, after a definite process has been gone through, becomes final and irreversible. It is obvious that, under these circumstances, the patient suspension of judgment, and the high standard of certainty required by scientific inquirers, cannot be expected. Judicial decisions must proceed upon imperfect materials and must be made at the risk of error.

Evidence in scientific inquiries trustworthy.

[38] Finally, inquirers into physical science have an additional advantage over those who conduct judicial inquiries, in the fact that the evidence before them, in so far as they have to depend upon oral evidence, is infinitely more trustworthy than that which is brought forward in Courts of Justice. The reasons of this are manifold In the first place, the facts which a scientific observer has to report do not affect his passions. In the second place, his evidence about them is not taken at all unless his powers of observations have been more or less trained and can be depended upon. In the third place, he can hardly know what will be the inference from the facts which he observes until his observations have been combined with those of other persons, so that if he were otherwise disposed to mis-state them, he would not know what mis-statement would serve his purpose In the fourth place, he knows that his observations will be confronted with others, so that if he is careless or inaccurate, and, à fortiori, if he should be dishonest, he would be found out In the fifth place, the class of facts which he observes are, generally speaking, simple, and he is usually provided with means specially arranged for the purpose of securing accurate observations, and a careful record of its results.

Evidence in judicial inquiries less trustworthy.

The very opposite of all this is true as regards witnesses in a Court of Justice The facts to which they testify are, as a rule, facts in which they are more or less interested, and which in many cases excite their strongest passions to the highest degree. [39] The witnesses are very seldom trained to observe any facts or to express themselves with accuracy upon any subject. They know what the point at issue is, and how their evidence bears upon it, so that they can wish to produce They are generally what they say is secure from contrato observe being in most instances portions of human conduct, are so intricate that even with the best intention on the part of the witness to speak the truth, he will generally be inaccurate and almost always incomplete, in his account of what occurred

Advantages of judicial over scientific inquiries

So far it appears that ... opportunities for investigating and proving the able in judicial and historical inquiries is often scanty, and is always fixed in amount, and though the facts which form the subject of such inquiries are far more intricate than those which attract the inquirer into physical nature; though the judge and the historian can derive no light from experiments; though, in a word, their apparatus for ascertaining the truth is far inferior to that of which physical inquirers dispose, the task which they have to perform is proportionally easier and less ambitious It is attended, moreover, by some special facilities which are great helps in performing it satisfactorily

Maxims more easily appreciated

[40] The question formulas should ever b explained and predicte mena are explained ar and is not yet decided; but no one doubts that approximate rules have been framed which are sufficiently precise to be of great service in estimating the probability of particular events. Whether or not any proposition as to human conduct can ever be enunciated, approaching in generality and accuracy to the proposition that the force of gravity varies inversely as the square of the distance, no one would feel disposed to deny that a recent possessor of stolen property who does not explain his possession is probably either the thief or a receiver; or that if a man refuses to produce a document in his possession, the contents of the document are probably unfavourable to him. In inquiries into isolated facts for practical purposes, such rules as these are nearly as useful as rules of greater generality and exactness, though they are of little service when the object is to interpret a series of facts either for practical or theoretical purposes. If, for instance, the question is whether a particular person committed a crime in the course of which he made use of water, knowledge of the facts that there was a pump in his garden, and that water can be drawn from a well by working the pump handle, is as useful as the most perfect knowledge of hydrostatics. But if the question were as to the means by which water [41] could be supplied for a house and field du practice of hydrostatics the more extensive the required.

Their limitations more easily perceived

To this it must be added that the approximate rules which relate to human conduct are warranted principally by each man's own experience of what passes in his own mind, corroborated by his observation of the conduct of other persons which every one is oblige mental processes are substantially show that the results given by this error than might have been supposed, though the limits are wide enough to leave room for the exercise of a great amount of individual skill and judgment.

This circumstance invests the rules relating to human conduct with a very peculiar character. They are usually expressed with little precision, and stand in need of many exceptions and qualifications, but they are of greater practical use than rough generalizations of the same kind about physical nature, because the personal experience of those by whom they are used readily supplies the qualifications and exceptions which they require. Compare two such rules as these: 'heavy is the thief.'
exception to th
but no one would be led to doubt the second by the fact that a shopkeeper doing a large trade had in his till stolen coins shortly after they had been stolen, without having stolen them. Every one would see at once that such a case formed one of the many unstated exceptions to the rule. The reason is, that we know external nature only by observation of a neutral, unsympathetic kind, whereas every man knows more of human nature than any general rule on the subject can ever tell him.

Judicial problems are simpler than scientific problems

To these considerations it must be added that to inquire whether an isolated fact exists, is a far simpler problem than to ascertain and prove the rule according to which facts of a given class happen. The enquiry falls within a smaller compass. The process is generally deductive. The deductions depend upon previous inductions, of which the truth is generally recognised, and which (at least in judicial inquiries) generally share in the advantage just noticed of appealing directly to the personal experience and sympathy of the Judge. The deductions, too, are, as a rule, of various kinds and so cross and check each other, and thus supply each other's deficiencies.

Illustrations.

For instance, from one series of facts it may be inferred that A had a strong motive to commit a crime, say the murder of B. From an independent set of facts it may be inferred that B died of poison, and from another independent set of facts that A administered the poison of which B died. The question is whether [43] A falls within the small class of murderers by poison. If he does, various propositions about him must be true, no two of which have any necessary connection, except upon the hypothesis that he is a murderer. In this case three such propositions are supposed to be true, viz., (1) the death of B by poison, (2) the administration of it by A, and (3) the motive for its administration Each separate proposition, as it is established, narrows the number of possible hypotheses upon the subject. When it is established that B died of poison innumerable hypotheses which would explain the fact of his death consistently with A's innocence are excluded, when it is proved that A administered the poison of which B died, every supposition, consistent with A's innocence, except those of accident, justification, and the like, are excluded; when it is shown that [illegible] the difficulty of establishing any [illegible] increased, and the number of s[illegible]rrowed in a corresponding degree.

In judicial inquiries parties interested have opportunities to be heard.

This suggests another remark of the highest importance in estimating real weight of judicial inquiries It is that such inquiries in all civilized countries a[illegible] to give every person i[illegible] establishing the con- c[illegible] just given A would [illegible] class of persons who, having a motive to commit murder, and having administered poison to the person whom they have a motive to murder, are unable to suggest any probable reason for supposing that they did administer it innocently.

Summary of results

The results of the foregoing inquiry may be shortly summed up as follows :—

I. The problem of discovering the truth in relation to matters which are judicially investigated is a part of the general problem of science,—the discovery of true propositions as to matters of fact.

II. The general solution of this problem is contained in the rules of induction and deduction stated by Mr. Mill, and generally employed for the purpose of conducting and testing the results of inquiries into physical nature.

III. By the due application of these rules facts may be exhibited as standing towards each other in the relation of cause and effect, and we are able to argue from the cause to the effect and from the effect to the cause with a degree of certainty and precision proportionate to the completeness with which the relevant facts have been observed or are accessible.

IV. The leading differences between judicial investigations and inquiries into physical nature are as follows :—

1. In physical inquiries the number of relevant facts is generally unlimited, and is capable of indefinite increase by experiments.

[45] In judicial investigations the number of relevant facts is limited by circumstances, and is incapable of being increased.

Judicial inquiries involve two classes of inferences.

Such being the general nature of the object towards which judicial inquiries are directed, and the general nature of the process by which they are carried on, it will be well to examine the chief forms of that process somewhat more particularly

It will be found upon examination that the inferences employed in judicial inquiries fall under two heads :—

(1) Inferences from an assertion, whether oral or documentary, to the truth of the matter asserted.

(2) Inferences from facts which, upon the strength of such assertions, are believed to exist to facts of which the existence has not been so asserted.

For the sake of simplicity, I do not here distinguish various subordinate classes of inferences, such as inferences from the manner in which assertions are made, from silence, from the absence of assertion, and from the conduct of the parties They may be regarded as so many forms of assertion, and may therefore be classed [51] under the general head of inferences from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted

Direct and circumstantial evidence.

This is the distinction usually expressed by saying that all evidence is either direct or circumstantial. I avoid the use of this expression, partly because, as I have already observed, direct evidence means direct assertion, whereas circum- [illegible]

[illegible] are different, and that they have different degrees of cogency, which admit of comparison. Th [illegible] cisely the same general theory, [illegible] to the investigation of cases i [illegible] cases in which the facts testified to are few

The general theory has been already stated In every case the question is, are the known facts inconsistent with any other than the conclusion suggested? The known facts in every case whatever are the evidence in the narrower sense of the word. The Judge hears with his own ears the statements of the witnesses and sees with his own eyes the documents produced in Court. His task is to infer, from what he thus sees and hears, the existence of facts which he neither sees nor hears

Illustration.

Let the question be whether a will was executed. Three witnesses, entirely above suspicion, come [52] and testify that they witnessed its execution. These assertions are facts which the Judge hears for himself. Now there are [illegible] the Judge has to consider in [illegible] witnesses that they saw the execution of the will :—

(1) The witnesses may be speaking the truth.

(2) The witnesses may be mistaken.

(3) The witnesses may be telling a falsehood

The circumstances may be such as to render suppositions (2) and (3) improbable in the highest degree, and generally speaking they would be so. In such a case the first hypothesis, i.e., that the will really was executed as alleged, would be proved. The facts before the Judge would be inconsistent with any other reasonable hypothesis except that of the execution of the will. This would be commonly called a case of direct evidence.

Identity of this process with Mr. Mill's theory.

Let the question be whether A committed a crim[illegible] Judge actually knows are that certain [illegible] statements which he believes to be tru[illegible] establish certain facts which show that either A or B or C must have committed the crime, and that neither B nor C did commit it. In this case the facts before the Judge would be inconsistent with any other reasonable hypothesis except that A committed the crime This would be commonly called a case of circumstantial evidence; yet it is obvious that the principle on which the [53] investigation proceeds as in the last case is identically the same The only difference is in the number of inferences, but no new principle is introduced

It is also clear that each case is identical in principle with the method of difference as explained by Mr. Mill

Mr Mill's illustration of the application of that method to the motions of the planets is as follows :—The planets with a central force give areas proportional to the times. The planets without a central force give a different set of motions: but areas proportional to the times are observed Therefore there is a central force

Similarly in the cases suggested The assertions of the witnesses give the execution of a will, i e., no other cause can account for those assertions having been made If the will had not been executed those assertions would not have been made But the assertions were made Therefore the will was executed

Though inferences from an assertion to its truth, and inferences from facts taken as true to other facts not asserted to be true, rest upon the same principle, each inference has its peculiarities.

The inference from the assertion to the truth of the matter asserted is usually regarded as an easy matter, calling for little remark. Inference from assertion to matter asserted.

Though in particular cases it is really easy, and though in a certain sense t rightly is by far the most difficult scarriages of justice are almost [54]
This requires full explanation.

To infer from an assertion the truth of the matter asserted is in one sense the easiest thing in the world. The intellectual process consists of only one step, and that is a step which gives no trouble, and is taken in most cases unconsciously. But to draw the inference in those cases only in which it is true is a matter of the utmost difficulty. If we were able to affirm the proposition, "All men upon all occasions speak the truth" the remaining propositions,—"This man says so and so," "Therefore it is true," would present no difficulty. The major premiss, however, is subject to wide exceptions, which are not forced upon the Judge's attention. Moreover, if they were, the Judge has often no means of ascertaining whether or not, and to what extent, they apply to any particular case.

How is it possible to tell how far the powers of observation and memory of a man seen once for a few minutes enable him, and how far the innumerable motives by any one or more of which he may be actuated dispose him, to tell Its difficulties.

No rules of evidence which the legislator can enact can perceptibly affect this difficulty. Judges must deal with it as well as they can by the use of their natural faculties and acquired experience, and the miscarriages of justice in which they will be involved by reason of it must be set down to the imperfection of our means of arriving at truth The natural and acquired shrewdness and Cannot be affected by rules of evidence.

experience by which an observant man forms an opinion as to whether a witness is or is not lying, is by far the most important of all a Judge's qualifications, infinitely more important than any acquaintance with law or with rules of evidence. No trial ever occurs in which the exercise of this faculty is not required, but it is only in exceptional cases that questions arise which present any legal difficulty or in which it is necessary to exercise any particular ingenuity in putting together the different facts which the evidence tends to establish. This pre-eminently important power for a Judge is not to be learnt out of books. In so far as it can be acquired at all, it is to be acquired only by experience, for the acquisition of which the position of a Judge is by no means peculiarly favourable. People come before him with their cases ready prepared, and give the evidence which they have determined to give. Unless he knows them in their unrestrained and familiar moments he will have great difficulty in finding any good reason for believing one man rather than another. The [56] rules of evidence may provide tests, the value of which has been proved by long experience, by which Judges may be satisfied that the quality of the materials upon which their judgments are to proceed is not open to certain obvious objections. but they do not profess to enable the Judges to know whether or not a particular witness tells the truth or what inference is to be drawn from a particular fact The correctness with which this is done must depend upon the natural sagacity, the logical power and the practical experience of the Judge, not upon his acquaintance with the law of evidence.

Grounds for believing and disbelieving a witness

Power

The grounds for believing or disbelieving particular statements made by particular people under particular circumstances may be brought under three heads,—those which affect the power of the witness to speak the truth; those which affect his will to do so; and those which arise from the nature of the statement itself and from surrounding circumstances. A man's power to speak the truth depends upon his knowledge and his power of expression. This knowledge depends partly on his accuracy in observation, partly on his memory, partly on his presence of mind, his power of expression depends upon an infinite number of circumstances and varies in relation to the subject of which he has to speak.

Will.

A man's will to speak the truth depends upon his education, his character, his courage, his sense of duty, his relation to the particular facts as to which he is to testify, his humour for the moment, and a thousand [57] other circumstances as to the presence or absence of which in any particular case it is often difficult to form a true opinion

The third set of reasons are those which depend upon the probability of the statement.

Probability of statement.

Many discussions have taken place on the effect of the improbability of a statement upon its credibility in cases which can never fall under judicial consideration. It is unnecessary to enter upon that subject here. Looking at the matter merely in relation to judicial inquiries, it is sufficient to observe that whilst the improbability of a statement is always a reason, and may be, in practice, a conclusive reason, for disbelieving it, its probability is a poor reason for believing it if it rests upon uncorroborated testimony. Probable falsehoods are those which an artful liar naturally tells; and the fact that a good opportunity for telling such a falsehood occurs is the commonest of all reasons for its being told.

Experience is the only guide on the subject.

Upon the whole, it must be admitted that little that is really serviceable, can be said upon the inference from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted. The observations of which the matter admits are either generalities too vague to be of much practical use, or they are so narrow and special that can be learnt only by personal observations and practical experience. Such ations are seldom, if ever, thrown by those who make them into the form of express propositions. Indeed, for obvious reasons, it would be impossible to do so. The most acute observer would never be able [58] to catalogue the tones of voice, the passing shades of expression or the unconscious gestures which he had learnt to associate with falsehood; and if he did, his observations would probably be of little use to others. Every one must learn matters of this sort for himself, and though no sort of knowledge is so important to a Judge, no rules can be laid down for its acquisition (1)

If the opinion here advanced appears strange, I would invite attention to the following illustration:—Is there any class of cases in which it is, in practice, [59] so difficult to come to a satisfactory decision as those which depend upon the explicit, direct testimony of a single witness uncorroborated, and, by the nature of the case, incapable of corroboration? For instance, a man and a woman are travelling alone in a railway carriage. The train stops at a station and the woman charges the man with indecent conduct which he denies. Nothing particular is known about the character or previous history of either. The woman is not betrayed on cross-examination into any inconsistency. There are no cases in which the difficulty of arriving at a satisfactory decision is anything like so great. It is easy to decide them as it is easy to make a bet, but it is easier to deal satisfactorily with the most complicated and lengthy chain of inference. Illustration.

The uncertainty of inferences from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted may be shown by stating them logically. They may be considered as being the conclusions of syllogisms in this form:—

All men situated in such and such a manner speak the truth or speak falsely (as the case may be).

A B, situated in such and such a manner, says so and so.

Therefore, in saying so and so, he speaks truly or falsely (as the case may be).

This is a deduction resting on a previous induction, and it is obvious that the induction which furnishes the major premiss must always be exceedingly imperfect, and that the truth of the minor premiss, which is essential to the deduction, is always more or less conjectural.

[60] In many cases the defects of inferences of the first kind may be incidentally remedied by inferences of the second kind, namely, inferences from facts which are asserted, and, on the ground of such assertion, believed by the Court to exist, to facts not asserted to exist; and these I now proceed to examine. Inference from facts proved to facts not otherwise proved.

I have observed that the inference from an assertion to the truth of the matter asserted often is as easy as it always appears to be. In very many Inference from assertion to truth sometimes really easy.

(1) I may give a few anecdotes which have no particular value in themselves, but which show what I mean. "I always used to look at the witnesses' toes when I was cross-examining them," said a friend of mine who had practised at the bar in Ceylon. "As soon as they began to lie they always fidgeted about with them." I know a Judge who formed the opinion that a letter had been forged because the expression "that woman" which it contained appeared to him to be one which a woman and not a man would use, and the question was whether the letter in question had been forged by a woman. In the life of Lord Keeper Guilford it is said that he always acted on the principle that a man was to be believed in what he said when he was in a passion. The common-places about the evidence of police-men, children, women, and the natives of particular countries belong to this subject. The only remark I feel inclined to add to what is commonly said on it is that according to my observation, the power to tell the truth, which implies accurate observation, knowledge of the relative importance of facts, and power of description, properly proportioned to each other, is much less common than people usually suppose it to be. It is extremely difficult for an untrained person not to mix up inference and assertion. It is also difficult for such a person to distinguish between what they themselves saw and heard, and what they were told by others, unless their attention is specially directed to the distinction.

instances, which it is much easier to recognise when they occur than to reduce to rule, a direct assertion, even by a single witness of whom little is known, is entitled to great weight. Suppose, for instance, that the matter asserted is of a ... indifferent in itself and upon which the witness is, or for aught he can ... A single assertion of this sort may outweigh ... ood Suppose, for instance, that a number of witnesses have been called to prove an alibi, and that they allege that on a given day they were all present together with the person on behalf of whom the alibi is to be proved at a fair held at a certain place If the Magistrate of the district, whose duty it was to superintend the fair, were to depose that the fair did not begin to be held till a day subsequent to the one in question, no one would doubt that the witnesses had conspired together to give false evidence by the familiar trick of changing the day In this case one direct assertion would outweigh many direct assertions Why? Beacuse the Magistrate of the district would be a man of [61] character and position; because he would (we must assume) be quite indifferent to the particular case in issue; because he would be deposing to a fact of which it would be his official duty to be cognizant and on which he could hardly be mistaken; and lastly, because the fact would be known to a vast number of people, and he would be open to contradiction, detection, and ruin if he spoke falsely Change these circumstances, and the equally explicit testimony of the very same man might be worthless Suppose, for instance, that he was asked whether he had committed adultery? His denial would carry hardly any weight in any conceivable case, inasmuch as the charge is one which a guilty man would always deny, and an innocent man could do no more. In other words, since the course of conduct supposed is one which a man would certainly take whether he were innocent or not, the fact of his taking it would afford no criterion as to his guilt or innocence.

Now in almost all judicial proceedings a certain number of facts are established by direct assertions made under such circumstances that no one would seriously doubt their truth. Others are rendered probable in various degrees and thus the judge is furnished with facts which he may use as a basis for his inferences as to the existence of other facts which are either not asserted to exist, or are asserted to exist by unsatisfactory witnesses

Such inference comparatively easy.

These inferences are generally considered to be more difficult to draw than the inference from an assertion to the matter asserted In [62] fact, it is far easier to combine materials supposed to be sound, than to ascertain that they are sound. In the one case no rules for the Judge's guidance can be laid down. No process is gone through, the correctness of which can afterwards be independently tested. The Judge has nothing to trust to but his own natural and acquired sagacity. In the other case all that is required is to go through a process with which, as Mr. Huxley remarks, every one has a general superficial acquaintance tested by every-day practice, and the theory of which it is easy to understand and interesting to follow out and apply.

Facts must fulfil test of method of difference.

The facts supposed to be proved must ultimately fulfil the conditions of the method of difference, but they may be combined by any of the recognised logical methods or by a combination of them all. The object, indeed, at which they are all directed is the same, though they reach it by different roads. A few illustrations will make this plain. The question is whether A has embezzled a small sum of money, say a particular rupee which he received on account of his employer and did not enter in a book in which he ought to have entered it. His defence is that the omission to make the entry was acci tal. The account book is examined, and it is found that in a long series of i nces omission of small sums have been made, each of which omissions is in favour. This, in the absence of explanation, would leave no reasonable do f A's guilt in each and every case. It would be practically impossible t unt for such facts except upon the assumption of [63] systematic fraud. lly, this is an instance of the Method of Agreement applied to so great a number of instances as to exclude the operation of chance. When, however, this is done, the Method of Agreement becomes a case of the Method of Difference Converging probabilities.

The well-known cases in which guilt is inferred from a number of separate independent, and, so to speak, converging probabilities, may be regarded as an illustration of the same principle Their general type is as follows —

B was murdered by some one

Whoever murdered B had a motive for his murder.

A had a motive for murdering B

Whoever murdered B had an opportunity for murdering B.

A had an opportunity for murdering B

Whoever murdered B made preparations for the murder of B

A acted in a manner which might amount to a preparation for murdering B.

In each of these instances, which might of course be indefinitely multiplied, one item of agreement is established between the ascertained fact that B was murdered and the hypothesis that A murdered him, and it does sometimes happen that these coincidences may be multiplied to such an extent and may be of such a character as to exclude the supposition of chance, and justify the inference that A was guilty (1) The case however, is a [64] rare one, and there is always a great risk of injustice unless the facts proved go beyond the mere multiplication of circumstances separately indicating guilt, and amount to a substantial exclusion of every reasonable possibility of innocence

Illustrations.

The celebrated passage in Lord Macaulay's Essays in which he seeks to prove that Sir Philip Francis was the author of Junius's letters, is an instance, of an argument of this kind The letters, he says, show that five facts can be predicated of Junius, whoever he may have been But these five facts may also be predicated of Sir Philip Francis and of no one else Whether any part of this argument can in fact be sustained, is a question to which it would be impertinent to refer here, but that the method on which it proceeds is legitimate there can be no doubt Rules as to corpus delicti.

The cases in which it is most probable that injustice will be done by the application of the method of agreement to judicial inquiries are those in which the existence of the principal fact has to be inferred from circumstances pointing to it. This is the foundation of the well-known rule that the corpus delicti should not in general in criminal cases be inferred from other facts, but should be proved independently It has been sometimes narrowed to the proposition that no one should be convicted of murder unless the body of the murdered person has been discovered. Neither of these rules is more than a rough and partial application of the general principle stated above. If the circumstances are [65] such as to make it morally certain (within the definition given above) that a crime has been committed, the inference that it was so committed is as safe as any other such inference.

Illustrations.

The captain of a ship, a thousand miles from any land, and with no other vessel in sight, is seen to run into his cabin, pursued by several mutinous sailors. The noise of a struggle and a splash are heard. The sailors soon afterwards come out of the cabin and take the command of the vessel The cabin windows are opened The cabin is in confusion, and the captain is never seen or heard of again.

A person looks at his watch and returns it to his pocket. Immediately afterwards a man comes past, and makes a snatch at the watch, which disappears The man being pursued, runs away and swims across a river; he is arrested on the other side. He has now atch in his possession and the watch is never found.

(1) See Richardson's case, p 189 (i e, 45 of this introduction).

In these cases it is morally certain that murder and theft respectively were committed, though in the first case the body, and in the second the watch is not producible.

Existence of corpus delicti sometimes wrongly inferred

Cases, however, do undoubtedly occur in which the inference that a crime has been committed at all is a mistake. They may often be resolved into a case of begging the question. The process is this: suspicion that a crime has been committed is excited, upon inquiry a number of circumstances are discovered which, if it is assumed that a crime has been committed, are suspicious, but which are not suspicious unless the assumption is made [66] A ship is cast away under such circumstances that her loss may be accounted for either by fraud or by accident.

The captain is tried for making away with her. A variety of circumstances exist which would indicate preparation and expectation on his part if the ship really was made away with, but which would justify no suspicion at all if she [illegible] antecedent circumstances [illegible] be fraudulent, and next [illegible] the suspicious character of the antecedent circumstances. This, however, is a fallacy of very common occurrence, both in judicial proceedings and in common life.(1)

The modes in which facts may be so combined as to exclude every hypothesis other than the one which it is intended to establish are very numerous, and are, I think, better learnt from specific illustrations and from actual practice than from abstract theories. One of the objects of the illustrations given in the next chapter is to enable students to understand this matter.

Summary of conclusions

The result of the foregoing inquiries may be summed up as follows:—

I. In judicial inquiries the facts which form the materials for the decision of the court are the facts that certain persons assert certain things under certain circumstances. [67] These facts the Judge hears with his own ears. He also sees with his own eyes documents and other things respecting which he hears certain assertions.

II. His task is to infer—

(1) From what he himself hears and sees the existence of the facts asserted to exist;

(2) From the facts which on the strength of such assertions he believes to exist other facts which are not so asserted to exist.

III. Each of these inferences is an inference from the effect to the cause, and each ought to conform to the Method of Difference; that is to say, the circumstances in each case should be such that the effect is inconsistent (subject to the limitations contained in the following paragraphs) with the existence of any other cause for it than the cause of which the existence is proposed to be proved.

IV. The highest results of judicial investigation must generally be, for the reasons already given, to show that certain conclusions are more or less probable.

V. The question—what degree of probability is it necessary to show, in order to warrant a judicial decision in a given case? is a question not of logic, but of prudence, and is identical with the question: "What risk of error is it wise to run, regard being had to the consequence of error in either direction?"

VI. This degree of probability varies in different cases to an extent which cannot be strictly defined, but wherever it exists it may be called moral certainty.

(1) An illustration of this form of error occurred in the case of R v. Steward and two others, who were convicted at Singapore in 1867 for casting away the Schooner Erin, and subsequently received a free pardon on the ground of their innocence.

(68) CHAPTER III.

THE THEORY OF RELEVANCY, WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

Relevancy means connection of events as cause and effect

An intelligence of sufficient capacity might perhaps be able to conceive of all events as standing to each other in the relation of cause and effect, and though the most powerful of human minds are unequal to efforts which fall infinitely short of this, it is possible not only to trace the connection between cause and effect, both in regard to human conduct and in regard to inanimate matter, to very considerable lengths, but to see that numerous events are connected together, although the precise nature of the links which connect them may not be open to observation The connection may be traced in either direction, from effect to cause or from cause to effect, and if these two words were taken in their widest acceptation, it would be correct to say that when any theory has been formed which alleges the existence of any fact, all facts are relevant which, if that theory was true, would stand to the fact alleged to exist either in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect.

Objections.

It may be said that this theory would extend the limits of relevancy beyond all reasonable bounds, inasmuch as all events whatever are or may be more or [69] less remotely connected by the universal chain of cause and effect, so that the theory of gravitation would upon this principle be relevant, wherever one of the facts in issue involved the falling of an object to the ground.

Answer.

The answer to this objection is, that wide, general causes, which apply to all occurrences, are, in most cases, admitted, and do not require proof; but no doubt if their application to the matter in question were doubtful or were misunderstood, it might be necessary to investigate them For instance, suppose that in an action for infringing a patent, the defence set up was that the patent was invalid, because the invention had been anticipated by some one who preceded the patentee The issue might be whether an earlier machine was substantially the same as the patentee's machine All the facts, therefore, which went to make up each machine would be facts in issue. But each machine would be constructed with reference to the general formulæ called laws of nature and thus the existence of an alleged law of nature might well become, not merely relevant, but a fact in issue. If the first inventor of barometers had taken out a patent, and had had to defend its validity, the variation of atmospheric pressure, according to the height of a column of air, and the fact that air has weight, might have been facts in issue

With regard to the remark that all events are connected together more or knife is carefully washed, the water is thrown away, and the notch in the blade is ground out. It is obvious that, unless each link in this chain of cause and effect could be separately proved, it would be impossible to trace the connection between the knife cleaned and ground and the purpose for which it had been used On the other hand, if the first step—the fact that the knife was bloody at a given time and place—was proved, there would be no use in inquiring into the further effects produced by that fact, such as the staining of the water in which it was washed, the infinitesimal effects produced on the river into which the water was thrown, and so forth.

Rule as to cause and effects true, subject to caution that every step in the connection must be made out. Illustration

The rule, therefore, that facts may be regarded as relevant which can be shown to stand either in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect to the fact to which they are said to be relevant, may be accepted as true, subject to the caution that, when an inference is to be founded upon the existence of such a connection, every step by which the connection is made out must either be proved, or be so probable under the circumstances of the case that it may be presumed without proof. Footmarks are found near the scene of a crime. The circumstances are such that they may be presumed to be the footmarks made by the criminal. These marks [71] correspond precisely with a pair of shoes found on the feet of the accused. The presumption founded upon common experience, though its force may vary indefinitely, is that no two pairs of shoes would make precisely the same marks. It may further be presumed, though this presumption is by no means conclusive, that shoes were worn by the owner on a given occasion Here the steps are as follows —

(1) The person who committed the crime probably made those marks by pressing the shoes which he wore on the ground.

(2) The person who committed the crime probably wore his own shoes.

(3) The shoes so pressed were probably these shoes

(4) These shoes are A B's shoes

Therefore A B probably made those marks with those shoes.

Therefore A B probably committed the crime.

These facts may be exhibited in the relation of cause and effect thus :—

(1) A's owning the shoes was the cause of his wearing them.

(2) His wearing them at a given place and time caused the marks.

(3) The marks were caused by the flight of the criminal

(4) The flight of the criminal was caused by the commission of the crime

[72] (5) Therefore the marks were caused by the flight of A the criminal, after committing the crime.

Obscurity of this definition

Though this mode of describing relevancy might be correct, it would not be readily understood For instance, it might be asked, how is an alibi relevant under this definition ? The answer is, that a man's absence from a given place at a given time is a cause of his not having done a given act at that place and time This mode of using language would, however, be obscure, and it was for this reason that relevancy was very fully defined in the Evidence Act (ss. 6-11 both inclusive). These sections enumerate specifically the different instances of the connection between cause and effect which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings. They are designedly worded very widely, and in such a way as to overlap each other. Thus a motive for a fact in issue (s. 8) is part of its cause (s. 7). Subsequent conduct influenced by it (s. 8) is part of its effect (s. 7). Facts relevant under s. 11 would, in most cases, be relevant under other sections. The object of drawing the Act in this manner was that the general ground on which facts are relevant might be stated in as many and as popular forms as possible, so that if a fact is relevant, its relevancy may be easily ascertained.

Importance of these sections.

These sections are by far the most important, as they are the most original part of the Evidence Act, as they affirm positively what facts may be proved, whereas the English law assumes this to [73] be known, and merely declares negatively that certain facts shall not be proved.

Important as these sections are for purposes of study, and in order to make the whole body of law to which they belong easily intelligible to students and practitioners not trained in English Courts, they are not likely to give rise to litigation or to nice distinction. The reason is that s 167 of the Evidence Act which was formerly s. 57 of Act II of 1855, renders it practically a matter of little importance whether evidence of a particular fact is admitted or not. The extreme intricacy and minuteness of the law of England on this subject is principally due to the fact that the improper admission or rejection of a single case, and would conviction before

The improper admission or rejection of evidence in India has no effect at all, unless the Court thinks that the evidence improperly dealt with either turned or ought to have turned the scale. A Judge, moreover, if he doubts as to the relevancy of a fact suggested, can, if he thinks it will lead to any thing relevant, ask about it himself under s. 165.

In order to exhibit fully the meaning of these sections, to show how the Act was intended to be worked and to furnish students with models by which they may be guided in the discharge of the most important of their duties, abstracts are appended of the evidence given at the following remarkable trials :— Illustration.

[74] 1. R. v. Donellan

2. R. v. Belaney.

3. R. v. Richardson.

4. R. v. Patch.

5. R v. Palmer.

To every fact proved in each of these cases, the most intricate that I could discover, a note is attached, showing under what section of the Evidence Act it would be relevant.

I may observe upon these cases that the general principles of evidence are, perhaps, more clearly displayed in trials for murder, than in any others. Murders are usually concealed with as much care as possible; and, on the other hand, they must, from the nature of the case, leave traces behind them which render it possible to apply the argument from effects to causes with greater force in these than in most other cases. Moreover as they involve capital punishment and excite peculiar attention, the evidence is generally investigated with special care. There are accordingly few cases which show so distinctly the sort of connection between fact and fact, which makes the existence of one fact a good ground for inferring the existence of another.

I.

[75] Case of R. v. Donellan.(1)

John Donellan, Esq., was tried at Warwick Spring Assizes, 1781, before Mr. Justice Buller, for the murder of law, a young man of fortune, twent of his death, had been in good healt ailment, for which he occasionally was the sister of the deceased, and, together with Lady Broughton, his mother, lived with him at Lawford Hall, the family mansion (3)

---

(1) Wills on "Circumstantial Evidence," pp. 192-6.

(2) Introductory fact (section 9).

(3) State of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7).

In the event of Sir T. Broughton's death, unmarried and without issue, the greater part of his fortune would descend to Mrs. Donellan(1); but it was stated, though not proved, by the prisoner in his defence that he on his marriage entered into articles for the immediate settling of her whole fortune on herself and children, and deprived himself of the possibility of enjoying even a life-estate in [76] case of her death, and that this settlement extended not only to the fortune but to expectancies (2)

For some time before the death of Sir Theodosius the prisoner had on several occasions falsely represented his health to be very bad and his life to be precarious (3) On the 29th of August the apothecary in attendance sent him a mild and harmless draught to be taken the next morning.(4) In the evening the deceased was out fishing(5), and the prisoner told his mother that he had been out with him, and that he had imprudently got his feet wet, both of which assertions were false.(6) When Sir Theodosius was called on the following morning he was in good health(7), and about seven o'clock his mother went to his chamber to give him his draught(8), of which he immediately complained(9), and she remarked that it smelt like bitter almonds.(10) [77] In about two minutes he struggled very much as if to keep the medicine down, and Lady Broughton observed a gurgling in his stomach(11); in ten minutes he seemed inclined to doze(11); but in five minutes afterwards she found him with his eyes fixed, his teeth clenched, and froth running out of his mouth, and within half an hour after taking the dose he died (11)

Lady Broughton ran downstairs to give orders to a servant to go for the apothecary, who lived about three miles distant(12), and in less than five minutes after Sir Theodosius had been taken Donellan asked where the physic bottle was, and Lady Broughton showed him the two bottles. The prisoner then took up one of them and said "Is this it?" and being answered "Yes," he poured some water out of the water bottle which was near into the phial. shook it, and then emptied it into some dirty water which was in a wash-hand basin Lady Broughton said, "You should not meddle with the bottle," upon which the prisoner snatched up the other bottle and poured water into that also, and shook it again asked on which he
the first bottle.(13) The prisoner ordered a [78] servant to take away the basin, the dirty things and the bottles, and put the bottles into her hands, for that purpose; she put them down again on being directed by Lady Broughton to do so, but subsequently removed them on the peremptory order of the

(1) Motive (section 8)

(2) Fact rebutting an inference suggested by a relevant fact (section 9). These facts are omitted by Mr. Wills, but are mentioned in my account of the case. Gen View, Crim. Law, p. 338.

(3) Facts showing preparation for fact in issue (section 8). The statements are also admissions as against the prisoner (section 17).

(4) A fact affording an opportunity for facts in issue (section 7).

(5) Introductory to what follows (section 9).

(6) Preparation (section 8). Admission (section 17).

(7) State of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7).

(8) It was suggested that Donellan changed the apothecary's draught for a poisoned one administered by Lady Broughton, an innocent agent. Therefore the administration of the draught suggested to be poisoned was a fact in issue (section 5).

(9) As to this, see section 14.

(10) i.e., of prussic acid. Lady Broughton perceived by smell the presence of the poison Therefore she smelt a fact in issue (section 5)

(11) Effects of facts in issue (section 7). All these facts go to make up the fact of his death which was a fact in issue.

(12) Introductory to next fact as fixing the time (section 9).

(13) Subsequent conduct influenced by a fact in issue and statements explanatory of conduct (section 8).

(14) This word is Mr. Wills' comment.

prisoner (1) On the arrival of the apothecary, the prisoner said the deceased had been out the preceding evening fishing, and had taken cold, but he said nothing of the draught which he had taken.(1) The prisoner had a still in his own room which he used for distilling roses(2); and a few days after the death of Sir Theodosius he brought it full of wet lime to one of the servants to be cleaned.(3) The prisoner made several false and inconsistent statements to the servants as the cause of the young man's death(4); and on the day of his death he wrote to Sir W. Wheeler, his guardian, to inform him of the event, but made no reference to its suddenness.(4) The coffin was soldered up on the fourth day after the death (5) Two days afterwards Sir W. Wheeler in consequence of the rumours which had reached him of the manner of Sir Theodosius's death, and that suspicions were entertained that he had died from the effects of poison(6), wrote a letter to the prisoner requesting [79] that an examination might take [illegible] d it to be conducted (7)

[illegible] hibit Sir W. Wheeler's [illegible] been poisoned, nor did [illegible] Having been induced by the prisoner to suppose the case to be one of ordinary death(8), and finding the body in an advanced state of putrefaction, the medical gentlemen declined to make the examination on the ground that it might be attended with personal danger On the following day a medical man who had heard of their refusal to examine the body offered to do so, but the prisoner declined his offer on the ground that he had not been directed to send for him (9) On the same day the prisoner wrote to Sir W Wheeler a letter in which he stated that the medical men had fully satisfied the family, and endeavoured to account [80] for the event by the ailment under which the deceased had been suffering; but he did not state that they had not made the examination.(10) Three or four days after, Sir W Wheeler having been informed that the body had not been examined(11) wrote to the prisoner insisting that it should be done(12), which, however, he prevented by various disingenuous contrivances(13), and the body was interred without examination (14) In the meantime, the circumstances having become known to the coroner, he caused the body to be disinterred and examined on the eleventh day after death. Putrefaction was found to be far advanced, and the head was not opened, nor the bowels examined, and in other respects the examination was incomplete.(15) When Lady Broughton

---

(1) Subsequent conduct and explanatory statements (section 8).

(2) Opportunity to distil laurel-water, the poison said to have been used (section 7).

(3) Subsequent conduct (section 8).

(4) Admission, 17, 18.

(5) Introductory to what follows (section 9).

(6) Introductory to, and explanatory of, what follows (section 9). It should be observed that proof of the rumours and suspicions for the purpose of showing the truth of the matters rumoured and suspected would not be admissible. The fact that there were rumours and suspicions explains Sir W. Wheeler's letter.

(7) Statement to the prisoner and affecting his conduct (section 8, ex 2).

(8) Subsequent conduct of prisoner (section 8) and Mr. Wills' comment on the conduct

(9) Subsequent conduct (section 8). The fact that the first set of doctors refused explains the prisoner's conduct by showing that it had the effect of preventing examinations (section 7). The ground on which they refused tends to rebut this inference (section 9), but the second doctor's offer, and the prisoner's conduct thereon, tend to confirm it (section 9).

(10) Subsequent conduct (section 11) and admission (section 17).

(11) Introductory (section 9)

(12) Statement to the prisoner affecting his conduct (section 8, ex. 2).

(13) Each contrivance and each circumstance which showed that it was disingenuous would come under the head of subsequent conduct (section 8).

(14) The burial was part of the transaction (section 6). The absence of examination is explanatory of parts of the medical evidence The whole is introductory to medical evidence (section 9).

(15) Introductory to opinions of experts (sections 9, 45, 46) in giving evidence before the coroner's inquest, related the circumstance of the prisoner having rinsed the bottles, he was observed to take hold of her sleeve and endeavour to check her, and he afterwards told her that she had no occasion to have mentioned that circumstance, but only to answer such questions as were put to her, and in a letter to the coroner and jury he [81] endeavoured to impress them with the belief that the deceased had inadvertently poisoned himself with arsenic, which he had purchased to kill fish.(1) Upon the trial four medical men—three physicians and an apothecary—were examined on the part of the prosecution, and expressed a very decided opinion mainly grounded upon the symptoms, the suddenness of the death, the post-mortem appearances, the smell of the draught as observed by Lady Broughton, and the similar effects produced by experiments upon animals, that the deceased had been poisoned with laurel-water(2); one of them stating that on opening the body he had been affe [illegible] ste like that which affected him in all th [illegible] laurel-water.(3) An eminent(4) surgeon and [illegible] that the symptoms did not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the deceased had been poisoned, and that the appearances presented upon dissection explained nothing but putrefaction (2) The prisoner was convicted and executed.

II.

[82] CASE OF R. v. BELANEY.(5)

A surgeon named Belaney was tried at the Central Criminal Court, August 1844, before Mr. Baron Gurney, for the murder of his wife. They left their place of residence, at North Sunderland, on a journey of pleasure to [illegible] journey; but not sufficiently so to prevent her going about with her husband.(8) On the 8th, being the Saturday morning after the arrival in town, the prisoner rang the bell for some hot water, a tumbler, and a spoon(9); and he and his wife were heard conversing in their chamber about seven o'clock. About a quarter before eight the prisoner called the landlady upstairs, saying that his wife was very ill; and she found her lying motionless on the bed, with her eyes shut and her teeth closed, and foaming at the [83] mouth. On being asked if she was subject to fits, the prisoner said she had fits before, but none like this,

---

(1) Subsequent conduct (section 8) and admissions (section 17).

(2) Opinion of experts (section 45).

(3) This is a case of testing a fact in issue, viz, the laurel-water present in the body. See definition of fact, section 3.

(4) This was the famous John Hunter.

(5) Wills on "Circumstantial Evidence," pp 175—178.

(6) Motive (section 8).

(7) Introductory (section 9)

(8) State of things under which fact in issue happened (section 7).

(9) Preparation (section 8)

and that she would not come out of it. On being pressed to send for a doctor, the prisoner said he was a doctor himself, and should have let blood before, but there was no pulse. On being further pressed to send for a doctor and his friends he assented, adding that she would not come to; that this was an affection of the heart, and that her mother died in the same way nine months ago. The servant was accordingly sent to fetch two of the prisoner's friends, and on her return she and the prisoner put the patient's feet and hands in warm water and applied a mustard plaster to her chest. A medical man was sent for, but before his arrival the patient had died.(1) There was a tumbler close to the head of the bed, about one-third full of something clear, but whiter than water; and there was also an empty tumbler on the other side of the table, and a paper of Epsom salts.(2) In reply to a question from a medical man whether the deceased had taken any medicine that morning, the prisoner stated that she had taken nothing but a little salts (3) On the same morning the prisoner ordered a grave for interment on the following Monday (4) In the [84] meantime the contents of the stomach were examined and found to contain prussic acid and Epsom salts. It was deposed that the symptoms were similar to those of death by prussic acid, but might be the result of any powerful sedative poison, and that the means resorted to by the prisoner were not likely to promote recovery, but that cold effusion, artificial respiration, and the application of brandy or ammonia (which in the shape of smelling salts is found in every house) and other stimulants were the appropriate remedies, and might probably have been effectual. No smell of prussic acid had been discovered in the room, though it has a very strong odour, but the window was open, and it was stated that the odour is soon dissipated by a current of air (5) The prisoner had purchased prussic acid, as also acetate of morphine, on the preceding day, from a vendor of medicines with whom he was intimate, but he had been in the habit of using these poisons under advice for a complaint in the stomach (6) Two days after the fatal event the prisoner stated to the medical man, who had been called in and who had assisted in the examination of the body, that on the [illegible] that on endeavour- [illegible] ised some force with [illegible] cing the neck of the bottle by the force, some of the acid was spilt; that he placed the remainder in the tumbler on the drawers at the end of the bed-room, that he went into the front room to fetch a bottle wherein to place the acid, but instead of so doing began to write to his friends in the country, when in a few minutes he heard a scream from his wife's bed-room, calling for cold water, and that the prussic acid was undoubtedly the cause of her death. Upon being asked what he had done with the bottle, the prisoner said he had destroyed it; and on being asked why he had not mentioned the circumstances before, he said he had not done so because he was so distressed and ashamed at the consequence of his negligence To various persons in the north of England the prisoner wrote false and suspicious accounts of his wife's illness. In one of them, dated from the Euston Hotel on the 6th of June, he stated that his wife was unwell, and that two medical men attended her, and that in consequence

---

(1) The death and attendant circumstances are facts in issue and part of the transaction (sections 5 26) The other facts are conduct (section 8) and admissions (sections 17, 18).

(2) State of things at death, or cause or effect of administration of poison (section 7)

(3) Admissions (sections 17, 18).

(4) Conduct (section 8).

(5) Effect of poisoning (section 7), opinions of experts (sections 45, 46). The absence of the smell of prussic acid and the presence of the draughts are respectively a fact suggesting the absence of prussic acid, and a fact rebutting that inference (section 9)

(6) Preparation (section 8) and fact rebutting inference from purchase of poison (section 9).

he should give up an intended visit to Holland, and intimated his apprehension of a miscarriage. For these statements there was no foundation. At that time moreover he had removed from the Euston Hotel into lodgings, and on the same day he had made arrangements for leaving his wife in London, and proceeding himself on his visit to Holland. In another letter, dated 8th of June, and posted after his wife's death, though it could not be determined whether it was written before or after, the prisoner stated that [86] he had had his wife removed from the hotel to private lodgings, where she was dangerously ill and attended by two medical men, one of whom had pronounced her heart to be diseased; these representations were equally false. In another letter, dated the 9th of June, but not posted until the 10th, he stated the fact of his wife's death, but without any allusion to the cause; and in a subsequent letter he stated the reason for the suppression to be to conceal the shame and reproach of his negligence. The prisoner's statements to his landlady that his wife's mother had died from disease of the heart was also a falsehood, the prisoner having himself stated in writing to the registrar of burials that brain fever was the cause of death.(1) It was, however, proved that the prisoner was of a kind disposition, that he and his wife had lived upon affectionate terms and that he was extremely careless in his habits(2); and no motive for so horrible a deed was clearly made out, though it was urged that it was the desire of obtaining her property by means of her testamentary disposition.(3) Upon the whole, though the case was to the last degree suspicious, it was certainly possible that an accident might have taken place in the way suggested; and the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal.

Remarks in cases of Donellan and Belaney

The two cases of Donellan and Belaney are not merely curious in themselves, but throw light upon one of the most important of the [87] points connected with judicial evidence, the point namely as to the amount of uncertainty which constitutes what can be called reasonable doubt. This I have already said is a question, not of calculation, but of prudence. The cases in question show that different tribunals at different times do not measure it in precisely the same way. In Donellan's case the jury did not think the possibility that [illegible] ave died of a fit sufficiently great to constitute [illegible] been poisoned. In Belaney's case the jury [illegible] the prisoner gave his wife the poison by [illegible]

[illegible] forms a precedent for any other decision If two juries were to try the very same case, upon the same evidence and with the same summing up and the same arguments by counsel, they might very probably arrive at opposite conclusions and yet it might be impossible to say that either of them was wrong. Of the moral qualifications for the office of a Judge few are more important than the strength of mind which is capable of admitting the unpleasant truth that it is often necessary to act upon probabilities, and to run some risk of error. The cruelty of the old criminal law of Europe, and of [88] England as well as of other countries produced many bad effects, one of which was that it intimidated those who had to put it in force. The saying that it is better that ten criminals should escape than that one innocent man should be convicted expresses this sentiment, which has I think been carried too far, and has done much to enervate the administration of justice

(1) All these are admissions (sections 17, 18), and conduct (section 3).

(2) Character (section 53).

(3) Motive (section 8).

III.

[89] CASE OF R. v. RICHARDSON.(1)

In the autumn of 1786 a young woman, who lived with her parents in a remote district in the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright(2), was one day left alone in the cottage(3), her parents having gone out to the harvest-field.(4) On their return home a little after mid-day(2), they found their daughter murdered(5), with her throat cut(6) in a most shocking manner.

The circumstances in which she was found, the character of the deceased, and the appearance of the wound, all concurred in excluding all supposition of suicide(7); while the surgeons who examined the wound were satisfied that [90] it had been inflicted by a sharp instrument, and by a person who must have held the weapon in his left hand (8) Upon opening the body the deceased appeared to have been some months gone with child(9); and on examining the ground about the cottage there were discovered the footsteps of a person who had seemingly been running hastily from the cottage by an indirect road through a quagmire or bog, in which there were stepping-stones (10) It appeared, however, that the person in his haste and confusion had slipped his foot and stepped into the mire, by which he must have been wet nearly to the middle of the leg (11) The prints of the footsteps were accurately measured and an exact impression taken of them(12), and it appeared that they were those of a person, who must have worn shoes, the soles of which had been newly mended, and which, as is usual in that part of the country, had iron knobs or nails in them.(12) There were discovered also along the track of the footsteps, and at certain intervals, drops of blood, and on a stile or small gateway near the cottage, and in the line of the footsteps some marks resembling those of a hand which had been bloody.(12) Not the slightest suspicion at this time [91] attached to any particular person as the murderer, nor was it even suspected who might be the father of the child of which the girl was pregnant (13) At the funeral a number of persons of both sexes attended(14), and the steward-depute thought it the fittest opportunity of endeavouring, if possible, to discover the murderer, conceiving rightly that, to avoid suspicion, whoever he was he would not on that occasion be absent (12) With this view he called together, after the interment, the whole of the men who were present, being about sixty in number.(14) He caused the shoes of each of them to be taken off and measured, and one of the shoes was found to resemble pretty nearly the impression of the footsteps near to the cottage. The wearer of the shoe was the schoolmaster of the parish, which led to a suspicion that he must have been the father of the child, and had been guilty of the murder to save his character. On a closer examination of the shoe, it was discovered that it was pointed at the toe,

(1) Wills pp. 225—229. Mr Wills observes, "This case is also concisely stated in the 'Memoirs of the Life of Sir Walter Scott,' IV, p. 52, and it supplied one of the most striking incidents in 'Guy Mannering'."

(2) Introductory (section 9).

(3) Opportunity (section 7)

(4) Explanatory (section 9)

(5) Mr. Wills' comment. They found her with the throat cut, and Mr. Wills says, she was murdered, but her murder was to them an inference, not a fact (section 3).

(6) Fact in issue (section 5).

(7) Suicide would be a relevant fact as being inconsistent with murder. The facts which exclude suicide are relevant as inconsistent with a relevant fact (section 11).

(8) Opinion of experts (section 45).

(9) State of things under which death happened (section 7).

(10) Effects of facts in issue (section 7).

(11) This is so stated as to mix up inference and fact. Stripped of inference the fact might have been stated thus,—'There were such marks in the bog as would have been produced if a person crossing the stepping-stones had slipped with one foot. The mud was of such a depth that a person so slipping would get wet to the middle of the leg

(12) Effects of fact in issue (section 7).

(13) Observation.

(14) Introductory (section 9).

whereas the impression of the footstep was round at that place.(1) The measurement of the rest went on, and after going through nearly the whole number one at length was discovered which corresponded exactly with the impression in dimensions, shape of the foot, form of the sole, and the number and position of the nails.(2) William Richardson, the young man to [92] whom the shoe

[illegible] was the day deceased was murdered, replied, that he had been all that day employed at [illegible]t which his master and fellow-servants who were present confirmed (4) This going so far to remove suspicions a warrant of commitment was not then granted, but some circumstances occurring a few days afterwards having a tendency to excite it anew, the young man was apprehended and lodged in jail.(5) Upon his examination(6) he acknowledged that he was left-handed(7); and some scratches being observed on his cheek; he said he had got them when pulling nuts in a wood a few days before.(8) He still adhered to what [93] he had said of his having been on the day of the murder employed constantly in his master's work(9), but in the course of the inquiry it turned out that he had been absent from his work about half an hour, the time being distinctly ascertained, in the course of the forenoon of that day; that he called at a smith's shop under the pretence of wanting something which it did not appear that he had any occasion for, and that this smith's shop was in the way to the cottage of the deceased.(9) A young girl, who was some hundred yards from the cottage, said that, about the time when the murder was committed (and which corresponded to the time when Richardson was absent [illegible] ly with his dress and appear- [illegible] not see him return, though he [illegible] would intercept him from her view, and which was the very track where the footsteps had been traced (10)

His fellow-servants now recollected that on the forenoon of that day they were employed with Richardson in driving their master's cart, and that when passing by a wood which they named, he said that he must run to the [94] smith's shop and would be back in a short time He then left his cart under their charge, and, having waited for him about half an hour, which one of the servants ascertained by having at the time looked at his watch, they remarked on his return that he had been absent a longer time than he said he would be, to

---

(1) Irrelevant.

(2) The making of the footmark was an effect of, or conduct subsequent to and effected by, a fact in issue (section 7) The measurement of the sixty shoes, of which one only corresponded exactly with the mark was a fact, or rather a set of facts, making highly probable the relevant fact that, that shoe made that mark (section 11) The experiment itself is an application of the method of difference. This shoe would make the mark, and no other of a very large number would.

(3) This would be relevant against him, but not in his favour as an admission (sections 17, 18).

(4) The fact that his master and fell- [illegible]

(5) Irrelevant.

(6) By Scotch law, as well as by the Code of Criminal Procedure, a prisoner may be examined.

(7) The fact that he was left-handed would be a cause of a fact in issue, viz, the peculiar way in which the fatal wound was given The admission that he was left-handed would be relevant as proof of the fact by sections 17, 18.

(8) If it was suggested that the scratches were made in a struggle with the girl, they would be an effect of a fact in issue (section 7), and the statement would be relevant as against the prisoner as an admission (sections 17, 18).

(9) Opportunity (section 7). Admissions (sections 17, 18). The call at the shop was preparation by making evidence (section 8), illustration (e).

(10) There is here a mixture of fact and inferences; the girl could not know that a murder was committed at the time when it was committed. Probably she mentioned the time, and it corresponded with the time when Richardson was away. This would be preparation and opportunity (section 7). The existence of the small eminence explains her not seeing him return (section 9).

which he replied that he had stopped in the wood to gather some nuts. They mad or drunk if he stepped into that marsh, as there was a footpath which went along the side of it" It then appeared by comparing the time he was absent with the distance of the cottage from the place where he had left his fellow-servants that he might have gone there, committed the murder, and returned to them (1) A search was then made for the stockings he had worn that day (2) They were found concealed in the thatch of the apartment where he slept, and appeared to be much soiled, and to have some drops of blood on them.(3) The

On exami ... spond precisely ... ch was of a very ... neigh-bourhood ... shoes a short time before, and he spoke distinctly to the shoes of the prisoner which were exhibited to him as having been those he had mended.(6) It then came out that Richardson had been acquainted with the deceased, who was considered in the country as of weak intellect, and had on one occasion been seen with her in a wood in circumstances that led to a suspicion that he had criminal intercourse with her, and, on being taunted with having such connection with one in her situation, he seemed much ashamed and greatly [96] hurt (7) It was proved further by the person who sat next him when his shoes were measuring, that he trembled much and seemed a good deal agitated, and that, in the interval between that time and his being apprehended, he had been advised to fly, but his answer was, "Where can I fly to?"(8)

On the other hand, evidence was brought to show that about the time of the murder a boat's crew from Ireland had landed on that part of the coast near ... d it was said that some of the crew might ... their motive for doing so it was difficult ... robbery was their purpose, or that any thing was missing from the cottages in the neighbourhood. The prisoner was convicted, confessed, and was hanged.

(1) All these facts are either opportunity or preparation or subsequent or previous conduct or admissions (sections 7, 8, 17).

(2) Introductory to next fact (section 9)

(3) The concealment is subsequent conduct (section 8). The state of the stockings is the effect of a fact in issue (section 7).

(4) The falsehoods are subsequent conduct (section 8), or admissions (sections 17 & 18). The prisoner's allegation about the horse is an allegation of a fact explaining the relevant fact, that there was blood on the stockings (section 9); and the fact proved about his distance from the horse is a fact rebutting the inference suggested thereby, that the blood was the horse's (section 9).

(5) Effect of a fact in issue (section 7) The similarity of the sand on the stockings to the sand in the marsh was one of the effects of the slip which was the effect of the murder.

(6) That the marks were made by the prisoner's shoe was relevant as an effect of facts in issue That the shoes which made the marks were the prisoner's had been already proved by their being found on his feet. This further proof seems superfluous, unless it was suggested that they belonged to some one else

(7) The opinion about her would be irrelevant The fact that her intellect was weak would be part of the state of things under which the murder happened, and with what follows would show motive (sections 7, 8)

(8) Subsequent conduct (section 10) The weight of this is very slight

(9) Opportunity for the murder (section 7).

Remarks on Richardson's case

This case illustrates the application of what Mr. Mill calls the method of agreement upon a scale which excludes the supposition of chance, thus :—

(1) The murderer had a motive,—Richardson had a motive

(2) The murderer had an opportunity at a certain hour of a certain day in a certain place,—Richardson had an opportunity on that hour of that day at that place

[97] (3) The murderer was left-handed,—Richardson was left-handed.

(4) The murderer wore shoes which made certain marks,—Richardson wore shoes which made exactly similar marks.

(5) If Richardson was the murderer and wore stockings, they must have been soiled with a peculiar kind of sand,—he did wear stockings which were soiled with that kind of sand.

(6) If Richardson was the murderer, he would naturally conceal his stockings,—he did conceal his stockings

(7) The murderer would probably get blood on his clothes,—Richardson got blood on his clothes.

(8) If Richardson was the murderer, he would probably tell lies about the blood,—he did tell lies about the blood.

(9) If Richardson was the murderer, he must have been at the place at the time in question,—a man very like him was seen running towards the place at the time.

(10) If Richardson was the murderer, he would probably tell lies about his proceedings during the time when the murder was committed,—he told such lies

Here are ten separate marks, five of which must have been found in the murderer, one of which must have been found on the murderer if he wore stockings, whilst others probably would be found in him

All ten were found in Richardson. Four of them were so distinctive that they could hardly have met in more than one man. It is hardly imaginable that two left-handed men, wearing precisely similar shoes and closely [98] soiled in the marsh. Yet this would be the only possible supposition consistent with Richardson's innocence.

IV.

[99] Case of R. v. Patch.(1)

A man named Patch had been received by Mr. Isaac Blight, a ship-breaker, near Greenland Dock, into his service in the year 1803 Mr. Blight having become embarrassed in his circumstances in July 1805, entered into a deed of composition with his creditors; and in consequence of the failure of this arrangement, he made a colourable transfer of his property to the prisoner.(2) It was afterwards agreed between them that Mr. Blight was to retire nominally from the business, which the prisoner was to manage, and the former was to have two-thirds of the profits, and the prisoner the remaining third, for which he was to pay £1,250. Of this amount, £250 was paid in cash, and a draft was given for the remainder upon a person named Goom, which would become payable on the 16th of September, the prisoner representing that he had received the purchase-money of an estate and lent it to Goom.(1) On the 16th of September the prisoner represented to Mr. Blight's bankers that Goom could not take [100] up the bill, and withdrew it, substituting his own draft upon Goom, to fall due on the 20th September.(2) On the 19th of September the deceased went to visit his wife at Margate, and the prisoner accompanied him as far as Deptford(3), and then went to London and represented to his bankers that Goom would not be able to face his draft, but that he had obtained from him a note which satisfied him, and therefore they were not to present it.(4) The prisoner boarded in Mr. Blight's house, and the only other inmate was a female servant, whom the prisoner about eight o'clock the same evening (the 19th) sent out to procure some oysters for his supper.(5) During her absence a gun or pistol ball was fired through the shutter of a parlour fronting the Thames, where the family, when at home, usually spent their evenings. It was low water, and the mud was so deep that any person attempting to escape in that direction must have been suffocated and a man who was standing near the gate of the wharf, which was the only other mode of escape, heard the report, but saw no person.(6) From the manner in which [101] the ball entered the shutter it was clear that it had been discharged by some person who was close to the shutter, and the river was so much below the level of the house, that the ball, if it had been fired from thence, must have reached a much higher part than that which it struck. The prisoner declined the offer of the neighbours to remain in the house with him that night (7) On the following day he wrote to inform the deceased of the transaction, stating his hope that the shot had been accidental; that he knew of no person who had any animosity against him, that he wished to know for whom it was intended, and that he should be happy to hear from him, but much more so to see him.(8) Mr. Blight returned home on the 23rd September, having previously been to London to see his bankers on the subject of the £1,000 draft.(9) Upon getting home, the draft became the subject of conversation, and the deceased desired the prisoner to go to London, and not to return without the money (10) Upon his return the prisoner and the deceased spent the evening in the back parlour, a different one from that in which the family usually sat.(11) About eight o'clock the prisoner went from the parlour into the kitchen, and asked [102] the servant for a candle(12), complaining that he was disordered.(13) The prisoner's way from the kitchen was through an outer door which fastened by a spring lock, and across a paved court in front of the house which was enclosed by palisades, and through a gate over a wharf in front of that court, on which there was the kind of soil peculiar to premises for breaking up ships, and then through a

(1) Wills' Circumstantial Evidence (2) Introductory (section 9).

(1) Motive (section 8)

(2) Preparation (section 8).

(3) Introductory (section 9), but unimportant

(4) Preparation (section 8)

(5) Explains what follows (section 9). Preparation (section 8).

(6) The suggestion was that Patch fired the shot himself in order to make evidence in his own favour. This would be preparation (section 8) Hence his firing the shot would be a relevant fact. The facts in the text are facts which, taken together, make it highly probable that he did so, as they show that he and no one else had the opportunity and that it was done by some one (section 11).

The last fact illustrates the remarks made at pages, 40, 41 The inference from the facts stated, assuming them to be true, is necessary, but, suppose that the "man standing near the gate" saw some one running, and for reasons of his own denied it, how could he be contradicted ?

(7) Conduct (section 8)

(8) Preparation (section 8)

(9) Hardly relevant, except as introductory to what follows (section 9)

(10) Motive (section 8).

(11) State of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7)

(12) Preparation (section 8)

(13) Preparation (section 8)

counting-house. All of these doors, as well as the door of the parlour, the prisoner left open, notwithstanding the state of alarm excited by the former shot. The servant heard the privy door slam, and almost at the same moment saw the flash of a pistol at the door of the parlour where the deceased was sitting ... The prisoner immediately ... with his clothes in disorder. ... who was mortally wounded ... the tide and from the testimony of various persons who were on the outside of the premises, no person could have escaped from them.(1)

In consequence of this event Mrs. Blight returned home(2), and the prisoner ... which had made her husband so ... whole of the property as his o... (4), and in his sleeping room was found a pair of stockings rolled up like clean stockings, but with the feet plastered over with the sort of soil found on the wharf, and a ramrod was found in the privy.(5) The prisoner usually wore boots; but on the evening of the murder he wore shoes and stockings.(6) It was supposed that to prevent alarm to the deceased or the female servant, the murderer must have approached without his shoes, and afterwards gone on the wharf to throw away the pistol into the river.(7) All the prisoner's statements as to his pecuniary transactions with Goom and his right to draw upon him, and the payment of the bill, turned out to be false.(8) He attempted to tamper with the servant girl as to her evidence before the coroner, and urged her to keep to one account(9); and before that officer he made several inconsistent statements as to his pecuniary transactions with the deceased and equivocated much as to whether he wore [104] boots or shoes on the evening of the murder, as well as to the ownership of the soiled stockings(10), which, however, were clearly proved to be his, and for the soiled state of which he made no attempt to account.(10) The prisoner suggested the existence of malicious feelings in two persons with whom the deceased had been on ill-terms(11); but they had no motive(12) for doing him any injury; and it was clearly proved that upon both occasions of attack they were at a distance.(13)

Remarks on Patch's case. Patch's case illustrates the method of difference(14) and the whole of it may be regarded as a very complete illustration of section 11. The general ... unity for the murder, ... the shot which caus... ...ded to show that the murdered man had enemies who wished to murder him. The relevancy of the

---

(1) These facts collectively are inconsistent with the firing of the shot by anyone except Patch (section 11). They would also be relevant as being either facts in issue, or the state of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7), or as preparation or opportunity (sections 7 & 8, illustration h)

(2) Introductory (section 9).

(3) Subsequent conduct influenced by a fact in issue (section 8).

(4) Irrelevant.

(5) Effect of fact in issue (section 7).

(6) State of things under which facts in issue happened (section 7)

(7) Fact and inference are mixed up in this statement; the facts are (1) that the state of things was such that the deceased and his servant would have heard the steps of a man with shoes on under the window; and (2) that a person who wished to throw anything into the Thames would have to go on to the wharf.

(8) Preparation (section 8).

(9) Subsequent conduct (section 8), and admission (sections 17 & 18).

(10) Effect of fact in issue (section 7).

(11) Motive (section 8).

(12) i.e., no special motive beyond general ill-will first shot arose from the suggestion that it was an act of preparation. The proof that it was fired by Patch consisted of independent facts, showing that it was fired, and that he, and no one else, could have fired it. The firing of the second shot by which the murder was committed was a fact in issue. The proof of it by a strange [105] combination of circumstances was precisely similar in principle to the proof as to the first shot.

(13) Facts inconsistent with relevant fact (section 11).

(14) P 34.

... the way in which the chain of ... st dis-similar kind; and this ... relevant and irrelevant facts, otherwise than by enumerating as completely as possible the more common forms in which the relation of cause and effects displays itself. In Patch's case the firing of the first shot was an act of preparation by way of what is called "making evidence," but the fact that Patch fired it appeared from a combination of circumstances which showed that he might, and that no one else could, have done so. It is easy to conceive that some one of the facts necessary to complete this proof might have had to be proved in the same way. For instance, part of the proof that Patch fired the shot consisted in the fact that no one left ...

... unbroken in the morning after the shot, and that it was impossible that they should have been spun after the shot was fired and [106] before the gate was examined. In that case the proof would have stood thus:—

Patch's preparations for the murder were relevant to the question whether he committed it. Patch's firing the first shot was one of his preparations for the murder. The facts inconsistent with his not having fired the shot were relevant to the question whether he fired it. The fact that a certain door was not opened between certain hours was one of the facts which, taken together, were inconsistent with his not having fired the shot. The fact that a spider's web was whole overnight and also in the morning was inconsistent with the door having been opened.

Inversely the integrity of the spider's web was relevant to the opening of the door; the opening of the door was relevant to the firing of the first shot, the firing of the first shot was relevant to the firing of the second shot, and the firing of the second shot was a fact in issue, therefore the integrity of the spider's web was relevant to a fact in issue.

V.

[107] Case of R. v. Palmer (1)

On the 14th of May, 1856, William Palmer was tried at the Old Bailey under powers conferred on the Court of Queen's Bench by 19 Vic., c 16, for the murder of John Parsons Cook at Rugeley, in Staffordshire. The trial lasted twelve days, and ended on the 27th May, when the prisoner was convicted, and received sentence of death, on which he was afterwards executed at Stafford.

(1) Reprinted from my "General View of the Criminal Law of England," p. 357.

Palmer was a general medical practitioner at Rugeley, much engaged in sporting transactions Cook, his intimate friend, was also a sporting man; and after attending Shrewsbury races with him on the 13th November, 1855, returned in his company to Rugeley and died at the Talbot Arms Hotel, at that place, soon after midnight, on the 21st November, 1855, under circumstances which raised a suspicion that he had been poisoned by Palmer. The case against Palmer was that he had a strong motive to murder his friend, and that his conduct before, at the time of, and after his death, coupled with the circumstances of the death itself, left no reasonable doubt [108] that he did murder him by poisoning him with antimony and strychnine, administered on various occasions—the antimony probably being used as a preparation for the strychnine.

The evidence stood as follows:—At the time of Cook's death, Palmer was involved in bill transactions which appeared to have begun in the year 1853. His wife died in September, 1854, and on her death he received £13,000 on policies on her life, nearly the whole of which was applied to the discharge of his liabilities (1) In the course of the year 1855 he raised other large sums, amounting in all to £13,500, on what purported to be acceptances of his mother's. The bills were renewed from time to time at enormous interest (usually sixty per cent per annum) by a money-lender named Pratt, who, at the time of Cook's death, held eight bills—four on his own account and four on account of his client, two already overdue and six others falling due—some in November and others in January. About £1,000 had been paid off in the course of the year, so that the total amount then due or shortly to fall due to Pratt, was £12,500. The only ... hich these bills could be provided for was a polic ... lter Palmer, for £13,000 Walter Palmer died in ... Palmer had instructed Pratt to recover the amount from the insurance office, but the office refused to pay. In consequence of this difficulty, Pratt earnestly [109] pressed Palmer to pay something in order to keep down the interest or diminish the principal due on the bills ... ber, and info ... would pay s ... had accordingly paid three sums, amounting in all to £800, of which £600 went in reduction of the principal, and £200 was deducted for interest. It was understood that more money was to be raised as early as possible.

Besides the money due to Pratt ... £10,400. Par ... Palmer, were ... property. These bills would fall due on the first or second week of November. Mr. Padwick also held a bill of the same kind for £2,000, on which £1,000 ... overdue on the 16th of October, ... Espin a cheque ante-dated on ... Sarah Palmer's acceptance was on nearly all these bills, and in every instance was forged.

The result is, that about the time of the Shrewsbury races, Palmer was being pressed for payment on forged acceptances to the amount of nearly £20,000 and that his only resources were a certain amount of personal property, over which Wright held a bill of sale, and a policy for £13,000, the payment of

(1) A bill was found against him for her murder.

(2) A bill was found against Palmer for his murder.

at

by the fact that his balance at the bank on the 19th November was £9, 6s., and that he had to borrow £25 of a farmer named Walbank, to go to Shrewsbury races. It follows that he was under the most pressing necessity to obtain a considerable sum of money, as even a short delay in obtaining it might involve him not only in insolvency, but in a prosecution for uttering forged acceptances.

Besides the embarrassment arising from the bills in the hands of Pratt, Wright and Padwick, Palmer was involved in a transaction with Cook, which had a bearing on the rest of the case. Cook and he were parties to a bill for £500 which Pratt had discounted, giving £365 in cash, and a wine warrant for £65, and charging £60 for discount and expenses He also required an assignment of two race-horses of Cook's—Pole-star and Sirius—as a collateral security. By Palmer's request the £365, in the shape of a cheque payable to Cook's order and the wine warrant, were sent by post to Palmer at Doncaster. Palmer wrote Cook's endorsement on the cheque, and paid the amount to his own credit at the Bank at Rugeley. On the part of the prosecution it was said that this transaction afforded a reason why Palmer should desire to be rid of Cook, inasmuch as it amounted to a forgery by which [111] Cook was defrauded of £375 It appeared, however, on the other side, that there were £300 worth of notes relating to some other transaction, in the letter which enclosed the cheque, and as it did not appear that Cook had complained of getting no consideration for his acceptance, it was suggested that he had authorized Palmer to write his name on the back of the cheque, and had taken the notes himself. This arrangement seems not improbable, as it would otherwise be hard to explain why Cook acquiesced in receiving nothing for his acceptance, and there was evidence that he meant to provide for the bill when it became due It also appeared later in the case that there was another bill for £500, in which Cook and Palmer were jointly interested (1)

Such was Palmer's position when he went to Shrewsbury races, on Monday, the 12th November, 1855. Cook was there also; and on Tuesday, the 13th, his mare Pole-star won the Shrewsbury Handicap, by which he became entitled to the stakes, worth about £380, and bets to the amount of nearly £2,000 Of these bets he received £700 or £800 on the course at Shrewsbury. The rest was to be paid at Tattersall's on the following Monday, the 19th November.(1) After the race Cook invited some of his friends to dinner at the Raven Hotel, and on that occasion and on the following day he was both sober and well.(2) On the Wednesday night a man named Ishmael Fisher came into the sitting room, which Palmer shared with Cook, and [112] found them in company with [illegible] the brandy [illegible] quantity [illegible] to Read [illegible] "What's [illegible] fterwards left the room, called out Fisher and told him that he had been [illegible] sick, and, "He thought that damned Palmer had dosed him" He also handed over to Fisher £700 or £800 in notes to keep for him.(3) He then became sick again, and was ill all night, and had to be attended by a doctor. He told the doctor,

(1) All these facts go to show motive (section 8).

(2) State of things under which the following facts occurred (section 7).

(3) Conduct of person against whom offence was committed and statement explanatory of such conduct (section 8, exp. 1).

Mr. Gibson, that he thought he had been poisoned, and he was treated on that supposition.(1) Next day Palmer told Fisher that Cook had said that he (Palmer) had been putting something into his brandy. He added that he did not play such tricks with people, and that Cook had been drunk the night before—which appeared not to be the case.(2) Fisher did not expressly say that he returned the money [113] to Cook, but from the course of the evidence it seems that he did(3), for Cook asked him to pay Pratt £200 at once, and to repay himself on the following Monday out of the bets which he would receive on Cook's account at the settling at Tattersall's.

About half-past ten on the Wednesday, and apparently shortly before Cook drank the brandy and water which he complained of, Palmer was seen by a Mrs. Brooks in the passage looking at a glass lamp, through a tumbler which contained some clear fluid like water, and which he was shaking and turning in his hand There appears, however, to have been no secrecy in this, as he spoke to Mrs. Brooks, and continued to hold and shake the tumbler as he did so.(4) George Myatt was called to contradict this for the prisoner. He said that he was in the room when Palmer and Cook came in; that Cook made a remark about the brandy, though he gave a different version of it from Fisher and Read; put in it he [illegible] from the time he came in till Cook went to bed. He also put the time later than Fisher and Read.(5) All this, however, came to very little. It was the sort of difference which always arises in the details of evidence. As Myatt was a friend of Palmer's, he probably remembered the matter (perhaps honestly enough) in a way more favourable to him than the other witnesses.

[114] It appeared from the evidence of Mrs. Brooks, and also from that of a man named Herring, that other persons besides Cook were taken ill at Shrewsbury, on the evening in question, with similar symptoms. Mrs. Brooks said, "We made an observation we thought the water might have been poisoned in Shrewsbury." Palmer himself vomited on his way back to Rugeley according to Myatt (6)

The evidence as to what passed at Shrewsbury clearly proves that Palmer being then in great want of money, Cook was to his knowledge in possession of £700 or £800 in bank-notes, and was also entitled to receive on the following Monday about £1,400 more. It also shows that Palmer may have given him a dose of antimony, though the [illegible] by the [illegible] time.

On Thursday, November 15th, Palmer and Cook returned together to Rugeley, which they reached about ten at night. Cook went to the Talbot Arms, and Palmer to his own house immediately opposite. Cook still complained of being unwell. On the Friday he dined with Palmer in company with an attorney, Mr. Jeremiah Smith, and returned perfectly sober about ten in the evening.(7) At eight on the following morning (November 17th) Palmer came over, and ordered a cup of [115] coffee for him. The coffee was given to Cook

(1) The administration of antimony by Palmer would be a fact in issue, as being one of a set of acts of poisoning which finally caused Cook's death. Cook's feelings were relevant as the effect of his being poisoned (section 7); and his statement as to them was relevant under section 14 as a statement showing the existence of a relevant bodily feeling.

(2) Admission (sections 17, 18).

(3) Motive (section 8).

(4) Preparation (section 8).

(5) Evidence against last fact (section 5).

(6) Facts rebutting inference suggested by preceding fact (section 9).

(7) Introductory to what follows (section 9), and shows state of things under which following facts occurred (section 7).

by Mills, the chambermaid, in Palmer's presence. When she next went to his room, an hour or two afterwards, it had been vomited.(1) In the course of the day, and apparently about the middle of the day, Palmer sent a charwoman, named Rowley, to get some broth for Cook at an inn called the Albion. She brought it to Palmer's house, put it by the fire to warm, and left the room. Soon after, Palmer brought it out, poured it into a cup and sent it to the Talbot Arms with a message that it came from Mr. Jeremiah Smith. The broth was given to Cook, who at first refused to take it; Palmer, however, came in, and said he must have it. The chambermaid brought back the broth which she had taken downstairs and left it in the room. It also was thrown up.(1) In the course of the afternoon Palmer called in Mr. Bamford, a surgeon, eighty years of age, to see Cook, and told him that when Cook dined at his (Palmer's) house he had taken too much champagne.(2) Mr. Bamford, however, found no bilious symptoms about him, and he said he had only drunk two glasses.(3) On the Saturday night Mr Jeremiah Smith slept in Cook's room, as he was still ill. On the Sunday, between twelve and one, Palmer sent over his gardener, [116] Hawley, with some more broth for Cook.(4) Elizabeth Mills, the servant at the Talbot Arms, tasted it, taking two or three spoonfuls. She became exceedingly sick about half an hour afterwards, and vomited till 5 o'clock in the afternoon She was so ill that she had to go to bed. This broth was also taken to Cook, and the cup afterwards returned to Palmer. It appears to have been taken and vomited, though the evidence is not quite explicit on that point.(5) By the Sunday's post Palmer wrote to Mr. Jones, an apothecary and Cook's most intimate friend, to come and see him. He said that Cook was "confined to his bed with a severe bilious attack, combined with diarrhœa." The servant Mills said there was no diarrhœa (6) It was observed on the part of the defence that this letter was strong proof of innocence The prosecution suggested that it was "part of a deep design, and was meant to make evidence in the prisoner's favour" The fair conclusion seems to be that it was an ambiguous act which ought to weigh neither way, though the falsehood about Cook's symptoms is suspicious as far as it goes.

On the night between Sunday and Monday Cook had some sort of attack. When the servant Mills went into his room on the Monday he said, "I was just mad for two minutes." She said, "Why did you not ring the bell?" He said, "I thought that you would be all fast asleep, [117] and not hear it." He also said he was disturbed by a quarrel in the street. It might have waked and disturbed him, but he was not sure. This incident was not mentioned at first by Barnes and Mills, but was brought out on their being re-called at the request of the prisoner's counsel. It was considered important for the defence, as proving that Cook had had an attack of some kind before it was suggested that any strychnine was administered; and the principal medical witness for the defence, Mr. Nunneley, referred to it, with this view.(7)

On the Monday, about a quarter-past or half-past seven, Palmer again visited Cook, but as he was in London about half-past two, he must have gone to town by an early train. During the whole of the Monday Cook was much

(1) Fact in issue and its effect, as this was an act of poisoning (section 5).

(2) Conduct and statements explaining conduct (section 8).

(3) Rebuts inference in Palmer's favour suggested by preceding fact and explains the object of his conduct by showing that his statement was false (section 9) Cook's statement relates to his state of body (section 14)

(4) Fact in issue—administration of poisons (section 5).

(5) Effect of facts in issue (section 7).

(6) Conduct (section 8), and explanation of it (section 9)

(7) Fact tending to rebut inference from previous fact (section 9).

better. He dressed himself, saw a jockey and his trainer, and the sickness ceased.(1)

In the meantime Palmer was in London. He met by appointment a man named Herring, who was connected with the turf. Palmer told him he wished to settle Cook's account and read to him from a list, which Herring copied as Palmer read it, the particulars of the bets which he was to receive. They amounted to £984 clear. Of this sum Palmer instructed Herring to pay £450 to Pratt and £350 to Padwick. The nature of the debt to Padwick was not proved in evidence, as Padwick himself was not called. Palmer told Herring [118] the £450 was to settle the bill for which Cook had assigned his horses. He wrote Pratt on the same day a letter in these words,—"Dear Sir,—You will place the £50 I have just paid you, and the £450 you will receive from Mr Herring, together £500, and the £200 you received on Saturday" (from Fisher) "towards payment of my mother's acceptance for £2,000, due 25th October."(2)

Herring received upwards of £800, and paid part of it away according to Palmer's directions. Pratt gave Palmer credit for the £450, but the £350 was not paid to Padwick, according to Palmer's directions, as part was retained by Mr. Herring for some debts due from Cook to him, and Herring received less than he expected. In his reply the Attorney-General said that the £350 intended to be paid to Padwick was on account of a bet, and suggested that the motive was to keep Padwick quiet as to the ante-dated cheque for £1,000 given to Espin on Padwick's account. There was no evidence of this, and it is not of much importance. It was clearly intended to be paid to Padwick on account, not of Cook (except possibly as to a small part), but of Palmer Palmer thus disposed, or attempted to dispose, in the course of Monday, November 19th, of the whole of Cook's winnings for his own advantage.(3)

This is a convenient place to mention the final result of the transaction relating to the bill for £500, in which Cook and Palmer were jointly interested. On the Friday [119] when Cook and Palmer dined together (November 16th), Cook wrote to Fisher (his agent) in these words :—"It is of very great importance to both Palmer and myself that a sum of £500 should be paid to a Mr. Pratt of 5, Queen Street, Mayfair; 300*l. has been sent up to-night*, and if you would be kind enough to pay the other £200 to-morrow, on the receipt of this, you will greatly oblige me. I will settle it on Monday at Tattersall's." Fisher did pay the £200, expecting, as he said, to settle Cook's account on the Monday, and repay hi[illegible] letter), "[illegible] cheque, [illegible] cheque, [illegible] Cook's d[illegible] “The death of Mr. Cook will now compel you to look about as to the payment of the bill for £500 due the 2nd of December."(4)

Great use was made of these letters by the defence. It was argued that they proved that Cook was helping Palmer, and was eager to relieve him from the pressure put on him by Pratt; that in consequence of this he not only took up the £500 bill, but authorized Palmer to apply the £800 to similar purposes, and to get the amount settled by Herring, instead of Fisher, so that Fisher might not stop out of it the £200 which he had advanced to Pratt; it was asked how it could be [120] Palmer's interest, on this supposition, that Cook

(1) Supports the inference suggested by the previous fact that Palmer's doses caused Cook's illness (section 9).

(2) Conduct and statement explanatory thereof (section 8, ex. 2).

(3) All this is Palmer's conduct, and is explanatory of it (sections 7, 9).

(4) Motive for not poisoning Cook (section 8).

should die, especially as the first consequence of his death was Pratt's application for the money due on the £500 bill.

These arguments were, no doubt, plausible; and the fact that Cook's death compelled Pratt to look to Palmer for the payment of the £500 lends them weight, but it may be asked, on the other hand, why should Cook give away the whole of his winnings to Palmer? Why should Cook allow Palmer to appropriate to the diminution of his own liabilities the £200 which Fisher had advanced to the credit of the bill on which both were liable? Why should he join with Palmer in a plan for defrauding Fisher of his security for this advance? No answer to any of these questions was suggested As to the £300, Cook's letter to Fisher says, "£300 has been sent up this evening" There was evidence that Pratt never received it, for he applied to Palmer for the money on Cook's death Moreover, Pratt said that on the Saturday he did receive £300 on account of Palmer, which he placed to the account of the forged acceptance for £2,000 Where did Palmer get the money? The suggestion of the prosecution was that Cook gave it him to pay to Pratt on account of their joint bill, and that he paid it on his own account. This was probably the true view of the case The observation that Pratt, on hearing of Cook's death, applied to Palmer to pay the £500 bill, is met by the reflection that that bill was genuine, and collaterally secured by the assignment of the racehorses, and that the other bill bore a forged acceptance, and must be satisfied at all hazards. [121] The result is that on the Monday evening Palmer had the most imperious interest in Cook's death, for he had robbed him of all he had in the world, except the equity of redemption in his two horses d on the inquest veen Palmer and displeased with oncealment was improper, but nothing appeared on cross-examination to suggest that the witness was wilfully perjured.

Cook had been much better throughout Monday, and on Monday evening Mr. Bamford, who was attending him, brought some pills for him, which he left at the hotel. They contained neither antimony nor strychnine. They were taken up in the box in which they came to Cook's room by the chambermaid, and were left there on the dressing-table about eight o'clock Palmer came (according to Barnes the waitress) between eight and nine, and Mills said she saw him sitting by the fire between nine and ten (2)

[122] If this evidence were believed, he would have had an opportunity of substituting poisoned pills for those sent by Mr Bamford just after he had, according to Newton, procured strychnine The evidence, however, was contradicted by a witness called for the prisoner, Jeremiah Smith the attorney. He said that on the Monday evening, about ten minutes past ten, he saw Palmer coming in a car from the direction of Stafford, that they went up to Cook's room together, stayed two or three minutes, and went with Smith to the house of old Mrs. Palmer, his mother. Cook said "Bamford sent him some pills, and he had taken them, and Palmer was late, intimating that he should not have taken them if he had thought Palmer would have called in before." If this

(1) Preparation (section 8) introductory (sections 7, 9).
(2) Opportunity The rest is better. He dressed himself, saw a jockey and his trainer, and the sickness ceased (1)

In the meantime Palmer was in London. He met by appointment a man named Herring, who was connected with the turf. Palmer told him he wished to settle Cook's account and read to him from a list, which Herring copied as Palmer read it, the particulars of the bets which he was to receive. They amounted to £984 clear. Of this sum Palmer instructed Herring to pay £450 to Pratt and £350 to Padwick. The nature of the debt to Padwick was not proved in evidence, as Padwick himself was not called. Palmer told Herring [118] the £450 was to settle the bill for which Cook had assigned his horses. He wrote Pratt on the same day a letter in these words,—" Dear Sir,—You will place the £50 I have just paid you, and the £450 you will receive from Mr. Herring, together £500, and the £200 you received on Saturday " (from Fisher) " towards payment of my mother's acceptance for £2,000, due 25th October."(2)

Herring received upwards of £800, and paid part of it away according to Palmer's directions. Pratt gave Palmer credit for the £450; but the £350 was not paid to Padwick, according to Palmer's directions, as part was retained by Mr. Herring for some debts due from Cook to him, and Herring received less than he expected. In his reply the Attorney-General said that the £350 intended to be paid to Padwick was on account of a bet, and suggested that the motive was to keep Padwick quiet as to the ante-dated cheque for £1,000 given to Espin on Padwick's account. There was no evidence of this, and it is not of much importance. It was clearly intended to be paid to Padwick on account, not of Cook (except possibly as to a small part), but of Palmer. Palmer thus disposed, or attempted to dispose, in the course of Monday, November 19th, of the whole of Cook's winnings for his own advantage.(3)

This is a convenient place to mention the final result of the transaction relating to the bill for £500, in which Cook and Palmer were jointly interested. On the Friday [119] when Cook and Palmer dined together (November 16th), Cook wrote to Fisher (his agent) in these words :—" It is of very great importance to both Palmer and myself that a sum of £500 should be paid to a Mr. Pratt of 5, Queen Street, Mayfair; 300*l. has been sent up to-night,* and if you would be kind enough to pay the other £200 to-morrow, on the receipt of this, you will greatly oblige me. I will settle it on Monday at Tattersall's." Fisher did pay the £200, expecting, as he said, to settle Cook's account on the Monday, and repay himself.
letter), " a per cheque, and p cheque, not th
Cook's death
compel you to look about as to the payment of the bill for £500 due the 2nd of December."(4)

Great use was made of these letters by the defence. It was argued that they proved that Cook was helping Palmer, and was eager to relieve him from the pressure put on him by Pratt; that in consequence of this he not only took up the £500 bill, but authorized Palmer to apply the £800 to similar purposes, and to get the amount settled by Herring, instead of Fisher, so that Fisher might not stop out of it the £200 which he had advanced to Pratt; it was asked how it could be [120] Palmer's interest, on this supposition, that Cook

(1) Supports the inference suggested by thereof (section 8, ex. 2).

(3) All this is Palmer's conduct, and is explanatory of it (sections 7, 9).

(4) Motive for not poisoning Cook (section 8).

should die, especially as the first consequence of his death was Pratt's application for the money due on the £500 bill.

These arguments were, no doubt, plausible; and the fact that Cook's death compelled Pratt to look to Palmer for the payment of the £500 lends them weight; but it may be asked, on the other hand, why should Cook give away the whole of his winnings to Palmer? Why should Cook allow Palmer to appropriate to the diminution of his own liabilities the £200 which Fisher had advanced to the credit of the bill on which both were liable? Why should he join with Palmer in a plan for defrauding Fisher of his security for this advance? No answer to any of these questions was suggested. As to the £300, Cook's letter to Fisher says, "£300 has been sent up this evening" There was evidence that Pratt never received it, for he applied to Palmer for the money on Cook's death. Moreover, Pratt said that on the Saturday he did receive £300 on account of Palmer, which he placed to the account of the forged acceptance for £2,000. Where did Palmer get the money? The suggestion of the prosecution was that Cook gave it him to pay to Pratt on account of their joint bill, and that he paid it on his own account. This was probably the true view of the case The observation that Pratt, on hearing of Cook's death, applied to Palmer to pay the £500 bill, is met by the reflection that that bill was genuine, and collaterally secured by the assignment of the race-horses, and that the other bill bore a forged acceptance, and must be satisfied at all hazards [121] The result is that on the Monday evening Palmer had the most imperious interest in Cook's death, for he had robbed him of all he had in the world, except the equity of redemption in his two horses.

On Monday evening (November 19th) Palmer returned to Rugeley, and went [illegible] t, Salt's [illegible] rdingly [illegible] before [illegible] d on the inquest. [illegible] veen Palmer and [illegible] displeased with [illegible] oncealment was improper, but nothing appeared on cross-examination to suggest that the witness was wilfully perjured.

Cook had been much better throughout Monday, and on Monday evening Mr. Bamford, who was attending him, brought some pills for him, which he left at the hotel. They contained neither antimony nor strychnine. They were taken up in the box in which they came to Cook's room by the chambermaid, and were left there on the dressing-table about eight o'clock Palmer came (according to Barnes the waitress) between eight and nine, and Mills said she saw him sitting by the fire between nine and ten (2)

[122] If this evidence were believed, he would have had an opportunity of substituting poisoned pills for those sent by Mr. Bamford just after he had, according to Newton, procured strychnine. The evidence, however, was contradicted by a witness called for the prisoner, Jeremiah Smith the attorney. He said that on the Monday evening, about ten minutes past ten, he saw Palmer coming in a car from the direction of Stafford, that they went up to Cook's room together, stayed two or three minutes, and went with Smith to the house of old Mrs. Palmer, his mother Cook said "Bamford sent him some pills, and he had taken them, and Palmer was late, intimating that he should not have taken them if he had thought Palmer would have called in before." If this

(1) Preparation (section 8). introductory (sections 7, 9).
(2) Opportunity The rest is evidence were believed it would of course have proved that Cook took the pills which Bamford sent as he sent them.(1) Smith, however, was cross-examined by the Attorney-General at great length. He admitted with the greatest reluctance that he had witnessed the assignment of a policy for £13,000 by Walter to William Palmer; that he wrote to an office to effect an insurance for £10,000 on the life of Bates, who was Palmer's groom, at £1 a week; that he tried, after Walter Palmer's death to get his widow to give up her claim on the policy, that he was applied to to attest other proposals for insurances on Walter Palmer's life for similar amounts; and that he had got a cheque for £5 for attesting the assignment.(2)

[123] Lord Campbell said of this witness in summing up, "Can you believe a man who so disgraces himself in the witness-box? It is for you to say what faith you can place in a witness, who, by his own admission, engaged in such fraudulent proceedings."

It is curious that though the credit of this witness was so much shaken in cross-examination, and though he was contradicted both by Mills and Newton, he must have been right and they wrong as to the time when Palmer came down to Rugeley that evening. Mr. Mathews, the inspector of police at the Euston station, proved that the only train by which Palmer could have left London after half-past two (when he met Herring) started at five, and reached Stafford [illegible] bout ten miles from Stafford [illegible] the road in much less than [illegible] nine," and Mills saw him "between nine and ten." Nothing, however, is more difficult than to speak accurately to time; on the other hand, if Smith spoke the truth, Newton could not have seen him at all that night and Mills, if at all, must have seen him for a moment only in Smith's company. Mills never mentioned Smith, and Smith would not venture to swear that she or any one else saw him at the Talbot Arms. It was a suspicious circumstance that Serjeant Shee did not open Smith's evidence to the jury. An opportunity for perjury was afforded by [124] the mistake made by the witnesses as to the time, which the defence were able to prove by the evidence of the police inspector. If Smith were disposed to tell an untruth, the knowledge of this fact would enable him to do so with an appearance of plausibility.

Whatever view is taken as to the effect of this evidence it was clearly proved that about the middle of the night between Monday and Tuesday Cook had a violent attack of some sort. About twelve or a little before, his bell rang; he screamed violently. When Mills, the servant, came in, he was sitting up in bed, and asked that Palmer might be fetched at once. He was beating the bed clothes; he said he should suffocate if he lay down. His head and neck and his whole body jumped and jerked. He had great difficulty in breath- [illegible] s hand was stiff, and he asked to have it rubbed. [illegible] a draught and some pills. He snapped at the [illegible] spoon between his teeth. He had also great difficulty in swallowing the pills. After this he got more easy, and Palmer stayed by him some time, sleeping in an easy chair.(4)

Great efforts were made in cross-examination to shake the evidence of Mills by showing that she had altered the evidence which she gave before the coroner, so as to make her description of the symptoms tally with those of poisoning by

(1) Evidence against the existence of the fact last mentioned (section 5).

(2) This cross-examination tended to test the veracity of the witness and to test his credit (section 146).

(3) Facts inconsistent with a relevant fact (section 11), and fixing the time of the occurrence of a relevant fact (section 9).

(4) Effect of fact in issue, viz, the administration of poison (section 7).

strychnine, and also by showing that she had been drilled as to the evidence, which she was to give by [125] persons connected with the prosecution. She denied most of the suggestions conveyed by the questions asked her, and explained others.(1) As to the differences between her evidence before the coroner and at the trial, a witness (Mr. Gardner an attorney) was called to show that the depositions were not properly taken at the inquest.(2)

On the following day, Tuesday, the 20th, Cook was a good deal better. In the middle of the day he sent the boots to ask Palmer if he might have a cup of coffee. Palmer said he might, and came over, tasted a cup made by the servant, and took it from her hands to give it to Cook. This coffee was afterwards thrown up.(3)

A little before or after this, the exact hour is not important, Palmer went to the shop of Hawkins, a druggist at Rugeley, and was there served by his apprentice Roberts with two drachms of [illegible] and two drachms of Batley's Sedative.(4) [illegible] Newton from whom he had obtained the [illegible] came in, Palmer took him to the door, saying he wished to speak to him, [126] and when he was there asked him a question about the firm of a Mr. Edwin Salt—a matter with which he had nothing at all to do. Whilst they were there a third person came up and spoke to Newton, on which Palmer went back into Hawkins' shop and took away the things, Newton not seeing what he took The obvious suggestion upon this is that Palmer wanted to prevent Newton from seeing what he was about No attempt even was made to shake, or in any way discredit, Roberts, the apprentice (5)

At about four P M. Mr Jones, the friend to whom Palmer had written, arrived from Lutterworth.(6) He examined Cook in Palmer's presence, and remarked that he had not the tongue of a bilious patient; to which Palmer replied, "You should have seen it before." Cook appeared to be better during the Tuesday, and was in good spirits.(7) At about seven P.M. Mr. Bamford came in and Cook told him in Palmer's presence that he objected to the pills, as they had made him ill the night before. The three medical men then had a private consultation. Palmer proposed that Bamford should make up the pills as on the night before, and that Jones should not tell Cook what they were made of, as he objected to the morphine which they contained. Bamford agreed, and Palmer went up to his house with him and got the pills, and was present whilst they were made up, put into a pill-box [127] and directed. He took them away with him between seven and eight (8) Cook was well and comfortable all the evening; he had no bilious symptoms, no vomiting, and no diarrhœa.(7)

Towards eleven Palmer came with a box of pills directed in Bamford's hand. He called Jones' attention to the goodness of the handwriting for a man of eighty.(9) It was suggested by the prosecution that the reason for this was to impress Jones with the fact that the pills had been made up by Bamford. With reference to Smith's evidence it is remarkable that Bamford on the second

(1) Former statements inconsistent with evidence (section 155)

(2) The depositions before the coroner would be a proper mode of proof as being a record of a relevant fact made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty (section 35), and any document purporting to be such a deposition would on production be presumed to be genuine and the evidence would be presumed to be duly taken (sections 79, and 80), but this might be rebutted (section (4), definition of 'shall presume')

(3) Part of the transaction of poisoning (section 8)

(4) Preparation (section 8)

(5) Conduct (section 8).

(6) Introductory (section 9)

(7) State of things under which Cook was poisoned (section 7).

(8) Preparation (section 8)

(9) Conduct and statement (section 8, ex 2)

night sent the pills, not "between nine and ten," but at eleven. Palmer pressed Cook to take the pills, which at first he refused to do, as they had made him so ill the night before. At last he did so, and immediately afterwards vomited. Jones and Palmer both examined to see whether the pills had been thrown up, and they found that they had not. This was about eleven. Jones then had his supper, and went to bed in Cook's room about twelve. When he had been in bed a short time, perhaps ten minutes, Cook started up and called out, "Doctor, get up; I am going to be ill; ring the bell for Mr. Palmer." He also said, "Rub my neck." The back of his neck was stiff and hard. Mills ran across the road to Palmer's and rang the bell. Palmer immediately came to the bed-room window and said he would come at once Two minutes afterwards he was in Cook's room, and [128] said he had never dressed so quick in his life. He was dressed as usual. The suggestion upon this was that he had been sitting up expecting to be called (1)

By the time of Palmer's arrival Cook was very ill. Jones, Elizabeth Mills, and Palmer were in the room, and Barnes stood at the door. The muscles of his neck were stiff; he screamed loudly. Palmer gave him what he said were two ammonia pills. Immediately afterwards—too soon for the pills to have any effect—he was dreadfully convulsed. He said, when he began to be convulsed, "Raise me up, or I shall be suffocated." Palmer and Jones tried to do so, but could not, as the limbs were rigid. He then asked to be turned over, which was done His heart began to beat weakly. Jones asked Palmer to get some ammonia to try to stimulate it He fetched a bottle, and was absent about a minute for that purpose. When he came back, Cook was almost dead, and he died in a few minutes, quite quietly. The whole attack lasted about ten minutes. The body was twisted back into the shape of a bow, and would have rested on the head and heels, had it been laid on its back. When the body was laid out, it was very stiff. The arms could not be kept down by the sides till they were tied behind the back with tape The feet also had to be tied, and the fingers of one hand were very stiff, the hand being clenched. This was about one A.M, half or three-quarters of an hour after the death.(2)

[129] As soon as Cook was dead, Jones went out to speak to the housekeeper, leaving Palmer alone with the body. When Jones left the room he sent the servant Mills in, and she saw Palmer searching the pockets of Cook's coat and searching also under the pillow and bolster. Jones shortly afterwards returned, and Palmer told him that as Cook's nearest friend, he (Jones) ought to take possession of his property. He accordingly took possession of his watch and purse, containing five sovereigns and five shillings. He found no other money. Palmer said, "Mr. Cook's death is a bad thing for me, as I am responsible for £3,000 or £4,000; and I hope Mr. Cook's friends will not let me lose it. If they do not assist me, all my horses will be seized." The betting-book was mentioned. Palmer said, "It will be no use to any one," and added that it would probably be found.(3)

[illegible]

Wetherby was to receive for him. This cheque had been drawn on the Tuesday, about seven o'clock in the evening under peculiar circumstances. Palmer sent for Mr. Cheshire, the postmaster at Rugeley, telling him to bring a receipt stamp, and when he arrived asked him to write out, from a copy which he produced, a cheque by Cook, on Wetherby. He said it was for money which

(1) Fact in issue (section 15). Conduct (section 8).

(2) Cook's death, in all its detail, was a fact in issue (section 5).

(3) Conduct (section 8).

Cook owed him, and that he was going to take it [130] over for Cook to sign. Cheshire wrote out the body of the cheque, and Palmer took it away. When Mr. Wetherby received the cheque, the stakes had not been paid to Cook's credit. He accordingly returned the cheque to Palmer, to whom the prosecution gave notice to produce it at the trial.(1) It was called for, but not produced.(2) This was one of the strongest facts against Palmer in the whole of the case. If he had produced the cheque, and if it had appeared to have been really signed by Cook, it would have shown that Cook, for some reason or other, had made over his stakes to Palmer, and this would have destroyed the strong presumption arising from Palmer's appropriation of the bets to his own purposes. In fact it would have greatly weakened and almost upset the case as to the motive. On the other hand, the non-production of the cheque amounted to an admission that it was a forgery; and if that were so, Palmer was forging his friend's name for the purpose of stealing his stakes at the time when to all outward appearance there was every prospect of his speedy recovery which must result in the detection of the fraud. If he knew that Cook would die that night, this was natural. On any other supposition it was inconceivable rashness.(3)

Either on Thursday, 22nd, or Friday, 23rd, Palmer sent for Cheshire again, and produced a paper which he [131] said Cook had given to him some days before. The paper purported to be an acknowledgment that certain bills—the particulars of which were stated—were all for Cook's benefit and not for Palmer's. The amount was considerable as at least one item was for £1,000, and another for £500. This document purported to be signed by Cook, and Palmer wished Cheshire to attest Cook's execution of it, which he refused to do. This document was called for at the trial, and not produced. The same observations apply to it as to the cheque (4)

Evidence was further given to show that Palmer, who, shortly before, had but £9, 6*s.* at the bank, and had borrowed £25 to go to Shrewsbury, paid away large sums of money soon after Cook's death. He paid Pratt £100 on the 24th; he paid a farmer named Spilsbury £46, 2*s.* with a bank of England note for £50 on the 22nd; and Bown, a draper, a sum of £60 or thereabouts in two £50 notes, on the 20th.(5) The general result of these money transactions is, that Palmer appropriated to his own use all Cook's bets; that he tried to appropriate his stakes, and that shortly before, or just after his death, he was in possession of between £400 and £600, of which he paid Pratt £400, though very shortly before he was being pressed for money.

On Wednesday, November 21st, Mr. Jones went up to London, and informed Mr. Stephens, Cook's step-father, of his step-son's death. Mr. Stephens went to Lutterworth, found a will by which Cook appointed him his executor, [132] and then went on to Rugeley, where he arrived about the middle of the day on Thursday.(6) He asked Palmer for information about Cook's affairs, and he replied, "There are £4,000 worth of bills out of his, and I am sorry to say my name is to them, but I have got a paper drawn up by a lawyer and signed by Mr. Cook to show that I never had any benefit from them." Mr. Stephens said that at all events he must be buried. Palmer offered to do so himself and said that the body ought to be fastened up as soon as possible. The conversation then ended for the time. Palmer went

(1) Conduct (section 8)

(2) See section 66 as to notice to produce

(3) As to these inferences see section 114, illust (g).

(4) Conduct (section 8) See section 66 as to notice to produce. As to these inferences, see section 114, illust (g)

(5) Conduct (section 8).

(6) Introductory and explanatory (section 9).

out and without authority from Mr. Stephens ordered a shell and a strong oak coffin.(1)

In the afternoon Mr. Stephens, Palmer, Jones, and a Mr. Gradford, Cook's brother-in-law, dined together, and after dinner Mr. Stephens desired Mr. Jones to fetch Cook's betting book. Jones went to look for it, but was unable to [illegible] seen by the chambermaid, Mills, who [illegible] when he took a stamp from a pocket [illegible] k could not be found, Palmer said it was of no manner of use. Mr. Stephens said he understood Cook had won a great deal of money at Shrewsbury, to which Palmer replied: "It's no use, I assure you; when a man dies his bets are done with." He did not mention the fact that Cook's bets had been paid to Herring on the Monday. Mr. Stephens then said that the book must be found, and [133] Palmer answered that no doubt it would be (2) Before leaving the inn Mr. Stephens went to look at the body, before the coffin was fastened, and observed that both hands were clenched. He returned at once to town and went to his attorney. He returned to Rugeley on Saturday, the 24th, and informed Palmer of his intention to have a post-mortem examination, which took place on Monday, 26th.(3)

The post-mortem examination was conducted in the presence of Palmer by Dr. Harland, Mr. Devonshire, a medical student, assisting Mr. Monkton, and Mr. Newton The heart was contracted and empty. There were numerous small yellowish white spots, about the size of mustard-seed, at the larger end of the stomach. The upper part of the spinal cord was in its natural state; the lower part was not examined till the 25th January, when certain granules were found. There were many follicles on the tongue, apparently of long standing. The lungs appeared healthy to Dr. Harland, but Mr. Devonshire thought that there was some congestion.(4) Some points in Palmer's behaviour, both before and after the post-mortem examination, attracted notice Newton said that on [illegible] n, and asked what dose of strychnine would kill [illegible] He asked whether it would be found in the [13[illegible] the appearance of the stomach after death. Newton said there would be no inflammation, and he did not think it would be found. Newton thought he replied, "It's all right," as if speaking to himself and added that he snapped his fingers Whilst Devonshire was opening the stomach Palmer pushed against him, and part of the contents of the stomach was spilt. Nothing particular being found in the stomach, Palmer observed to Bamford, "They will not hang us yet" As they were all crowding together to see what passed, the push might have been an accident; and as Mr. Stephens' suspicions were well known, the remark was natural, though coarse. After the examination was completed, the intestines, etc., were put into a jar, over the top of which were tied two bladders. Palmer removed the jar from the table to a place near the door, and when it was missed said he thought it would be more convenient. When replaced it was found that a slit has been cut through both the bladders.(5)

After the examination Mr. Stephens and an attorney's clerk took the jars [illegible] Stafford.(6) Palmer asked the postboy [illegible] The postboy said, "I believe I am." [illegible] are going to take?" He said, "I

(1) Admission and conduct (sections 17, 18; section 8).

(2) These facts and statements together make it highly probable that Palmer stole the betting-book which would be relevant as conduct (sections 8, 11).

(3) Introductory to what follows (section 9).

(4) Facts supporting opinions of experts (section 46).

(5) Conduct (section 8).

(6) Introductory (section 9).

believe it is." Palmer said, "I suppose you are going to take the jars?" He said, "I am." Palmer asked if he would upset them? He said, "I shall not." Palmer said if he would, there was a £10 note for him. He also said something about its being "a humbugging concern."(1) Some confusion was introduced into this evidence by the cross-examination, which tended to show that Palmer's object was to upset Mr. Stephens and not the jars, but at last the postboy (J. Myatt) repeated it as given above. Indeed, it makes little difference whether Palmer wished to upset Stephens or the jars, as they were all in one fly, and must be upset together if at all.
[135]

Shortly after the post-mortem examination an inquest was held before Mr. Ward, the coroner. It began on the 29th November and ended on the 5th December. On Sunday, 3rd December, Palmer asked Cheshire, the postmaster, "if he had anything fresh." Cheshire replied that he could not open a letter Afterwards, however, he did open a letter from Dr. Alfred Taylor, who had analyzed the contents of the stomach, etc, to Mr Gardiner, the attorney for the prosecution, and informed Palmer that Dr. Taylor said in that letter that no traces of strychnine were found. Palmer said he knew they would not, and he was quite innocent. Soon afterwards Palmer wrote to Mr Ward, suggesting various questions to be put to witnesses at the inquest and saying that he knew Dr. Taylor had told Mr. Gardiner there were no traces of strychnia, prussic acid, or opium. A few days before this, on the 1st December, Palmer had sent Mr. Ward, as a present, a codfish, a barrel of oysters, a brace of pheasants, and a turkey.(2) These circumstances certainly prove improper and even criminal conduct. Cheshire was imprisoned for his offence, and Lord Campbell spoke in severe terms of the conduct of the coroner, but a bad and unscrupulous man, as Palmer evidently was, might act in the manner described, even though he was innocent of the particular offence charged [136]

A medical book found in Palmer's possession had in it some MS. notes on the subject of strychnine, one of which was, "It kills by causing tetanic contraction of the respiratory muscles." It was not suggested that this memorandum was made for any particular purpose. It was used merely to show that Palmer was acquainted with the properties and effects of strychnine (3)

This completes the evidence as to Palmer's behaviour before, at and after the death of Cook. It proves beyond all question that, having the strongest possible motive to obtain at once a considerable sum of money, he robbed his friend of the whole of the bets paid to Herring on the Monday by a series of ingenious devices, and that he tried to rob him of the stakes; it raises the strongest presumption that he [illegible] sent up to Pratt on the [illegible] person, and had receive [illegible] the night before he died, and that he tried to procure a fraudulent attestation to [137] [illegible] him of life.

The rest of the evidence was directed to prove that the symptoms of which Cook died were those of poisoning by strychnine, and that antimony, which was never prescribed for him, was found in his body Evidence was also given in the course of the trial as to the stage of Cook's health

---

(1) Conduct (section 8)
(2) Conduct and facts introductory thereto (sections 8, 9).
(3) Fact showing knowledge (section 14)

At the time of his death Cook was about twenty-eight years of age. Both his father and mother died young, and his sister and half-brother were not robust. He inherited from his father about £12,000 and was articled to a solicitor. Instead of following up that profession he betook himself to sporting pursuits, and appears to have led a rather dissipated life. He suffered from syphilis, and was in the habit of occasionally consulting Dr. Savage on the state of his health Dr. Savage saw him in November 1851, in May, in June, towards the end of October, and before his death, so that he had the subject, especially as he ex

Savage said that he had two shallow ulcers on the tongue corresponding to bad teeth; that he had also a sore throat, one of his tonsils [138] being very large red, and tender, and the other very small. Cook himself was afraid that these symptoms were syphilitic, but Dr. Savage thought decidedly that they were not. He also noticed "an indication of pulmonary affection under the left lung" Wishing to get him away from his turf associates, Dr. Savage recommended him to go abroad for the winter. His general health Dr. Savage considered good for a man who was not robust. Mr. Stephens said that when he last saw him alive he was looking better than he had looked for some time, and on his remarking, "You do not look anything of an invalid now," Cook struck well. His friend, Mr. Jones, also was not very robust, and that

On the other hand, witnesses were called for the prisoner who gave a different account of his health. A Mr. Sargent said he was with him at Liverpool a week before the Shrewsbury races, that he called his attention to the state of his mouth and throat, and the back part of his tongue was in a complete state of ulcer. "I said," added the witness, "I was surprised he could eat and drink had been in that state for weeks and

" This was certainly not consistent

Such being the state of health of Cook at the time of his [139] death, the next question was as to its cause. The prosecution contended that the symptoms which attended it proved that he was poisoned by strychnia. Several eminent physicians and surgeons—Mr. Curling, Dr. Todd, Sir Benjamin Brodie, Mr. Daniel, and Mr. Solly—gave an account of the general character and causes of the disease of tetanus Mr. Curling said that tetanus consists of spasmodic affection of the voluntary muscles of the body which at last ends in death, produced either by suffocation caused by the closing of the windpipe or by the wearing effect of the severe and painful struggles which the muscular spasm produce. Of this disease there are three forms,—idiopathic tetanus, which is produced without any assignable external cause; traumatic tetanus, which results from wounds; and the tetanus which is produced by the administration of strychnia, bruschia, and nux vomica, all of which are different forms of the same poison. Idiopathic tetanus is a very rare disease in England. Sir Benjamin Brodie had seen only one doubtful case of it. Mr. Daniel, who for twenty-eight years was surgeon to the Bristol Hospital, saw only two, Mr. Nunneley, professor of surgery at Leeds, had seen four. In India, however, it is comparatively common: Mr. Jackson, in twenty-five years' practice there saw about forty cases. It was agreed on all hands, that though the exciting cause of the two diseases is different, their symptoms are the same. They were described in similar terms by several of the witnesses. Dr. Todd said the disease begins with stiffness about the jaw, the symptoms [140] then extend themselves to the other muscles of the trunk and body. They gradually develop themselves. When once the disease has begun there are remissions of severity, but not complete intermission of the symptoms. In acute cases the disease terminates in three or four days. In chronic cases it will go on for as much as three weeks. There was some question as to what was the shortest case upon record In a case mentioned by one of the prisoner's witnesses, Mr Ross, the patient was said to have been attacked in the morning either at eleven or some hours earlier, it did not clearly appear which, and to have died at half-past seven in the evening This was the shortest case specified on either side, though its duration was not accurately determined. As a rule, however, tetanus, whether traumatic or idiopathic, was said to be a matter not of minutes, or even of hours, but of days (1)

(1) Conduct and facts introductory thereto (sections 8, 9).

(2) State of things under which crime was committed (section 7).

Such being the nature of tetanus, traumatic and idiopathic, four questions arose. Did Cook die of tetanus? Did he die of traumatic tetanus? Did he die of idiopathic tetanus? Did he die of the tetanus produced by strychnia? The case for prosecution upon these questions was, first, that he did die of tetanus Mr. Curling said no doubt there was spasmodic action of the muscles (which was his definition of tetanus) in Cook's case; and even Mr. Nunneley, the principal witness for the prisoner, who contended that the death of Cook was [141] caused neither by tetanus in its ordinary forms nor by the tetanus of strychnia, admitted that the paroxysm described by Mr. Jones was "very like" the paroxysm of tetanus. The close general resemblance of the symptoms to those of tetanus was indeed assumed by all the witnesses on both sides, as was proved by the various distinctions which were stated on the side of the Crown between Cook's symptoms and those of traumatic and idiopathic tetanus, and on the side of the prisoner between Cook's symptoms and the symptoms of the tetanus of strychnia It might, therefore, be considered to be established that he died of tetanus in some form or other

The next point asserted by the prosecution was, that he did not die of traumatic or idiopathic tetanus, because there was no wound on his body, and also because the course of the symptoms was different They further asserted that the symptoms were those of poison by strychnia

Upon these points the evidence was as follows:—Mr. Curling was asked, Q. "Were the symptoms consistent with any form of traumatic tetanus which has ever come under your knowledge or observation?" He answered, "No" Q. "What distinguished them from the cases of traumatic tetanus which you have described?" A "There was the sudden onset of the fatal symptoms. In all cases that have fallen under my notice the disease has been preceded by the milder symptoms of tetanus." Q. "Gradually progressing to their complete development, and completion and death?" A "Yes" He also [142] mentioned "the sudden onset and rapid subsidence of the spasms" as inconsistent with the theory of either traumatic or idiopathic tetanus; and he said he had never known a case of tetanus which ran its course in less than eight or ten hours In the one case which occupied so short a time the true period could not be ascertained In general, the time required was from one to several days Sir Benjamin Brodie was asked, "In your opinion, are the symptoms those of traumatic tetanus or not?" He replied, "As far as the spasmodic contraction of the muscles goes, the symptoms resemble those of traumatic tetanus, as to the course which the symptoms took, that was entirely different." He added, "The symptoms of traumatic tetanus always begin, as far as I have seen, very gradually, the stiffness of the lower jaw being, I believe, the symptom first complained of—at least, so it has been in my experience, then the contraction of the muscles of the back is always a later symptom, generally much

(1) Opinions of experts, and facts on which they were founded (sections 45, 46). The rest of the evidence falls under this head.

At the time of his death Cook was about twenty-eight years of age. Both his father and mother died young, and his sister and half-brother were not robust. He inherited from his father about £12,000 and was articled to a solicitor. Instead of following up that profession he betook himself to sporting pursuits, and appears to have led a rather dissipated life He suffered from syphilis, and was in the habit of occasionally consulting Dr. Savage on the state of his health Dr. Savage saw him in November 1854, in May, in June, towards the end of before his death, so the subject, especia
Savage said that he had two shallow ulcers teeth, that he had also a sore throat, one red, and tender, and the other very small.
symptoms were syphilitic, but Dr. Savage thought decidedly that they were not He also noticed "an indication of pulmonary affection under the left lung" Wishing to get him away from his turf associates, Dr. Savage recommended him to go abroad for the winter. His general health Dr. Savage considered good for a man who was not robust. Mr. Stephens said that when he last saw him alive he was looking better than he had looked for some time, and on his remarking, "You do not look anything of an invalid now," Cook struck himself on the breast, and said he was quite well. His friend, Mr. Jones, also said that his health was generally good, though he was not very robust, and that he both hunted and played at cricket.(1)

On the other hand, witnesses were called for the prisoner who gave a different account of his health. A Mr. Sargent said he was with him at Liverpool a week before the Shrewsbury races, that he called his attention to the state of his mouth and throat, and the back part of his tongue of ulcer. "I said," added the witness, " in the state his mouth was in He said months, and now he did not take notice of it. This was certainly not consistent with Dr. Savage's evidence (2)

Such being the state of health of Cook at the time of his [139] death, the next question was as to its cause. The prosecution contended that the symptoms which attended it proved that he was poisoned by strychnia. Several eminent physicians and surgeons—Mr. Curling, Dr. Todd, Sir Benjamin Brodie, Mr. Daniel, and Mr. Solly—gave an account of the general character and causes of the disease of tetanus. Mr. Curling said that tetanus consists of spasmodic affection of the voluntary muscles of the body which at last ends in death, produced either by suffocation caused by the closing of the windpipe or by the wearing effect of the severe and painful struggles which the muscular spasm produce. Of this disease there are three forms,—idiopathic tetanus, which is produced without any assignable external cause; traumatic tetanus, which results from wounds; and the tetanus which is produced by the administration of strychnia, bruschia, and nux vomica, all of which are different forms of the same poison. Idiopathic tetanus is a very rare disease in England. Sir Benjamin Brodie had seen only one doubtful case of it. Mr. Daniel, who for twenty-eight years was surgeon to the Bristol Hospital, saw only two, Mr. Nunneley, professor of surgery at Leeds, had seen four. In India, however, it is comparatively common: Mr. Jackson, in twenty-five years' practice there saw about forty cases. It was agreed on all hands, that though the exciting cause of the two diseases is different, their symptoms are the same. They were described in similar terms by several of the witnesses. Dr. Todd said the disease begins with stiffness about the jaw, the symptoms [140] then extend themselves to the other muscles of the trunk and body. They gradually develop themselves. When once the disease has begun there are remissions of severity, but not complete intermission of the symptoms. In acute cases the disease terminates in three or four days. In chronic cases it will go on for as much as three weeks. There was some question as to what was the shortest case upon record. In a case mentioned by one of the prisoner's witnesses, Mr. Ross, the patient was said to have been attacked in the morning either at eleven or some hours earlier, it did not clearly appear which, and to have died at half-past seven in the evening. This was the shortest case specified on either side, though its duration was not accurately determined. As a rule, however, tetanus, whether traumatic or idiopathic, was said to be a matter not of minutes, or even of hours, but of days (1)

(1) Conduct and facts introductory thereto (sections 8, 9).

(2) State of things under which crime was committed (section 7).

Such being the nature of tetanus, traumatic and idiopathic, four questions arose. Did Cook die of tetanus ? Did he die of traumatic tetanus ? Did he die of idiopathic tetanus ? Did he die of the tetanus produced by strychnia ? The case for prosecution upon these questions was, first, that he did die of tetanus. Mr. Curling said no doubt there was spasmodic action of the muscles (which was his definition of tetanus) in Cook's case ; and even Mr. Nunneley, the principal witness for the prisoner, who contended that the death of Cook was [141] caused neither by tetanus in its ordinary forms nor by the tetanus of strychnia, admitted that the paroxysm described by Mr. Jones was "very like" the paroxysm of tetanus. The close general resemblance of the symptoms to those of tetanus was indeed assumed by all the witnesses on both sides, as was proved by the various distinctions which were stated on the side of the Crown between Cook's symptoms and those of traumatic and idiopathic tetanus, and on the side of the prisoner between Cook's symptoms and the symptoms of the tetanus of strychnia It might, therefore, be considered to be established that he died of tetanus in some form or other

The next point asserted by the prosecution was, that he did not die of traumatic or idiopathic tetanus, because there was no wound on his body, and also because the course of the symptoms was different They further asserted that the symptoms were those of poison by strychnia

Upon these points the evidence was as follows :—Mr. Curling was asked, Q. "Were the symptoms consistent with any form of traumatic tetanus which has ev[illegible] [He] answered, "No." Q. "[illegible] tetanus which you have d[illegible] he fatal symptoms. In all cases that have fallen under my notice the disease has been preceded by the milder symptoms of tetanus." Q. "Gradually progressing to their complete development, and completion and death ?" A. "Yes" He also [142] mentioned "the sudden onset and rapid subsidence of the spasms" as inconsistent with the theory of either traumatic or idiopathic tetanus ; and he said he had never known a case of tetanus which ran its course in less than eight or ten hours In the one case which occupied so short a time the true period could not be ascertained In general, the time required was from one to several days Sir Benjamin Brodie was asked, "In your opinion, are the symptoms those of traumatic tetanus or not ?" He replied, "As far as the spasmodic contraction of the muscles goes, the symptoms resemble those of traumatic tetanus, [illegible] was entirely different." He added[illegible] ays begin, as far as I have seen [illegible] w being, I believe, the symptom first complained of—at least, so it has been in my experience ; then the contraction of the muscles of the back is always a later symptom, generally much later; the muscles of the extremities are affected in a much less degree than those of the neck and trunk, except in some cases, where the injury has been in a limb, and an early symptom has been a contraction of the muscles of that limb. I do not myself recollect a case in which in ordinary tetanus there was that contraction of the muscles of the hand which I understand was stated to have existed in this instance. The ordinary tetanus rarely runs its course in less than two or three days, and often is protracted to a much longer period; I know one case only in which the disease was [143] said to have terminated in twelve hours." He said, in conclusion, "I never saw a case in which the symptoms described arose from any disease; when I say that, of course, I refer not to the particular symptoms, but to the general course which the symptoms took." Mr. Daniel being asked [illegible] pathic or traumatic te[illegible] also said that he shoulc[illegible] merate the distinctions. Mr. Solly said that the symptoms were not referable to any disease he ever witnessed; and Dr. Todd said, "I think the symptoms were those of strychnia." The same opinion was expressed with equal confidence by Dr. Alfred Taylor, Dr. Rees, and Mr. Christison.

(1) Opinions of experts, and facts on which they were founded (sections 45, 46). The rest of the evidence falls under this head.

In order to support this general evidence witnesses were called who gave account of three fatal cases of poisoning by strychnia, and of one case in which the patient recovered. The first of the fatal cases was that of Agnes French, or Senet, who was accidentally poisoned at Glasgow Infirmary, in 1845, by some pills which she took, and which were intended for a paralytic patient. According to the nurse, the girl was taken ill three-quarters of an hour, according to one of the physicians (who, however, was not present) twenty minutes, after she swallowed the pills. She fell suddenly back on the floor; when her clothes were cut off she was stiff, "just like a poker," her arms were stretched out, her hands clenched; she vomited slightly; she had no lockjaw; [144] there was a retraction of the mouth and face, the head was bent back, the spine curved. She went into severe paroxysms every few seconds, and died about an hour after the symptoms began. She was perfectly conscious. The heart was found empty on examination

The second case described was that of Mrs. Serjeantson Smyth, who was accidentally poisoned at Romsey in 1848, by strychnine put into a dose of ordinary medicine instead of salicine. She took the dose about five or ten minutes after seven; in five or ten minutes more the servant was alarmed by a violent ringing of the bell. She found her mistress leaning on a chair, went out to send for a doctor, and on her return found her on the floor. She screamed loudly. She asked to have her legs pulled straight and to have water thrown over her. A few minutes before she died she said, "Turn me over;" she was turned over, and died very quietly almost immediately. The fit lasted about an hour. The hands were clenched, the feet contracted. and on a post-mortem examination the heart was found empty.

The third case was that of Mrs. Dove, who was poisoned at Leeds by her husband (for which he was afterwards hanged) in February, 1856. She had five attacks on the Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of the week beginning February 24th. She had prickings in the legs and twitchings in the hands. She asked her husband to rub her arms and legs before the spasms came on, but when they were strong she could not bear her legs to be touched. The fatal attack in her case lasted two [145] hours and-a-half. The hands were semi-bent, feet strongly arched. The lungs were congested; the spinal cord was also much congested. The head being opened first, a good deal of blood flowed out, part of which might flow from the heart.

The case in which the patient recovered was that of a paralytic patient of Mr. Moore's. He took an overdose of strychnia, and in about three-quarters of an hour Mr Moore found him stiffened in every limb. His head was drawn back; he was screaming and "frequently requesting that we should turn him, move him, rub him." His spine was drawn back. He snapped at a spoon with which an attempt was made to administer medicine, and was perfectly conscious during the whole time.

Dr. Taylor and Dr. Owen Rees examined Cook's body. They found no strychnia, but they found antimony in the liver, the left kidney, the spleen and also in the blood

The case for the prosecution upon this evidence was, that the symptoms were those of tetanus, and of tetanus produced by strychnia. The case for the prisoner was, first, that several of the symptoms observed were inconsistent with strychnia; and secondly, that all of them might be explained on other hypotheses. Their evidence was given in part by their own witnesses, and in part by the witnesses for the Crown in cross-examination. The replies suggested by the Crown were founded partly on the evidence of their own witnesses given by way of anticipation, and partly by the evidence obtained from the witnesses for the prisoner on cross-examination.

[146] The first and most conspicuous argument on behalf of the prisoner was, that the fact that no strychnia was discovered by Dr. Taylor and Dr. Rees was inconsistent with the theory that any had been administered. The material part of Dr Taylor's evidence upon this point was, that he had examined the stomach and intestines of Cook for a variety of poisons, strychnia among others, without success The contents of the stomach were gone, though the contents of the intestines remained, and the stomach itself had been cut open from end to end, and turned inside out, and the mucous surface on which poison, if present, would have been found was rubbing against the surface of the intestines. This Dr. Taylor considered a most unfavourable condition for the discovery of poison and Mr. Christison agreed with him. Several of the prisoner's witnesses on the contrary—Mr. Nunneley, Dr. Letheby, and Mr. Rogers—thought that it would only increase the difficulty of the operation, and not destroy its chance of success.

Apart from this, Dr. Taylor expressed his opinion that from the way in which strychnia acts, it might be impossible to discover it even if the circumstances were favourable. The mode of testing its presence in the stomach is to blood, thence into the solid [147] part of the body, and at some stage of its progress causes death by its action on the nerves and muscles. Its noxious effects do not begin till it has left the stomach. From this Dr. Taylor argued that if a minimum dose were administered, none would be left in the stomach at the time of death, and therefore none could be discovered there. He also said that if the strychnia got into the blood before examination, it would be diffused over the whole mass, and so no more than an extremely minute portion would be present in any given quantity. If the dose were half a grain, and there were twenty-five pounds of blood in the body, each pound of blood would contain only one-fiftieth of a grain. He was also of opinion that the "strychnia undergoes some chemical change by reason of which its presence in small quantities in the tissues cannot be detected." In short, the result of his evidence was that if a minimum dose were administered, it was uncertain whether strychnia would be present in the stomach after death, and that if it was not in the stomach, there was no certainty that it could be found at all. He added that he considered the colour tests fallacious, because the colours might be produced by other substances.

Dr. Taylor further detailed some experiments which he had tried upon animals jointly with Dr. Rees, for the purpose of ascertaining whether strychnia could always be detected. He poisoned four rabbits with strychnia, and applied the tests for strychnia to their bodies. In one case, where two grains had been administered at intervals, he obtained proof of the presence of strychnia both by a bitter [148] taste and by the colour. In a case where one grain was administered he obtained the taste but not the colour. In the other two cases, where he administered one grain and half a grain respectively, he obtained no indication at all of the presence of strychnia. These experiments proved to demonstration that the fact that he did not discover strychnia did not prove that no strychnia was present in Cook's body.

Mr. Nunneley, Mr. Herapath, Mr. Rogers, Dr. Letheby and Mr. Wrightson contradicted Dr. Taylor and Dr. Rees upon this part of their evidence. They denied the theory that strychnine undergoes any change in the blood and they professed their own ability to discover its presence even in most minute quantities in any body into which it had been introduced, and their belief that the colour tests were satisfactory. Mr. Herapath said that he had found strychnine in the blood [illegible] nd he also said that he [illegible] unmixed with organic [illegible] by Lord Campbell for [illegible] he should expect to find strychnia if it were present, and that he had found it in the tissues of an animal poisoned by it.

Here, no doubt, there was a considerable conflict of evidence upon a point on which it was difficult for unscientific persons to pretend to have any opinion. The evidence given for the prisoner, however, tended to prove not so much that there was no strychnia in Cook's body, [149] as that Dr. Taylor ought to have found it if there was. In other words, it has less to do with the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, than with the question whether Mr. Nunneley and Mr. Herapath were or were not better analytical chemists than Dr Taylor. The evidence could not even be considered to shake Dr. Taylor's credit, for no part of the case rested on his evidence except the discovery of the antimony, as to which he was corroborated by Mr. Brande, and was not contradicted by the prisoner's witnesses. His opinion as to the nature of Cook's symptoms was shared by many other medical witnesses of the highest eminence, whose credit was altogether unimpeached. The prisoner's counsel were placed in a curious difficulty by this state of the question. They had to attack, and did attack, Dr. Taylor's credit vigorously for the purpose of rebutting his conclusion that Cook might have been poisoned by strychnine, yet they had also to [illegible] chemist, for if they destroyed it, the [illegible] for nothing. This dilemma was fatal [illegible] nt's guilt. To deny it was to destroy the value of nearly all their own evidence. The only possible course was to admit his skill and deny his good faith, but this too was useless, for the reason just mentioned.

Another argument used on behalf of the prisoner was that some of the symptoms of Cook's death were inconsistent with poisoning by strychnine. Mr. Nunneley and Dr. Letheby thought that the facts that Cook sat up in [150] bed when the attack came on, that he moved his hands, and swallowed, and asked to be rubbed and moved, showed more power of voluntary motion than was consistent with poisoning by strychnia. But Mrs. Serjeantson Smyth got out of bed and rang the bell, and both she, Mrs. Dove and Mrs. Moore's patient begged to be rubbed and moved before the spasms came on. Cook's movements were before the paroxysm set in, and the first paroxysm ended his life.

Mr. Nunneley referred to the fact that the heart was empty, and said that, in his experiments, he always found that the right side of the heart of the poisoned animals was full.

Both in Mrs. Smyth's case, however, and in that of the girl Senet, the heart was found empty; and in Mrs Smyth's case the chest and abdomen were opened first, so that the heart was not emptied by the opening of the head. Mr. Christison said that if a man died of spasms of the heart, the heart would be emptied by them, and would be found empty after death, so that the presence or absence of the blood proved nothing.

Mr. Nunneley and Dr Letheby also referred to the length of time before the symptoms appeared, as inconsistent with poisoning by strychnine. The time between the administration of the pills and the paroxysm was not accurately measured It might have been an hour, or a little less, or more; but the poison, if present at all, was administered in pills, which would not begin to operate till they were broken up, and the rapidity with which they [151] would be broken up, would depend upon the materials of which they were made. Mr. Christison said that if the pills were made up with resinous materials, such as are within the knowledge of every medical man, their operation would be delayed He added, " I do not think we can fix, with our present knowledge, the precise time for the poison beginning to operate." According to the account of one witness in Agnes French's case, the poison did not operate for three-quarters of an hour, though probably her recollection of the time was not very accurate after ten years. Dr. Taylor also referred (in cross-examination) to cases in which an hour and a half, or even two hours elapsed, before the symptoms showed themselves.

These were the principal points in Cook's symptoms said to be inconsistent with the administration of strychnia All of them appear to have been satisfactorily answered. Indeed, the inconsistency of the symptoms with strychnia was faintly maintained. The defence turned rather on the possibility of showing that they were consistent with some other disease.

In order to make out this point various suggestions were made. In the cross-examination of the different witnesses for the Crown, it was frequently suggested that the case was one of traumatic tetanus, caused by syphilitic sores; but to this there were three fatal objections. In the first place, there were no syphilitic sores, in the second place, no witness for the prisoner said that he thought that it was a case of traumatic tetanus; and in the third place, several doctors of great experience in respect of syphilis—specially [152] Dr. Lee, the physician to the Lock Hospital—declared that they never heard of syphilitic sores producing tetanus. Two witnesses for the prisoner were called to show that a man died of tetanus who had sores on his elbow and elsewhere, which were possibly syphilitic; but it did not appear whether he had rubbed or hurt them, and Cook had no symptoms of the sort.

Another theory was that the death was caused by general convulsions. This was advanced by Mr. Nunneley; but he was unable to mention any case in [illegible] troying consciousness [illegible] ver met with one. [illegible] idered the case to b[illegible] is." But he also failed to mention an instance in which epilepsy did not destroy consciousness. This witness assigned the most extraordinary reasons for supposing that it was a case of this form of epilepsy. He said that the fit might have been caused by sexual excitement, though the man was ill at Rugeley for nearly a week before his death; and that it was within the range of possibility that sexual intercourse might produce a convulsion fit after an interval of a fortnight.

Both Mr. Nunneley and Dr. McDonald were cross-examined with great closeness. Each of them was taken separately through all the various symptoms of the case, and asked to point out how they differed from those of poisoning by strychnia, and what were the reasons why they should be supposed to arise from anything else. After [153] a great deal of trouble Mr. Nunneley was forced to admit that the symptoms of the paroxysm were "very like" those of strychnia, and that the various predisposing causes which he mentioned as likely to produce convulsions could not be shown to have existed. He said, for instance, that excitement and depression of spirits might predispose to convulsions; but the only excitement under which Cook had laboured was on winning the race a week before; and as for depression of spirits, he was laughing and joking with Mr. Jones a few hours before his death. Dr. McDonald was equally unable to give satisfactory explanation of these difficulties. It is impossible by any abridgment to convey the full effect which these cross-examinations produced. They deserve to be carefully studied by any one who cares to understand the full effect of this great instrument for the manifestation not merely of truth, but of accuracy and fairness

Of the other witnesses for the prisoner, Mr. Herapath admitted that he had said that he thought that there was strychnine in the body, but that Dr. Taylor did not know how to find it. He added that he got his impression from newspaper reports; but it did not appear that they differed from the evidence given at the trial. Dr. Letheby said that the symptoms of Cook were irreconcilable with everything that he was acquainted with—strychnia poison included. He admitted, however, that they were not inconsistent with what he had heard of the symptoms of Mrs. Serjeantson Smyth who was undoubtedly poisoned by strychnine. Mr. Partridge was called to [154] show that the case might be one of arachnitis, or inflammation of one of the membranes of the spinal cord caused by two granules discovered there. In cross-examination he instantly admitted with perfect frankness, that he did not think the case was one of arachnitis, as the symptoms were not the same. Moreover, on being asked whether the symptoms described by Mr. Jones were consistent with poisoning by strychnia, he said, "Quite"; and he concluded by saying that in the whole course of his experience and knowledge he had never seen such a death proceed from natural causes. Dr. Robinson, from Newcastle, was called to show that tetanic convulsions preceded by epilepsy were the cause of death. He, however, expressly admitted in cross-examination that the symptoms were consistent with strychnia, and that some of them were inconsistent with epilepsy. He said that in the absence of any other cause, if he "put aside the hypothesis of strychnia," he would ascribe it to epilepsy; and that he thought the granules in the spinal cord might have produced epilepsy. The degree of importance attached to these granules by different witnesses varied. Several of the witnesses for the Crown considered them unimportant The last of the prisoner's [illegible] angina pec[illegible]
so like tho[illegible] them from each other.

The fact [illegible] nor could it be denied [illegible] symptoms of sickness, e[illegible] No one but the priso[illegible]

The general result of the whole evidence on both sides appears to be to prove beyond all reasonable doubt that the symptoms of Cook's death were perfectly consistent with those of poisoning by strychnine and that there was strong reason to believe that they were inconsistent with any other cause. Coupling this with the proof that Palmer bought strychnia just before each of the two attacks, and that he robbed Cook of all his property, it is impossible to doubt the propriety of the verdict.

Palmer's case is remarkable on account of the extraordinary minuteness and labour with which it was tried, and on account of the extreme ability with which the trial was conducted on both sides.

Remarks on Palmer's case.

The intricate set of facts which show that Palmer had a strong motive to commit the crime; his behaviour before it; at the time when it was being committed, and after it had been committed; the various considerations which showed that Cook must have died by tetanus produced by strychnine; that Palmer had the means of administering strychnine to him; that he did actually administer what in all probability was strychnine; that he also administered antimony on many occasions; and that all the different theories by which Cook's death otherwise than by strychnine could be accounted for were open to fatal objections, form a collection of eight or ten different sets of facts, all connected [156] together immediately or remotely either as being, or as being shown not to be, the causes or the effects of Cook's murder, or as forming part of the actual murder itself.

The scientific evidence is remarkable on various grounds but particularly because it supplies a singularly perfect illustration of the identity between the ordinary processes of scientific research, and the principles explained above, as being those on which Judicial Evidence proceeds Take, for instance, the question, did Cook die of tetanus, either traumatic or idiopathic? The symptoms of those diseases are in the first place ascertained inductively, and their nature was proved by the testimony of Sir Benjamin Brodie and others The course of the symptoms being compared with those of Cook, they did not correspond. The inference by deduction was that Cook's death was not caused by those diseases. Logically the matter might be stated thus.—

All persons who die either of traumatic or of idiopathic tetanus exhibit a certain course of symptoms.

Cook did not exhibit that course of symptoms, therefore Cook did not die of traumatic or of idiopathic tetanus.

Everyone of the arguments and theories stated in the case may easily be shown by a little attention to be so many illustrations of the rules of evidence on the one hand, and of the rules of induction and deduction on the other

On the other hand, a flood of irrelevant matter apparently connected with the trial pressed, so to speak, for admittance, and if it had been admitted, would have swollen the trial to unmanageable proportions, and thrown no real [157] light upon the main question. Palmer was actually indicted for the murder of his wife, Ann Palmer, and for the murder of his brother, Walter Palmer. Every sort of story was in circulation as to what he had done It was said that twelve or fourteen persons had at different times been buried from his house under suspicious circumstances. It was said that he had poisoned Lord George Bentinck who died very suddenly some years before. He had certainly forged his mother's acceptance to bills of exchange, and had carried on a series of gross frauds on insurance offices. There was the strongest reason to suspect that the evidence of Jeremiah Smith, referred to in the case, was plotted and artful perjury. If Palmer had been tried in France, every one of these and innumerable other topics would have been introduced, and the real matter in dispute would not have been nearly so fully discussed.

No case sets in a clearer light either the theory or the practical working of the principles on which the Evidence Act is based

One special matter on which Palmer's trial throws great light is the nature of the evidence of experts. The provisions relating to this subject are contained in sections 45 and 46 of the Evidence Act. The only point of much importance in connection with them is that it should be borne in mind that their evidence is given on the assumption that certain facts occurred, but that it does not in common cases show whether or not the facts on which the expert gives his opinion did really occur. For instance, [158] Sir Benjamin Brodie and other witnesses in Palmer's case said that the symptoms they had heard described were the symptoms of poisoning by strychnine, but whether the maid-servants and others who witnessed and described Cook's death were or were not speaking the truth was not a question for them, but for the jury. Strictly speaking, an expert ought not to be asked, "Do you think that the deceased man died of poison?" He ought to be asked to what cause he would attribute the death of the deceased man, assuming the symptoms attending his death to have been correctly described? or whether any cause except poison would account for such and such specified symptoms? This, however, is a matter of form. The substance of the rules as to experts is that they are only witnesses, not judges; that their evidence, however important, is intended to be used only as materials upon which others are to form their decision; and that the fact which they have to prove is the fact that they entertain certain opinions on certain grounds, and not the fact that grounds for their opinions do really exist.

---

[159] Irrelevant Facts.

Having thus described and illustrated the theory of relevancy, it will be desirable to say something of irrelevant facts which might at first sight be supposed to be relevant.

From the explanations given in the earlier part of the chapter it follows that facts are irrelevant unless they can be shown to stand in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect to facts in issue, every step in the connection being either proved or of such a nature that it may be presumed without proof.

What facts are irrelevant.

The vast majority of ordinary facts simply co-exist without being in any assignable manner connected together. For instance, at the moment of the commission of a crime in a great city numberless other transactions are going on in the immediate neighbourhood; but no one would think of giving evidence of them unless they were in some way connected with the crime. Facts obviously irrelevant therefore present little difficulty. The only difficulty arises in dealing with facts which are apparently relevant but are not really so. The most important of these are three:—

Facts apparently relevant.

1. Statements as to facts made by persons not called as witnesses.

[160] 2. Transactions similar to but unconnected with the facts in issue.

3. Opinions formed by persons as to the facts in issue or relevant facts.

None of these are relevant within the definition of relevancy given in sections 6—11, both inclusive. It may possibly be argued that the effect of the second paragraph of section 11* would be to admit proof of such facts as these.

---

* Section 11 is as follows:—

Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant—

(1) If they are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact.

(2) If by themselves, or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable.

It may, for instance, be said: A (not called as a witness) was heard to declare that he had seen B commit a crime. This makes it highly probable that B did commit that crime. Therefore A's declaration is a relevant fact under section 11. This was not the intention of the section, as is shown by the elaborate provisions contained in the following part of the Chapter II (sections 32—39) as to particular classes of statements, which are regarded as relevant facts either because the circumstances under which they are made invest them with importance, or because no better evidence can be got. The sort of facts which the section was intended to include are facts which either exclude or imply more or less distinctly the existence of the facts sought to be proved. Some degree of latitude was designedly left in the working of the section (in compliance with a suggestion from the Madras Government) [161] on account of the variety of matters to which it might apply. The meaning of the section would have been more fully expressed if words to the following effect had been added to it:—

"No statement shall be regarded as rendering the matter stated highly probable within the meaning of this section unless it is declared to be a relevant fact under some other section of this Act."

Reason for exclusion of hearsay.

The reasons why statements as to facts made by persons not called as witnesses are excluded, except in certain specified cases (see sections 17—39), are various. In the first place, it is matter of common experience that statements in common conversation are made so lightly, and are so liable to be misunderstood or misrepresented, that they cannot be depended upon for any important purpose unless they are made under special circumstances

Objection

It may be said that this is an objection to the weight of such statements and not to their relevancy, and there is some degree of truth in this remark. No doubt, when a man has to inquire into facts of which he receives in the first instance very confused accounts, it may and often will be extremely important for him to trace the most cursory and apparently futile report. And facts relevant in the highest degree to facts in issue may often be discovered in this manner. A policeman or a lawyer engaged in getting up a case, Criminal or Civil, would neglect his duty altogether if he shut his ears to everything which was not relevant within the meaning of [162] the Evidence Act A Judge or Magistrate in India frequently has to perform duties which in England would be performed by police-officers or attorneys. He has to sift out the truth for himself as well as he can and with little assistance of a professional kind. Section 165 is intended to arm the Judge with the most extensive power possible for the purpose of getting at the truth The effect of this section,* is that in order to get to the bottom of the matter before it the Court will be able to look at and inquire into every fact whatever It will not, however, be able to found its judgment upon the class of statements in question, for the following reason:—

Effect of section 165

If this were permitted, it would present a great temptation to indolent Judges to be satisfied with second-hand reports

It would open a wide door to fraud. People would make statements for which they would be in no way responsible, and the fact that these statements were made would be proved by witnesses who knew nothing of the matter stated. Every one would thus be at the mercy of people who might choose to tell a lie, and loose evidence could neither be tested nor contradicted.

---

* Section 165 is as follows —

"The Judge may, in order to discover or obtain proper proof of relevant facts, ask any question he pleases in any form, at any time, of any witness, or of the parties, about any fact relevant or irrelevant, and may order the production of any document or thing

Suppose that A, B, C, and D give to E, F, and G a minute detailed account of a crime which they say was [163] committed by Z, E, F, and G repeat what they have heard correctly. A, B, C, and D disappear or are not forthcoming. It is evident that Z would be altogether unable to defend himself in this case, and that the Court would be unable to test the statement of A, B, C, and D. The only way to avoid this is to exclude such evidence altogether, and so to put upon both Judges and Magistrates as strong a pressure as possible to get to the bottom of the matter before them.

It would waste an incalculable amount of time. To try to trace unauthorized and irresponsible gossip, and to discover the grains of truth which may lurk in it is like trying to trace a fish in the water.

Unconnected transactions.

The exclusion of evidence as to transactions similar to, but not specially connected with, the facts in issue, rests upon the ground that if it were not enforced, every trial, whether civil or criminal, might run into an inquiry into the whole life and character of the parties concerned. Litigants have frequently many matters in difference besides the precise point legally at issue between them, and it often requires a good deal of rigour to prevent them from turning Courts of Justice into theatres in which all their affairs may be discussed A very slight acquaintance with French procedure is enough to show the evils of not keeping people close to the point in judicial proceedings.

Exclusion of evidence of opinion

As to evidence of opinion it is excluded because its admission would in nearly all cases be mere waste of time

Exception to rules as to irrelevancy.

[164] The concluding part of the chapter on the relevancy of facts enumerates the exceptions which are to be made to the general rules as to irrelevancy The rules as to admissions, statements made by persons who cannot be called as witnesses, and statements made under circumstances which in themselves afford a guarantee for their truth, are an exception to the exclusion of statements as proof of the matter stated.

Judgments in Courts of Justice on other occasions form an exception to the exclusion of evidence of transactions not specifically connected with facts in issue, and the provisions as to the admission of evidence of opinions in certain cases are contained in sections 45—55. I will notice very shortly the principle on which these provisions proceed.

Admissions

1. The general rule with regard to admissions, which are defined to mean all that the parties or their representatives in certain degrees say about the matter in dispute, or facts relevant thereto, is that they may be proved as against those who made them, but not in their favour. The reason of the rule is obvious. If A says, "B owes me money," the mere fact that he says so does not even tend to prove the debt. If the statement has any value at all, it must be derived from some fact which lies beyond it; for instance, A's recollection of his having lent B the money. To that fact, of course, A can testify but his subsequent assertions add nothing to what he has to say. If, on the other hand, A had said, "B does [165] not owe me anything," this is a fact of which B might make use, and which might be decisive of the case.

Confessions

Admissions in reference to crimes are usually called confessions. I may observe upon the provisions relating to them that sections 25, 26, and 27 were transferred to the Evidence Act verbatim from the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act XXV of 1861. They differ widely from the law of England, and were inserted in the Act of 1861 in order to prevent the practice of torture by the police for the purpose of extracting confessions from persons in their custody.

Statements by witness who cannot be called.

Statements made by persons who are dead or otherwise incapacitated from being called as witnesses are admitted in the cases mentioned in sections 32 and 33. The reason is that in the cases in question no better evidence is to be had.

Staten under specia cumst

In certain cases statements are made under circumstances which in them- [illegible] 'o be true, and in these cases there [illegible] y whom the statement was made. [illegible]

It may be well to point out here the manner in which the Evidence Act affects the proof of evidence given by a witness in a Court of Justice. The relevancy of the fact that such evidence was given, depends partly on the general principles of relevancy. For instance, if a witness were accused of giving false testimony, the fact that he gave the testimony alleged to be false would be a fact [166] in issue But the Act also provides for cases in which the fact that evidence was given on a different occasion is to be admissible, either to prove the matter stated (section 33), or in order to contradict (section 155, 3) or in order to corroborate (section 157) the witness. By reference to these sections it must be ascertained whether the fact that the evidence was given is relevant. If it is relevant, section 35 enacts that an entry of it in a record made by any public servant in the discharge of his duty shall be relevant as a mode of proving it. The Codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure direct all judicial officers to make records of the evidence given before them, and section 80 of the Evidence Act provides that a document purporting to be a record of evidence shall be presumed to be genuine, that statements made as to the circumstances under which it was taken shall be presumed to be true, and the evidence to have been duly taken The result of these sections taken together is that when proof of evidence given on previous occasions is admissible, it may be proved by the production of the record or a certified copy (see section 76).

Judgm in oth cases

The sections as to judgments (40, 41) designedly omit to deal with the question of the effect of judgments in preventing further proceedings in regard of the same matter The law upon this subject is to be found in section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure and in section 460 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The cases which the Evidence Act provides [167] for are cases in which the judgment of a Court is in the nature of a law, and creates the right which it affirms to exist.

Opinio

The opinions of any person, other than the Judge by whom the fact is to be decided, as to the existence of facts in issue or relevant facts, are, as a rule, irrelevant to the decision of the cases to which they relate for the most obvious reasons. To show that such and such a person thought that a crime had been committed or a contract made would either be to show nothing at all, or would invest the person whose opinion was proved with the character of a Judge. In some few cases, the reasons for which are self-evident, it is otherwise. They are specified in sections 45—51.

Charac when portan

The sections as to character require little remark. Evidence of character is, generally speaking, only a makeweight, though there are two classes of cases in which it is highly important —

(1) Where conduct is equivocal, or even presumably criminal. In this case evidence of character may explain conduct and rebut the presumptions which it might raise in the absence of such evidence A man is found in possession of stolen goods. He says he found them and took charge of them to give them to the owner. If he is a man of very high character this may be believed

(2) When a charge rests on the direct testimony of a single witness and on the bare denial of it by the person charged. A man is accused of an indecent assault by a [168] woman with whom he was accidentally left alone He denies it Here a high character for morality on the part of the accused person would be of great importance.

[169] CHAPTER IV.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ON THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

No reference to English cases.

In the preceding pages I have stated and illustrated the theory of judicial evidence on which the Evidence Act is based. I have but little to add to that explanation. The Act speaks for itself. No labour was spared to make its provisions complete and distinct. As the first section repeals all unwritten r [illegible] of law upon the s [illegible] to English cases. I [illegible] Legislature are its proper critics If it [illegible] law which it was meant to replace, it [illegible] to those for whom it was intended. I shall accordingly content myself with a very short description of the contents of the remainder of the Act, referring for a full explanation of the matter to the Act itself.

Scheme of Part II

The general scheme of Part II, which relates to Proof and consists of four chapters, containing forty-five sections, may be expressed in the following propositions:

Judicial notice

[170] 1. Certain facts are so notorious in themselves, or are stated in so authentic a manner in well-known and accessible publications, that they require no proof. The Court, if it does not know them, can inform itself upon them without formally taking evidence. These facts are said to be judicially noticed

Oral Evidence

2 All facts except the contents of documents may be proved by oral evidence, which must in all cases be direct. That is, it must consist of a declaration by the witness that he perceived by his own senses the fact to which he testifies.

Documents.

3. The contents of documents must be proved either by the production of the document, which is called primary evidence, or by copies or oral accounts of the contents, which are called secondary evidence. Primary evidence is required as a rule, but this is subject to seven important exceptions in which secondary evidence may be given. The most important of these are (1) cases in which the document is in the possession of the adverse party, in which case the adverse party must in general (though there are several exceptions) have notice to produce the document before secondary evidence of it can be given.

And (2) cases in which certified copies of public documents are admissible in place of the documents themselves.

4. Many classes of documents which are defined in the Act, are presumed to be what they purport to be, but this presumption is liable to be rebutted. Two sets of presumptions will sometimes apply to the same document. For [171] instance what purports to be a certified copy of a record of evidence is produced. It must by section 76 be presumed to be an accurate copy of the record of evidence. By section 80 the facts stated in the record itself as to the circumstances under which it was taken, e g., that it was read over to the witness in a language which he understood, must be presumed to be true.

Writings when exclusive evidence.

5. When a contract, grant, or other disposition of property is reduced to writing, the writing itself (or secondary evidence of its contents) is not only the best, but is the only admissible evidence of the matter which it contains. It cannot be varied by oral evidence, except in certain specified cases.

[illegible]

understood and borne in mind, the details will be easily mastered when the occasion for applying them arises The provisions in the Act are all made in order to meet real difficulties which arose in practice in England, and which must of necessity arise over and over again, and give occasion to litigation unless they are specifically provided for beforehand

Principle of provisions in documentary evidence.

One single principle runs through all the propositions relating to documentary evidence It is that the very object for which writing is used is to perpetuate the memory of what is written down, [172] and so to furnish permanent proof of it. In order that full effect may be given to this, two things are necessary, namely, that the document itself should, whenever it is possible, [illegible] that if it purports to be a final [illegible] case of a written contract, it [illegible] by word of mouth If the first of these rules were not observed the benefit of writing would be lost. There is no use in writing a thing down unless the writing is read If the second rule were not observed people would never know when a question was settled, as they would be able to play fast and loose with their writings.

By bearing these leading principles in mind the details and exceptions will become simple. Their practical importance is indeed as nothing in comparison to the importance of the rules which they qualify.

The third part of the Act, which contains three chapters (Chapters VII, VIII and IX) and sixty-seven sections, relates to the production and effect of evidence Chapter VII, which relates to the burden of proof, deals with a subject which requires a little explanation. This is the subject of presumptions. Like most other words introduced into the law of Evidence, it has various meanings, and it has besides a history to which I shall refer very shortly.

In times when the true theory of proof was very imperfectly understood, inasmuch as physical science, by the progress of which that theory was gradually discovered, [173] was in its infancy, numerous attempts were made to construct theories as to the weight of evidence which should supply the want of one founded on observation In some cases this was effected by requiring the testimony of a certain number of witnesses in particular cases; such a fact must be proved by two witnesses, such another by four, and so on. In other cases particular items of evidence were regarded as full proof, half full proof, proof less than half full, and proof more than half full

The doctrine of presumptions was closely connected with this theory Presumptions were inferences which the Judges were directed to draw from certain states of facts in certain cases, and these presumptions were allowed a certain amount of weight in the scale of proof; such a presumption and such evidence amounted to full proof, such another to half full, and so on. The very irregular manner in which the English law of evidence grew up has had, amongst other effects, that of making it an uncertain and difficult question how far the theory of presumptions, and the other theories of which they formed a part, affect English law, but substantially the result is somewhat as follows.—

Presumptions are of four kinds according to English law:

1. Conclusive presumptions. These are rare, but when they occur they provide that certain modes of proof shall not be liable to contradiction.

2. Presumptions which affect the ordinary rule as to the burden of proof that he who affirms must prove. He [174] who affirms that a man is dead must usually prove it, but if he shows that the man has not been heard of for seven years, he shifts the burden of proof on his adversary.

3. There are certain presumptions which, though liable to be rebutted, are regarded by English law as being something more than mere maxims, though it is by no means easy to say how much more. An instance of such a presumption is to be found in the rule that recent possession of stolen goods unexplained raises a presumption that the possessor is either the thief or a receiver.

4. Bare presumptions of facts, which are nothing but arguments to which the Court attaches whatever value it pleases

Presumptions

Chapter VII of the Evidence Act deals with this subject as follows:—First it lays down the general principles which regulate the burden of proof (sections 101—106). It then enumerates the cases in which the burden of proof is determined in particular cases, not by the relation of the parties to the cause but by presumptions (sections 107—111). It notices two cases of conclusive presumptions, the presumption of legitimacy from birth during marriage (section 112), and the presumption of a valid cession of territory from the publication of a notification to that effect in the Gazette of India (section 113). This is one of several conclusive Statutory presumptions which will be found in different parts of the Statutes and Acts. Finally, it declares in section 114, that the Court may in all cases whatever draw from the facts before it whatever inferences it th[illegible] [175] [illegible] to their proper [illegible] Courts in their [illegible] law gives to a [illegible] important of them are given by way of illustration.

All notice of certain general legal principles which are sometimes called presumptions, but which in reality belong rather to the substantive law than the law of Evidence, was designedly omitted, not because the truth of those principles was denied, but because it was not considered that the Evidence Act was the proper place for them. The most important of these is the presumption, as it is sometimes called, that every one knows the law. The principle is far more correctly stated in the maxim that ignorance of the law does not excuse a breach of it, which is one of the fundamental principles of Criminal Law.

The subject of estoppels (Chapter VIII) differs from that of presumptions in the circumstance that an estoppel is a personal disqualification laid upon a person peculiarly circumstanced from proving peculiar facts. A presumption is a rule that particular inferences shall be drawn from particular facts whoever proves them. Much of the English learning connected with estoppels is extremely intricate and technical, but this arises principally from two causes, the peculiarities of English special pleading and the fact that the effect of prior judgments is usually treated by the English text writers as a branch of the law of Evidence, and not as a branch of the law of Civil Procedure.

[176] The remainde[illegible] express propositions of rules as to the [illegible] well established and understood. They [illegible] on, as they sufficiently explain their own meaning, and do not materially vary the existing law and practice.

SOME CRITICISMS ON THE ACT

[illegible]

discriminating, of others may be divided into two classes. Some there are who approve of the general principle upon which the Act proceeds (viz., that it is both possible and advisable positively to determine what is Evidence), but criticise the actual terms in which such determination is made. Others disapprove, preferring the more practical and historical method of English law which confines itself mainly to the negative task of declaring not what is but what is not Evidence.

Of the first class Mr. Whitworth in his able pamphlet on the theory of relevancy(2) while of opinion that probably no enactment in such few words as sections 6—16 brought so much assistance to the administration of Justice, says that the question yet suggests itself whether even these rules give the theory of relevancy in its simplest form, and states that they certainly do not show in themselves upon what principle it is that they have been founded Differing from the author of the Act in regard to the adequacy of his definition of relevancy as the connection of events as cause and effect, he works out from the rules propounded under the Act what he conceives to be a fuller and more satisfactory statement. He arrives by this process of exposition at exactly the same result as Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, but claims for the new rules which he suggests, that although different in form, they are identical with those of the Act in their effect.(3)

Mr. Whitworth uses the word "relevant" as Sir James Fitzjames Stephen uses it in the third chapter of his Introduction, and not as it is sometimes used as co-extensive with "admissible" What is thus meant by a relevant fact is a fact that has a certain degree of probative force. All such facts are not admissible. They may be excluded under rules of Evidence other than those which treat of relevancy. For example, as he points out, a fact may be relevant, but it may be one of a kind so easy to fabricate, or so difficult to test, or of so suspicious an origin, that it is more convenient to declare that it shall not be taken into consideration at all. With such questions he is not concerned, but only with the simpler and narrower question as to what facts are relevant in the strict sense of the term.

He points out that the [illegible] its wide sense; Chapter II of Part I with relevancy in its strict sense. The ambiguity is unfortunate. Sir Fitzjames Stephen has said that relevancy is fully defined in sections 6—11 of the Act, and until the double meaning of the

---

(1) Reynold's Theory of the Law of Evidence, 3rd Ed., 1897 Preface, vi See also observations in Preface to Rice's General Principles of the Law of Evidence word is observed, it seems, as Mr. Whitworth points out, inconsistent with this that many subsequent sections should declare certain things to be relevant as do sections 22, 23, 24, 28, 32, etc. What such sections as these have to declare is really not that the things they mention are relevant or irrelevant (using the words strictly), but (that question being decided by sections 6—16), that those things are not to be excluded or admitted under rules relating to subjects other than relevancy, which would, without the provision made, exclude or admit them

(2) The theory of relevancy for the purpose of Judicial Evidence by George Clifford Whitworth, 2nd Ed, 1881 "Mr. George Clifford Whitworth of the Bombay Civil Service has lately criticised this theory in an ingenious and able pamphlet, and the frank acceptance of his criticism by Mr Stephen enables us to enjoy the contemplation as gratifying as it is rare, of a controversy which was ended in a real [illegible] 1875-6

The theory of relevancy is concerned with the question :—Why is one thing relevant and another thing irrelevant? There must, Mr. Whitworth says, be some principle applicable to all cases by which it may be determined whether a particular fact is or is not relevant to another fact, without reference to a number of rules framed to meet different classes of cases. The purpose of judicial enquiries is not a purpose peculiar to them All men upon occasion endeavour to ascertain, as quickly and as satisfactorily as they can, whether facts unknown to them personally have or have not happened. And what is calculated to aid the human mind in such inquiries must be something capable of being defined by the enunciation of its essential difference, as well as by an enumeration of its details. Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, in the third Chapter of his Introduction to this Act, has briefly considered this question, and has said that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect: "If these two words were taken in their widest acceptation, it would be correct to say that when any theory has been formed which alleges the existence of any fact, all facts are relevant which, if that theory was true, would stand to the fact alleged to exist either in the relation of cause or in the relation of effect." Mr. Whitworth criticises this definition as follows :—"But the proviso that the words 'cause' and 'effect' must be taken in their widest acceptation does not seem to be sufficient It seems necessary rather to take them in a transcendent sense Suppose a man is charged with stabbing another, and it is alleged that at the moment of striking he uttered a certain expression. What he said is by the rules of Evidence relevant (not merely upon the issue as to his intention, but also) upon the issue whether he stabbed the man or not. But in what acceptation of the words is his expression a cause or effect of the act of stabbing? Or consider the case of the Whitechapel murder in London. Upon the issue, Did Wainwright murder Harriet Lane? it is offered in evidence that the body before the Court is that of a woman who never bore children. How is this a cause or effect of the fact in issue? The widest acceptation of the words 'cause' and 'effect' will not include such facts as these. And if we give them the meaning necessary to make true the statement that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect, then the statement itself becomes of no use, because every fact will be relevant. No doubt to a being of such capacity of intelligence as to see the whole cause of every effect and the whole effect of every cause, everything that ever happened becomes one rigid fact and nothing is irrelevant. But for human purposes there is no question that relevancy and irrelevancy are realities; the difference between the two is recognizable by an ordinarily human capacity, and must be something expressible in ordinary language."

The definition that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect, leaves us, then, in this difficulty . that if we take the words in any, even the widest comprehensible sense, the definiti[illegible] we know from our experience to be really rel[illegible] [illegible] is [illegible] istence of every other fact that did exist at the same time, then the definition includes everything, and so ceases to be a definition.

Thus the statement that relevancy means the connection of events as cause and effect, requires some addition, if the words are used in any ordinary sense, and some limitation, if they are given a transcendent sense.

Mr. Stephen, using the words in the latter sense, imposes one limitation and declares the practical existence of another. He says, (a) the rule is to be subject to the caution that every step in the connection must be made out and (b) that wide, general causes, which apply to all occurrences, are in most cases, admitted, and do not require proof. The first of these limitations goes far to get rid of the objection that everything is relevant The connection must be discernible, and every step in the connection proved or presumable. But if it is meant that each step must be recognizable as a proceeding from cause to effect, then, as shown above, things really relevant will be excluded And if any other kind of connection will suffice, then it may be said of both the limitations, that they are of little service, that the help they give in deducing practical rules from the general principle is small. For those rules are least likely to be appealed to in the case of wide general causes, or occurrences, the connection of which with the fact in issue is not traceable. The object of the rules is to keep out irrelevant matter that is brought forward As a fact, such matter is submitted as evidence every day Such matter does not usually consist of wide general causes that are admitted, nor of occurrences that have no connection with the facts in issue, and therefore these limitations do not exclude it Therefore these limitations are not sufficient.

Now as the theory propounded falls short of defining what relevancy is, so we may expect to find in the rules themselves things that cannot be explained by the theory. Again, as the rules are not deduced from first principles but are generalization from actual experience, it is possible that in some unusual cases the language of the rules may not prescribe with accuracy the true limit of the relevancy And, thirdly, and for the same reason, it is possible that the rules laid down may not be in every part strictly confined to the subject of relevancy

Thus it is not immediately apparent, from the theory set forth, why one part of a transaction throws light upon another part which is so distinct from the first as to form in itself a fact in issue When Mr Hall shot three or four Gaekwari sowars, and it was a fact in issue whether he shot a particular one, no doubt the fact that he shot the others increased the probability of his having shot the one in question. But the theory does not afford a ready explanation of this.

By section 7 those facts are relevant to facts in issue 'which constitute the state of things under which they happene[illegible] some persons of rioting, and, the object of th[illegible] Hindu religious Reformers, he commenced hi[illegible] of Religion and religious Reformation down [illegible] before whom the case came on appeal, remarked upon the irrelevancy of th[illegible] and of course it was utterly useless, but the rule quoted does not [illegible] exclude evidence of it. By the same section, facts which afford an 'opportun[illegible] for the occurrence of a f[illegible] facts are relevant [illegible] does not explain why. [illegible] rifle, gave him an oppor[illegible] equal opportunity of shooting [illegible] ticular bearing upon the fact in issue to make it relevant is not expla[illegible]

Section 8 is partly concerned with the admissibility of evid[illegible] ments. It includes the substance of the English rule that declar[illegible] are part of the res gestæ may be proved. But this has nothing to [illegible] vancy strictly so called. (v. post, remarks upon Ill. (j) of this [illegible]

Section 9 declares facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue to be relevant, but prescribes no test of the necessity. Is there no danger of useless matter being brought upon the record under this rule on the ground that it explains or introduces something to follow ? It is true there is a provision, under the law for the examination of witnesses, that when either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask in what manner the fact would be relevant, and need not admit it unless he thinks it would be relevant (section 136, Evidence Act); but still whether or not the fact is necessary to explain or introduce may be a disputable matter. The first illustration says that when the question is whether a given document is the Will of A, the state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts Now, it is obvious that some particulars about the property would be useful to be known, and some would be useless. So the rule seems partly to fail of its object, in that it does not define what class of particulars is relevant.

Section 10 is a rule relating to one particular kind of transaction, conspiracy; and section 12 refers only to the question of damages. But the mind sets to work to ascertain such facts as these in just the same way as any other facts, and it does not appear why special rules are requisite. When any person is charged with conspiracy, one of the facts in issue is the existence of the conspiracy, its absolute existence without reference to the accused person; and from the nature of the thing itself, requiring as it does the action of more than one mind, it is to be expected that causes of it and effects of it will be found existing outside the mind, and without the knowledge, of a particular person. Therefore no rule is required to make such causes or effects or other connected facts relevant to the fact in issue.

But the rule goes on to declare that such facts are relevant also for the purpose of showing that the accused person was a party to the conspiracy. Well, if such facts will show that, clearly they are in very truth relevant. But it is obvious that very many such facts will have no bearing whatever upon the question of the accused person's complicity. And it seems an error in the rule to declare all such facts relevant for that purpose, instead of showing which are and which are not Consider some such conspiracy as that which went by the name of Fenianism Suppose a man is being tried in Ireland for so conspiring. Suppose he had been in prison for a month before trial. Suppose the Court had received abundant evidence of the existence, nature and objects of the conspiracy. Still, under this rule the Court could not refuse to listen to witnesses just arrived from America stating that a party of Fenians had burnt a farm there a fortnight before the day of trial—thus to prove the accused person's complicity in the conspiracy.

Section 14 declares that facts which show the existence of any state of mind are relevant when the existence of such 'state of mind' is in issue or relevant. Looking at the illustration, it seems doubtful whether the expression 'state of mind' is wide enough. One of the states of mind mentioned is 'knowledge.' Illustration (c) is an example of this. There the question is whether a man knew that his dog was ferocious; and the facts that the dog had bitten several persons and that they had complained to the owner are relevant. These facts are really connected with the fact in issue through the owner's knowledge. But Illus. (a) also purports to be an example of fact being relevant as tending to show knowledge. The question there is whether a person found in possession of a stolen article knew that it was stolen; and it is said that the fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles to be stolen. No doubt the fact is relevant, but it is not through the receiver's knowledge that it is connected with the fact in issue. What it proves is not a state of mind, but a habit, a habit which makes the receiving with a guilty knowledge a more likely fact than it would be without proof of the habit."

Mr. Whitworth then proceeds to propound his theory of relevancy with the new rules which he deduces from it:—

"Every fact in issue may be affirmed or denied, and that not merely in the bare form in which it may be stated as a fact in issue, but in every detail of the meaning of that statement The whole includes the part, if any fact is affirmed as a whole, any part of it may be affirmed or denied; anything implied by an affirmation is really part of that affirmation and may be expressly affirmed or denied. It may be in issue merely, Did A murder B? But if, as the affirmation is inquired into, it is found to mean that A murdered B at a particular hour and a particular place, then, that A was in that place at that hour may be affirmed or denied The issue may be merely, Did Wainwright murder Harriet Lane? But if those affirming it produce a body saying it is Harriet Lane's, then anything showing that it is or is not may be put forward Or the issue may be, did the accused person attempt to poison Colonel Phayre? But [illegible] the accused person put arsenic into a [illegible] of Colonel Phayre's habits, he knew [illegible] Phayre's habit of drinking sherbet at a particular time and the prisoner's knowledge of this are parts of the fact in issue

But besides the matters expressly or virtually in issue, some surrounding matters may aid in determining an unknown fact. Knowing that the progress of events is from cause to effect, any fact that seems likely to have caused the fact to be determined, or any fact that suggests the fact to be determined as a cause of it, may be of use

Again, one cause may have many effects and the cause may be ascertainable from one effect as well as from another If then in endeavouring to ascertain whether a particular event has happened we see some other event that suggests as its cause something that would probably have caused the things we want to ascertain then that event will be of use For example, we want to ascertain whether A stabbed B, and we hear on the occasion on which he is said to have done so, A said to B, "then die" Now this seems to imply just such volition employing the tongue as would employing an armed hand stab B. The words and the fact in issue are effects of the same volition. Similarly were A charged with poisoning B, the fact that before the death of B he procured poison of the kind that was administered to B would be relevant. The procuring the poison is an effect of a cause which might be the cause of the fact in issue.

Thus there are four classes of fact which aid in determining a fact in issue:

(1) Any part of the fact alleged or any fact implied by the fact alleged;

(2) Any cause of the fact;

(3) Any effect of the fact;

(4) Any fact having a common cause with the fact in issue

But it is not the whole of these facts that are of use. Some facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways mentioned may be of a general nature, existing whether or not the fact in issue happened and therefore indicating nothing as to whether it happened or not For example: A is charged with the murder of B by pushing him over a precipice. Here the fall of B to the ground after he was pushed over is as much a cause of his death as the pushing over, and as much an effect of the push as his death is But gravitation is a general fact and exists all the same whether B went over the precipice or not and proof of it is therefore needless.

Besides such general facts there may be facts connected with the fact in issue in one of the four ways, but with such a very slight bearing upon it that their probative force is quite insignificant, as, for instance, if a boyish quarrel of fifty years ago were brought forward to prove ill-feeling between two men who had joined in partnership twenty years before.

To meet both these classes of cases, one proviso only is requisite, namely, that no fact is relevant to another unless it makes the existence of that other more likely. It is not necessary to say anything of the degree of probability the fact must raise. The test is obvious. The Judge who has eventually to decide whether the fact in issue is proved or not, must decide whether the fact offered in evidence will, if proved, aid him in that decision

The theory, then, so far as we have gone, is this: Those facts are relevant to a fact in issue, the existence of which makes the existence of the fact in issue more probable, and they are found to be connected with the fact in issue in one of these ways, as being, (a) part of the fact in issue, (b) cause of it, (c) effect of it, or (d) an effect of a cause of it.

But as, relying upon the principle that effects follow causes, we take from the surrounding circumstances facts that appear to be probable causes or probable effects of a fact unknown, as a means of proving it: so, upon the same principle we may first consider what would be probable causes or effects of the fact unknown and look upon their absence as a means of disproving it.

Therefore in addition to the four classes of facts above mentioned, which may be said to be positively relevant, we have the following four classes which may be called negatively relevant · (a) facts showing the absence of what might be expected as part of a fact in issue or of what seems to be implied by a fact in issue; (b) facts showing the absence of cause of the fact in issue; (c) facts se e.
in issue more likely, so those facts only are negatively relevant which make the existence of the fact in issue less likely.

Again, as facts are relevant only by reason of their being connected with the fact in issue, it follows, that to disprove the connection of an alleged relevant fact with the fact in issue is as efficacious as to disprove the existence of the fact. To show, for instance, that an alleged cause of a fact in issue would not really have as effect the fact in issue, or to show that an alleged effect of a fact in issue is really the effect (hat the alleged facts never existed. ant fact may be disputed, so it ma hat is to say, all facts which tend to prove or disprove the connection in the way of relevancy between facts in issue and alleged relevant facts are themselves relevant.

As relevant facts may be proved and as the mode of proof of any fact is (beyond the affirmation of witnesses of the fact) by means of facts relevant to it, it follows that "facts relevant to relevant facts are themselves relevant."

These considerations suggested to Mr. Whitworth the following rules, which he considered sufficient to decide, and the simplest test by which to decide, whether any fact offered in evidence is relevant.—

RULE I.—No fact is relevant which does not make the existence of a fact in issue more likely or unlikely, and that to such a degree as the Judge considers will aid him in deciding the issue.

RULE II.—Subject to Rule I, the following facts are relevant:—

(1) Facts which are part of, or which are implied by, a fact in issue; or which show the absence of what might be expected as a part of, or would seem to be implied by, a fact in issue;

(2) Facts which are a cause, or which show the absence of what might be expected as a cause, of a fact in issue,

(3) Facts which are an effect, or which show the absence of what might be expected as an effect, of a fact in issue;

(4) Facts which are an effect of a cause, or which show the absence of what might be expected as an effect of a cause, of a fact in issue.

RULE III.—Facts which affirm or deny the relevancy of facts alleged to be relevant under Rule II are relevant.

RULE IV.—Facts relevant to relevant facts are relevant.

Mr. Whitworth gives a single example of each kind of relevancy according to his classification, taking all examples from a simple case, that of Muller, who was tried for the murder of an old gentleman, a banker, named Briggs, by beating him with a life-preserver, as they were travelling together by rail, and then throwing him out of the train Muller tried to make his escape to America, but was pursued and arrested on his arrival there. One point urged in the prisoner's defence was that he was not physically strong enough to commit the murder as alleged. His object appeared to be robbery

The kinds of relevancy according to Rule II are four; but, as the first clause contains two classes with an apparent difference, they may, Mr Whitworth says. be taken for the purpose of illustration as five; and as each kind may be either positive or negative, the number becomes ten And as by Rule III the connection of a fact with the fact in issue may be disputed as well as its existence, the number of illustrations required is twenty.

These he gives in order as cited in the footnote(1) —

---

(1) (a) Part of fact in issue—It would be relevant to prove that, at the time the offence was said to be committed, a witness by the roadside got a glimpse, as the train passed, of the prisoner standing up in the carriage with his hand raised above his head

(b) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that at the time in question, the prisoner had occasion to close a ventilator in the top of the carriage.

(c) Absence of what might be expected as part of the fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that no noise was heard by the occupants of the next compartment

(d) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that the occupants of the next compartment were fast asleep

(e) Fact implied by a fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that Muller was armed with a weapon

(f) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that such a weapon could not have caused the marks found on the body

(g) Absence of fact implied by fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that Muller was physically a very weak man

(h) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that under the circumstances but little strength was required

(i) Cause—It would be relevant to show that Mr Briggs had done Muller some great injury

(j) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller was not aware that it was Mr Briggs who had done him an injury

(k) Absence of cause—It would be relevant to show that Mr Briggs had nothing valuable about him to tempt a robber

(l) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller had reason to believe that Mr Briggs had valuables in his possession.

(m) Effect.—It would be relevant to show that immediately after the occurrence Muller took passage for America.

(n) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller had sudden and urgent business that called him to America

(o) Absence of effect—It would be relevant to show that the railway carriage bore no marks of a struggle

(p) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Mr Briggs was too old and feeble to offer any considerable resistance

(q) Effect of a cause of a fact in issue.—It would be relevant to show that Muller had just before provided himself with a life-preserver

(r) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller anticipated violence to himself on the day in question.

(s) Absence of effect of cause of fact in issue—It would be relevant to show that Muller and Mr Briggs had travelled together for a long distance before the

After giving this single example of each kind of relevancy according to his classification, Mr. Whitworth proceeds to decide by reference to the above rules all the cases quoted in illustration of the rules set forth in this Act, and shows that his rules are identical in effect with the Law by reference to them of the illustrations in the Act as follows:—

SECTION 6: Illustration (a), (1)—For upon examination every part of a transaction will be found to be connected with every other part as cause or effect or as effects of one cause.

Illustration (b), (2).—That war was waged is one of the facts in issue These occurrences are part of that fact.

Illustration (c), (3).—Besides the fact of the publication, there may be in issue the question of B's good faith or malice, of the sense in which the words were used, whether the occasion was privileged or not. Other parts of the correspondence, may be causes or effects of the publication, or effects of B's good faith or malice, or effects of the words having been used in a particular sense, or effects of a relationship between the parties showing that the occasion was or was not privileged.

Illustration (d), (4).—Each delivery is a relevant fact as being part of the fact in issue: Did the goods pass from B to A?

SECTION 7 Illustration (a), (5)—The first fact is relevant as a fact implied by the fact in issue: and the second is relevant as a cause of the fact in issue.

Illustration (b), (6)—The marks are relevant facts as effects of part of the act in issue.

Illustration (c), (7)—That B was ill before the symptoms ascribed to poison is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the fact in [illegible] : that B was well is rele- [illegible] re, if it is alleged that the [illegible] t in issue (If the opporfatal occurrence, and that through all that time Muller had equal opportunity to attack Mr Briggs and had not done so.

(t) Disputing the connection—It would be relevant to show that Muller had ascertained how far Mr Briggs was going to travel, and that he (Muller) could best effect his escape by getting out at some place the train came to after the occurrence

(1) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him Whatever was said or done by A to B or the bystanders at the beating, or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction, is a relevant fact.

(2) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed, troops are attacked and gaols are broken open The occurrence of these facts is relevant as forming part of the general transaction, though A may not have been present at all of them.

(3) A sues B for a libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence. Letters between the parties relating to the object out of which the libel arose and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained are relevant facts though they do not contain the libel itself

(4) The question is whether certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A. The goods were delivered to several intermediate parties successively. Each delivery is a relevant fact

(5) The question is whether A robbed B. The facts that shortly before the robbery B went to a fair with money in his possession and that he showed it, or mentioned the fact that he had it to a third person are relevant.

(6) The question is whether A murdered B Marks on the ground produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed are relevant facts.

(7) The question is whether A poisoned B The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison and habits of B known to A which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison are relevant facts.

SECTION 8: Illustration (a), (1)—The facts are relevant as causes of the fact in issue.

Illustration (b), (2).—The fact is relevant as a cause of the fact in issue.

Illustration (c), (3)—The fact is relevant as an effect of a cause of the fact in issue.

Illustration (d), (4).—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of the fact in issue.

Illustration (e), (5).—The facts are relevant; for they are all effects of the immediate cause (namely, A's resolution to commit the offence) of the fact in issue.

Illustration (f), (6).—The latter fact is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue, and the former as a cause of the latter. As to the sense in which C's statement is relevant, see remarks below, illustration (j), post.

Illustration (g), (7)—For A's going away without making any answer is an effect of the fact in issue, and the other two facts are causes of that effect.

Illustration (h), (8)—The first fact is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue, and the second as a cause of that effect.

Illustration (i), (9)—The facts are relevant as effects of a fact in issue

Illustration (j), (10)—The facts are relevant as effects of the fact in issue The illustration goes on to say that the fact that without making a complaint she said that she had been ravished, is not relevant as conduct under section 8 though it may be relevant as a dying declaration or as corroborative evidence Nowhere, as Mr. Whitworth points out, the strict use of the term 'relevant'

---

(1) A is tried for the murder of B That A murdered C, that B knew that A had murdered C, and that B had tried to extort money from A, by threatening to make his knowledge public are relevant

(2) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money B denies the making of the bond The fact that at the time when the bond was alleged to be made, B required money for a particular purpose, is relevant

(3) A is tried for the murder of B by poison The fact that before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B, is relevant

(4) The question is whether a certain document is the Will of A The facts that not long before the date of the alleged Will, A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged Will relate, that he consulted vakils in reference to making the Will and that he caused drafts of other Wills to be prepared of which he did not approve are relevant

(5) A is accused of a crime The facts that either before or at the time of or after the alleged crime, A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself or that he destroyed or concealed evidence or prevented the presence, or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned persons to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant

(6) The question is whether A robbed B The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence "The police are coming to look for the man who robbed B," and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant

(7) The question is whether A owes B 10,000 rupees The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing, "I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10,000 rupees," and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts

(8) The question is whether A committed a crime The fact that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal, and the contents of the letter are relevant

(9) A is accused of a crime The facts that after the commission of the alleged crime he absconded, or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant

(10) The question is whether A was ravished The facts that shortly after the alleged rape she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which and the terms in which the complaint was made, are relevant has been departed from. That the woman said she had been ravished is relevant, though it does not follow that it is admissible. The Act declares when statements of fact in issue or relevant facts may be proved. When the statement is a dying declaration is one instance; that such statements may under certain circumstances be proved as corroborative evidence is another, and another is to this effect, that when the conduct of any person is a relevant fact, his statements accompanying or explaining that conduct, or statements made to him or in his hearing affecting that conduct, may be proved. This has nothing to do with relevancy, and the rule seems out of place in section 8. It is because the woman's statement without complaint is not admissible under this rule, that the Act says that statement is "not relevant as conduct under this section." So above in Illustrations (f), (g), (h), some of the relevant facts are statements. They are also admissible as being connected with conduct. They are simply pronounced relevant. It is plain that it is meant that they may be proved. But that the statements are relevant in the strict sense is sufficient for the present purpose.

Illustration (k), (1).—The facts in the first sentence of the illustration are relevant as effects of the fact in issue. The fact that he said he had been robbed without making any complaint, is relevant, though whether it is admissible or not depends upon the law relating to the question what statements may be proved.

SECTION 9: Illustration (a), (2).—The Act says the state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts. But it may be stated absolutely that so much of the state of A's property or of his family as shows probable cause for his making such a Will as the alleged one, or as shows the absence of such probable cause, is relevant.

Illustration (b), (3).—Upon this issue so much of the position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published as shows cause for B's publishing a true libel or a false one, or the absence of such causes and so much as bears upon the matter asserted in the libel as cause of its truth or otherwise, is relevant.

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are, the illustration says, irrelevant, because they do not make any fact in issue more or less likely to have happened. But the fact that there was a dispute is relevant if it affected any part of the position and relations of the parties defined above.

Illustration (c), (4)—The absconding is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue

The fact of the sudden call is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue and the alleged relevant fact.

The details further than as stated in the illustration do not make the fact in issue more likely or unlikely to have happened.

(1) The question is whether A was robbed. The fact that, soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which and the terms in which the complaint was made, are relevant.

(2) The question is whether a given document is the Will of A.

(3) A sues B for a libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A; B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true.

(4) A is accused of a crime. The fact that soon after the commission of the crime A absconded from his house, is relevant under s. 8 as conduct subsequent to, and affected by facts in issue The fact that at the time he left home, he had sudden and urgent business at the place to which he went, is relevant as tending to explain the fact that he left home suddenly. The details of the business on which he left are not relevant except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden or urgent.

Illustration (d), (1).—This statement is relevant as affirming the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue (B's persuasion) and the relevant fact (C's leaving A's service).

Illustration (e), (2).—B's statement is relevant as an effect of a fact in issue.

Illustration (f), (3).—That the riot occurred is a fact in issue, and the cries of the mob are relevant as parts or as effects of the fact.

SECTION 10: Illustration, (4).—And any of these facts that are so connected with the other fact in issue, A's complicity, as to make it more or less likely, are relevant for that purpose also.

SECTION 11: Illustration (a), (5).—Presence at Lahore is relevant as denying a part of the fact in issue. The other fact is relevant as making a part of the fact in issue unlikely.

Illustration (b), (6).—That the crime was committed is adduced as an effect of the fact in issue that A committed it. To show that some other person committed it is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue and relevant fact; and to show that no other person committed it is relevant as affirming that connection.

SECTION 12: (7).—For the amount of damages is a fact in issue, and any fact which will enable the Court to determine it will be found to be connected with the fact in issue in one of the ways specified.

SECTION 13: Illustration, (8).—The deed is relevant as a cause of the fact in issue. The mortgage is relevant as an effect of the father's right, which is relevant as a cause of A's right. The subsequent grant of A's is relevant as denying a fact implied by that relevant fact. Particular instances of exercise

---

(1) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A. C, on leaving A's service, says to A, "I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer." This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct which is relevant as a fact in issue.

(2) A accused of theft, is seen to give the stolen property to B who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says, as he delivers it, A says 'you are to hide this.' B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction.

(3) A is tried for a riot and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob. The cries of the mob are relevant, as explanatory of the nature of the transaction.

(4) Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen.

The fact that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writing advocating the object in view in Agra, and F transmitted from Delhi to G at Cabul, the money which C had collected at Calcutta, and the contents of a letter written by H giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant to prove the existence of the conspiracy, although he may have been ignorant of all of them, and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it.

(5) The question is whether A committed a crime at Calcutta on a certain day. The fact that, on that day, A was at Lahore is relevant. The fact that near the time when the crime was committed A was at a distance from the place where it was committed, which would render it highly improbable, though not impossible, that he committed it, is relevant.

(6) The question is whether A committed a crime. The circumstances are such that the crime must have been committed by A, B, C or D. Every fact which shows that the crime could have been committed by no one else and that it was not committed by either B, C or D, is relevant.

(7) In suits in which damages are claimed, any fact which will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages which ought to be awarded is relevant.

(8) The question is whether A has a right to a fishery. A deed conferring the fishery on A's ancestors, a mortgage of the fishery by A's father, a subsequent grant of the fishery by A's father irreconcilable with the mortgage, particular instances in which A's father exercised the right, or in which the exercise of the right was stopped by A's neighbours, are relevant facts.

of the right are relevant facts as effects of the father's right. And instances in which the exercise of the right were stopped are relevant as contradicting those relevant facts.

SECTION 14 : Illustration (a), (1).—The fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as an effect of a habit of receiving stolen goods, the habit being relevant as a cause of his receiving the particular article with a knowledge that it was stolen.

Illustration (b), (2).—The fact is relevant as effects of a habit, which habit is a cause of his delivering the particular piece with a knowledge that it was counterfeit.

Illustration (c), (3) —The facts are relevant as the causes of a fact in issue, B's knowledge that the dog was ferocious.

Illustration (d), (4).—For A's knowledge on the previous occasions is a cause of his knowledge on the occasion in question, and that there was not time for the previous bills to be transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person is a cause of his knowledge on previous occasions, and the fact that A accepted the bills is an affirmation of the connection of cause and effect between the fact concerning time and the fact of A's knowledge.

Illustration (e), (5) —The fact of previous publications is relevant as an effect of the same cause as that of which the fact in issue is an effect.

The fact that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, is relevant as alleging absence of fact in issue. The fact that A reported the matter as he heard it is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the two facts, the malicious intention and the publication.

Illustration (f), (6).—For A's good faith is in issue, i.e., did A, when he represented C as solvent, think him solvent ? is in issue As C's insolvency may be put forward on one side as a cause of A's thinking him not solvent, so, that his neighb[illegible] him to be solvent, may be put for[illegible] also of A's thinking him solvent. [illegible] of causes of a fact in issue

(1) A is accused of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article The fact that at the same time he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles of which he was in possession to be stolen

(2) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to another person a piece of counterfeit coin which at the time when he delivered it, he knew to be counterfeit The fact that at the time of its delivery A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin is relevant. (The rest of the illustration was added after Mr Whitworth's pamphlet, by Act III of 1891).

(3) A sues B for damage done by a dog of B's which B knew to be ferocious The fact that the dog had previously bitten X, Y, and Z and that they had made complaints to B are relevant

(4) The question is whether A, the acceptor of a bill of exchange, knew that the name of the payee was fictitious.

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person, is relevant, as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person

(5) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B The fact of previous publications by A respecting B, showing ill-will, on the part of A towards B is relevant as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that B repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B

(6) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, whereby B, being induced to trust C, who was insolvent, suffered loss The fact that, at the time when A represented C to be solvent, C was supposed to be solvent by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him is relevant, as showing that A made the representation in good faith.

Illustration (g), (1)—The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant. For it is in issue,—was B's contract with A? Therefore that A contracted for the same piece of work with C is relevant as showing absence of cause to contract with B, and that he paid C is relevant as an effect of the relevant fact that he contracted with C.

Illustration (h), (2).—The fact of notice is relevant as a cause of his knowledge that the real owner could be found.

The other fact is relevant as showing that the alleged cause of the fact in issue had not the effect of causing the fact in issue.

Illustration (i), (3)—For A's intention is a fact in issue. The fact is one which may continue through a space of time, and the previous shooting is an effect of it.

Illustration (j), (4).—For the intention to cause fear is a fact in issue. It is a fact capable of prolonged existence, and the previous letters may be effects of it.

Should it, however, be objected that the fact in issue is intention at a particular moment and not intention through a space of time, Mr Whitworth's reply is, that previous intention is a cause of subsequent intention, or both are effects of the same cause.

Illustration (k), (5)—The expressions are relevant as effects of the cause of the fact in issue or as showing absence of cause of the fact in issue.

Illustration (l), (6)—The statements are relevant as effects of effects of the fact in issue.

Illustration (m), (7).—The statements are relevant as effects of the fact in issue.

Illustration (n), (8)—The drawing of B's attention is relevant as a cause of B's knowledge, which is a fact in issue.

The fact that B was habitually negligent is irrelevant, for it is not connected with the fact in issue.

---

(1) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B upon a house of which A is owner, by the order of C, a contractor. A's defence is that B's contract was with C. The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant, as proving that A did, in good faith, make over to C the management of the work in question, so that C was in a position to contract with B on C's account and not as agent for A.

(2) A is accused of the dishonest misappropriation of property which he had found, and the question is whether, when he appropriated it, he believed in good faith that the real owner could not be found. The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was, is relevant, as showing that A did not in good faith believe that the real owner of the property could not be found. The fact that A knew, or had reason to believe, that the notice was given fraudulently by C, who had heard of the loss of the property and wished to set up a false claim to it, is relevant as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith.

(3) A is charged with shooting at B with intent to kill him. The fact of A's having previously shot at B may be proved.

(4) A is charged with sending threatening letters to B. Threatening letters previously sent by A to B may be proved, as showing the intention of the letters.

(5) The question is whether A has been guilty of cruelty towards B, his wife. Expressions of their feeling towards each other shortly before or after the alleged cruelty are relevant facts.

(6) The question is whether A's death was caused by poison. Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms, are relevant facts.

(7) The question is what was the state of his health at the time when an assurance on his life was effected. Statements made by A as to the state of his health at, or near, the time in question are relevant facts.

(8) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use whereby A was injured. The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage is relevant. The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let for hire is irrelevant.

Illustration (o), (1).—The fact is relevant as an effect of a fact in issue, B's intention

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people is irrelevant, for it is not connected with a fact in issue.

Mr. Whitworth adds that this case, in which a habit is declared irrelevant, has some resemblance to that of Illustration (a), where a habit is relevant, but that there is a real difference between the two. He says: "The man who habitually shoots at people with intent to murder them has in each case a definite intention of killing the particular person shot at. There is not, as far as the facts are stated, any the previous shooting and property the ulterior cor supplies the connection."

Illustration (p), (2).—The first fact is relevant as an effect of the cause of his committing the crime.

The second fact is irrelevant, as it is not connected with the fact in issue, namely, whether he committed the particular crime.

SECTION 15: Illustration (a), (3).—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of the fact in issue.

Illustration (b), (4)—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of A's making the particular false entry intentionally.

Illustration (c), (5)—The facts are relevant as effects of the cause of the intentional delivery of the rupee in question.

SECTION 16: Illustration (a), (6)—The facts are relevant as causes of the fact in issue

Illustration (b), (7)—The facts are relevant, the first as a cause of the fact in issue, and the second as affirming the connection of cause and effect between the first and the fact in issue.

Mr. Whitworth was unfortunately prevented by want of leisure from dealing generally with the criticisms which his essay provoked. One of these was that his first rule was a practical abandonment of the scientific form of

---

(1) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead. The fact that A on other occasions shot at B is relevant as showing his intention to shoot B. The fact that he was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant

(2) A is tried for a crime. The fact that he said something indicating an intention to commit that particular crime is relevant. The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class, is irrelevant.

(3) A is accused of burning down his house in order to obtain money for which it is insured. The facts that A lived in several houses successively, each of which he insured, in each of which a fire occurred, and after each of which fires A received payment from a different insurance office, are relevant, as tending to show that the fires were not accidental.

(4) A is employed to receive money from the debtors of B. It is his duty to make entries in a book, showing the amount received by him. He makes an entry showing that on a particular occasion he received less than he really did receive. The question is whether this false entry was accidental or intentional. The facts that other entries made by A in the same book are false, and that the false entry is in each case in favour of A are relevant.

(5) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to B a counterfeit rupee. The question is whether the delivery of the rupee was accidental. The facts that soon before or soon after the delivery to B, A delivered counterfeit rupees to C, D and E are relevant, as showing that the delivery to B was not accidental.

(6) The question is whether a particular letter was despatched. The facts that it was the ordinary course of business for all letters put in a certain place to be carried to the post, and that that particular letter was put into that place are relevant.

(7) The question is whether a particular letter reached A. The fact that it was posted in due course, and was not returned through the Dead Letter Office are relevant.

the others. Mr. Whitworth's answer to this in his Preface to the Second Edition of his Pamphlet was that an examination of the connection of the first with the other rules would show that their scientific form was of independent value. The second, third and fourth rules supplied, he contended, a definition of relevancy and would be complete if the subject were the theory of relevancy absolutely. The qualification applied by the first rule was required, because the subject is the theory of relevancy for the purpose of judicial evidence. The theory is one thing: its application to a particular purpose is another. He added:—"It might be well to have rules that would express at once both the principle and its limitation. Failing this, I have propounded one rule (an unscientific one) as to the limitation and three others (scientific in form) as to the principle. But the importance or unimportance of the failure is to be measured by considering whether questions of difficulty in actual practice usually relate to the limitation of the principle or to the principle itself, in other words, whether, for the solution of such questions unscientific or scientific rules are provided. Now the first rule relates chiefly to what Sir James Stephen speaks of as "wide general causes which apply to all occurrences, are, in most cases, admitted, and do not require proof; and the test in cases of disputed relevancy will, I think, usually be found to be one of the other, the scientific rules."

The theory contained in Mr. Whitworth's essay was subsequently adopted by Sir James Stephen himself in the earlier edition of his Digest of the Law of Evidence.(1) In the present edition Sir J F Stephen substituted another definition of relevancy in place of that contained in the earlier editions and taken from Mr. Whitworth's essay, not as Sir J F Stephen observes, because he thought the former definition wrong, but because it gave rather the principle on which the rule depends than a convenient practical rule (2)

Dr. Wharton(3) while defining relevancy as that which conduces to the proof of a pertinent hypothesis, a pertinent hypothesis being one which, if sustained, would logically influence the issue, and adopting several of Sir J F Stephen's positions, offers two criticisms as explaining why he cannot accept his scheme as affording a complete solution of the difficulties which beset this branch of evidence. In the first place, the words "cause," and "effect" are open, when used in this connection, to an objection which, though subtle is in some cases fatal The "cause" of a fact in issue, it is alleged, is relevant, yet whether such a cause produced such a fact is the question the action is often instituted to try; and it is a petitio principii to say that the "cause" is relevant because it is the "cause" and that it is shown to be the cause because it is relevant. In the second place, the distinction between "facts in issue" and "fact relevant to fact in issue" cannot be sustained. An issue is never raised as to an evidential fact, the only issues the law knows are those which affirm or deny conclusions from one or more evidential facts Thus, Sir J. F. Stephen when explaining the supposed distinction says. "A is indicted for the murder of B and pleads guilty. The following facts may be in issue: the fact that A killed B, etc." But if the group of facts classified as facts in issue be scrutinized it will be found that, as they are facts which could not be put in evidence, they are not relevant facts, though they might be relevant hypotheses to be sustained by relevant fact. If Counsel should ask a witness whether "A killed B" the question would, if excepted to, be ruled out, on the ground that it called not for "facts," but for a conclusion from facts, and to such conclusions witnesses are not permitted to testify.(4) The only way of proving "facts

(1) Steph Dig., pp 156, 157

(2) Ib p 158 The substituted definition is given, post, in the Introduction to Ch II

(3) A Commentary on the Law of Evidence in Civil issues by F Wharton LL.D., 3rd Ed, 1888, Philadelphia, §§ 20 26

(4) See Wharton, Ev., § 507.

in issue," as they are called by Sir J. F. Stephen, is by means of what he calls "facts relevant to the issue." Did A kill B? We cannot say that it would be relevant to the issue for a witness to say "A killed B," for a witness would not be permitted so to testify. No facts are relevant which are inadmissible; and the fact that A killed B, being in this shape inadmissible, is irrelevant. It is, however, admissible, adopting Sir J. F. Stephen's illustration of facts relevant to the issue, to prove that "A had a motive for murdering B; the fact that A admitted that he had murdered B" and the like. From such facts, taken in connection with facts which lead to the conclusion that A struck the blow from which B died, the hypothesis that A murdered B is to be verified or discarded We must, therefore, it is said, strike out from the category of relevant facts what Sir J. F. Stephen calls "facts in issue," or what may be more properly called pertinent hypotheses, and limit ourselves to the position that all facts relevant to "facts in issue" (or to pertinent hypotheses) are, as a rule, admissible. If we discard as ambiguous the word "fact" and substitute for it the word "condition," then the position we may accept is that all conditions of a pertinent hypothesis are relevant to the issue; and that such conditions may be either proved or disproved.(1)

The other class of criticism to which we have referred is altogether adverse to the system on which the Act proceeds, namely, its departure from the principle of English law which consists of negative rules declaring what (as the expression runs), is not evidence, and its attempt instead to positively define evidence by placing its rules wholly into terms of relevancy. As pointed out by Professor Thayer(2), it is here that Sir James Stephen's treatment of the Law of Evidence is perplexing and has the aspect of a tour de force. Helpful as his writings on this subject have been, they are injured by the small consideration that he shows for the historical aspect of the matter and by the over-ingenious attempt to put the rules of evidence wholly into terms of relevancy (3) The difficulty of dealing with the subject of evidence is increased by the confused way in which in several respects the subject is treated in the Act, particularly the obscurity which is thrown over the rules of evidence by the false assumption that rules of exclusion are based solely upon irrelevancy.(4) Sections 5-16 are, even when intelligible, for the most part difficult to practically apply, and as the practising lawyer knows, many of them are scarcely ever referred to, and then only for the most part to support a case for the reception of "evidence" which, bears on its face so little the aspect of relevance that for an attempt to receive its admission some section or other must be pressed into service. The Legislature has entertained the idea of instructing Judges and juries as to what constitutes relevancy giving, as Mr. Markby says(5), in s. 7 a statement in quasi-scientific language of the meaning of relevancy;

what in s. 7 is attempted to be stated meration of a few facts which are gue of such relevant facts is inexhaust-imed (and rightly assumed) to know what evidence is in the sense that the law takes it for granted that people know how to find out what is and what is not probative as a matter of reason and general experience.(6) The rules which govern here are the general rules which govern everywhere; the ordinary rules of human thought and human experience

(1) Wharton, Ev., § 26

(2) Who during, at any rate, the last century was, as Mr. Markby justly says, the only writer who added much to our knowledge of the principles of evidence since Bentham Markby's Evidence Act, Introd.

(3) Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law, p. 266*n* The whole of ch VI in which this passage occurs is worthy, as is indeed the rest of the work, of the most careful study.

(4) See Markby's Evidence Act, Introd.

(5) Id 17.

(6) Thayer op cit., 268*n*.

to be sought in the ordinary sources and not in law books. There is a principle—not so much a rule of evidence as a pre-supposition involved in the very conception of a rational system of evidence as contrasted with the old formal and mechanical systems, [illegible]ant that is not logically probative (1) I[illegible] to know what these forbidden things are [illegible]glish law furnishes no test of relevancy. For this it tacitly refers to logic and general experience—assuming that the principles of reasoning are known to its Judges and Ministers just as a vast multitude of other things are assumed as already sufficiently known to them. Unless excluded by some rule or principle of law all that is logically probative is admissible. The Judge simply has to ask himself :—Does testimony of this fact help me to determine the issue I have to decide ? Whether it does or not, his reason and experience will tell him. If it does not, then the rule of reason excludes it. If it does, then since there are tests of admissibility other than logical relevancy, inquiry must be made whether there is any rule of law which excludes it It is this excluding function which is the characteristic one in the English Law of Evidence, which is, as Professor Thayer calls it, the child of the jury system. It seems, he says(3) "that our Law of Evidence, while it is emphatically a rational system, as contrasted with the old formal methods is yet a peculiar one. In the shape it has taken, it is not at all a necessary development of the rational method of proof ; so that where people did not have the jury, or having once had it, did not keep it, as on the Continent of Europe although they, no less than we, worked out a rational system, they developed under the head of evidence no separate and systematized branch of the law."

The main object of the law is to determine not so much what is admissible in proof as what is inadmissible Assuming in general that what is evidential is receivable, it is occupied in pointing out what part of this mass of matter is excluded ; and it denies to this excluded part not the name of evidence but the name of admissible evidence. Some things are rejected as being of too slight a significance or as having too conjectural and remote a connection ; others as being dangerous in their effect on the jury and likely to be misused or over-estimated by that body ; others as being impolitic or unsafe on public grounds ; others on the bare ground of precedent. It is in fact this sort of thing :—the rejection on one or another practical ground, of what is really probative which is characteristic of the English Law of Evidence, stamping it as the child of the jury system.(4) Admissibility is thus determined, first by relevancy—an affair of logic and experience and not at all of law ; secondly, but only indirectly, by the Law of Evidence which declares whether any given matter which is logically probative is excluded.

A practical experience of many years in the working of the Act shows it to be a matter of regret that the English system, which has its basis in the historical reasons to which we have referred, was rejected in favour of the attempt at a constructive treatment adopted in sections 5-16 of the Act. As Mr. Markby very justly puts it(5) : "What then, it will be asked, is a Judge to do

---

(1) Thayer op. cit, 275, 264

(2) Id 265.

(3) Id. 270

(4) Id 264-269. It is thus the creature of experience rather than of logic. Founded as being a rational system upon the laws of thought, it yet recognizes another influence (the jury) that must at every moment be taken into account ; for it is this which brought it into being as it is the absence of this which alone accounts for the non-existence of it in all other than English-speaking countries, whether ancient or modern ; Id. pp 267-268 In fact it may be added that the English rules of evidence are never very scrupulously attended to by tribunals, which, like the Court of Chancery, adjudicate both on law as on fact through the same organs and the same procedure. Maine's Village Communities, 3rd Ed, 302

(5) Evidence Act, pp. 17, 18 According to the learned author notwithstanding that this is an Act which professes

in issue," as they are called by Sir J F. Stephen, is by means of what he calls "facts relevant to the issue." Did A kill B? We cannot say that it would be relevant to the issue for a witness to say "A killed B," for a witness would not be permitted so to testify. No facts are relevant which are inadmissible, and the fact that A killed B, being in this shape inadmissible, is irrelevant. It is, however, admissible, adopting Sir J. F. Stephen's illustration of facts relevant to the issue, to prove that "A had a motive for murdering B; the fact that A admitted that he had murdered B" and the like. From such facts, taken in connection with facts which lead to the conclusion that A struck the blow from which B died, the hypothesis that A murdered B is to be verified or discarded. We must, therefore, it is said, strike out from the category of relevant facts what Sir J F. Stephen calls "facts in issue," or what may be more properly called pertinent hypotheses, and limit ourselves to the position that all facts relevant to "facts in issue" (or to pertinent hypotheses) are, as a rule, admissible. If we discard as ambiguous the word "fact" and substitute for it the word "condition." then the position we may accept is that all conditions of a pertinent hypothesis are relevant to the issue, and that such conditions may be either proved or disproved (1)

The other class of criticism to which we have referred is altogether adverse to the system on which the Act proceeds, namely, its departure from the principle of English law which consists of negative rules declaring what (as the expression runs), is not evidence, and its attempt instead to positively define evidence by placing its rules wholly into terms of relevancy. As pointed out by Professor Thayer(2), it is here that Sir James Stephen's treatment of the Law of Evidence is perplexing and has the aspect of a tour de force Helpful as his writings on this subject have been, they are injured by the small consideration that he shows for the historical aspect of the matter and by the over-ingenious attempt to put the rules of evidence wholly into terms of relevancy.(3) The difficulty of dealing with the subject of evidence is increased by the confused way in which in several respects the subject is treated in the Act, particularly the obscurity which is thrown over the rules of evidence by the false assumption that rules of exclusion are based solely upon irrelevancy.(4) Sections 5-16 are, even when intelligible, for the most part difficult to practically apply, and as the practising lawyer knows, many of them are scarcely ever referred to, and then only for the most part to support a case for the reception of "evidence" which, bears on its face so little the aspect of relevance that for an attempt to receive its admission some section or other must be pressed into service. The Legislature has entertained the idea of instructing Judges and juries as to what constitutes relevancy giving, as Mr. Markby says(5), in s. 7 a statement in quasi-scientific language of the meaning of relevancy; in s. 11 a statement in popular language of what in s. 7 is attempted to be stated in scientific language and lastly an enumeration of a few facts which are declared to be relevant, though the catalogue of such relevant facts is inexhaustible. The truth is that everybody is assumed (and rightly assumed) to know what evidence is in the sense that the law takes it for granted that people know how to find out what is and what is not probative as a matter of reason and general experience (6) The rules which govern here are the general rules which govern everywhere; the ordinary rules of human thought and human experience

(1) Wharton, Ev, § 26

(2) Who during, at any rate, the last century was, as Mr. Markby justly says, the only writer who added much to our knowledge of the principles of evidence since Bentham Markby's Evidence Act, Introd.

(3) Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law, p. 266*n*. The whole of ch VI in which this passage occurs is worthy, as is indeed the rest of the work, of the most careful study.

(4) See Markby's Evidence Act, Introd

(5) Id 17.

(6) Thayer op. cit, 268*n*

ACT No. I OF 1872.

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

(Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 15th March 1872.)

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT, 1872.

The Title of an Act may be resorted to, to explain an enacting clause when doubtful (1) As to the title of an Act giving colour to, and controlling its provisions, vide note (2)

The law of evidence applicable in every case is that of the lex fori which " governs the Courts whether a witness is competent or not, whether a certain matter requires to be proved by writing or not, whether certain evidence proves a certain fact or not, these and the like questions must be determined, not lege loci contractus but by the law of the country where the question arises, where the remedy is sought to be enforced and where the Court sits to enforce it."(3) As to the law applicable in this country (vide post). Lex fori.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate, define and amend the Law of Evidence; it is hereby enacted as follows:— The Preamble.

COMMENTARY.

The Preamble shows that this Act is not merely a fragmentary enactment but a consolidatory enactment repealing all rules of evidence other than those saved by the last part of the second section (4)

The Law of Evidence applicable to British India is contained in this Act and in certain Statutes, Acts, and Regulations relating to the subject of evidence saved by the proviso of the second section, or enacted subsequent to [illegible] of Evidence [illegible] ot contained [illegible] India. A [illegible] e is admissible under some provision either of this Act or of the Acts abovementioned; for there are no other rules of evidence in force in British India except such as are contained in these Acts. Thus it has been held that since, under

(1) Hurro Chunder v. Shooro Dhonee, 9 W R, 402, 404, 405 (F. B), (1868), see Salkeld v Johnson, 2 Exch, 256, 282, 283

(2) Uda Begam v Imam-ud-din, 2 A., 90 (1878); and see Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni, 8 C, 637, 639, 643 (1882); Crawford v. Spooner, 4 M. I. A., 179, 187 (1846).

(3) Bain v. Whitehaven Railway Co, 3 H L. Cas., 1, 19, per Lord Brougham.

(4) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, 12 A, 35 (1889) As to construction of consolidating Acts, see Introduction.

section 2, the English Extradition Act, which is applicable to this country, is part of the lex fori, records authenticated in the manner prescribed by that Act are admissible.(1) So where certain administration-papers were tendered on behalf of the plaintiff, the Privy Council observed and held: "The Indian Evidence Act has repealed all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute or Regulation, and the plaintiff must therefore show that these papers are admissible under some provision of the Indian Evidence Act."(2) "Instead of assuming the English Law of Evidence, and then inquiring what changes the Evidence Act has made in it, the Act should be regarded as containing the scheme of the law, the principles, and the application of these principles to the cases of most frequent occurrence."(3) The Evidence Act is, as it was intended to be, a complete Code of the Law of Evidence for British India.(4) leadings. The Headings prefixed to sections or sets of sections are regarded as preambles to those sections (5) The headings are not to be treated as if they were marginal notes, or were introduced into the Act merely for the purpose of classifying the enactments. They constitute an important part of the Act itself, and may be read not only as explaining the sections which immediately follow them, as a preamble to a Statute may be looked to, to explain its enactments, but as affording a better way to the construction of the sections which follow than might be afforded by a mere preamble.(6) nter-retation-lauses. Legislative definitions or interpretations, being necessarily of a very general nature, not only do not control, but are controlled by, subsequent and express provisions on the subject-matter of the same definition; they are by no means to be strictly construed; they must yield to enactments of a special and precise nature, and, like words in Schedules, they are received rather as general examples than as overruling provisions.(7) The effect of an interpretation-clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places of the Act in which that word occurs; wherever that word appears it must, unless the contrary plainly appear, be understood in accordance with the meaning put upon it by the interpretation-clause. But it is by no means the effect of an interpretation-clause that the thing defined shall have annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature.(8) Where a definition "includes" certain persons or things, it does not, therefore, necessarily exclude other persons and things not so included; for when a definition is intended to be exclusive, it would seem the form of words (as in the definition of "fact") is "means and includes."(9) Where a [illegible] time previously acquired a special technical [illegible] the absence of a defining clause in the Act, [illegible] on.(10)

(1) In the matter of Rudolf Stallman, 39 C, 164 (1911).

(2) See Lekhraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, 7 I. A., 70 (1879); 5 C, 754; 6 C. L R. 593, also Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari Singh, 12 A, 11, 12, 19, 20, 34, 35, 43 (1889). This section in effect prohibits the employment of any kind of evidence not specifically authorised by the Act itself. R v. Abdullah, 7 A., 399 (1885) (but see also ib, p. 401). Muhammad Allahadad v. Muhammad Ismail, 10 A., 235 (1888); R. v. Pitamber Jena, 2 B., 64 (1877).

(3) R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 491 (1878), per Jackson, J.

(4) R. v. Kartick Chunder, 14 C., 721, 728, F. B. (1887).

(5) Maxwell on Statutes, 6th Ed, 92.

(6) Eastern Counties, etc., Companies v. Murriage, 9 H L C., 41, Dwarkanath Chaudhuri v. Tafezar Rahaman Sarkar, 44 C., 267 (1917), Woodroffe, J.

(7) Uda Begam v. Imam-ud-din, 2 A., 74, 86 (1878); Dwarris on Statutes, 2nd Ed. (1848) 509; R. v. Justice of Cambridgeshire, 7 A. & E., 480, 491.

(8) Uma Churn v. Ajadanissa Bibee, 12 C., 430, 432, 433 (1885); see also R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 492 (1878).

(9) R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 493 (1878).

(10) Ruckmabaye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 5 M. I. A., 234 (1852); Futteshangji Jasvantsangji v. Dessai Kullianraiji, 21 W. R., 178 (1874).

Illustrations.

The words of the section are not limited t [illegible] trations ought never to be allowed to control [illegible] itself, and certainly they ought not to do so, wh [illegible] a right which the section in its ordinary sense would confer.(1) Illustrations, although attached to, do not in legal strictness form part of the Acts and are not absolutely binding on the Courts They merely go to show the intention of the framers of the Acts, and in that and other respects they may be useful, provided they are correct.(2) The practice of looking more at the Illustrations than at the words of the section of the Act is a mistake. The Illustrations are only intended to assist in construing the language of the Act (3)

Marginal Notes.

It has been held in England that marginal notes are no part of sections so as to throw light upon questions of construction, and that they are merely abstracts of the clauses intended to catch the eye and to make the task of reference easier and more expeditious.(4) As regards Indian Acts, there appears to have been some difference of opinion In the undermentioned case(5) the Court was disposed to think that such notes might be used for the purpose of interpreting Indian Acts, the State Publication of such Acts being framed with marginal notes In a subsequent case(6) Petheram, C. J., referred to the marginal notes to s 5, Act XXI of 1870, and s. 149, Act V of 1881, and said that although the marginal notes were not any part of the Act, they did indicate the object of the sections , and in a later decision(7), it was said with reference to s. 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code .—" The only reference to easements is in the marginal note, which is no part of the enactment ; but even the marginal note does not restrict the application of the section in the manner suggested." In both of these cases the Court, while holding that marginal notes formed no part of an enactment, appear to have referred to the same on the question of construction In, however, the latest reported decisions the Court held that marginal notes did not form part of the section and could not be referred to for the purpose of construing it.(8)

General Construction of the Act.

General observations on this matter are contained in the Introduction to which the reader is referred. The modern general rule is that Statutes must be construed according to their plain meaning, neither adding to, nor subtracting from, them.(9) The Court will put a reasonable construction upon an Act, and will not allow the strict language of a section to prevent their giving

(1) Koylash Chunder v Sonatun Chun, 7 C, 132, 135 (1881) ; s. c, 8 C. L. R, 283 "Exempla illustrant non restringunt legem," Co Litt, 24 (a)

(2) Nanak Ram v Mehin Lal, 1 A, 487, 495, 496 (1877) , see also Dubey Sahai v Ganeshi Lal, 1 A, 34, 36 (1875).

(3) Shaikh Omed v. Nidhee Ram, 22 W R, 367 (1874) , see also R v. Rahimat, 1 B, 147, 155 (1876) ; Soorjo Narain v Bissambhur Singh, 23 W R, 311 (1875) , Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 171, 185, 187 (1880) [illustration referred to, to show meaning of word in s 13, post] ; R. v Chidda Khan, 3 A., 573, 575 (1881) (id)

(4) Wilberforce, 293, 214 ; Maxwell, 6th Ed, 76 ; Hardcastle, 3rd Ed, 205 ; Claydon v. Green, 3 C. P., 511 ; Sutton v. Sutton, 22 Ch D, 511 (1882) ; correcting dictum in In re Venour's Settled Estates, 2 Ch D, 522, 525.

(5) Kameshar Prasad v. Bhikan Narain, 20 C., 609 (1893) ; per Pigot, J, at p 628.

(6) Administrator-General, Bengal v. Prem Lall, 21 C, 758 (1894).

(7) Dukhi Mullah v. Halway, 23 C, 55, 59 (1895).

(8) Punardeo Narain v Ram Sarup, 25 C, 858 (1898) ; Thakurain Balraj v. Rai Jagatpal, 8 C W. N., 699 (1904) ; s. c, 26 A, 393

(9) Maxwell, 2 ; Gurecbullah Sirkar v. Mohun Lall, 7 C, 127 (1881) , when the terms of an Act are clear and plain, it is the duty of the Court to give effect to it as it stands . Philpott v St. George's Hospital, 6 H L. Cas, 338 ; Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, 8 W. R., P. C, 3, 12 (1867) ; s c., 11 M. I. A., 551, 604 ; R v. Bal Krishna, 17 B., 577, 578 (1893), but many cases may be quoted, in which, in order to avoid injustice or absurdity, words of general import have been restricted to particular meanings : ib, 578 ; Bamasoonderee v. Verner, 13 B. L. R, 193 (1874) ; Wells v. L. T. & S. Ry. Co, 5 Ch D, 126, 130 : Eastern Counties, etc, Companies v. Marriage, 9 H L. C., 32, 36.

it such a construction.(1) In considering the rules of evidence it is necessary to look to the reason of the matter.(2) A construction effecting a most important departure from the English rule of evidence was considered in the under-mentioned case.(3) Whatever be the meaning of a word in one portion of a section, the meaning of the same word in another portion must, according to the principles of construction, be the same.(4) The meaning of a word may be ascertained by reference to the words with which it is associated, and its use in a particular sense in subsequent parts of the Act(5); and to its allocation in [illegible] A construction making [illegible] clusion on a question of [illegible] Act was passed by the [illegible] that the construction of the Act is marked by careful and methodical arrangement; and that many of the more important expressions used in it are plainly interpreted. It would be wholly inconsistent with the plan of such an enactment that a specific rule contained in one part of it should at the same time be contained in, or deducible from, one or more other rules relating apparently to topics quite distinct, which rules should be at the same time so expressed as to include not merely the specific rule in question, but also matters which that rule taken by itself would specifically exclude."(8) A construction may be adopted by reference to the entirety of a section and also to other sections.(9) The word "may" in a Statute is sometimes, for the purpose of giving effect to the intention of the Legislature, interpreted as equivalent to "must" or "shall," but in the absence of proof of such intention it is construed in its natural and therefore in a permissive and not in an obligatory sense.(10) It is not for a Civil Court to speculate upon what was in the mind of the Legislature in passing a law: but the Court must be bound by the words of the law judicially construed (11) The intention of the Legislature must be ascertained

(1) Gureebullah Sirkar v Mohun Lall, supra, 130, as to 'latent propositions of law," see Leman v. Damodaraya, 1 M., 158 (1876)

(2) Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall, 6 C., 171, 182 (1880) "All rules must be construed with reference to their object:" per Erle, J, in Phelps v Prew, 3 E. & B., 441 So also Couch, C J., in Beharee Lall v. Kaminee Soondaree, 14, W R, 319, 320 (1870), in dealing with the subject matter of s 92, post said, "in applying the rule we must always consider what is the reason of it"

(3) Ranchoddas Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar, 10 B, 439, 442 (1886); Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, supra, 189 (intention to depart entirely from English rule); Probhakarbhat v. Vishambhar Pandit, 8 B., 313, 321 (1884); R v. Gopal Doss, 3 M., 271, 279, 283 (1881); [construction from consideration of alteration called for in English Law of Evidence, ib, 279] See remarks of Lord Herschell as to the interpretation of codes in Bank of England v Vagliano Brothers, L. R., App. Cas (1891), 107 at pp. 144, 145; cited ante, in Introduction.

(4) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, supra, 14; so with reference to ss 26 and 80 of this Act the Court in R v Nagla Kala, 22 B., 235, 238 (1896), observed that it would be unreasonable to hold that the Legislature used the same word in different senses in the same Act.

(5) Gujju Lall, v Fatteh Lall, supra, 166, 187

(6) In re Pyari Lall, 4 C L. R., 504, 506 (1879)

(7) Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, supra, 183, In re Pyari Lall, supra, 506—508; Alangamonjori Dabee v. Sonamoni Dabee, 8 C, 637, 640, 642 (1882); [no clause, sentence or word shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant]; Moher Sheikh v. R, 21 C, 399, 400 (1893)

(8) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, supra, 183, 184.

(9) In re Asgar Hoosein, 8 C. L. R, 125 (1880)

(10) Delhi and London Bank v. Orchard, 3 C., 47 (1877); see also R v. Aloo Paroo, 3 M I A, 488, 492, 493 (1847); Anund Chunder v Punchoo Lall, 14 W. R., F. B, 33, 36 (1870), s. c, 5 B. L. R, 691, 699; Julius v. Bishop of Oxford, L R, 5 App. Cas, 214, Ram Dayal v. Modan Mohan, 21 A, 432 (1899).

(11) Mohesh Chunder v. Madhub Chunder, 13 W. R., 85 (1870); Crawford v Spooner, supra, 187; Buzlur Raheem v Shumsoonnissa Begum, supra, 12; Eastern Counties, etc, Companies v. Marriage, supra, 40 [judicature trespassing on province of Legislature] from the words of a Statute and not from any general inferences to be drawn from the nature of the objects dealt with by the Statute.(1) The Court knows nothing of the intention of an Act except from the words in which it is expressed applied to the facts existing at the time.(2) In case of doubt or difficulty over the interpretation of any of the sections of the Evidence Act, reference for help should be made both to the case-law of the land which existed before the passing of the Act, and also to juristic principles, which only represent the common consensus of juristic reasoning.(3) When the rules of exclusion and the exception to them are definitely laid down, the exception is not to be extended to cases not properly falling within it.(4) Where a clause in an Act which has received a judicial interpretation is re-enacted in the same terms the Legislature is to be deemed to have adopted that interpretation (5) It is an elementary rule of construction that a thing which is within the letter of a Statute is not within the Statute unless it be also within the meaning of the Legislature.(6) A saving clause cannot properly be looked at for the purpose of extending an enactment nor can it give a new or different effect to the previous sections of the enactment (7) Upon a question of construction arising upon a subsequent Statute on the same branch of the law it is perfectly legitimate to use the former Act though repealed.(8) In the under-mentioned case(9) Lord Esher M R, said, " To my mind, however, it is perfectly clear that in an Act of Parliament there are no such things as brackets any more than there are such [illegible] eater retrospective [illegible] does not expressly [illegible] ed so as to avoid

(1) Nanak Ram v Mehim Lall, 1 A, 496 supra, Fordyce v Bridges, 1 H L Cas, 1, 4

(2) Ib, Logan v Courtown, 13 Beav., 22 and see Crauford v Spooner, supra. 187 188, per Lord Brougham, as to cases dealing with the intention under this Act: see e g, Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, supra, 181, In re Pyari Lall, supra, 508, Framji v Mohansing, 18 B, 263, 278, 279 (1893) [identity of language used in section with that employed in Taylor on Ev] R v Gopal Doss, supra

(3) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, supra, 37, 38

(4) R v Jora Hasji, 11 Bom H. C. R., 242 (1874)

(5) Re Campbell, 5 Ch App, 703; cf. following sections of this Act with those of Act II of 1855 —18, 32, 37, 57, 81, 83, 84, 118, 120, 123, 124, 126, 129, 131, 162, 167, and 25, 26, 27, with ss 148—150, Act XXV of 1861

(6) R v Bal Krishna, 17 B, 577 (1893)

(7) R v. Sitaram Vithal, 11 B, 658 (1887).

(8) Collector of Sea Customs v. P. Chithambaram, 1 M., 114 (1876).

(9) Duke of Devonshire v. O'Connor, L. R, 24 Q B. D, 478.

(10) Munjhoori Bibi v Akel Mahmud, 27 C L J., 316 (1913); Budhu Koer v. Hafiz Husain, 28 C L. J., 274 (1913)

(11) Rangacharya v Dasacharya, 37 B, 231 (1913).

PART I.

RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short Title, Commencement of Act, Extent of Act.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Evidence Act, 1872." It extends to the whole of British India, and applies to all judicial proceedings in or before any Court(1), including Court-Martial, "other than Courts-Martial convened under the Army Act" (amended by Act XVIII of 1919) but not to affidavits presented to any Court or Officer, nor to proceedings before an Arbitrator; and it shall come into force on the first day of September, 1872.

COMMENTARY.

Extent of Act.

The Act extends to the whole of "British India," which means the territories vested in Her Majesty by the first section of 21 & 22 Vic, Cap. 106, (now see 5 and 6 Geo. 5, Ch. 61, s. 1) with the exception of the Straits Settlements, which, under the provisions of 29 & 30 Vic., Cap. 115, ceased to form portion of British India.(2) The Act, therefore, applies to the Scheduled Districts(3), and has been declared to be in force by notification under the Scheduled Districts Act in the districts of Hazaribagh, Lohardaga, Manbhoom and Pargana Dhalbhoom and the Kolhan in the district of Singhbhoom(4), and the North-Western Provinces Tarai.(5) The Act has also been declared to be in force in Upper Burma generally except the Shan States(6); in the Hill District of Arakan(7) in British Baluchistan(8); in the Baluchistan Agency Territories(9); in the Santal Parganas(10); and in the Angul District(11); and has been applied to

(1) Defined in s 3, post. As to the meaning of "judicial enquiry" and "judicial proceeding," see R v. Tulja, 12 B, 36, 41, 42 (1887); Atchayya v. Gangayya, 15 M, 138, 143 (1891); Cr. Pr Code, s. 4 (m), Mayne's Criminal Law of India, 1896, 4th Ed, pp. 372-379; R. v Price, L R, 6 Q B, 418; R v. Gholam Ismail, 1 A, 1, 13 (1875).

(2) See Act X of 1897; Act I of 1903; and Act X of 1914.

(3) v. Acts XIV and XV of 1874. As to Act XIV of 1874 (Scheduled Districts) see Act XXXVIII of 1920, Act II of 1893 and earlier amending Acts. As to Act XV of 1874 (Laws Local Extent) see Act I of 1903 and earlier amending Acts, Bengal Act II of 1913, B & O. Act I of 1913.

(4) Gazette of India, Oct 22, 1881, Pt. I, p. 504

(5) Ib, Sept 23, 1876, Pt. I, p. 505.

(6) Act XIII of 1898, s 4 [Burma Code, Ed, 1898, p 364], and Act IV of 1909.

(7) Reg. I of 1916, s 2

(8) Reg. II of 1913, s. 3; Regs. VIII & IX of 1896, Reg. II of 1919 (Baluchistan).

(9) Baluchistan Agency Laws Law, 1890, s. 4 [ib, p 137].

(10) Reg III of 1872, as amended by Reg III of 1899, s 3.

(11) Reg. III of 1913, s. 3.

certain Native States in India or places therein. The Act has been made applicable by Her Majesty in Council in certain places beyond the limits of India for the purposes of cases in which Her Majesty has jurisdiction and has been adopted by certain Native States of India as their law

In the Appendix will be found a complete list revised by the Legislative Department of the Native States in India or places therein to which the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) has been applied by the Governor-General in Council.

Courts-Martial and Marine Courts.

The Act only applies to Native Courts-Martial.(1) In the case of European Courts-Martial, a Court-Martial is not, as respects the conduct of its proceedings or the reception or rejection of evidence, or as respects any other matter or thing whatsoever, subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act. The rules of evidence to be adopted in proceedings before such Courts-Martial shall be the same as those which are followed in Civil Courts in England.(2) This is therefore an exception to the general rule that the lex fori determines the law of evidence (vide post). The Act is (subject to such modification as the Governor-General in Council may direct) applicable to all proceedings before Indian Marine Courts.(3)

Affidavits.

The Civil Procedure Code regulates the matters to which affidavits must be confined. These are such facts as the deponent is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications on which a statement of his belief may be admitted, provided that reasonable grounds thereof be set forth (4) The exception here mentioned does not apply to any proceeding whi[illegible] les the rights of the parties.(5) In [illegible] evidence given on information and [illegible] at so short a notice.(6) So, too, in interlocutory proceedings cross-examination will not be allowed on affidavit because it would defeat the object of the whole proceedings, which is despatched.(7) The costs of every affidavit unnecessarily setting forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter or copies of or extracts from documents, are (unless the Court otherwise directs) payable by the party filing the same.(8) The safeguards for truth in affidavits are the provisions for the production of the witness for cross-examination(9), and the provisions of the Penal Law relating to the giving of false evidence.(10)

Arbitration

Proceedings before arbitrators are regulated by the Civil Procedure Code.(11) As an arbitrator is not in procedure bound by technical rules of Court and is appointed to give an equitable award(12), so also he is unfettered by technical rules of evidence, and it is not a valid objection to an award that

---

(1) Under Act V of 1869 Repealed by Act VIII of 1911.

(2) 44 & 45 Vic cap. 58, ss. 127 & 128, v also ss 163—165 (Army Discipline and Regulation Act, 1881).

(3) Act XIV of 1887, s 68 V of 1898, XVII of 1898; I of 1899

(4) Civ. Pr. Code, O. XIX, r. 3 (1), p 851 ; see Whitley Stokes, 33 ; Cr. Pr. Code, s. 539. In the matter of the petition of Iswar Chundra, 14 C, 653; On evidence by affidavit, v Powell, Ev, 9th Ed., 695—697, Best, Ev, §§ 101, 118, 121 et seq ; Taylor, Ev, § 1394, et seq.; Legal Remembrancer v. Matilal Ghose, S B, 41 C, 173 (1914). A statement on information and belief is not admissible in a case of contempt of Court.

(5) Gilbert v. Endean, L R., 9 Ch Div, 259, Taylor, Ev, § 1396 B.

(6) Gilbert v. Endean, L. R., 9 Ch. Div., 259 ; at p 266, per Jessel, M. R. ; see also Chard v. Jervis, 9 Q B. D, 178, 180. Bonnard v. Perryman (1891), 2 Ch, 269; re J. L Young Manufacturing Co. (1900) ; 2 Ch, 753 ; and Lumley v. Osborne (1901), 1 K. B, 532.

(7) Civ. Pr. Code, supra

(8) Civ. Pr. Code, O. XIX, r. 1, 2, p. 850

(9) O XIX.

(10) Penal Code, Ch. XI.

(11) Civ Pr. Code. The Second Schedule pp. 1463—1474.

(12) Reedoy Kristo v. Puddo Lochun, 1 W. R, 12 (1864). But as to stamp see now Act II of 1899, ss. 33, 34. (See also the various provincial laws passed in 1922, the law is in Bengal contained in Beng. Act II of 1922).

the arbitrator has not acted in strict conformity to the rules of evidence.(1) The word "Court" in this Act does not include an arbitrator.(2) Though the Act does not apply to proceedings before an arbitrator, yet the latter must not receive and act upon evidence or decide upon grounds which render his award utterly unfair or worthless. He must not import his own knowledge into a case or base his decision upon information obtained otherwise than from the evidence submitted to him by the parties to the cause. Where on the face of an award it appeared that the arbitrator principally relied on an admission (3) which he alleged was made to him by the defendant when a former suit between the plaintiff's mortgagee and the defendant was pending, and the arbitrator further stated that he relied on enquiries made by him before the reference to arbitration, and that he made further enquiries since the reference not stating of whom these different enquiries were made, and not seeming to have taken evidence and examined witnesses in the ordinary way, it was held that he acted improperly in importing the previous enquiry alleged to have been made by him, and was quite wrong in relying on what he called admissions, made to him by the defendant in the former proceedings, and that an award based upon such a foundation was utterly unfair and useless.(4) An arbitrator must not receive affidavits instead of viva voce evidence when he is directed to examine the witnesses on oath. He must not make his award without having heard all the evidence, or having allowed the party reasonable opportunity of proving his whole case. He must not, contrary to the principles of natural justice, examine a witness or a party privately, or in the absence of his opponent, unless the irregularity be waived by the parties. If the arbitrator proceed, ex parte, without sufficient cause, or without giving the party absenting himself clear notice of his intention so to proceed, the award will be avoided So likewise if he refused to hear the evidence on a claim within the scope of a reference on a mistaken supposition that it is not within it; but not if he erroneously reject admissible, or receive inadmissible, evidence. His refusing to hear additional evidence tendered when the whole case is referred back to him by a Court is fatal, but not so when the award is sent back with a view to a particular amendment only being made.(5) The rule of law which excludes communications made "without prejudice" is as binding upon arbitrators as upon Courts of Justice, notwithstanding the first section of the Evidence Act, and an arbitrator is wrong in receiving and acting upon such a communication.(6) As much as possible the arbitrator should decline to receive private communications from either litigant respecting the subject-matter of the reference. Except in the few cases where exceptions are unavoidable, as where the arbitrator is justified in proceeding ex parte, both sides must be heard and each in the presence of the other.(7) Refusal by an arbitrator to call witnesses produced by either party amounts to judicial misconduct.(8) Lastly, arbitrators ought only to take such evidence as is required by the terms of the agreement referring the question in dispute to arbitration (9)

---

(1) Suppu v. Govinda Charyar, 11 M. 87 (1887).

(2) S. 3, post.

(3) As to the use of evidence in a subsequent suit of admissions by parties in a former arbitration, see Huronath Sircar v. Preonath Sircar, 7 W. R., 249 (1867), and notes to ss. 17, 18, 33, post.

(4) Kanhye Chand v. Ram Chander, 24 W. R., 81 (1875).

(5) Russell on The Power and Duty of an Arbitrator, 4th Ed, p. 646, cited and adopted in Gunga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 A, 264, 265 (1886); Cursetji Khambatta v Crowder, 18 B, 299 (1894) [arbitrator ought not to receive evidence from one side in the absence of the other].

(6) Howard v. Wilson, 4 C, p. 231 (1878), See s. 23, post.

(7) Russell, op. cit, pp. 181 and 182; cited and adopted in Gunga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 A, 565 (1886).

(8) Rughoobur Doyal v. Maina Koer, 12 C. L. R., 564 (1883).

(9) Krishna Kanta v. Bidya Sundaree, 2 B. L. R, App., 25 (1869).

2. On and from that day the following laws shall be repealed :— Repeal of Enactments.

1. All rules of Evidence not contained in any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India ;

2. All such rules, laws and regulations as have acquired the force of law under the 25th Section of the "Indian Councils Act, 1861 "(1), in so far as they relate to any matter herein provided for ; and

3. The enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto, to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule.

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any provision of any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India and not hereby expressly repealed. Repeal.

See Introduction and notes on Preamble.

3. In this Act the following words and expressions are used in the following senses, unless a contrary intention appears from the context :— Interpretation-Clause "Court" includes all Judges(2) and Magistrates(3), and all persons, except arbitrators, legally authorized to take evidence. "Court" s 1 (Proceedings before Arbitrators.) s 3 ("Evidence")

COMMENTARY.

See notes to Preamble.

The definition of "Court" is framed only for the purposes of the Act itself and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope. Special laws must be confined in their operation to their special object (4) The definition is not meant to be exhaustive (5) The word means not only the Judge in a trial by a Judge with a jury but includes both Judge and jury.(6) A Commissioner is a person legally authorized to take evidence, and therefore the provisions of the Act will apply to Commissions to take evidence under the Civil or Criminal Procedure Codes (7) A Deputy Collector holding an enquiry under the Bengal Land "Court"

(1) 24 & 25 Vic, cap 67 Clause (2) repeals rules relating to evidence enacted in "Non-Regulated Provinces" prior to this Statute and which acquired the force of Law under the 25th section thereof

(2) Penal Code, s 19, General Clauses Act

(3) Cf General Clauses Act Cr. Pr Code, s 3

(4) R v Tulja, 12 B, 43 (1887), Attorney-General v Moore, L R, 3 Ex Div, 276, R v. Ram Lall, 15 A, 141 (1893), but see Atchayya v Gangayya, 15 M, 138, 144, 147, 148 (1891), and In re Sardhari Lall, 13 B L R, App, 40 (1874), s c, 22 W R, Cr, 10

(5) R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 488, 493 (1878).

(6) Ib, 490.

(7) Civ Pr Code, O. XXVI, r 1—10, pp 1088—1097, Cr Pr Code, ss 503—508 see also Atchayya v Gangayya, supra, at p 147

Registration Act, for the purpose of registering the names of rival claimants is a Court within the meaning of this Act and the enquiry held by him is a judicial enquiry.(1)

"Fact" means and includes:—

1. Any thing, state of things, or relation of things, capable of being perceived by the senses;

2. Any mental condition of which any person is conscious.

Illustrations.

(a) That there are certain objects arranged in a certain order in a certain place, is a fact.

(b) That a man heard or saw something, is a fact.

(c) That a man said certain words, is a fact.

(d) That a man holds a certain opinion, has a certain intention, acts in good faith or fraudulently, or uses a particular word in a particular sense, or is or was at a specified time conscious of a particular sensation, is a fact

(e) That a man has a certain reputation, is a fact s 3 (Relevant fact) s 3 (Fact in issue)

COMMENTARY.

The first clause refers to external facts the subject of perception by the five "best-marked" senses, and the second to internal facts the subject of consciousness(2); (a), (b) and (c) are illustrations of the first clause; (d) and (e) of the second. Facts are thus (adopting the classification of Bentham)(3) either physical, e.g., the existence of visible objects, or psychological, e.g., the intention or animus of a particular individual in doing a particular act. The latter class of facts are incapable of direct proof by the testimony of witnesses; their existence can only be ascertained either by the confession of the party whose mind is their seat or by presumptive inference from physical facts.(4) This constitutes their only difference. "When it is affirmed that a man has a given intention, the matter affirmed is one which he and only he can per- [illegible] ''ing or standing, the matter affirmed is [illegible] the man himself, but by any other p[illegible] for the purpose But the circumstance that either event is regarded as being, or as having been, capable of being perceived by some one or other, is what we mean, and all that we mean, when we say that it exists or existed, or when we denote the same thing by calling it a fact. The word 'fact' is sometimes opposed to theory, sometimes to opinion, sometimes to feeling; but all these modes of using it are more or less rhetorical."(5) Facts may also be either events or states of things. By an "event" is meant "some motion or change considered as having come about either in the course of nature or through the agency of human will;" in which latter case it is called an "act" or "action." The fall of a tree is an "event;" the existence of the tree is a "state of things:" both are alike facts.(6) The remaining division of facts is into positive or affirmative and negative. The existence of a certain state of things is a positive or affirmative fact,—the non-existence of it is a negative fact. "This distinction, unlike both the former,

(1) Rama Singh v. Harakdhari Singh, 47, I. C., 710.

(2) Steph. Introd, 19—21; Norton, Ev., 93; Steph. Dig, Art. 1. Fact is anything that is the subject of testimony: Ram on Facts, 3.

(3) 1 Benth Jud. Ev, 45.

(4) Best Ev, 6, 7.

(5) Steph. Introd, 20, 21.

(6) Best, Ev., 7; 1 Benth. Jud. Ev., 47, 48 does not belong to the nature of facts themselves, but to that of the discourse which we employ in speaking of them."(1) "Matter of fact" has been defined to be anything which is the subject of testimony; "matter of law," is the general law of the land of which Courts will take judicial cognisance.(2) The fact sought to be proved or factum probandum is termed the "principal fact;" the means of proof or the facts which tend to establish it "evidentiary facts."(3)

One fact is said to be relevant to another when the one is connected with the other in any of the ways referred to in the provisions of this Act relating to the relevancy of facts.(4) "Relevant."

The expression "facts in issue" means and includes— "Facts in issue" any fact from which, either by itself or in connection with other facts, the existence, non-existence, nature or extent of any right, liability or disability, asserted or denied in any suit or proceeding, necessarily follows.

Explanation.—Whenever, under the provisions of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure, any Court records an issue of fact, the fact to be asserted or denied in the answer to such issue is a fact in issue.(5)

Illustrations.

A is accused of the murder of B. At his trial the following facts may be in issue —

That A caused B's death,

That A intended to cause B's death;

That A had received grave and sudden provocation from B;

That A, at the time of doing the act which caused B's death, was by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing its nature

s 3 ("Fact")

COMMENTARY.

Relation of facts to rights and liabilities.

"Relevant" in this Act means, it has been said, admissible (6) Facts may be related to rights and liabilities in one of two ways.—(a) "They may by themselves or in connect that the existence of the d from them From the fac sity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir-at-law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances, and with a certain intention or knowledge, there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B, and is

(1) 1 Benth Jud Ev, 49, Best, Ev, 7

(2) Best, Ev., 19

(3) 1 Benth. Jud Ev, 18; cf Steph Dig, Art 1; Steph Intro 19—21, Best, Ev, 6, 7, 19, Norton, Ev, 93, Goodeve, Ev, 4—16

(4) See ss 5—55, post; Steph Dig, p 2; "Relevant" cognate expressions occur in ss 8, 132, 32, cl. (8), 155, 147, 148, 153; the expression "irrelevant" occurs in ss 24, 29, 43, 52, 54, 165; Whitley Stokes, 851

(5) Civ Pr Code, O XIV, rr 1—7; pp 813—822 The expression "facts (or 'fact') in issue" occurs in ss. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 17, 21, ill (d), 33, 36, 43, "questions in issue," s 33, "matter in issue," s 132, Whitley Stokes, 852

(6) Lala Lakhmi v Sayed Haider, 3 C W N, cclxviii (1899), per Lord Hobhouse liable to the punishment provided by law for murder. Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue, unless their existence is undisputed.—(b) Facts which are not themselves in issue in the sense above explained, may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue and be used as the foundation of inferences respecting them; such facts are described in the Evidence Act as relevant facts.(1) All the facts with which it can in any event be necessary for Courts of Justice to concern themselves, are included in these two classes. What facts are in issue in particular cases is a question to be determined by the substantive law, or in some instances by that branch of the law of procedure which regulates the forms of pleading, Civil or Criminal."(2) A judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant and duly proved (3)

"Document." "Document" means any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, for the purpose of recording that matter.(4)

s 3 (Document produced for inspection of Court)

Illustrations.

A writing is a document;
Words printed, lithographed, or photographed are documents·
A map or plan is a document,
An inscription on a metal plate or stone is a document:
A caricature is a document.

"Evidence." "Evidence" means and includes:—

1. All statements which the Court permits or requires to be made before it by witnesses, in relation to matters of fact under enquiry: such statements are called oral evidence:

2. All documents produced for the inspection of the Court: such documents are called documentary evidence.(5)

Ch. IV (Oral Evidence.) ss. 62, 64, 165 (Primary Evidence.)
Ch. V (Documentary Evidence.) ss. 63, 65 66 (Secondary Evidence)
s. 60 (Direct Evidence.)

COMMENTARY.

"Evidence." The word "evidence" as generally employed is ambiguous. (a) It sometimes means the words uttered and things exhibited by witnesses before a Court of Justice; (b) at other times it means the facts proved to exist by those words or things, and regarded as the groundwork of inferences as to other facts not so proved; (c) again it is sometimes used as meaning to assert that a particular fact is relevant to the matter under enquiry.(6) The word in this

(1) For example of a fact in issue and a relevant fact, see Kaung Hla Pru v. San Paw, 3 L. B R. 90
(2) Steph Introd., 12, 13, cf Goodeve, Ev., 316, et seq, Best, Ev, 20, Steph Dig, 2.
(3) S. 165, post
(4) Cf Penal Code, s 29.
(5) Steph Introd, 3; ib, Dig, Art. 1
The expression "Documentary Evidence" occurs only in the headings to Chapters V and VI. Whitley Stokes, 852; as to oral evidence v post ss 59, 60, 91, Expl. (3) 119, 44 Expl. The meaning of the term is not confined to proof before a judicial tribunal, Srinivasa v. R., 4 M., 395 (1881)
(6) Steph. Introd, 3, 4.

Act is used in the sense of the first clause. As thus used it signifies only the instruments by means of which relevant facts are brought before the Court (viz., witnesses and documents), and by means of which the Court is convinced of these facts (1)

Instruments of evidence or the media through which the evidence of facts, either disputed or required to be proved, is conveyed to the mind of a judicial tribunal have been divided into—(a) witnesses ; (b) documents , (c) real evidence ; including evidence furnished by things as distinguished from persons, as well as evidence furnished by persons considered as things, i.e., in respect of such properties as belong to them in common with things.(2)

This real evidence may be (a) reported, or (b) immediate (3) Cl. (a) properly falls under the first class of instruments (witnesses) Cl (b) describes that limited portion of real evidence of which the tribunal is the original percipient witness ; e g., where an offence or contempt is committed in presence of a tribunal, it has direct real evidence of the fact (4) The demeanour of witnesses(5), the demeanour, conduct and statements of parties(6), local investigation by the Judge(7), a view by jury or assessors(8), are all instances of real evidence. Cl (b) thus also includes material things other than documents produced for the inspection of the Court (called in the Draft Bill ' material evidence "), e g , the property stolen, models, weapons or other things to be produced in evidence and which are required to be transmitted to the Court of Sessions or High Court (9) This " real evidence " does not form part of the definition of evidence " given in the Act, inasmuch as the Court is in all cases the original percipient witness , and further in the case of " material evidence " in so far as it is spoken to by witnesses(10), it falls properly under the first class of instruments. The things so produced are relevant facts to be proved by " evidence," i e., by oral testimony of those who know of them (11) The Court may require the production of such material things for its inspection (12) Professor Wigmore discards the phrase " real evidence " as misleading, and substitutes " autoptic proference " explaining that a fact is evidenced autoptically when it is offered for direct perception by the senses of the tribunal.

---

(1) Norton, Ev , 95 , Field, Ev , 6th Ed , 14 , as to instruments of evidence, see Best, Ev , § 123

(2) Best, Ev , pp 109, 196 , Goodeve, Ev , 11 " Personal Evidence " is that which is reported by witnesses , another division of evidence is that into " original " or immediate, and " hearsay " or mediate. The former is that which a witness reports himself to have seen or heard through the medium of his own senses , the latter that which is not arrived at by the personal knowledge of the witness , see Norton, Ev , 28, 29 , Best, Ev , §§ 27, 31 and text, post

(3) Best, Ev , pp 183 184 , Goodeve, Ev , 11, 12 14, 16

(4) Best Ev , p 182

(5) v Woodroffe's Civ Pr Code O XVIII, r 12, p 846 , Cr Pr Code, s 363 As to the importance of observation of demeanour, see R v Madhub Chunder, 21 W R , Cr , 13 14 (1874) , Starkie Ev 818 Best, Ev , § 21, Field, Ev , 6th Ed , 29 , R v Bertrand, L R , 1 P C 535 In all cases in which the evidence is conflicting it is the duty of a Court of Appeal to have great regard to the opinion formed by the Judge in whose presence the witnesses gave their evidence as to the degree of credit to be given to it , Woomesh Chunder v Rashmohini Dassi (1893) ; 21 C , 279 ; Shumnugaroya Mudaliar v Manikka Mudaliar (P C), 1909, 32 M , 400 ; Imdad Ahmad v Pateshri Partap Narain Singh, P C (1909), 32 A , 241

(6) v Whitley Stokes, 852

(7) Woodroffe's Civ Pr Code O XXVI r 9, p 1093, Joy Coomar v. Bundhoolall, 9 C 363 (1882) , Oomut Fatima v Bhujo Gopal, 13 W R, 51 (1870) Harikishore Mitra v Abdul Baki, 21 C 920 (1894) Lakmidas Khushal v Barji Khushal, 35 B 317 (1911)

(8) Cr Pr Code s 293 See R v Chutterdharee Singh, 5 W R , Cr., 57 (1866) , Oudh Behari, 1 C L R , 143 (1877) , Kailash Chunder v Ram Lall, 26 C 869 (1899)

(9) Cr Pr Code s 218 , see Whitley Stokes, 834 , ss 60, Prov (2), 65 (d), post

(10) Steph Introd , 15

(11) v Norton Ev , 95

(12) v s 60, post.

The definition has been objected to(1) for incompleteness, in so far as by its terms it does not include the whole material on which the decision of the Judge may rest. Thus, in so far as a statement by a witness only is "evidence," the verbal statements of parties and accused in Court by way of admission or confession or in answer to questions by the Judge(2), a confession by an accused person affecting himself and his co-accused(3), the real evidence abovementioned, and the presumptions to be drawn from the absence of producible witnesses or evidence(4), are not "evidence" according to the definition given. The answer to this objection, however, is that this clause is an interpretation-clause, and the Legislature only explains by it what it intended to denote whenever the word "evidence" is used in the Act.(5) This definition must be considered together with the following definition of "proved."(6) "It seems to follow therefore that if a relevant fact is proved and the law expressly authorises its being taken into consideration, that is, considered for a certain purpose or against persons, in a certain situation, the fact in question is "evidence" for that purpose, or against such persons, although the result has not been expressed in these words by the Legislature: and being evidence it must be used in the same way as everything else that is "evidence."(7) Thus an oral admission in Court and the result of a local enquiry instituted by a Munsiff is matter before the Court which may be taken into consideration(8), and the confession of a prisoner affecting himself and another person charged with the same offence is, when duly proved, admissible as evidence against both. (See next section.)(9)

Evidence has been further divided into direct evidence and circumstantial evidence.(10) Direct(11) evidence is the testimony of a witness to the existence or non-existence of the fact or facts in issue: by circumstantial evidence is meant the testimony of a witness to other facts (relevant facts) from which the fact in issue may be inferred.(12) As regards admissibility, direct and

(1) v Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on Evidence (1898), 263; Whitley Stokes, 852

(2) v s 165, post

(3) v s 30, post

(4) v s 114, ill. (g), post

(5) R v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 492 (F B)

(6) Joy Coomar v Bundhoolall, 9 C., 366, and see R. v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 492, supra.

(7) Per Jackson, J., in R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 492, supra

(8) Joy Coomar v. Bundhoolall, 9 C, 366, supra

(9) R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 483, supra, referred to in R. v. Krishna Bhat, 10 B., 326 (1885); R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B, 459 (1889), v. s. 30, post; see also generally as to "evidence" following sections:—Ss. 5 (evidence of facts in issue and relevant facts), 59, 60 (oral), 60 (must be direct), 61—100 (documentary), 91—100 (exclusion of oral by documentary), 114 (g), (producible but not produced), 101—166 (production and effect of), 118—166 (witnesses), 167 (improper admission and rejection of evidence), as to the meaning of "evidence to go to the jury," see Pratt v. Blunt Cornfoot, 2 Cox C. C., 242; Jewell v. Parr, 13 C B, 909, 916; Ryder v. Wombwell, L. R., 4 Ex, 32, 38, Steward v Young, L. R, 5 C P, 122, 128; R. v. Vajiram, 16 B, 414 (1892), as to verdict against evidence, R. v Dada Ana, supra, and v post.

(10) See William Wills' Essay on Circumstantial Evidence, 4th Ed (1862); A M Burrill's Treatise on Circumstantial Evidence, 1868, Phillips' Famous Cases of Circumstantial Evidence, 4th Ed. (1879); also a Treatise on Circumstantial Evidence by Arthur P Wills (1896).

(11) This meaning of the word "direct" must not be confounded with that in which it is used in s 60, post, which does not exclude circumstantial evidence Neel Kanto v. Juggobundho Ghose, 12 B. L R., App. 18 (1874) In the latter sense circumstantial evidence must always be "direct," i e, the facts from which the existence of the fact in issue is to be inferred must be proved by direct evidence. See Steph Introd, 8, 51: Best. Ev., §§ 293—295; Wills' Circumstantial Ev., 6th Ed, 19, 20. The term "presumptive" is frequently used as synonymous with "circumstantial" evidence. But they differ as genus and species. Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 22.

(12) v post, Introduction to Ch. II, e.g.—"A is indicted for the murder of B, the apparent cause of death being a wound given with a sword. If C saw A kill circumstantial evidence stand, generally speaking, on the same footing(1), and the testimony, whether to the factum probandum or the facta probantia, is equally as original and direct. As to the several values and cogency of direct and circumstantial evidence much has been both written and said, but both forms admit of every degree of probability. Abstractedly considered, however, the former is of superior cogency; in so far as it contains only one source of error, fallibility of testimony, while the latter has, in addition, fallibility of inference (2) But "when circumstances connect themselves closely with each other, when they form a large and strong body, so as to carry conviction to the minds of a jury, it may be proof of a more satisfactory sort than that which is direct. When the proof arises from the irresistible force of a number of circumstances, which we cannot conceive to be fraudulently brought together to bear upon one point, that is less fallible than, under some circumstances, direct evidence may be."(3) It has been said that "facts cannot lie" (4) but men can. And as we only know facts through the medium of witnesses the truth of the fact depends upon the truth of the witness (5) Primary evidence is that which its own production shows to admit of no higher or superior source of evidence. Secondary evidence is that which from its production implies the existence of evidence superior to itself.(6)

"Proved.

A fact is said to be proved(7) when, after considering the matter before it, the Court either believes it to exist, or considers its existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists.

B with a sword, his evidence of the fact would be direct If, on the other hand, a short time before the murder, D saw A walking with a drawn sword towards the spot where the body was found, and after the lapse of a time long enough to allow the murder to be committed, saw him returning with the sword bloody, these circumstances are wholly independent of the evidence of C (they derive no force whatever from it) and, coupled with others of a like nature, might generate quite as strong a persuasion of guilt." Best, Ev, § 294 Nibaran Chandra Roy v R (1907), 11 C. W N, 1085, see Legal Remembrancer v Matilal Ghose, S B, 41 C, 173 (1914), "positive" evidence defined and distinguished from indirect or circumstantial.

(1) Best, Ev, § 294

(2) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 2, Norton, Ev., pp 14, 18, et seq, 71; Phillips' Famous Cases of Circumstantial Evidence, 4th Edition, Introduction, Best, Ev., § 295, Taylor, Ev, §§ 65—69; Wills' Circ Ev., 6th Ed, 48, see remarks of Alderson, B, in R v. Hodges, 2 Lewin, C C, 227 "Probatio per evidentiam rei omnibus est potentior et inter omnes ejus generis major est illa, quae fit per testis de visu," (Mascardus De probationibus, v 1, q 3, n 8) So also Menochius who displays a partiality for that circumstantial proof, which is the subject of his treatise, yet says "probatio seu fides quae testibus fit, ceteris excellet" (De præsumptionibus, L 1, q 1), Phillips, op cit, Burrill, op cit

(3) Per Lord Chief Baron Macdonald in R v Patch and R v Smith, cited in Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 46, 47, 39—52, Norton, Ev, 18, et seq, Cunningham, Ev, 16, and v Surendra Narayan Adhicary v R (1911), 39 C, 522, See also charge of Bullen, J, in the trial of Captain Donnellan, cited and criticised in Phillips' Circ Ev, xv, but evidence of a circumstantial nature can never be justifiably resorted to, except where evidence of a direct and therefore of a superior nature is unattainable, Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 39, 40, 308; "if men have been convicted erroneously on circumstantial evidence, so have they on direct testimony, but is that a reason for refusing to act on such testimony?" Greenleaf, Ev, 1, c, 4, as to the disregard of circumstantial evidence by Mofussil juries, see remarks in R v Elahi Bux, B L R., Sup Vol, 481, 482 (1866)

(4) Per Baron Legge in the trial of Mary Blandy, State Trials (1752)

(5) Phillips' Circ Ev, xiv, xvii

(6) Best, Ev, pp 70, 416.

(7) Cognate expressions occur in the following sections —68, 104—111, 22, 50, 101, 101—4, 101, 102, 165, 77, 91, 82, Whitley Stokes, 853, Balmakand Ram v Ghansam Ram, 22 C, 407 (1894).

"Disproved."

A fact is said to be disproved(1) when, after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes that it does not exist, or considers its non-existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it does not exist.

"Not proved"

A fact is said not to be proved when it is neither proved nor disproved.

Part II (On Proof) Part III (Production and Effect of Evidence.)
Ch VII (Of the Burden of Proof)

COMMENTARY.

Proof

Whether an alleged fact is a fact in issue or a relevant fact the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist; and it is obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact, ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceeding in which its existence is to be determined. Evi- [illegible] Proof in strictness [illegible] d as the establish- [illegible] oper and legal means to the satisfaction of the Court is effected by :—(a) evidence or statements of witnesses, admissions or confessions of parties, and production of documents(3); (b) presumption(4), (c) judicial notice(5), (d) inspection,—which has been defined as the substitution of the eye for the ear in the reception of evidence(6); as in the case of observation of the demeanour of witnesses(7), local investigation(8), or in the inspection of the instruments used for the commission of a crime (9) The extent to which any individual material of evidence aids in the establishment of the general truth is called its probative force. This force must be sufficient to induce the Court either (a) to believe in the existence of the fact sought to be proved, or (b) to consider its existence so probable that a prudent man ought to act upon the supposition that it exists. Thus it has been recently held that in this country the proof necessary to establish a Will is not an absolute or conclusive one, but such a proof as would satisfy a reasonable [illegible] portic [illegible] probe [illegible] man [illegible] the C [illegible] proved in such a case.(11) " The true question in trials of fact, is not, whether it is possible that the testimony may be false, but whether there is sufficient

(1) The expression "disproved" occurs only in ss 3 and 4 the expression "not to be proved," or "not proved" does not occur at all, Whitley Stokes, 853

(2) Steph. Introd, 13; id. Dig, 67, Art 58, Goodeve, Ev, 3, 4, judgment is to be based on facts duly proved, v s 165, post burden of proof, v ss 101—114

(3) See ss 3, 5—55, 58, 59, 60 (oral proof) 61—100 (documentary proof) 157 (former statement). 158 (statements under ss 32, 33); R v. Ashootosh Chuckerburtty, 4 C., 492 (1878) v ante "Evidence"

(4) Ss 4 79—90 112-114, post

(5) Ss 56, 57, post

(6) Wharton, Ev., s 345; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 3, Best, Ev, 5; v. ante; v s. 60, post

(7) v Civ Pr Code, O XVIII, r. 12, p 846, Cr Pr Code, s 363 (v. ante); as to demeanour of witnesses and discrepancies, see remarks of Lord Langdale in Johnston v Todd, 5 Beav., 601.

(8) v Woodroffe's Civ. Pr. Code, O. XXVI, r 9, p. 1093; Joy Coomar v. Bundhoolall, 9 C., 363, supra; remarks in Leech v Schwedor, 43 L. J., Ch, 232; Cr Pr Code, s. 293 (v. ante).

(9) v s 60, post; Cr. Pr. Code, s 218.

(10) Jarat Kumari Dassi v. Bissessur Dutt (1911), 39 C., 245.

(11) Boisogomoff v. Nahapiet Jute Co., 6 C. W. N., 495, at p. 505 (1902).

probability of its truth ; that is, whether the facts are shown by competent and satisfactory evidence."(1) When there is sufficient evidence of a fact, it is no objection to the proof of it that more evidence might have been adduced.(2) The incidence of the burden of proof of a fact means that the person on whom it lies must prove the same. But the meaning of "proof" in this section is not affected by the incidence of the burden of proof.(3)

"Matters before the Courts.

The expression "matters before it" includes matters which do not fall within the definition of "evidence" in the third section. Therefore, in determining what is evidence other than "evidence" in the phraseology of the Act, the definition of "evidence" must be read with that of "proved." "It would appear, therefore, that the Legislature intentionally refrained from using the word 'evidence' in this definition, but used instead the words 'matters before it.' For instance, a fact may be orally admitted in Court The admission would not come within the definition of the word 'evidence' as given in this Act, but still it is a matter which the Court before whom the admission was made would have to take into consideration in order to determine whether the particular fact was proved or not "(4) So the result of a local investigation under the Civil Procedure Code, must be taken into consideration by the Court though not "evidence" within the definition given by the Act.(5) The judgment must be based on facts before the Court relevant and duly proved(6) upon a consideration of the whole of the evidence and the probabilities of the case (7) It must not be based on the personal knowledge of the Judge or on materials which are not in evidence or have been improperly admitted.(8) The Judge may not, without giving evidence as a witness, import into a case his own knowledge of particular facts(9), and should decide the rights of the parties litigating secundum allegata et probata (according to what is averred and proved) (10) But a Judge is entitled to use his general knowledge and experience, as in determining the value of evidence, and to apply them to the facts in dispute.(11) The Court should abstain from looking at what is not

(1) Greenleaf on Ev, 5th Ed, p 4, cited in Goodeve, Ev, 6. Probability, in the words of Locke, is likeliness to be true—see Ram on Facts Ch VIII. As to the probabilities of a case, v Bunwaree Lal v Maharajah Hetnarain, 7 I. A, 155 ; s c, 4 W. R, 128, Sri Raghunadha v Sri Brojo, 3 I A, 176; Mudhoo Soodun v Suroop Chunder, 4 M I A., 441 , s. c, 7 W R, 37 , Lala Jha v Bibee Tulleb-matool, 21 W R, 436 , Meer Usdoolah v Beeby Imaman, 1 M. I A, 44, 45 ; s c, 5 W R, 29 , Mussamut Edun v Mussamut Bechun, 11 W R, 345, Uman Parshad v Gandharp Singh, 15 C, 20, 23 , Best, Ev, §§ 24, 100 , see also Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 7 , Steph. Introd, 46 Glassford's Essay on the Principles of Evidence, 105

(2) Ramalinga Pillai v Sadasiva Pillai, 9 M I A, 506 , s c, 1 W. R (P C.), 25 (1864) , see Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 22—23

(3) Muhammad Yunus v. Emp, 50 C, 318

(4) Per Mitter, J Joy Coomar v Bundhoolall, 9 C., 366 (1882) ; and see R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 492, supra.

(5) Ib For local inspection by Judge see Raikishori Ghose v. Kumudini Kant Ghose, 15 C L J, 138 (1912)

(6) S 165, post

(7) See remarks of Mitter, J, in Leelanund Singh v Basheeroonissa, 16 W R., 102 (1871) , v Field, Ev, 6th Ed, p 41 , see notes to s. 16, post

(8) Durga Prasad Singh v Ram Doyal Chaudhuri, 38 C, 153 (1910), per Woodroffe, J

(9) Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 3 I A, 286, Mitham Bibi v Bashir Khan, 11 M I A, 213 , s. c, 7 W R, 27 ; Sooraj Kant v Khodee Narain, 22 W R, 9 , Kanhai Chand v Ram Chandra, 24 W R. 81 (arbitrator) , R v Ram Charan, 24 W R, Cr, 28 (assessor) , v s 294, Cr Pr. Code , Rousseau v Pinto, 7 W R, 190 , see notes to s 21, post

(10) Eshan Chandra v Shama Charan, 11 M I. A, 20 ; 6 W R, P. C, 57 , see Ramdayal Khan v Ajoodhia Khan, 2 C, 15 , Joytara Dassee v Mahamed Mobaruck, 8 C, 975 ; Ranga Charia v Yegna Dikshatur, 1 M, 526 , Chooa Kara v. Isabin Khalifa, 1 B, 213 , Mukhoda Soondury v Ram Churn, 8 C, 875 , Ashgar Reza v Hydar Reza, 16 C 291 ; Thirthasami v. Gopala, 13 M, 33 ; Best, Ev, §§ 78, et seq , notes to s 165, post

(11) Lakshmayya v Sri Raja Veredaraja Apparow, 36 M, 168 (1913) See Best on Ev, s 187, p 176 strictly evidence. In this connection may be noted the dicta of two English Judges. "In this case I have found myself, upon two different occasions where it has come before me, in that difficulty into which a Judge will always bring himself when his curiosity or some better motive disposes him to know more of a cause than judicially he ought."(1) Again, "I shall decline to look at what is not regularly in evidence before the Court. The proceedings before the Commissioners are, in my opinion, no evidence of an act of bankruptcy. I purposely abstain in all these cases from looking at the proceedings, for my mind is so constituted that I cannot in forming my judgment on any matter before me separate the regular from the irregular evidence."(2)

Proof in Civil and Criminal Cases.

Certain provisions of the Law of Evidence are peculiar to Criminal trials; e.g., the provisions relating to confessions(3), character(4), and the incompetency of parties as witnesses(5); but apart from these, the rules of evidence are the same in Civil and Criminal cases.(6) But there is a strong and marked difference as to the effect of evidence in Civil and Criminal proceedings.(7) "The circumstances of the particular case" must determine whether a prudent man ought to act upon the supposition that the facts exist from which liability is to be inferred. What circumstances will amount to proof can never be matter of general definition.(8) But with regard to the proof required in Civil and Criminal proceedings there is this difference: that in the former a mere preponderance of probability is sufficient(9), but in the latter (owing to the serious consequences of an erroneous condemnation both to the accused and society) the persuasion of guilt must amount to "such a moral certainty as convinces the minds of the tribunal, as reasonable men, beyond all reasonable doubt."(10) "It is the business of the prosecution to bring home guilt to the accused to the satisfaction of the minds of the jury; but the doubt to the benefit of which the accused is entitled must be such as rational thinking, sensible men may fairly and reasonably entertain: not the doubts of a vacillating mind that has not the moral courage to decide but shelters itself in a vain and idle scepticism. They must be doubts which men may honestly and conscientiously entertain."(11) The same principle which requires a greater degree of proof

(1) Per The Lord Chancellor in Rich v Jackson, note to 6 Ves., 334.

(2) Per Sir John Cross, Ex parte Foster, 3 Deacon, 178.

(3) Ss. 24—30, post

(4) Ss. 53, 54, post.

(5) S 120, post and note.

(6) R. v. Murphy. 8 C. & P, 297, 306, R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & A, 95, 112, per Best, J.: Leach v. Simson, 5 M. & W., 309, 312, per Park, B.: Trial of William Stone, 25 How. St. Tr, 1314; Trial of Lord Melville, 29 id., 764; Best, Ev., § 94.

(7) Best, Ev., § 95

(8) Starkie, Ev.. 865; differences in the proof required of the same fact in different cases very often arise out of the circumstances of the case: R. v. Madhub Chunder, 21 W. R., Cr., 13, 17 (1874). See Arthur P. Wills' Treatise on the Law of Circumstantial Evidence (1896), Ch. IV (quantity of evidence necessary to convict).

(9) Cooper v. Slade, 6 H L. Cas, 77, per Willes, J.; Starkie, Ev., 818; and see remarks of Sir Lawrence Peel in R. v. Hedger, Mutty Lall v. Michael (1852), pp. 132, 133; R. v. Madhub Chunder, post.

(10) Per Parke, B, in R. v. Sterne, cited in Best, Ev, p. 76, v. Starkie, Ev., 817, 865; Taylor, Ev, § 112; R v. White, 4 Fost. & Fin, 383, see same principle laid down in R v. Madhub Chunder, 21 W. R., Cr, 13, 19, 20 (1874), R. v. Hedger: supra, 132, 133, 135, per Sir Lawrence Peel, C. J, quoting and adopting Starkie, Ev., 817, 818; R v Sorob Roy, 5 W. R., Cr, 28, 31 (1866), R. v. Beharee, 3 W. R., 23, 25 (1865) [prisoner not to be convicted on surmise]. "It is a maxim of English law that it is better that ten guilty men should escape than that one innocent man should suffer," per Holroyd, J., in Sarah Hobson's case, 1 Lewin, C. C., 261; see also Best, Ev., §§ 49, 440.

(11) R v. Castor, Vol. II, 816, per Cockburn, C. J. "If," said L. C. Baron Pollock to the jury, in R v. Manning and Wife (cited in Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed., 318, 319), "the conclusion to which you are conducted be that there is that degree of certainty in the case that you would act upon it in your own grave and important concerns, that is the degree of certainty which the law requires, and which will justify you in returning a verdict of guilty." See also the other cases cited in Wills, ib., and the R. v. Madhub demands a strict adherence to the formalities prescribed by the law of procedure. For "in a Criminal proceeding the question is not alone whether substantial justice has been done, but whether justice has been done according to law. All proceedings in pœnam are, it need scarcely be observed, strictissimi juris."(1) Criminal proceedings are bad unless they are conducted in the manner prescribed by law, and if they are substantially bad, the defect will not be cured by any waiver or consent of the prisoner.(2) Sir Elijah Impey in his charge to the jury in Nuncomar's Case said: "You will consider on which side the weight of evidence lies, always remembering that, in Criminal, and more especially ought

l the least se, as nnced

erdict

against the prisoner."(3) Even as between Criminal cases a distinction has been declared to exist. Thus "the fouler the crime is, the clearer and plainer ought the proof of it to be."(4) "As the crime is enormous, and dreadfully enormous, indeed it is, so the proof ought to be clear."(5) "But the more atrocious the more flagrant the crime is, the more clearly and satisfactorily you will expect that it should be made out to you."(6) "The greater the crime, the stronger is the proof required for the purpose of conviction."(7) These and the like dicta, however, in so far as they may be said to imply that the rules of evidence may be modified according to the enormity of the crime, or the weightiness of the consequences which attach to conviction (for if they may be made more stringent in one direction, it is said they may be relaxed in another) have been severely criticised (8) To quote the language of L. C J. Dallas in the e dicta,

of the against

Every Criminal charge involves two things: first, that a crime has been committed; and secondly, that the accused is the author of it. If a Criminal fact is ascertained—an actual corpus delicti established—presumptive proof is admissible to fix the criminal.(10) A restriction has been said to exist against the use of circumstantial evidence in the case of the well-known rule that the corpus delicti (that is, the fact that a crime has been committed) should not in general be inferred from other facts, but should be proved independently. But it is not necessary (and indeed in the case of some crimes it would be

Chunder, supra, 20, R v. Gokool Kahar, 25 W R, Cr., 36 (1876); Weston v. Peary Mohan Dass, 40 C, 898 (1913)

(1) Per Cockburn, C J, in Martin v. Mackonochie, L R, 3 Q. B D, 730, 775; see R v Kola Lalang, 8 C, 214 (1881); R. v. Bhista Bin, 1 B, 308 (1876), Jetha Parkha v Ram Chandra, 16 B, 693, 694 (1892); R v. Bholanath, 2 C, 23—27 (1876); 25 W R., Cr, 57, but see also ss. 529—538, Cr. Pr. Code

(2) R v. Bholanath, 2 C, 23 (1876), R v Allen, 6 C., 83 (1880); Hossein Buksh v R., 6 C., 96, 99, see also notes to ss 5, 121, post.

(3) The story of Nuncomar and the impeachment of Sir Elijah Impey, by Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, Vol 1, p. 168 See also Lord Cowper's speech on the Bishop of Rochester Trial, Phillips' Circ. Ev., xxvii

(4) Trial of Lord Cornwallis, 7 State Trials, 149

(5) Trial of R T Crossfield, 26 State Trials, 218

(6) Trial of Mary Blandy, 18 State Trials, 1186

(7) Sarah Hobson's case, per Holroyd, J, 1 Lewin's Crown cases, 261. See also R v Ings, 33 St Tr, 1135, and Madeleine Smith's case cited in Wills' Circ. Ev, 6th Ed, 319—322.

(8) Wills' Circ. Ev, 6th Ed., 319—322

(9) R v Ings, 33 St Tr., 1135

(10) R v Ahmed Ally, 11 W. R. Cr, 25, 29 (1869), R. v. Ram Ruchea, 4 W. R, Cr, 22 (1865)

impossible) to prove the corpus delicti by direct and positive evidence. If the circumstances are such as to make it morally certain that a crime has been committed, the inference that it was committed, is as safe as any other inference. More accurately stated, the rule is that no person shall be required to answer or be involved in the consequences of guilt without satisfactory proof of the corpus delicti either by direct evidence or by cogent and irresistible grounds of presumption.(1)

General rules with regard to proof in Criminal Cases.

(a) The onus of proving everything essential to the establishment of the charge against the accused lies upon the prosecutor. Every man is to be regarded as legally innocent until the contrary be proved. Criminality is therefore never to be presumed (2) (b) The evidence must be such as to exclude, to a moral certainty, every reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. (3) If there be any reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused, he is entitled as of right to be acquitted.(4) The above hold universally; but there are two others peculiarly applicable when the proof is presumptive (v. ante). (c) There must be clear and unequivocal proof of the corpus delicti (v. ante).(5) (d) In order to justify the inference of guilt, the inculpating facts must be incom- [illegible] upon any [illegible] urrence of [illegible] hough the [illegible] tive effect to produce conviction, a mere aggregation of separate facts, all of which are inconclusive in the sense that they are quite as consistent with the innocence as with the guilt of an accused person, cannot have any probative force. The principle is a fundamental one and of universal application in cases dependent

---

(1) Steph. Introd, 66, Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 323—411, Arthur Wills' Circ Ev (1896), Part V (Proof of the corpus delicti) and cases there cited, Norton, Ev, 74, Cunningham, Ev., 17; Best, Ev, § 441, et seq., Powell, Ev., 72 See Evans v. Evans, 1 Hagg, C. R., 35, 105, the Courts may act upon presumptions as well in Criminal as in Civil cases: Burdett's case, 4 B. & Ald, 95. So in cases of adultery it is not necessary to prove the fact by direct evidence, Lovedon v Lovedon, 2 Hagg, C R, 1, Williams v. Williams, 1 ib, 299, followed in Allen v. Allen, L. R P. D (1894), 248, 252; even in a criminal case, R. v. Madhub Chunder, 21 W R, Cr, 13, 16, 17 (1874). See provision of Cr. Pr. Code, s 174, and also Bengal Reg XX of 1817, s. 14, and generally as to the corpus delicti, R. v. Petta Gazi, 4 W. R., Cr., 19 (1865); R. v. Ram Ruchea, ib, 29 (1865); R v. Pooroosullah Sikhdar, 7 W. R., Cr., 14 (1867); R v. Budder-uddeen, 11 W. R., Cr., 20 (1869); R v Ahmad Ally, supra; R. v Dredge, 1 Cox, C. C, 235; Adu Shikdar v. R., 11 C, 642 (1885); R. v. Behari Singh, 7 W. R., Cr., 3, 4 (1867), in which case the alleged "dead" man re-appeared upon the scene at the cutcherry.

(2) Lawson's Presumptive Ev, 93, 432; Wharton, Cr. Ev., §§ 319, 717; Best, Ev, § 440; Greenleaf, Ev, I., 34; Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 305; Powell Ev., 9th Ed, 403; Best, Treatise on Presumptions of law and fact (1844); see ss. 101, 102, 103, 105, 106, 114, post. As to the meaning of the presumption of innocence in Criminal cases, see Thayer's Preliminary Treatise on evidence (1898), 551. See also R v. Ahmed Ally 11 W. R, Cr., 25, 27 (1869); where facts are as consistent with a prisoner's innocence as with his guilt, innocence must be presumed, and criminal intent or knowledge is not necessarily imputable to every man who acts contrary to the provisions of the law; R. v. Nobokisto Ghose, 8 W. R., Cr., 87 (1867); R v. Madhub Chunder, 21 W. R., Cr., 13, 20 (1874) [the accused is entitled to the benefit of the legal presumption in favour of innocence; the burden of proof is undoubtedly upon the prosecutor]. The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Boistobi, 22 C, 174 (1894); Panchu Das v R (1907), 34 C, 698; 11 C. W. N., 666.

(3) Best, Ev., ib., and v. ante.

(4) Wills' Circ. Ev, 6th Ed, 315; Best, Ev, § 440 and v. ante, Lolit Mohun v. R, 22 C, 323 (1894); R. v. Madhub Chunder, supra, 20; R. v. Punchanun, 5 W. R, Cr., 97 (1866).

(5) Best, Ev, §§ 440, 441, Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 323—411.

(6) Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 311; Best, Ev., § 451; rule approved in Balmakund v. Ghansam, 22 C, 409 (1894); R. v. Ishri (1907), 29 A., 46 on circumstantial evidence that in order to justify the inference of guilt the incriminating facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt.(1) It is not, however, correct to say that before circumstantial evidence can be made the basis of a safe inference of guilt it must exclude every possible hypothesis except that of the guilt of the accused.(2) But if the possibility is remote and one which he is able to explain the absence of explanation may be taken into account.(3)

"Even where the appeal turns on a question of fact, the Court of Appeal has to bear in mind that its duty is to re-hear the case, and the Court must re-consider the materials before the Judge with such other materials as it may have decided to admit The Court must then make up its own mind, not disregarding the judgment appealed from, but carefully weighing and considering it; but not shrinking from overruling it, if, on full consideration, the Court comes to the conclusion that the judgment is wrong When, as often happens, much turns on the relative credibility of witnesses, who have been examined and cross-examined before the Judge, the Court is sensible of the great advantage he has had in seeing and hearing them It is often very difficult to estimate correctly the relative credibility of witnesses from written depositions, and when the question arises which witness is to be believed rather than another, and that question turns on manner and demeanour, the Court of Appeal always is and must be guided by the impression made on the Judge who saw the witnesses. But there may obviously be other circumstances, quite apart from manner and demeanour, which may show whether a statement is credible or not, and these circumstances may warrant the Court in differing from the Judge even on questions of fact turning on the credibility of witnesses whom the Court has not seen"(4) But it has been laid down in a [illegible] who have [illegible] those who [illegible] atter have formed an opinion adverse to the witnesses in question (5) In a recent case in the Allahabad High Court it was said that as a general rule a trial Judge in India has not as much opportunity of attaching importance to the demeanour of witnesses as a Judge in England because in this country many trials are not heard continuously and judgments are often written some time after the evidence is heard.(6)

Appeals, Civil and Criminal.

"The sound rule to apply in trying a Criminal appeal where questions of fac[illegible] a ([illegible] be [illegible] ing [illegible]

(1) Hurjee Mull v Iman Ali Sircar, 8 C W N, 278 (1904), 1 All L J, 28 Emp v Jagat Ram, 19 Cr L J, 987

(2) Balmakund v Ghansam, supra, "the hypothesis of the prisoner's guilt should flow naturally from the facts proved, and be consistent with them all," R v Beharee, 3 W R, Cr, 23, 26 (1865)

(3) Smith v Emp, 19 Cr L J 189, see S 106, post

(4) Per Barnes, J, in Coghlan v Cumberland (1898), 1 Ch, 705, Bombay Cotton Manufacturing Co. v Motilal Shivlal, 42 I A, 110 (1915)

(5) Shunmugaroya Mudaliar v Manikka Mudaliar, P C (1909), 32 M, 400 and v Imdad Ahmad v Pateshri Partap Narain Singh, P C (1909), 32 A, 241

(6) Mauladad Khan v Abdul Sattar 39 A, 426 (1917)

(7) Protap Chunder v R, 11 C L R, 25 (1882), per White, J, referred to in Rohimuddi v R 20 C, 353, 357 (1892), but see R v Ramlochun, 18 W R, Cr, 15 (1872) The case of Protap Chunder v. R, 11 C L R, 25 (1882), was followed in Milan Khan v Sagai Bepari, 23 C, 347 349 (1895), Laljee Mahomed v Guzdar, 43 C, 838 (1914) The Court is bound in forming its conclusions as to the credibility of the witnesses to attach great weight to the opinion which the Judge who heard them has expressed upon that matter, R v Madhub Chunder, 21 W R, Cr, 13 (1874).

more as if it was a special appeal than a regular appeal; and because he did not find sufficient on the record to convince him that the Magistrate was entirely wrong, he therefore affirmed his decision. But the Judge was in the situation of an Appellate Court in which the matter came before him on regular appeal, and he ought to have judged, as best he could, from the materials put before him in the Magistrate's written judgment, whether or not as a matter of fact the prisoners had committed the offence of which they had been convicted. If the evidence which came before him—whatever its shape—was not sufficient to reasonably satisfy him that the prisoners had been rightly convicted, he ought to have acquitted them."(1) An Appellate Court is bound precisely in the same way as the Court of first instance to test evidence extrinsically as well as intrinsically(2)

While there is a prerogative right in the Crown to review the course of Justice in Criminal Cases, the Privy Council will only exercise it when injustice of a serious or substantial character has occurred and will not intervene merely because some evidence has been improperly admitted when, without such evidence, the same conclusion might have been properly reached.(3)

As for the admissibility of additional evidence on appeal under O. XLI, r. 27, of the Civil Procedure Code, it has been held that the legitimate occasion for this arises only when on examining the evidence as it stands some defect becomes apparent(4), and that the refusal by an Appellate Court to admit such additional evidence in the exercise of its discretion will not afford ground for a Second Appeal(5), and that a defendant who did not object at the time cannot object on the ground that the admission of such evidence is not in accordance with O. XLI, r. 27(6), and that if it impeaches testimony it should not be admitted without giving the impeached witness an opportunity to contradict it (7) As for the 'strict proof' required in Review under section 626 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 (now represented by O. XLVII, r. 4), it has been recently held by the Calcutta High Court that the word 'strict' here refers to the formality and not to the sufficiency of the evidence(8), and it was said that strict proof means anything which may serve directly or indirectly to convince a Court and has been brought before it in strict compliance with this Act.

"May presume."

4. Whenever it is provided by this Act that the Court may presume(9) a fact, it may either regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved(10), or may call for proof of it:

(1) Kheraj Mullah v. Janab Mullah, 20 W. R., Cr., 13 (1873), per Phear, J., referred to in Rahimuddi v. R., supra: see also remarks of Mitter, J., in the petition of Goomanee, 17 W. R., Cr., 59 (1872); Shitappa v Shidlingappa, 15 B., 11 (1891); Kanchan Mallick v. Emperor, 42 C., 374 (1915).

(2) In re Goomanee, 17 W. R., Cr., 59 (1872)

(3) Dal Singh v. King-Emperor, 44 I. A., 137 (1917); see Clifford v. King-Emperor, 19 C. L. J., 107 (1914); In re Dillet, 12 App. Cas., 459 (1887).

(4) Krishnama Chariar v. Narasimha Chariar, (1908), 31 M., 114; Daji Baboji v. Sakharam Krishna, 38 B., 665 (1914). Jeremiah v. Vas, 36 M., 457 (1911); Garden Reach Spinning Co. v. Secretary of State, 42 C., 675 (1915).

(5) Durga Prasad v. Jai Narain (1911). 33 A., 379; Ram Piari v. Kallu (1910). 23 A., 121.

(6) Jagarnath Pershad v. Hanuman Pershad (1909), 36 C., 833; and on this question of admissibility of additional evidence on appeal see also Kessowji Issur v. Great Indian Peninsular Railway Co, P. C. (1907), 31 B., 381; and 34 I. A., 115; and Secretary of State for India v. Manjeshwar Krishnaya (1908), 31 M., 415.

(7) Jagrani Koer v. Kuar Durga Prasad, 41 I. A., 76 (1913); 36 A., 93.

(8) Ahid Khondkar v. Mahendra Lal De, 42 C., 831 (1915), Jenkins, C. J., and Woodroffe, J.

(9) Shafiq-un-nissa v. Shaban Ali, 26 A., 581, 586 (1904).

(10) That which rebuts, or tends to rebut, a presumption, which is not declared to be conclusive, is relevant and may be proved; v. s. 9, post.

Whenever it is directed by this Act that the Court shall presume a fact it shall regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved: "Shall presume."

When one fact is declared by this Act to be conclusive proof of another, the Court shall, on proof of the one fact, regard the other as proved, and shall not allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving it. "Conclusive proof."

ss. 86, 87, 88, 90, 114 ("May presume") ss. 112, 113 ("Conclusive proof.") ss. 79, 80, 81 82, 83, 84, 85, 89, 105 ("Shall presume.") s 41 (Judgment when conclusive proof.)

COMMENTARY.

Presumptions. Inferences or presumptions are always necessarily drawn wherever the testimony is circumstantial; but presumptions, specially so-called, are based upon that wide experience of a connection existing between the facta probantia and the factum probandum which warrants a presumption from the one to the other wherever the two are brought into contiguity.(1) Presumptions according to English text-writers are either (a) of law, or (b) of fact.

Of law. Presumptions of law or artificial presumptions, are arbitrary inferences which the law expressly directs the Judge to draw from particular facts and may be either conclusive or rebuttable. They are founded either on the connection usually found by experience to exist between certain things, or on natural law, or on the principles of justice, or on motives of public policy. Conclusive presumptions of law are "rules determining the quantity of evidence requisite for the support of any particular averment, which is not permitted to be overcome by any proof that the fact is otherwise. They consist chiefly of those cases in which the long experienced connection just alluded to has been found so general and uniform as to render it expedient for the common good that this connection should be taken to be inseparable and universal. They have been adopted by common consent, from motives of public policy, for the sake of greater certainty, and the promotion of peace and quiet in the community, and therefore it is that all corroborating evidence is dispensed with, and all opposing evidence is forbidden."(2) Rebuttable presumptions of law are, as well as the former, "the result of the general experience of a connection between certain facts or things, the one being ususally found to be the companion or the effect of the other. The connection, however, in this class is not so intimate or so uniform as to be conclusively presumed to exist in every case; yet it is so general that the law itself, without the aid of a jury, infers the one fact from the proved existence of the other in the absence of all opposing evidence. In this mode the law defines the nature and the amount of the evidence which is sufficient to establish a primâ facie case, and to throw the burden of proof upon the other party, and if no opposing evidence is offered, the jury are bound to find in favour of the presumption (3) A contrary verdict might be set aside as being against evidence. The rules in this class of presumptions,

(1) Norton, Ev, 97; see Best, Ev, §§ 299, 42, 43, 296, et seq., pp. 58, 281, and Wills' Circ. Ev, 6th Ed, 22; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 385—387. See s 114, post

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 71; Best, Ev, p 58, § 304; the Evidence Act notices two cases of conclusive presumptions (ss 112, 113). It is a question, however, whether the presumption mentioned in s 112 is not after all a rebuttable presumption; for the section permits of evidence being offered of non-access (Norton, Ev., 97) and s 113, is ultra vires (Whitley Stokes, 835), see also Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 362; Steph Introd, 174, and notes to ss. 112-3, post, and proceedings of the Legislative Council 12th March 1872, pp 234, 235 of the supplement to the Gazette of India 20th March 1872.

(3) Ch VII of the Act deals with this subject (of presumptions) as follows —
First it lays down the general principles as in the former, have been adopted by common consent from motives of public policy and for [illegible] not as in the former class forbidding all [illegible] with it till some proof is given on the [illegible] raised. Thus, as men do not generally violate the Penal Code, the law presumes every man innocent; but some men do transgress it; and therefore evidence is received to repel this presumption."(1)

Of fact. Presumptions of fact or natural presumptions are inferences which the mind naturally and logically draws from given facts without the help of legal direction (2) They are always rebuttable. They can hardly be said with propriety to belong to that branch of the law which treats of presumptive evidence (3) "They are in truth but mere arguments of which the major premiss is not a rule of law, they belong equally to any and every subject-matter, and are to be judged by the common and received tests of the truth of propositions and the validity of arguments (4) They depend upon their own natural efficacy in generating belief, as derived from those connections which are shown by experience, irrespective of any legal relations. They differ from presumptions of law in this essential respect, that while those are reduced to fixed rules, and constitute a branch of the system of jurisprudence, these merely natural presumptions are derived wholly and directly from the circumstances of the particular case by means of the common experience of mankind, without the aid or control of any rules of law. Such, for example, is the inference of guilt drawn from the discovery of a broken knife in the pocket of the prisoner, the other part of the blade being found sticking in the window of a house which, by means of such an instrument, had been burglariously entered. These presumptions remain the same under whatever law the legal effect of the facts, when found, is to be decided."(5) So again it has been held that when from a certain set of facts a Court infers a lost grant the process is one of inference of fact and not of legal conclusion (6) Presumptions of law are based, like which regulate the burden of proof (ss 101—106) It then enumerates the cases in which the burden of proof is determined in particular cases not by the relation of the parties to the cause but by presumptions (ss 107—111). Such presumptions affect the ordinary rule as to the burden of proof that he who affirms must prove He who affirms that a man is dead must usually prove it, but if he shows that the man has not been heard of for seven years, he shifts the burden of proof upon his adversary, who must displace the presumption which has arisen. Steph Introd, 173, 174; see Norton, Ev, 97 and proceedings of the Legislative Council cited ante.

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, §§ 109, 110: Best, Ev., § 314 See observations as to the treatment of rebuttable presumptions by this Act in Whitley Stokes, 835.

(2) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 3: "Such inferences are formed not by virtue of any law but by the spontaneous operation of the reasoning faculty: all that the law does for them is to recognise the propriety of their being so drawn if the Judge think fit" Cunningham, Ev, 84; Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 29—30

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 214

(4) Sir James Fitzjames Stephen divides presumptions of fact in English law into two classes —(1) Bare presumptions of fact which are nothing but arguments to which the Court attaches whatever value it pleases; (2) certain presumptions which though liable to be rebutted, are regarded as being something more than mere maxims, though it is by no means easy to say how much more. An instance of such a presumption is to be found in the rule that recent possession of stolen goods unexplained raises a presumption that the possessor is either the thief or a receiver, Steph. Introd, 174 In this Act presumptions of fact partake of the character of class (1), v post; see Taylor, Ev, § 111

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 214, see Wills' Circ. Ev, passim, see also other instances of this class of presumptions in s 114, post; and Best, Ev, § 315 English text-writers also deal with mixed presumptions or presumptions of mixed law and fact. see Norton, Ev, 97; Best, Ev, § 324

(6) Kashinath Bhuttacharjee v. Murari Chandra Pal, 31 C L. J, 501. where it is stated that the gist of the principle upon which a lost grant is presumed, is that the state of affairs is otherwise unexplained.

presumptions of fact, on the uniformity of deduction which experience proves to be justifiable, they differ in being invested by the law with the quality of a rule, which directs that they must be drawn; they are not permissive, like natural presumptions, which may or may not be drawn.(1)

Scope of the section.

The abovementioned section appears to point at these two classes of presumptions, those of fact and those of law. The first clause points at presumptions of fact, the second at rebuttable presumptions of law, and the third, at conclusive presumptions of law.(2) As has been already mentioned, presumptions of fact are really in the nature of mere arguments or maxims The sections which deal with such presumptions have been noted above (3) Of these sections, s. 114 is perhaps the most important "The terms of this section are such as to reduce to their proper position of mere maxims which are to be applied to facts by the Courts in their discretion, a large number of presumptions, to which English law gives, to a greater or less extent an artificial value Nine of the most important of them are given by way of illustration "(4) Of course others besides those specified may be, and are in fact frequently, drawn (5) In respect of such presumptions Courts of Justice are enjoined to use common sense and experience in judging of the effect of particular facts and are subject to no technical rules whatever. This section renders it a judicial discretion to decide in each case whether the fact which under section 114 may be presumed has been proved by virtue of that presumption. Circumstances may, however, induce the Court to call for confirmatory evidence (6) Sections 79-85, 89 and [illegible] described by English [illegible] others to be found [illegible]tion embraces those presumptions described by these text-writers as conclusive presumptions of law The Evidence Act appears to create two such presumptions by ss 112 and 113(8); and there are some others to be found in the Indian Statute Book (9)

English text-writers have, it has been said, in treating of the subject of presumptions, engrafted upon the Law of Evidence many subjects which in no way belong to it, and numerous so-called presumptions are merely portions of the substantive law under another form.(10) "All notice of certain general legal principles, which are sometimes called presumptions but which in reality belong rather to the Substantive Law than to the Law of Evidence, was designedly omitted" (from this Act) "not because the truth of those principles was denied, but because it was not considered that the Evidence Act was the proper place for them. The most important of these is the presumption, as it is sometimes called, that every one knows the law The principle is far more correctly stated in the maxim, that ignorance of the law does not excuse a breach of it, which is one of the fundamental principles of Criminal Law" Of

(1) Norton, Ev, 97

(2) Norton, Ev, 96, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 63, 362, 363

(3) Ss 86, 87, 88, 90, in fact all the sections from ss 79 to 90 inclusive are illustrations of, and founded upon, the maxim, Omnia esse rite acta. Norton, Ev, 260, Powel, Ev, 9th Ed., 386

(4) Steph Introd, 174, 175 Proceedings of the Legislative Council, cited in App AA, see s 114, post

(5) See notes to s 114, post

(6) Raghunath v. Hoti Lal, 1 A L J, 14 (1904)

(7) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 363

(8) But see pp 118, 119, ante

(9) See for example, Act XXI of 1879, s 5 (Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition), Cr Pr Code, s 87 (Proclamation for person absconding) Act I of 1894 s 6 (Land Acquisition), s 8, Act 1 (B C) of 1895 (Recovery of Public Demands) Now see (B C) Act III of 1913 and (B and O) Act IV of 1914, see Bal Mokoond v Jirjuahun, 9 C 271 (1882) Act II (B C) of 1869 s 26 and Act I of 1903 (Chota Nagpore Tenures), see s 35, post, Act XXVII of 1871, s 6 (Criminal Tribes) Act XIV of 1874, s 4, S (Scheduled Districts, as amended by Act XXVIII of 1920), Act IX of 1856, s 3 (Bills of Lading), see W Nicol & Co v Castle, 9 Bom H C R, 331 (1872) see notes to s 35, post

(10) Sir J Fitzjames Stephen, Proceedings of the Legislative Council, ante such a kind also is the presumption that every one must be held to intend the natural consequences of his own acts (1) The like presumptions and others of a similar character belong to the province of Substantive Law, and have been dealt with by Statute(2), or have gradually come to be recognised as binding rules through the course of judicial decision.(3) In this sense the subject of presumptions is co-extensive with the entire field of law, and each particular presumption must in each case be sought under the particular head of Law to which it refers.(4)

Inference. This Chapter, as originally drafted, contains the following section:— "Courts shall form their opinions on matters of fact by drawing inferences: (a) from the evidence produced to the existence of the facts alleged; (b) from facts proved or disproved to facts not proved; (c) from the absence of witnesses who, or of evidence which, might have been produced(5); (d) from the admissions, statements, conduct and demeanour of the parties and witnesses, and generally from the circumstances of the cases." "The Select Committee decided to omit this section 'as being suitable rather for a treatise than an Act.' The object of its introduction was originally stated to be to point out and put distinctly upon record the fact that to infer and not merely to accept or register evidence is in all cases the duty of the Court."(6) Further, as has been already observed, a distinction must be drawn between the general act of inferring facts in issue from relevant facts, and those inferences which, for the reasons above given, are specifically known as presumptions(7) (v. ante).

(1) Steph Introd, 175, Powell, Ev, 82.
(2) See for example Act V of 1869, Art. 114, Act VIII of 1911 (Indian Articles of War, Presumptive Evidence of Desertion), Act XXI of 1866, s. 21 (Native Converts' Marriages; Presumptive Evidence of Marriage); Act IV of 1872, ss 10, 11 (Punjab Laws; Presumption as to existence of right of pre-emption) and subsequent repealing and amending Acts up to Acts IV and XVII of 1914; Act I of 1877, s 12, repealed and amended in parts by various Acts up to Act VII of 1912 (Specific Relief; Presumption that breach of contract to transfer immovable property cannot be adequately relieved by compensation in money) For an instance, of the conversion of presumptions of the substantive law into statutory rules, see s. 38, Act X of 1865 (Succession Act, as amended by Act XVIII of 1919). In England the rules as to substantial or cumulative gifts are treated as rules of presumption; the abovementioned section deals with these rules without any reference to a presumption; see G. S. Henderson, The Law of Wills in India, p 192.
(3) See notes to s. 114, post.
(4) See Cunningham, Ev., 301—303.
(5) See s 114, ill. (g), post.
(6) Cited in Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 63.
(7) As to the ambiguity attending the use of the term "presumption," see Best, Ev., p 306; ib, § 299.

CHAPTER II

Of the Relevancy of Facts

As with many other questions connected with the Law of Evidence, the theory of relevancy has been the subject of varying opinions. Relevancy has been said by the framer of the Act to mean the connection of events as cause and effect.(1) But this theory as was admitted afterwards, "was expressed too widely in certain parts, and not widely enough in others."(2) For the former definition the following was substituted: "The word 'relevant' means that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that, according to the common course of events, one either taken by itself or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present or future existence or non-existence of the other."(3) But this is "relevancy" in a logical sense. Legal relevancy, which is essential to admissible evidence, requires a higher standard of evidentiary force. It includes logical relevancy, and for reasons of particular convenience, demands a close connection between the fact to be proved and the fact offered to prove it. All evidence must be logically relevant—that is absolutely essential. The fact, however, that it is logically relevant does not insure admissibility; it must also be legally relevant; a fact which 'in connection with other facts renders probable the existence of a fact in issue,' may still be rejected, if in the opinion of the Judge and under the circumstances of the case it be considered essentially misleading or remote."(4) The tendency, however, of modern jurisprudence is to admit most evidence logically relevant. Logical relevancy may not thus be assumed to be the sole test of admissibility; relevancy and admissibility are not co-extensive and interchangeable terms. "Public policy, considerations of fairness, the particular necessity for reaching speedy decisions,—these and similar reasons cause constantly the necessary rejection of much evidence entirely relevant All admissible evidence is relevant; but all relevant evidence is not admissible."(5) The question of relevancy strictly so called presents, as a rule, litt e difficulty. Any educated person, whether lay or legal, can say whether a c r- cumstance has probative force, which is the meaning of relevancy. This is an affair of logic and not of law. It is, otherwise, with the question of admissibility which must be determined according to rules of law. A fact may be relevant, but it may be excluded on grounds of policy as already noted. A communication to a legal adviser may be in the highest degree relevant, but other considerations exclude its reception as a privileged communication Again a fact may be relevant but the proof of it may be such as is not allowed

(1) Steph Introd, 68, see generally as to Relevancy, Introduction.

(2) Steph Dig, p 158, see Whitley Stokes 820, 851, note

(3) Steph Dig, Art 1 "I have substituted the present definition for it, not because I think it (the former definition) wrong, but because I think it gives rather the principle on which the rule depends than a convenient practical rule," ib, p 158

(4) Best, Ev, p 251

(5) Ib, 252, thus a communication to a legal adviser, or a criminal confession improperly obtained, may, undoubtedly, be relevant in a high degree They are none the less inadmissible, ib See also Taylor, Ev, §§ 298—316, Powell, Ev, 527, 528, Steph Introd Steph. Dig, Arts 1 and 2, and Appendix, Note 1, The Theory of Relevancy by G C Whitworth, Bombay, 1881.

as in the case of the "hearsay" rule.(1) In this Chapter the word "relevancy" seems to mean the having some probative force. In the title to this Part it appears to denote admissibility.(2) However, the considerations mentioned go merely to the theory of relevancy and to the construction of, or definitions given in, the Act as based on that theory. For practical purposes one fact is relevant to another and admissible(3) when the one is connected with the other in any of the ways referred to in the provisions of this Act relating to the relevancy of facts.(4) Relevancy, in the sense in which it is used by the framer of the Act, is fully defined in ss. 6-11, both inclusive: "These sections enumerate specifically the different instances of the connection between cause and effect which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings. They are designedly [illegible] each other. Thus a motive [illegible] bsequent conduct influenced [illegible] under s. 11 would, in most cases, be relevant under other sections."(5) Not only may the acts and words of a party himself, if relevant, be given in evidence, but when the party is, by the substantive law, rendered liable, Civilly or Criminally, for the acts, contracts, or representations of third persons, and such facts are material, they may generally be given in evidence for or against him as if they were his own.(6) The chief instances of such relationships (which must in the first instance be proved aliunde to the satisfaction of the Courts) are agency(7), partnership(8)

---

(1) As to the meaning of the expression "hearsay is no evidence," see Steph Dig, p 180, Arts. 14 and 62, and notes to s 60, post

(2) Whitley Stokes, 849

(3) Lala Lakmi v Sayed Haider, 3 C. W N, cclxviii (1899), ["Relevant" in this Act means admissible]

(4) S 3, ante, v ss 5—55, post

(5) Steph Introd, 72; see criticism of these sections in Whitley Stokes, p. 819, "two of these sections are so drawn (ss 7, 11), as to permit evidence of matter wholly irrelevant," ib., and see notes to s 11, post, but see also Steph Introd, 160, and Best, Ev, 522 In the sections mentioned in the text the subject of circumstantial evidence is distributed into its elements First Report of the Select Committee, 31st March, 1871

(6) See Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 74.

(7) In Civil cases the acts and representations of the agent will bind the principal if made within the scope of the authority conferred upon him, or subsequently ratified by the principal (Act IX of 1872, ss 182—189, 196, 226); as to implied authority, see In re Cunningham, 36 Ch D, 532; Walteau v. Fenwick (1893), 1 Q B, 346; and generally as to agency, Contract Act, ss. 182—238; as to responsibility in a tort and the doctrine of respondeat superior, see remarks of Jessel, M R in Smith v Keal, 9 Q B D, 340, 351, and judgment of Willes, J., in Barwick v English Joint Stock Bank, L R., 2 Ex. 259, 265, 266; Thorne v Heard (1894), 1 Ch. 599; Malcolm Brunker & Co v Waterhouse & Sons (1908); Times L R, v 24 p 855; a party is not in general criminally responsible for the acts of his agents and servants unless such acts have been directed or assented to by him: Cooper v Slade, 6 H L C., 746, 793, 794, per Lord Wensleydale, Lord Melville's case, 29 How. St Tr, 764; The Queen's case, 2 B & B., 306, 367; Cheshire v. Bailey (1905); 1 K. B, 237 See, generally, Taylor, Ev., 115, 602—605, 905—906; Best, Ev., § 532, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 74, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 421; Evans, Principal and Agent, 123—200, and passim, 2nd Ed, Beven on Negligence, 271—312, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 12th Ed., 46, Roscoe, N P. Ev., 69—71; T. A. Pearson, "The Law of Agency in British India," 1890 Bowstead, Dig of Agency, Arts, 79—82, 103, 104. Norton, Ev., 144, as to admissions by agents, see ss 17, 18, post: and as to notice given to agents, s 14, post. The Madras High Court has held in several cases that an acknowledgment or payment by one partner does not bind others in absence of proof that it was authorized by them. See Valesubramania Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettier, 32 M., 421 (1909); Shaik Mohideen v Official Assignee, 35 M, 142 (1912), K R V Firm v. Seetharamaswami, 37 M, 146 (1914) But see Shenmuganatha Chettier v Srinivasa Ayyar, 40 M, 722 (1917), following Karmeli Abdulla v Karimji Jivaji, P. C. 39 B, 261 (1915)

(8) The liability of co-partners for the act of their partner is established on the ground of agency, each partner being the agent for the others for all purposes within the scope of the joint business; Re Cunningham, supra; Lindley on Partnership 5th Ed, 80—90, 124—263; Pollock on Partnership; Taylor, Ev., §§ 743—752;

the liability of Companies for the acts and representations of their directors or other agents(1) and conspiracy in tort or crime.(2)

The following sections have been considered by the author and others to be the most important, as all will admit; they are the most original part of the Act, as they affirm positively what facts may be proved, whereas the English law assumes this to be known, and merely declares negatively that certain facts shall not be proved In the opinion of many others the English law proceeds upon sounder and more practical grounds While importance is claimed for these sections in that they are said to make the whole body of law to which they belong easily intelligible, yet such importance cannot, owing to the provisions of ss. 165 and 167, cause an undue weight to be attached to their strict applications when a failure to so strictly apply them has not been the cause of an improper decision of the case. For the improper admission or rejection of evidence in Indian Courts has no effect at all unless the Court thinks that the evidence improperly dealt with either turned or ought to have turned the scale (3) A Judge, moreover, if he doubts as to the relevancy of a fact suggested, can, if he thinks it will lead to anything relevant, ask about it himself (4)

Evidence may be given of facts in issue and relevant facts

5. Evidence may be given in any suit or proceeding of the existence or non-existence of every fact in issue, and of such other facts as are hereinafter declared to be relevant, and of no others.

Explanation—This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B by beating him with a club with the intention of causing his death.

At A's trial the following facts are in issue —

A's beating B with the club,

A's causing B's death by such beating,

A's intention to cause B's death.

(b) A suitor does not bring with him, and have in readiness for production at the first hearing of the case, a bond on which he relies. This section does not enable him to produce the bond or prove its contents at a subsequent stage of the proceedings, otherwise than in accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure

Principles.—The reception in evidence of facts other than those mentioned in the section tends to distract the attention of the tribunal and to waste its time Frustra probatur quod probatum non relevat. The laws of evidence

---

Roscoe, N. P Ev., 71, Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act), ss. 239—266, as to admissions by partners, see ss. 17, 18, post

(1) As to the general principles of agency as applied to Companies in the course of, or after formation, see Lindley on Company Law, 5th Ed, 143—181, Companies can only be bound by the acts of their real or ostensible agents, ib, 182, liability for torts, ib, 208, see also Act VII of 1913 (as amended by Acts X and XI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920) Indian Companies, Commentaries on the same by L P Russell (1888) a Company is not liable for acts done ultra vires, Russell, 12, Brice on ultra vires, as to admissions by the officers of a Company, see ss 17, 18, post

(2) See s 10, post, and notes thereto

(3) Steph Introd, 72, 73, aliter in England

(4) Ib, 72, 73, 162, s. 165, post Best Ev, 86, as to "indicative" evidence, ib, § 93

as in the case of the "hearsay" rule.(1) In this Chapter the word "relevancy" seems to mean the having some probative force. In the title to this Part it appears to denote admissibility.(2) However, the considerations mentioned go merely to the theory of relevancy and to the construction of, or definitions given in, the Act as based on that theory. For practical purposes one fact is ... nected with the other ... t relating to the rele- ... used by the framer of ... se sections enumerate ... veen cause and effect which occur most frequently in judicial proceedings. They are designedly ... way as to overlap each other. Thus a motive ... its cause (s. 7); subsequent conduct influenced ... 7). Facts relevant under s. 11 would, in most cases, be relevant under other sections."(5) Not only may the acts and words ... when the party is, by ... for the acts, contracts, ... e material, they may generally be given in evidence for or against him as if they were his own.(6) The chief instances of such relationships (which must in the first instance be proved aliunde to the satisfaction of the Courts) are agency(7), partnership(8)

(1) As to the meaning of the expression "hearsay is no evidence," see Steph Dig, p 180, Arts 14 and 62, and notes to s 60, post

(2) Whitley Stokes, 849.

(3) Lala Lakmi v Sayed Haider, 3 C W N., cclxviii (1899); ["Relevant" in this Act means admissible]

(4) S 3, ante, v ss 5—55, post

(5) Steph. Introd., 72, see criticism of these sections in Whitley Stokes, p. 819, "two of these sections are so drawn (ss 7, 11), as to permit evidence of matter wholly irrelevant," ib, and see notes to s 11, post, but see also Steph. Introd, 160, and Best, Ev, 522 In the sections mentioned in the text the subject of circumstantial evidence is distributed into its elements First Report of the Select Committee, 31st March, 1871

(6) See Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 74.

(7) In Civil cases the acts and representations of the agent will bind the principal if made within the scope of the authority conferred upon him, or subsequently ratified by the principal (Act IX of 1872, ss. 182—189, 196, 226), as to implied authority, see In re Cunningham, 36 Ch. D, 532, Waltean v Fenwick (1893), 1 Q B, 346; and generally as to agency, Contract Act, ss 182—238; as to responsibility in a tort and the doctrine of respondent superior, see remarks of Jessel, M. R. in Smith v Keal, 9 Q B. D, 340, 351, and judgment of Willes, J, in Barwick v. English Joint Stock Bank, L. R, 2 Ex. 259, 265, 266; Thorne v. Heard (1894), 1 Ch, 599; Malcolm Brunker & Co. v. Waterhouse & Sons (1908); Times L. R., v 24 p 855; a party is not in general criminally responsible for the acts of his agents and servants unless such acts have been directed or assented to by him: Cooper v. Slade, 6 H. L. C, 746, 793, 794, per Lord Wensleydale, Lord Melville's case, 29 How St Tr, 764; The Queen's case, 2 B & B, 306, 367; Cheshire v. Bailey (1905); 1 K. B, 237. See, generally, Taylor, Ev, 115, 602—605, 905—906; Best, Ev., § 532, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 74; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 421; Evans, Principal and Agent, 123—200, and passim, 2nd Ed, Beven on Negligence, 271—312, Roscoe, Cr Ev., 12th Ed., 46, Roscoe, N. P Ev, 69—71; T. A. Pearson, "The Law of Agency in British India," 1890 Bowstead, Dig. of Agency, Arts, 79—82, 103, 104. Norton, Ev, 144; as to admissions by agents, see ss 17, 18, post · and as to notice given to agents, s 14, post. The Madras High Court has held in several cases that an acknowledgment or payment by one partner does not bind others in absence of proof that it was authorized by them. See Valesubramania Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettier, 32 M, 421 (1909); Shaik Mohideen v Official Assignee, 35 M, 142 (1912); K. R. V. Firm v. Seetharamaswami, 37 M, 146 (1914) But see Shenmuganatha Chettier v Srinivasa Ayyar, 40 M, 722 (1917); following Karmeli Abdulla v Karimji Jivaji, P. C. 39 B, 261 (1915)

(8) The liability of co-partners for the act of their partner is established on the ground of agency, each partner being the agent for the others for all purposes within the scope of the joint business; Re Cunningham, supra, Lindley on Partnership 5th Ed, 80—90, 124—263; Pollock on Partnership; Taylor, Ev., §§ 743—752;

the liability of Companies for the acts and representations of their directors or other agents(1) and conspiracy in tort or crime (2)

The following sections have been considered by the author and others to be the most important, as all will admit; they are the most original part of the Act, as they affirm positively what facts may be proved, whereas the English law assumes this to be known, and merely declares negatively that certain facts shall not be proved. In the opinion of many others the English law proceeds upon sounder and more practical grounds. While importance is claimed for these sections in that they are said to make the whole body of law to which they belong easily intelligible, yet such importance cannot, owing to the provisions of ss 165 and 167, cause an undue weight to be attached to their strict applications when a failure to so strictly apply them has not been the cause of an improper decision of the case. For the improper admission or rejection of evidence in Indian Courts has no effect at all unless the Court thinks that the evidence improperly dealt with either turned or ought to have turned the scale. (3) A Judge, moreover, if he doubts as to the relevancy of a fact suggested, can, if he thinks it will lead to anything relevant, ask about it himself.(4)

5. Evidence may be given in any suit or proceeding of the existence or non-existence of every fact in issue, and of such other facts as are hereinafter declared to be relevant, and of no others. Evidence may be given of facts in issue and relevant facts

Explanation.—This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B by beating him with a club with the intention of causing his death.

At A's trial the following facts are in issue:—

A's beating B with the club,

A's causing B's death by such beating,

A's intention to cause B's death.

(b) A suitor does not bring with him, and have in readiness for production at the first hearing of the case, a bond on which he relies This section does not enable him to produce the bond or prove its contents at a subsequent stage of the proceedings, otherwise than in accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure

Principles.—The reception in evidence of facts other than those mentioned in the section tends to distract the attention of the tribunal and to waste its time. Frustra probatur quod probatum non relevat The laws of evidence

---

Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 71, Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act), ss 239—266, as to admissions by partners, see ss 17, 18, post

(1) As to the general principles of agency as applied to Companies in the course of, or after formation, see Lindley on Company Law, 5th Ed, 143—181, Companies can only be bound by the acts of their real or ostensible agents, ib, 182, liability for torts, ib, 208; see also Act VII of 1913 (as amended by Acts X and XI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920) Indian Companies, Commentaries on the same by L P Russell (1888): a Company is not liable for acts done ultra vires, Russell, 12, Brice on ultra vires; as to admissions by the officers of a Company see ss 17, 18, post

(2) See s 10, post, and notes thereto.

(3) Steph Introd, 72, 73; aliter in England

(4) Ib, 72, 73, 162, s 165, post. Best, Ev, 86, as to "indicative" evidence, ib, § 93 are framed with a view to a trial at Nisi Prius, and a proceeding at Nisi Prius ought to be restrained within practical limits.(1) s 3 ("Evidence") ss. 136, 162 (Judge to decide as to admissibility)

s. 3 ("Fact in issue.") s 3 ("Fact") ss. 145, 146, 148, 153, 155, 158 (Relevancy of questions to witness.)
s 3 ("Relevant")
ss. 5, 55 ("Of the Relevancy of facts.") s. 165 (Judge's power to put questions.)
s 60 (Oral Evidence must be direct) ss 64, 165, Prov 2 (Proof of document by primary evidence) s. 167 (Improper admission or rejection of evidence)

Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civil Procedure Code, (2nd Ed) O XIII, pp 805-812, Criminal Procedure Code, s. 298; Civil Procedure Code, O. XVIII, pp. 842-849; Criminal Procedure Code, s. 359; Steph. Introd, 12; Chs. II, III; Steph Dig, Art 2; Best, Ev., § 251, p 251, Taylor, Ev., § 316, Wigmore, Ev., §§ 9-21.

COMMENTARY.

"And of no others." [illegible] therefore excludes everything which is not covered by the pur-view [illegible] derec [illegible] of the following sections(3), or the provisions of some other Statute saved by(4), or enacted subsequent to this Act. These words in conjunction with the language of other portions of the Act further tend to show that the Court should, of itself, and irrespective of the parties, take objection to evidence tendered before it which is not admissible under the provisions of this Act.(5) This [illegible] proof, and Part [illegible] ontract between [illegible] xcluded if those [illegible] nay not be legal [illegible] be a document which the parties by their contract have made proof of that fact.(7)

Admissibility. All questions as to the admissibility of evidence are for the Judge.(8) Where a Judge is in doubt as to the admissibility of a particular piece of evidence, he should declare in favour of admissibility rather than of

(1) Best, Ev., 251; R v. Parbhudas, 11 Bom H C R., 90, 91 (1874), ante; Taylor, Ev, § 316, Managers of the Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, 47 L. T. (H L.), 29, 34, per Lord O'Hagan, see also judgment of Lord Watson as to the distinction between evidence having a direct relation to the principal question in dispute and evidence relating to collateral facts which will, if established, tend to elucidate that question; and ante, Introduction. "Facts, which are not themselves in issue, may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue, and these may be called collateral facts" First Report of the Select Committee, 31st March, 1871.

(2) The Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A. (1899), at p. 43; Emp. v. Panchu Das, 47 C., 671 (F. B.); per Mookerjee, J., s. c., 24 C. W. N., 501; "but the principle of exclusion should not be so applied as to exclude matter which may be essential for the ascertainment of truth" R v. Abdullah, 7 A., 40 (1885); and see observations on the modern rule as to admissibility in Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society, L. R., 4 C. P. D., 109. But the question in India is whether the Act permits the particular evidence. If it is essential in any case for the ascertainment of the truth probably it does But the question again is, does the Act allow the evidence sought to be produced.

(3) Lekhraj Kuar v. Mohpal Singh, 7 I A., 70, ante; Abinash Chandra v. Paresh Nath, 9 C. W. N., 402, 406 (1904).

(4) S. 2, ante.

(5) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 482; Whitley Stokes, 854. See following paragraphs.

(6) S. 91, post; and cf. ss. 92, 115—117, 121—127.

(7) Oriental Government Security Life Assurance Company, Ld. v. Sarat Chandra, 20 B., 103 (1895).

(8) S. 136, post.

non-admissibility.(1) "Under the Evidence Act admissibility is the rule, and exclusion the exception, and circumstances which under other systems might operate to exclude are, under the Act, to be taken into consideration only in judging of the value to be allowed to evidence when admitted."(2) "The object of a trial in every case is to ascertain the truth in respect of the charge made For this purpose it is necessary that the Court should be in a position to estimate, at its true worth, the evidence given by each witness, and nothing that is calculated to assist it in doing so ought to be excluded, unless, for reasons of public policy, the law expressly requires its exclusion."(3) "The Judges' apprehension of possible danger in admitting certain evidence cannot create a rule for excluding it."(4) "Whether the Court does or does not consider evidence given on another occasion and between other parties appropriate and valuable, for the decision of the case which is before it, is not of itself a reason for the admission or rejection of such evidence. The Court is bound to try the matter between the parties who are before it upon such evidence as those parties in their discretion produce for the purpose, and at the time when the evidence is tendered to decide whether or not it is legally admissible."(5) The value of evidence cannot affect its admissibility.(6) Questions as to the admissibility of evidence should be decided as they arise and should not be reserved until judgment in the case is given.(7) Where the question was as to the admissibility of certain documents, it was remarked :—"What, if all such documents are excluded, shall we have left but oral evidence ? That this is not a desirable result probably no one will deny ; and in all discussions on the law of evidence, it seems to me very desirable to consider how that result can be avoided."(8) No argument in favour of the exclusion of evidence can be founded on the inability of Judicial Officers to perform the task of attributing to it its proper influence in the decision : to exclude evidence because in some cases Judges might found upon it a wrong conclusion would be utterly inconsistent with the

(1) The Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, supra, at p. 26 and Moriarty v. London C & D. Ry Co, L. R, 5 Q B, 314, 323, per Lush, J. : "I also think on further consideration the evidence was receivable. I had formed no definite opinion on the subject at the trial It was a new point and I adopted what I considered to be the usual and the safer course, where evidence is pressed by one party, and objected to by the other, of receiving the evidence at the peril of the party presenting it" But see also R. v Parbhudas, "the tendency to stray from the issues is so strong in this country, that any indulgence of it beyond the clear provisions of the law is certain to lead to future embarrassment," per West, J, 11 Bom H. C. R, 90, 95 (1874) and in Criminal proceedings, it has been observed, that the necessity of confining the evidence to the issue is stronger if possible, than in Civil cases, for when a prisoner is charged with an offence it is of the utmost importance that the facts proved should be such as he can be expected to come prepared to answer, 3 Russ Cr., 368, 5th Ed, cited in R. v. Parbhudas, 11 Bom H C R, 93 (1874); Roscoe, Cr Ev., 85, 12th Ed., 78—79 "It is of high importance that no security for truth, especially in Criminal cases, should be weakened. On our rules of evidence, said Lord Abinger, the property, the liberty and the lives of men depend," per Jardine, J, in R v. Ramchundra Govind, 19 B, 755 (1895) For subordinate Courts whose judgment is subject to appeal the safest course in cases of doubtful relevancy of evidence is to contemplate the possibility of the evidence being admissible and to deal with the case on such a supposition—Madhavrao v Deonak, 21 B, 698 (1896).

(2) R v Monapuna, 16 B, 661, 668 (1892)

(3) R v Uttamchand, 11 Bom H. C. R., 121 (1874)

(4) Per Lord Deman in Wright v Beckett, 1 Moo & R, 414

(5) Gorachand Sircar v Ram Narain, 9 W R, 587 (1868)

(6) R v. Roden, 12 Cox, 630

(7) Jadu Rai v. Bhubotaran Nundy, 17 C, 1 (1887); Ramjiban Serowgy v. Oghur Nath, 2 C W. N, 188 (1898), Rama Karansingh v Mangal Singh, 1 A. L. J. Diary, 224 (1904). See Wigmore, Ev., § 19

(8) Gopeenath Singh v Anundmoyee, 8 W R, at p 169 (1867), per Markby, J, for the procedure with regard to the admission of documentary evidence, see Manson v Golam Kebria, 15 W R., 490 (1871), Issur Chunder v Russeek Lall, W R, 576 (1868).

assumption, on which all rules of law are founded, that the constituted tribunals are fairly competent to carry them out.(1) "To admit documents, not strictly evidence at all, to prop up oral evidence too weak to be relied upon, is not a course which their Lordships would be inclined to approve; and none of the chittahs which have been laid aside by the High Court are shown to have been admissible in evidence according to the laws of evidence regulating the decisions of those Courts. It would expose purchasers to much danger if their possession could be disturbed by inferences from, or statements in, documents of the case (3) Where certain decisions of the Privy Council were referred to, in which it was said that with regard to the admissibility of evidence in the native Courts in India no strict rule can be prescribed, it was remarked as follows —"But these cases, it must be borne in mind, occurred many years ago, at the time when the practice in the Mofussil in this respect was very lax and before the Evidence Act was passed; and the observations of the Privy Council(4) were made, as I humbly conceive, not as approving of this laxity of practice, but rather as excusing it, upon the ground that the Mofussil Courts were not at the time so sufficiently acquainted with our English rules of evidence as to be able to observe them with anything like accuracy. I conceive that one great object of the Evidence Act was to prevent this laxity, and to introduce a more correct and uniform rule of practice than had previously prevailed."(5) "In deciding the question whether certain evidence be admissible or not, it is necessary to look at the object for which it is produced, and the point it is intended to establish: for it may be admissible for one purpose and not another."(6) "In Civil and Criminal cases there is no difference in the rules as to the admissibility of evidence, though there may be a difference in their application; and it may be that a piece of evidence admissible in either class of cases may not be sufficient in a Criminal case, that is, without further evidence."(7) In cases tried by jury it is the duty of the Judge to decide all questions of admissibility, and in his discretion to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties.(8) It is the duty of the Appellate Court to see that this judicial discretion is exercised in a proper manner (9) "The moment a witness commences giving evidence which is inadmissible, he should be stopped by the Court. It is not safe to rely on a subsequent exhortation to the jury to reject the hearsay

---

(1) Ib (and as to standard of value as applied to evidence, ib at p 169).

(2) Eckowrie Singh v. Heeralal Seal, 11 W R (P C.), 2 (1868); s c., 12 Moo. I A, 136 ("Each relaxation is apt to become a precedent for another," ib at p 4), see notes to s 36, post.

(3) Boidonath Parooye v. Russick Lall, 9 W R., 274 (1868).

(4) Unide Rajaha v. Pemmasamy Venkatadry, 7 M. I. A., 128 at p. 137 (1858), s. c, 4 W. R. (P. C.), 121; Naragunty Lutchmeedavamah v. Vengama Naidoo, 9 M. I. A., 66 at p. 90 (1891); s c, 1 W. R. (P. C.), 30; Boodhnarain Singh v. Omrao Singh, 13 M. I. A, 529 (1870); s. c. 15 W. R. (P. C.), 1

(5) Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C. at p. 193 (1880), per Garth, C. J, and as to the reception of loose evidence, v. ib; Hareehur Majoomdar v. Churn Majhee, 22 W R, 355, 356, 357 (1874).

(6) Taylor v. Willans, 2 B. & Ad, 845, 855, per Lord Tenterden, C. J.

(7) R v. Mallory, 15 Cox, 456, 460, per Grove, J, v. ante, notes to s 3, and cases there cited, and see also R. v. Francis, 12 Cox, C C, 612, 616; Lord Melville's Trial, 29 How St Tr, 746, 764 [a fact must be established by the same evidence whether it is to be followed by a Criminal or Civil consequence; but it is a totally different question in the consideration of Criminal as distinguished from Civil justice, how the accused may be affected by the fact when so established]; per Lord Erskine, L C., Best, Ev., § 94.

(8) Cr. Pr. Code, s. 298. See Best., Ev., § 97, cited, post.

(9) R v. Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom. H. C. R, 498 (1873).

evidence and to decide on the legal evidence alone."(1) The duty of a Judge in Civil cases is nowhere laid down so distinctly as this; and it has been said that there may be some doubt as to whether, and, if at all, to what extent, a Judge ought to interfere where no objection is raised by the parties. But if the Courts themselves be passive in this respect the utility of the Code of Evidence may be seriously impaired. Further, having regard to the imperative language of 5th, 60th, 64th, 136th, and 165th sections(2) and of other portions of the Act, it would appear that it was the intention of the Legislature that a Civil Court should, irrespective of objections made by parties, compel observance of the provisions of the law.(3) Procedure as to admission and rejection of documents is dealt with in the undermentioned Order of the Code.(4) The Judge is to decide as to the admissibility of evidence, and may ask in what manner any evidence which is tendered is relevant. He is bound to try a collateral issue when the reception of evidence depends on a preliminary question of fact.(5) The rules of evidence cannot be departed from because there may be a strong moral conviction of guilt.(6) The moral weight of evidence is not the test.(7)

Objections by parties. The proper time to make an objection is in the Court of first instance. For, if it is made at the time when the evidence is tendered, it may be in the power of the party tendering the evidence to obviate the objection if a valid

(1) R v Pitambur Sirdar, 7 W. R, Cr, 25 (1867) Where hearsay is not admissible as evidence it should not be taken down Pitumber Doss v. Ruttun Bullub, W. R, 1864, 213; an à priori consent to abide by the testimony of a certain witness cannot bind the consenting party to hearsay testimony, but only to such evidence as is legally admissible; Luckeemonee v. Shunkuree, 2 W R, 252; R v. Sheik Magon, 5 W. R., Cr, R v Ramgopal, 10 W R, Cr, 75 (1868), R v. Kally Churn, 7 W. R, Cr, 2 [hearsay evidence prohibited]. Re Kedar Nath, 18 W. R, Cr, 16 (1872), R. v Chunder Koomar, 24 W. R, Cr, 77 (1875)

(2) V s 5 "and of no others," s 60, "oral evidence must be direct;" s. 64, "Documents must be proved by primary evidence except, etc.;" s. 165, "nor shall he dispense with primary evidence, etc.;" s 136, "shall admit evidence if relevant and not otherwise"

(3) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, see pp 482, 484—486, where the question is discussed; and see Whitley Stokes, 854. On the other hand it has been said that, subject to certain well-recognised exceptions, the general principle, Omnis consensus tollit errorem, applies to evidence in Civil cases; a maxim which is in one sense of doubtful application under this Act as to Criminal cases Much inadmissible evidence is constantly received in practice, because the opposing counsel either deems it not worth while to object, or thinks its reception will be beneficial to his client. Best, Ev, § 97: In Sheetul Pershad v Junmejoy Mullick, 12 W. R, 244 (1869), the Court said: "It is somewhat difficult to ascertain exactly how matters stood before the Judge: but it rather appears that the objection now taken as to there being no evidence to bring the case within cl 1, s 17, Act X of 1859, was not taken before the Judge There is no doubt that even if the evidence on the record were in itself insufficient, the Judge might properly have decided the case upon the evidence such as it was if the defendant had waived his objection to its insufficiency and consented to its being taken as sufficient." In this case it seems the party dispensed with proof, and the case was not one in which evidence was wrongly admitted As to objections by parties, and admissibility of evidence on appeal, see next paragraph.

(4) Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civ. Pr. Code (2nd Ed), O XVIII, pp. 842—849

(5) S 136, post, and see s 162, post; Cleave v. Jones, 7, Ex, 421; Phillips v. Cole, 10 A. & E., 106.

(6) Barindra Kumar Ghose v. R. (1909), 37 C., 91.

(7) R. v. Baijoo Chowdhree, 25 W. R., Cr, 43 (1876); when it was objected that the moral weight of certain evidence not legally admissible was almost irresistible Lord Campbell, C. J., said: "The moral weight of evidence is not the test: Many facts are excluded by law, which might be important on account of the inconvenience of admitting them:" R. v. Oddy, 5 Cox, C. C, 210, 213; "convictions must be based on substantial and sufficient evidence not merely moral convictions;" R. v. Sorob Roy 5 W R, Cr., 28 (1866); as to judicial disbelief, see dictum in Re Nobodoorga, 7 C L R, 391 (1880)

one.(1) It has been held that where a valid objection is taken to the admissibility of evidence, it is discretionary with the Judge whether he will allow the objection to be withdrawn (2) Some latitude should be allowed to a member of the Bar, insisting in the conduct of his case upon his question being taken down or his objections noted where the Court thinks the question inadmissible or the objection untenable. There ought to be a spirit of give and take between the Bench and Bar in such matters, and every little persistence on the part of a pleader should not be turned into the occasion of a Criminal trial unless the pleader's conduct is so clearly vexatious as to lead to the inference that his intention is to insult or to interrupt the Court.(3)

An objection may be waived, but waiver cannot operate to confer on evidence the character of relevancy (v. post) If the objection is primâ facie sustainable, then the opponent must show the Court that the evidence satisfies the law (4) If, however, the evidence appears to the Court to be primâ facie admissible it is for the objector to make out the grounds of his objection. The objection should be specific. It should declare that the evidence violates a named principle or rule of evidence. The cardinal principle is that a general objection, if overruled, cannot avail The only modification of this broad rule being that if on the face of the evidence in its relation to the rest of the case there appears no purpose whatever for which it could have been admissible, then a general objection, though overruled, will be deemed to have been sufficient. The opposing counsel can make no reply to a general objection except to throw the whole responsibility upon the Judge at once or else begin systematically and argue that under any possible objection the testimony should come in. Many trials under such a system would practically never end.(5)

When dealing in appeal with the admissibility of evidence admitted by the Lower Court, a distinction has been drawn between the cases (a) in which evidence wholly irrelevant has been erroneously admitted by the Lower Court; and (b) those cases in which a relevant fact has been erroneously allowed to be proved in a manner different from that which the law requires(6); e g., where secondary evidence of the contents of a document has been admitted without the absence of the original having been accounted for.(7) In the first case it is obvious that the decree can be supported upon relevant evidence only (cf. s. 165, Prov. 2, post). An erroneous omission to object to the admission of irrelevant testimony does not make it available as a ground of judgment.(8)

(1) Kissen Kaminee v Ram Chunder, 12 W R, 13 (1869) ; Sheetul Pershad v Junmejoy Mullick, 12 W. R, 244 (1869); Wigmore, Ev., § 18.

(2) Barbat v Allen, 7 Exch, 609.

(3) Per Cur. in In re Dattatraya, 6 Bom L. R, 541 (1904)

(4) See Wigmore, Ev., § 18

(5) See Wigmore, Ev, § 18, and see per Lord Brougham in Bain v. Whitehaven F. P Co., H. L C, 1, 16.

(6) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 482; Ambar Ali v. Lutfe Ali, 45 C., 159; and note to s. 167, post.

(7) As to parol evidence of written contract admitted without objection, see Article in 14 Mad L. J., 189.

(8) Miller v. Madho Das, 19 A, 76, s. c, L. R., 23 I. A, 106 (1896) ; Sri Rajah Prakasaravanim Garu v. Venkata Rau, 38 M., 160 (1915) ; and see Sreenath Roy v. Goluck Chunder Sein, 15 W. R., 348 (1871) ; Ramayya v. Devappa, 30 B, 109 (1906) In Padmavate v. Doolar Singh, 4 M. I. A, at pp. 285, 286 (1847), s c, 7 W R., P. C., 41, the Privy Council observed that the evidence "was, however, received below, and therefore we do not apprehend that we can treat it as not being evidence in the cause." These observations appear, however, to have referred to the weight and not to the admissibility of the evidence See also Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B, 69 (1897). It has been said that a party who has filed an exhibit cannot plead its inadmissibility if the other party seeks to use the document against him. Raman v. Secretary of State, Mad. L. J. Dig, 65. But apart from any question of estoppel, as where the objection is to the proof, or where the reception of the evidence has affected the position of the other party, the question of admissibility must be determined by the provisions of the Act.

Nor can evidence be given which the law excludes as that a person who is liable on a note of hand signed it as surety only.(1) Where a piece of evidence not proved in the proper manner has been admitted without objection it is not open to the opposite party to challenge it at a later stage of the litigation. But where evidence has been received without objection in direct contravention of an imperative provision of the law the principle on which unobjected evidence is admitted, be it acquiescence, evasion, or estoppel (none of which is available against a positive legislative enactment) does, not apply.(2) The Act (s. 165) also enacts that the judgment must be based upon facts duly proved, that is, proved in accordance with the provisions relating to proof contained in the Act. Where no proof has been offered, as where a document has been admitted in the Lower Court without being proved, the Court of Appeal may reject the document notwithstanding want of objection by the other party.(3) Where proof has been given of a document but the proof is primâ facie improper, an apparent exception exists in Civil suits based on principles akin to estoppel; as where no objection is taken to secondary evidence of documents being given.(4) In this case want of objection may mislead the party tendering the evidence and prevent him from producing primary evidence, or from showing that the secondary evidence offered is admissible (5) So it has been held that if no objection is taken in the Court of first instance to the reception of a document in evidence (e g, as being the copy of a copy) it is not within the province of the Appellate Court to raise or recognise it in appeal.(6) Where also the Court of first instance admitted in evidence the depositions of certain witnesses in a previous litigation and no objection was taken, but in appeal it was objected that the witnesses who were alive ought to have been called and examined, and the Court excluded the evidence, it was held in second appeal that, as in consequence of the want of objection the party tendering the evidence had cancelled his application to have his witnesses summoned, the lower Appellate Court ought either to have accepted the evidence, or if it required the party tendering the evidence to bring the witnesses before it for examination, it was bound to give him an opportunity of doing so, and that in no case was it justified in excluding the evidence altogether and deciding the case on the remaining evidence on the record. The appeal was remanded.(7) But of course the

(1) Harak Chand v Bishun Chandra, 8 C W N, 101, 102 (1903) [Inadmissibility of oral evidence, question not raised in either of Lower Courts, but taken and allowed in appeal]

(2) Sudhanya Kumar Singha v Gour Chandra Pal, 35, C L J, 473 See also Luchiram Motilal Boid v. Radha Charan Poddar, 49 C 93 (1922).

(3) Kanto Prashad v. Jagat Chandra, 23 C, 335, 338 (1895) ; in this case the contention that a map was admissible in evidence was held to be open to the appellant on special appeal, although he had not appealed against an order or remand made by the lower Appellate Court rejecting the map as not being admissible ; but see Girindra Chundra v. Rajendra Nath, 1 C W N, 530 (1897).

(4) See Robinson v. Davies, 5 Q B. D, 26 (1879), where secondary evidence of the contents of written documents was received under a commission to take evidence abroad without objection

(5) Kissen Kaminee v. Ram Chander, supra.

(6) Chimnaji Govind v. Dhunkar Dhondev, 11 B, 320 (1886), followed in Lakshman v. Amrit, 24 B, 596 (1900); in this the copy from which the copy was taken had been filed in a suit between the predecessors in title of the parties : Akbar Ali v Bhyea Lal, 6 C. (1880) at pp 669, 670 ; Kissen Kaminee v Ram Chunder, 12 W. R, 13 (1869), in which suit the case was remanded with liberty to supply the necessary proof, see Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B, 65 (1897); see note to s 165, post. No objection should be allowed to be taken in the Appellate Court as to the [illegible] dissenting from Kameshar Pershad v. Amanutulla, 26 C., 53 (1898); Shahzadi Begam v. Secretary of State for India, P. C (1907), 34 C., 1059 ; L. R., 34 I. A., 194 ; Thet She v. Maung Ba, 3 L. B. R., 49 ; Sri Rajah Prakasarayan m Garu v.. Venkata Rau, 38 M., 160 (1915).

(7) Lakshman v. Amrit, 24 B., 56 (1900).

Appeal Court has a perfect right to attach such weight to the documents as it thinks proper, or to say whether they ought to be treated as evidence as against particular parties to the suit.(1) Where a document is admitted without proof but without objection in the trial Court, no objection to its admissibility on the ground of want of formal proof can be taken in appeal.(2) Where no objection is taken in the first Court to the admission in evidence of documents not inter partes, objection cannot be taken in second appeal that it has not been proved that the conditions exist which make any particular section applicable.(3)

Objections to the admissibility of documents attached to the return of a commission if not previously made cannot be taken at the hearing of the suit.(4) If when evidence is taken before Commissioners a document is tendered and objected to on any ground, the opposite party is not precluded from objecting to the document at the trial on any other ground. It is not necessary to state all the objections to the admissibility of a document when it is first tendered, but the party objecting is at liberty to take any fresh objection whenever the party producing the document tenders it in evidence.(5)

In the undermentioned case(6), the Privy Council held that the examination of a material witness of the plaintiff in the absence of the defendant, his vakil having been removed and no other vakil then acting for him, was such an irregularity that if objected to at the proper time would have been fatal to the reception of such evidence; but that, no objection having been urged during the time or until an appeal was interposed, the objection came too late and could not be sustained as, notwithstanding such irregularity, that fact did not taint the whole proceedings so as to prevent the plaintiff recovering upon the other evidence which was sufficient to establish his case

The Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to reject a copy of a document Exhibited in the lower Court with the consent of both parties at any rate without giving the parties an opportunity of producing the original.(7) It has been held that the ground of waiver cannot be allowed to prevail in a Criminal case,(8) and that a prisoner on his trial can consent to nothing.(9) As to objections to the reception of evidence by the Court itself, see the preceding paragraph; and as to the procedure when a question is objected to and allowed by the Court, see the Civil Procedure Code.(10) A Court is bound to decide upon the evidence without reference to any previous arrangement between the parties as to the mode in which the evidence is to be dealt with.(11) Upon the question of placing a favourable construction on doubtful evidence so as

(1) Akbar Ali v. Bhyea Lal, supra

(2) Caritter Rai v Kailash Behari, 4 Pat, L W, 213, 44 I C, 422; see Narhari Hari v. Ambaikom Balkrishna, 44 B, 192.

(3) Reajaddi Sarkar v Ganga Charan Bhattacharya, 531 C., 863

(4) Struthers v Wheeler, 6 C. L. R, 109 (1880).

(5) Ralli v. Gau Kim, 9 C., 939 (1883).

(6) Bommarauze Bahadur v. Rangasamy Mudaly, 6 M I. A, 232 (1855).

(7) Kamulammal v. Athekari Sangari, 35 M. L J., 11; s. c., 481 C., 615.

(8) R. v Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom H. C. R, 497, 498 (1873). On the question how far the rule of evidence may be relaxed by consent, Mr. Best remarks :—"In Criminal cases, at least in treason and felony, it is the duty of the Judge to see that the accused is condemned according to law ; and the rules of evidence forming part of that law, no admissions from him or his counsel will be received." § 97, see also s 58, post

(9) R v. Bishonath, 12 W. R, Cr., 3 (1869) , Attorney-General of New South Wales v Bertrand, 36 L. J., P. C, 51 ; s c, L. R, I. P C, 535, see also R. v. Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H C R, 358, 383 (1872); R. v. Bholanath, 2 C., 23 (1876), R. v. Allen, 6 C, 83 (1880); Hossein Buksh v R, 6 C, 96, 99 ; as to objections see observation of Trevelyan, J., in Girish Chunder v. R., 20 C., 861 (1893); Best, Ev, § 97; as to admissions of fact by legal practitioners, see ss 17, 18, 58, post.

(10) Civ. Pr. Code, O. XVIII, r. 11, p. 846 ; cf. also s. 359, Cr. Pr. Code of Act XIV of 1882 to entitle the Court to treat it as substantive evidence in the case and not exclude it as inadmissible(1); and as to the case where both parties have put indifferent portions of inadmissible proceedings and rested arguments thereon,(2) see the cases noted below.

(11) Gooroo Pershad v. Bykunto Chunder, 6 W. R., 82 (1866).

6. Facts which, though not in issue, are so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, are relevant, whether they occurred at the same time and place or at different(3) times and places.

Relevancy of facts forming part of same transaction

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B, or the by-standers at the beating, or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction is a relevant fact (4)

(b) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed, troops are attacked and gaols are broken open The occurrence of these facts is relevant, as forming part of the general transaction, though A may not have been present at all of them (5)

(c) A sues B for libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence Letters between the parties relating to the subject out of which the libel arose, and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained, are relevant facts, though they do not contain the libel itself

(d) The question is whether the certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A The goods were delivered to several intermediate persons successively Each delivery is a relevant fact (6)

Principle.—If facts form part of the transaction which is the subject of enquiry, manifestly evidence of them ought not to be excluded (7) Moreover, such facts, forming part of the res gestæ, in most cases could not be excluded without rendering the evidence unintelligible(8), for every part of a transaction is connected with every other part as cause or effect. The point for decision will always be whether they do form part, or are too remote to be considered really part of the transaction before the Court.(9)

s 3 ("Fact") s. 3 ("Fact in issue")
s 3 ("Relevant")

(1) Duarka Das v Sant Baksh, 18 A, 92 (1895).

(2) Bir Chander v Bhansi Dhar, 3 B. L. R., A C, 217 (1869).

(3) Thus where a man committed three burglaries in one night, and stole a shirt at one place and left it in another, and they were all so connected that the Court heard the history of all three burglaries, Lord Ellenborough remarked that "if crimes do so intermix the Court must go through the detail" Case cited without name in R v. Whiley, 2 Lea, 985, which is also reported as R v. Wylie, 1 B. & P. (N R.), 92.

(4) See In re Surat Dhobni, 10 C, 302 (1884), R v. Fakirapa, 15 B, 491, 496 (1890), as to exclamations of mere by-standers, see R v Fowker, cited Steph Dig, Art 3, illust (a), Milne v Liester, 7 H & N., 786; Bennison v. Cartwright, 5 B & S. 1, The Schwalba, Swab, 521; Wharton, Ev, § 260.

(5) v s 10, post That war was waged is one of the facts in issue These occurrences are part of that fact

(6) As being part of the fact in issue, did the goods pass to A

(7) See Norton, Ev, 101

(8) Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 78 Acts, declarations and circumstances which constitute or accompany, and explain, the fact or transaction in issue, are admissible as forming part of the res gestæ The term res gestæ, though generally applied to a fact or transaction in issue, may be used in the above connection of any material fact Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 44, 45

The earlier term was res gesta or pars res gestæ, see as to the history of this "catch all" phrase Thayer's Cases on Evidence 629, same in American Law Review, XV, 5, 81, Wigmore, Ev, § 1795; and Phipson in 19 Law Quart. Rev 435.

(9) Norton, Ev, 101

Steph. Dig., Art. 3: Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 86, 13th Ed., 78; Steph Introd., Ch III; Phipson Ev., 5th Ed, 44, 45; Norton, Ev., 111; Cunningham, Ev., 87; Whitley Stokes, 854; Taylor, Ev., §§ 320, 326—328; Wharton, Ev., § 258; Thayer's Cases on Evidence, 629; Rice on Evidence, 369—392.

COMMENTARY.

icts form-g part of ime trans-
:tion.

A transaction is a group of facts so connected together as to be referred to by a single legal name, e g., a contract, tort or crime. Whether any particular fact is, or is not, part of the same transaction as the fact in issue is a question of law upon which no principle has been stated by authority and on which single Judges have given different decisions.(1) The area of events covered by the each particular case. The which are the automatic and which are admissible when eparated from the act by a on may last for weeks. The y one absorbed in the event iprise things left undone as well as things done. They must be necessary incidents of the litigated act in the sense that they are part of the immediate preparations for or emanations of such act and are not produced by the calculated policy of the actors. They are the act talking for itself, not what people say when talking about the act. In other words, they must stand on an immediate causal relation to the act—a relation not broken by the interposition of voluntary individual wariness, seeking to manufacture evidence for itself. Incidents that are thus immediately and unconsciously associated with an act, whether such incidents are doings or declarations, become in this way evidence of the character of the act. They are admissible though hearsay, because in such cases it is the act that creates the hearsay, not the hearsay the act. It is the power of perception unmodified by recollection that is appealed to; not of recollection modifying perception. Whenever recollection comes in, whenever there is opportunity for reflection and explanations—then statements cease to be part of the res gestæ. Declarations to be admissible must be made during the transaction. If made after its completion they are too late(2) but it is no objection that they are self-serving.(3) Whenever a fact is a link in a chain of facts necessary to establish another fact, it is, of course, admissible. In some cases an offence consists of a series of transactions: in such cases evidence is admissible of any act which goes to make up the offence.(4) A fact besides being relevant under this section, by virtue merely of its being so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, may also be relevant on the grounds mentioned in one or other of the succeeding sections. So where several offences are connected together and form part of one entire transaction, then the one is evidence to show the character of the other.(5) And where the only evidence against a prisoner charged with having voluntarily caused grievous hurt was a statement

(1) Steph Dig, Art. 3; R. v M. J, Vyapoory Moodeliar, 6 C., 655, 662 (1881); cf. use of word in ss. 235, 239, Cr. Pr. Code, and see R v. Fakirapa, 15 B, 496, 502, supra; R. v. Vajiram, 16 B, 414, 424 (1892); R. v. Dwarkanath, 7 W. R., Cr., 15 (1867); R. v. Sami, 13 M, 426 (1890). The term "transaction" occurs in s. 13, post, and as used in that section was defined in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., at p. 186 (1880).

(2) Chain Mahto v. R (1907), 11 C. W. N., 266.

(3) Wharton, Ev., §§ 258-262 See definitions of Supreme Court of Georgia cited in Rice, Ev, 375, "the circumstances, facts, and declaration, which grew out of the main fact, are contemporaneous with and serve to illustrate its character, as part of the res gestæ."

(4) Roscoe, Cr Ev., 13th Ed, 77, 78; Norton, Ev, 102

(5) R. v Ellis, 6 B & C, 145, cited in R. v Parbhudas, 11 Bom H C. R, 94 (1874), v. s. 14, post. See also Introductions, ante.

made in the presence of the prisoner by the person injured to a third person immediately after the commission of the offence and the prisoner did not, when the statement was made, deny that she had done the act complained of, it was held that the evidence was admissible under this section and s 8, illust. (g) of this Act.(1) But where it did not appear how long an interval had elapsed between a murder and the statement of an alleged by-stander, whose condition of mind did not seem to have been such as to exclude the supposition that his evidence was fabricated, it was held that his statement was inadmissible under this section.(2) One P came to a police station with a written report in which there were allegations that certain persons including M had committed the offence of riot. The report was read out to P and as soon as he heard it, he informed the police that M was not present at the riot and stated that the report was written by one J. Subsequently M prosecuted J and P for an offence under s. 121, Indian Penal Code. Held, that the statement made by P to the police was not admissible against J, either as a part of a confession or as a part of the transaction under investigation under this section.(3) The doctrine of election (in Criminal trials) is closely connected with that about the admissibility of collateral facts, which, though not in issue, may be relevant under this section if they form part of the same transaction (4) The cases cited below may be further consulted in connection with this section.(5) Certain persons were convicted of robbing and murder, and on its appearing that the two offences constituted parts of the same transaction, held that recent and unexplained possession of the stolen property, which would be presumptive ge of robbing, was similarly evidence

Besides being part of the res gestæ ration,(7) as evidence of intention(8) and so forth.

7. Facts which are the occasion, cause or effect, immediate or otherwise, of relevant facts, or facts in issue, or which constitute the state of things under which they happened, or which afforded an opportunity for their occurrence or transaction, are relevant. Facts which are the occasion, cause, or effect of facts in issue.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, shortly before the robbery, B went to a fair with money in his possession, and that he showed it, or mentioned the fact that he had it, to third persons, are relevant (9)

---

(1) In re Surat Dhobni, 10 C. 302 (1884), supra

(2) Chain Mahto v R (1907), 11 C W N, 266

(3) Jalpa Prasad v Emp, 17 A L J, 760, s c 50, I C, 487; 20 Cr L J, 311

(4) R v Fakirapa, 15 B, 496, 502, supra, see also ss 235, 239, Cr Pr Code, Taylor, Ev, § 329.

(5) R v Birdseye, 4 C & P, 386, R v Rearden, 4 Fost & Fin, 76, R v. Ellis, supra, R v Cobden, 3 Fost & Fin, 833, R v Young, R. & R, C C R, 280, note, R v Westwood, 4 C & P, 547, R v Williams Dears, C. C, 188, R v Rooney, 7 C & P, 517, R. v. Whiley, 2 Lea, 985; R v Long, 6 C. & P, 179, R. v Firth, L R., 1 C C R, 172, R. v. Salisbury, 5 C & P, 155, 157, see cases cited in Steph. Dig, Art 3, 2 East, P C, 934

(6) R v Sami, 13 M, 426 (1890)

(7) Naga Sanpa v Emp, 19 Cr L. J, 155 43, I C, 443, s c (Statement by complainant as to rape)

(8) Mathu Krishna v. Ramchandra, 37 M L J 489 (Statement by testator), and see 47, I C, 611

(9) As giving occasion or opportunity or being the cause, see Norton, Ev, 103, Cunningham Ev, 90, Whitley Stokes, 855

(b) The question is whether A murdered B.

Marks on the ground, produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed, are relevant facts.(1)

(c) The question is, whether A poisoned B.

The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison and habits of B, known to A, which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison are relevant facts (2)

Principle.—The reason for the admission of facts of this nature is that, if it is desired to decide whether a fact occurred or not, almost the first natural step is to ascertain whether there were facts at hand calculated to produce or afford opportunity for its occurrence, or facts which its occurrence was calculated to produce. Further, in order to the proper appreciation of a fact, it is necessary to know the state of things under which it occurred.(3)

s 3 ("Fact.") s 3 ("Relevant.")

s. 3 ("Fact in issue.")

Steph. Dig, Art. 9, and note; Steph Introd., Ch III, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 44, 45, 142; Norton, Ev, 103; Cunningham, Ev, 90, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 131–134; Best, Ev., § 453. Wills' Circ Ev., passim.

COMMENTARY.

Causation

Leaving the transaction itself, the present section embraces a larger area and provides for the admission of several classes of facts, which though not possibly forming part of the transaction, are yet connected with it in particular modes (viz, as occasion, cause, effect; as giving opportunity for its occurrense or as constituting the state of things under which it happened), and so are relevant when the transaction itself is under enquiry. These modes—occasion, cause, effect, opportunity—are really different aspects of causation. When an act is done and a particular person is alleged to have done it (not through an agent but personally), it is obvious that his physical presence, within a proper range of time and place, forms one step on the way to the belief that he did it. If it be asked whether the mere possibility involved in opportunity is not too slender and whether something more than mere opportunity, for example, exclusive opportunity, should not first be shown; the answer is that by the very showing of an opportunity countless hypotheses are negatived; and the person charged who might otherwise have been one of innumerable other persons at the time, is shown to have been one of the limited number who were in a position to do this particular act. In short, opportunity alone, and not exclusive opportunity, is a sufficient showing for admissibility.(4) On the other hand no circumstance can be more infirmative of a charge than that the accused had no opportunity of committing the crime On the strength of this rests the force of a defence founded on an alibi.(5) But care must be taken against a hasty inference from opportunity for, to commission of, a crime. There can be no crime without the opportunity; but there is a wide gulf to be bridged over by evidence between opportunity and commission.(6)

Similar unconnected facts.

Generally speaking, it is not admissible to prove the fact in issue by showing that facts similar to it, but not part of the same transaction, have occurred

(1) As effects of the fact in issue, this is an instance of real evidence; see Norton, Ev., 103; Best, Ev., § 92; as to proof from foot-mark; see Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 96, 214—221, 436.

(2) As constituting the state of things under which the alleged fact happened, and as affording opportunity

(3) Cunningham, Ev, 90, 91; Steph. Introd, Ch III; knowledge of circumstances enabling a person to do the act is thus also relevant [illust. (c)].

(4) Wigmore, Ev., § 131

(5) See s. 11, post.

(6) Norton, Ev, 104; Best, Ev., § 453; see case cited in Starkie, Ev., 4th Ed., 864, note, Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 82, 356 on other occasions. Facts which are sought to be made relevant merely from their general similarity to the main fact or transaction and not from some specific connection therewith are not admissible to show its existence.(1) The meaning of the rule excluding transactions similar to but unconnected with the facts in issue, is that inferences are not to be drawn from one transaction to another which is not specifically connected with it merely because the two resemble one another. They must be linked together by the chain of cause and effect in some assignable way before an inference may be drawn (2) They are not facts in issue and are therefore excluded by the fifth section They are not parts of the same transaction so as to be admissible under the sixth section, and there is no principle of causation which would render them relevant under this section. The maxim res inter alios acta is frequently supposed to express the principle of exclusion in such cases: but, this is incorrect, for similar transactions inter partes would be equally inadmissible in this relation The maxim has its principal utility in the domain of substantive law (3) And so when, as in a well-known case, the question was whether A, a brewer, sold good beer to B, a publican, the fact that A sold good beer to C, D and E, other publicans, was held to be irrelevant (4) Nor, when an act has been proved to show that a given party did the act, may evidence be tendered of similar acts done either by himself, with the object of showing a disposition, habit or propensity to commit, and a consequent probability of his having committed, the act in question, or by others, though similarly circumstanced, to himself to show that he would be likely to act as they.(5) And so when the question is, whether A committed a crime, the fact that he formerly committed another crime of the same sort, and had a tendency to commit such crimes, is irrelevant.(6) The so-called exceptions (though they are not, strictly speaking, such) to this rule consist in the admissibility of evidence of acts showing intention, good faith, and the like(7), and of facts showing accident or system (8) Judgments also in Courts of Justice on other occasions have been said to form an exception to the exclusion of evidence of transactions not specifically connected with facts in issue (9) On the other hand and on the same principle, in cases where causation is well-known and regular, as in the case of physical and mechanical agencies, the conditions of mental disease, the propensities of animals, and the

(1) Steph Dig, Art 10, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 155, 156, Best, Ev, §§ 506—510; Taylor, Ev., §§ 317—326, Broom's Legal Maxims, 908, Roscoe, N P Ev 84—86; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 60—64, and v post. Makin v Attorney-General, N. S W, 1894, A. C., 57, 65, per Lord Herschell

(2) Steph Dig, p 163

(3) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 157, Steph Dig, Art 10, and n vi, p 162, Best, Ev, § 112, 506—510, Taylor, Ev, 317—326, Brown's Legal Maxims, 954—968

(4) Holcombe v. Hewson, 2 Camp, 391, aliter if it had been shown that the beer sold to all was of the same brewing Steph Dig., Art 10, illust (b), so (unless a general custom be proved), the terms on which A let land to B, are no evidence of the terms on which A let lands to other tenants. Carter v Pryke, Peake, 130, see Hollingham v Head, 4 C. B N S. 388, Spencely v DeWillott 7 East, 108, Smith v Wilkins, 6 C & P, 180, Taylor, Ev, §§ 317—326.

(5) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 121, and text-books cited ante, and notes to s 14, post, as to the converse cases of character and course of business v post, ss. 52—55, 16

(6) Steph Dig, Art 10, illust (a), R v Cole, 1 Phillips, Ev, 508, Steph Dig, pp 162—164, see s. 14, post, illusts (n), (o), (p) Makin v Attorney-General, N S W, 1894, A. C, 57, 65

(7) See s 14, post, cf Steph Dig, Art 11, and pp 162—164, ib, Phipson, 5th Ed, 157 As to evidence of intention, see Narsingh Dyal v Ram Narain, 30 C 883, 896 (1903), R v Bond, C C R (1906), 21 Cox, p 252

(8) See s 15, post, cf Steph Dig, Art 12, Lawson's Presumptive Evidence, 182, Steph Dig, 162—164, see also Taylor, Ev, §§ 327—348, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 79 et seq Best, Ev., p 463, Roscoe, N P Ev 85, R v. Wyat, 1 K. B, 188 (1904), 1 All L J, 42, Hales v Kerr (1908), 2 K. B, 601, Times L R v 24, p 779 like evidence of similar but unconnected acts, is often admissible.(1) Where in an action brought in respect of a nuisance alleged to be caused by the construction and maintenance of a hospital for infectious diseases, the plaintiff proposed to call evidence as to the effect of other similar hospitals on the surrounding neighbourhood, it was held that evidence of facts by which the effect (or absence of effect) of such hospitals could be either positively or approximately ascertained was admissible and material.(2) Where the discharge of gaseous matter from the chimney of a chemical work was complained of as a nuisance by the proprietor of land in its vicinity, it was held that the [illegible] eral character, of the same, [illegible] may become admissible in confirmation of testimony as to the main fact which would be inadmissible as direct proof. So an admission of liability on one bill accepted by the same agent is no evidence of a general authority to accept, though it is admissible to confirm independent proof of such authority (6) And proof of particular instances are admissible to confirm a general course of business. And under this Act (though not(7), generally speaking, in England) even previous similar statements made by a witness are admissible to corroborate him by [illegible] admissible [illegible] l as agent [illegible] occasions,

(9) Steph. Introd 164, see ss. 40—44, post.

(1) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 144—149; Best, Ev, pp. 463, 464; Taylor, Ev, 319, so in an American case it being in dispute whether a horse was or was not frightened by a certain pile of lumber, evidence that other horses were frightened by the same pile, under a variety of circumstances, was held admissible Best, Ev., p 464, for a similar case, see Brown v E. C. R Co, 22 Q B. D, 391; "so where the question was whether A's dog killed a sheep belonging to B, the fact that the same dog had killed other sheep on different occasions belonging to other people was held admissible;" Lewis v. Jones, 1 T L R, 153; Wharton, Ev., § 1295, so also the question being whether A's premises were ignited by sparks escaping from a railway engine, proof that (1) the same engine and (2) other engines of similar construction belonging to the same Company had previously caused fires along the same line, is admissible; Aldridge v. G. W R. Co, 3 M & Gr. 522, Piggott v. E C. R. Co, 3 C B, 229; the question being whether A was insane at a certain time, evidence that he exhibited symptoms of insanity prior and subsequent to such time, and that his ancestors and collaterals had been insane is admissible; Pope on Lunacy, 392 Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 149—156, as to the presumption of regularity in the case of scientific instruments, see Taylor, Ev., § 183. As to Manorial and Trade Customs see Taylor, Ev., §§ 320—322; Roscoe, N P Ev, 85, 86; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 147, s 13, post, acts showing title, see s. 11, post

(2) The Managers of the Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, 47 L. T. (H. L.), 29, per Lord Selborne, L. C. "Evidence relating to collateral facts is only admissible when such facts will, if established, establish reasonable presumption as to the matter in dispute, and when such evidence is reasonably conclusive," per Lord Watson, see also Foulkes v. Chadd, 3 Doug, 157.

(3) Hamilton v Tennant & Co, 1 Rob, 821; 7 C & F, 122; R v. Neville, 1 Pea N P C, 125, but see as to this last case, R v Fairie, 8 E & B, 486

(4) Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, supra, 35, per Lord Watson

(5) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 148, 177. Osborne v Chacquell, 2 Q B (1896), 109; Williams v Richards (1907); 2 K. B, 88

(6) Llewellyn v Winckworth, 13 M. & W., 598; Hollingham v Head, 4 C. B. N. S, 388; Morris v. Bethel, L. R., 4 C. P., 765, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 83

(7) Bourne v Gatliff, 11 C. & F., 45; see as to similar facts admissible in corroboration of the main fact · R v. Pearce, Peake, N Pr R., 106; R. v. Egerton, R. & R, 375, cited in R v. Ellis, 6 B. & C., 148; Cole v. Manning, 2 Q. B D., 611, and cases in preceding note.

(8) S 157, post

[illegible] idence of acts of adultery, [illegible] petition, are admissible, [illegible] vious acts of improper familiarity.(2)

Motive, preparation and previous or subsequent conduct.

8. Any fact is relevant which shows or constitutes a motive(3) or preparation(4) for any fact in issue or relevant fact.

The conduct of any party, or of any agent to any party, to any suit or proceeding, in reference to such suit or proceeding(5) or in reference to any fact in issue therein or relevant thereto(6), and the conduct of any person an offence against whom is the subject of any proceeding(7), is relevant, if such conduct influences or is influenced by any fact in issue or relevant fact, and whether it was previous(8) or subsequent(9) thereto

Explanation 1.—The word "conduct" in this section does not include statements, unless those statements accompany and explain acts other than statements(10) ; but this explanation is not to affect the relevancy of statements under any other section of this Act.(11)

Explanation 2.—When the conduct of any person is relevant, any statement made to him or in his presence and (12) hearing which affects such conduct, is relevant.(13)

Illustrations

(a) A is tried for murder of B

The facts that A murdered C, that B knew that A had murdered C, and that B had tried to extort money from A by threatening to make his knowledge public, are relevant (14)

(b) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money. B denies the making of the bond.

The fact that, at the time when the bond was alleged to be made, B required money for a particular purpose, is relevant.

---

(1) Steph Dig, Art. 13, Blake v Albion Life Assurance Society, L R, 4 C. P D, 94 ; see also Courteen v Touse, 1 Camp, 42*n*, Neal v Erving, 1 Esp, 60, Watkins v Vince, 2 Starkie, 368

(2) Boddy v Boddy, 30 L J P & M, 23, Taylor, Ev, § 340, see remarks on this case in Phipson, Ev, 80, 1st Ed, omitted in 2nd Ed It has been held that ante-nuptial incontinence is relevant to prove post-nuptial misconduct charged between the same parties Cantello v Cantello, Times, March 2, 1896, cited in Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 146

(3) Illusts (a), (b), and v. post, Emp v Panchu Das, 47 C., 671 (F. B), R v M. J Vyapoory Moodeliar, 6 C, 655, 662, as to the admissibility of similar facts to prove motive for a crime, see for its admission, R v Heeson, 14 Cox, 40 ; R v Stephens, 16 Cox, 387, R. v. Cleues, 4 C & P., 221, contra ; R. v. Flanagan, 15 Cox, 403, R v Debendra Prosad, A C. (1909), 36 C, 573

(4) Illusts (c), (d), and v post

(5) Illust (e)

(6) Illusts (d), (e), (i), R v Abdulla, 7 A, 40 (1885)

(7) Illusts (i), (k)

(8) Illusts (d), (e)

(9) Illusts (e), (i), Dalip Singh v. Nawal Kunwar, P C (1908), 30 A, 258

(10) Illusts (j), (k), and v post

(11) See ss 10, 14, illusts (k), (l), (m), 17—39, 155, 157

(12) Not "or" but for English rule, see Neile v Jakle 2 C & K, 709

(13) Illusts (f), (g), (h), R v Edmunds, 6 C & P, 164

(14) See also R v Buckley, 13 Cox, 293 ; R v Shippey 12 Cox, 161 ; R. v. Cleues, 4 C & P. 221, 5 Cox, C C, 214 ; Best, Ev, § 92

(c) A is tried for the murder of B by poison.

The fact that, before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B is relevant.(1)

(d) The question is, whether a certain document is the Will of A.

The facts that, not long before the date of the alleged Will, A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged Will relate; that he consulted vakils in reference to making the Will, and that he caused drafts of other Wills to be prepared, of which he did not approve, are relevant (2)

(e) A is accused of a crime.

The facts, that either before, or at the time of, or after the alleged crime, A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself or that he destroyed or concealed evidence, or prevented the presence or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned person to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant (3)

(f) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence—'the police are coming to look for the man who robbed B'—and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant.(4)

(g) The question is, whether A owes B rupees 10,000.

The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing,—'I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10,000 rupees,'—and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts (5)

---

(1) See R v Palmer, Steph, Introd, 107—158; Steph Dig, Art. 7, Illust. (b).

(2) Where the factum of a Will is in dispute the question whether the testator had made a Will before is relevant to show that he had disposing mind In the goods of Bhuggobutty (deceased), Cal. H C, 9th February 1900

(3) "A party who gives or produces false evidence may by so doing give rise to a general presumption against the truth of his case," Girish Chunder v. Iswar Chandra, 3 B. L. R, A. C. J., 341 (1869). See also R v Patch, in Steph Introd, 99—106, and Wills' Circ. Ev, 6th Ed, 445; R v. Palmer, supra; Steph. Dig, Art 7, illust. (c); see s. 114, illust. (g), post. Where the question was whether A suffered damage in a railway accident; the fact that A conspired with B, C and D to suborn false witnesses in support of his case was held to be relevant, as conduct subsequent to a fact in issue tending to show that it had not happened. Moriarty v L. C. & D. Ry Co, L. R, 5 Q B, 314. "The conduct of a party to a cause may be of the highest importance in determining whether the cause of action in which he is plaintiff or the ground of defence, if he is defendant, is honest and just; just as it is evidence against a prisoner that he has said one thing at one time and another at another, as showing that the recourse to falsehood leads fairly to an inference of guilt. So, if you can show that a plaintiff has been suborning false testimony, and has endeavoured to have recourse to perjury, it is strong evidence that he knew perfectly well that his case was an unrighteous one I do not say that it is conclusive It does not always follow because a man, not sure he shall be able to succeed by righteous means, has recourse to means of a different character, that that which he desires, namely, the gaining of the victory, is not his due, or that he has not good ground for believing that justice entitles him to it It does not necessarily follow that he has not a good cause of action, any more than a prisoner making a false statement to increase his appearance of innocence is necessarily a proof of his guilt; but it is always evidence which ought to be submitted to the consideration of the tribunal which has to judge of the facts: and therefore, I think, that the evidence was admissible inasmuch as it went to show that the plaintiff thought he had a bad case" Ib, per Cockburn, C. J, see Taylor, Ev, § 804; as to conduct of a party in a case of malicious prosecution, see Taylor v. Williams, 2 B & Ad, 857; as to admission inferred from the conduct of parties, see s 58, post, see also Taylor, Ev, § 804; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 62; Melhuish v. Collier, 15 Q. B, 878; Best, Ev, § 524

(4) R v. Abdullah, 7 A, 600 (1885); v post, notes.

(5) See In the petition of Surat Dhobni, 10 C, 302 (1884); v. post, notes; Bessela v. Stern, 2 C. P C, 265.

(h) The question is, whether A committed a crime.

The fact that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal, and the contents of the letter are relevant.(1)

(i) A is accused of a crime.

The facts that, after the commission of the alleged crime, he absconded, or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime, or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant (2)

(j) The question is whether A was ravished

The facts that, shortly after the alleged rape, she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant.(3)

The fact that, without making a complaint, she said that she had been ravished, is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—

as a dying declaration under section thirty-two, clause (one), or as corroborative evidence under section one hundred and fifty-seven (l) The question is, whether A was robbed.

The fact that, soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which, and the term in which, the complaint was made are relevant (4)

The fact that, he said he had been robbed, without making any complaint, is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—

as a dying declaration under section thirty-two, clause (one), or as corroborative evidence under section one hundred and fifty-seven

Principle.—This section is an amplification of the preceding one A motive is, strictly, what its etymology indicates, that which moves or influences the mind. It has been said that an action without a motive would be an effect without a cause, and as, to take for example Criminal cases, the particulars of external situation and conduct will in general correctly denote the motive for Criminal action, the absence of all evidence of an inducing cause is reasonably regarded, [illegible] esumption of innocence (5) [illegible] important in the considerati [illegible] act or not, to know whether he took any measures calculated to bring it about Premeditated action must necessarily be preceded not only by impelling motives but by appropriate preparations.(6) The existence of a design or plan is usually employed evidentially to indicate the subsequent doing of the act planned

(1) As to the inferences to be drawn from absconding, see R v. Sorob Roy, 5 W. R, Cr, 28, 30 (1866)

(2) Steph Dig, Art 7, illust. (d); see s. 9, illust (c), post

(3) See R v Lillyman, 2 Q B (1896), 167 C C R.; R v Osborne, 1 K B (1905), 551

(4) R v MacDonald, 10 B L R, App 2 (1872), the absence of the accused at the time when a complaint is made against him in cases coming within this Illustration, does not affect the relevancy of such complaint and therefore does not exclude it, ib In England evidence of complaint is now admissible only in cases of rape and kindred offences against females, Phipson Ev, 5th Ed, 99 This Illustration shows that the rule is otherwise in this country See R v Wink, 6 C & P, 397, R v Ridsdale, Starkie, Ev 469, note, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 23, 24 Steph Dig, Art 8, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 99, wife's complaint in Ecclesiastical Courts, see Lockwood v Lockwood, 2 Curt, 281, and complaints as evidence of mental and bodily feeling, see R v Vincent, 9 C & P, 91, R v Conde, 10 Cox, 547, cf s 14, post

(5) See notes to s 3, ante But it is held that the fact of the evidence of the motive not being clear is no reason for disbelieving a plain straightforward case —Emp v Balaram Das, 49 C, 358

(6) Wills' Circ. Ev, 6th Ed, 79, Norton, Ev, 109, Cunningham, Ev., 93 94 Best Ev, §§ 454—457, the case of Patch cited, ib, and in Steph Introd., §§ 99—106, Burrill, Circ. Ev, 343, also ib., 546

(c) A is tried for the murder of B by poison.

The fact that, before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B is relevant (1)

(d) The question is, whether a certain document is the Will of A.

The facts that, not long before the date of the alleged Will, A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged Will relate, that he consulted vakils in reference to making the Will, and that he caused drafts of other Wills to be prepared, of which he did not approve, are relevant (2)

(e) A is accused of a crime.

The facts, that either before, or at the time of, or after the alleged crime, A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself or that he destroyed or concealed evidence, or prevented the presence or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned person to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant (3)

(f) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence—'the police are coming to look for the man who robbed B'—and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant (4)

(g) The question is, whether A owes B rupees 10,000.

The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing,—'I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10,000 rupees,'—and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts (5)

---

(1) See R v Palmer, Steph, Introd, 107—158, Steph. Dig, Art. 7, Illust. (b).

(2) Where the factum of a Will is in dispute the question whether the testator had made a Will before is relevant to show that he had disposing mind In the goods of Bhuggobutty (deceased), Cal. H. C, 9th February 1900

(3) "A party who gives or produces false evidence may by so doing give rise to a general presumption against the truth of his case," Girish Chunder v Iswar Chandra, 3 B L R., A. C J, 341 (1869). See also R. v Patch, in Steph. Introd, 99—106, and Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 445; R v Palmer, supra, Steph Dig., Art 7, illust. (c), see s 114, illust. (g), post Where the question was whether A suffered damage in a railway accident; the fact that A conspired with B, C and D to suborn false witnesses in support of his case was held to be relevant, as conduct subsequent to a fact in issue tending to show that it had not happened. Moriarty v. L. C. & D Ry. Co, L. R, 5 Q B, 314 "The conduct of a party to a cause may be of the highest importance in determining whether the cause of action in which he is plaintiff or the ground of defence, if he is defendant, is honest and just, just as it is evidence against a prisoner that he has said one thing at one time and another at another, as showing that the recourse to falsehood leads fairly to an inference of guilt. So, if you can show that a plaintiff has been suborning false testimony, and has endeavoured to have recourse to perjury, it is strong evidence that he knew perfectly well that his case was an unrighteous one I do not say that it is conclusive: it does not always follow because a man, not sure he shall be able to succeed by righteous means, has recourse to means of a different character, that that which he desires, namely, the gaining of the victory, is not his due, or that he has not good ground for believing that justice entitles him to it It does not necessarily follow that he has not a good cause of action, any more than a prisoner making a false statement to increase his appearance of innocence is necessarily a proof of his guilt; but it is always evidence which ought to be submitted to the consideration of the tribunal which has to judge of the facts: and therefore, I think, that the evidence was admissible inasmuch as it went to show that the plaintiff thought he had a bad case" Ib., per Cockburn, C. J, see Taylor, Ev, § 804, as to conduct of a party in a case of malicious prosecution, see Taylor v. Williams, 2 B & Ad, 857; as to admission inferred from the conduct of parties. see s 58, post; see also Taylor, Ev, § 804; Roscoe, N P. Ev, 62; Melhuish v Collier, 15 Q. B., 878; Best, Ev, § 524.

(4) R v Abdullah, 7 A, 600 (1885); v post, notes

(5) See In the petition of Surat Dhobni, 10 C 302 (1884); v post, notes; Bessela v Stern, 2 C. P. C, 265.

(h) The question is, whether A committed a crime.

The fact that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal, and the contents of the letter are relevant (1)

(i) A is accused of a crime.

The facts that, after the commission of the alleged crime, he absconded, or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime, or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant.(2)

(j) The question is whether A was ravished.

The facts that, shortly after the alleged rape, she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant (3)

The fact that, without making a complaint, she said that she had been ravished, is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—as a dying declaration under section thirty-two, clause (one), or as corroborative evidence under section one hundred and fifty-seven.

(k) The question is, whether A was robbed.

The fact that, soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which, and the term in which, the complaint was made are relevant (4)

The fact that, he said he had been robbed, without making any complaint, is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—as a dying declaration under section thirty-two, clause (one), or as corroborative evidence under section one hundred and fifty-seven.

Principle.—This section is an amplification of the preceding one. A motive is, strictly, what its etymology indicates, that which moves or influences the mind. It has been said that an action without a motive would be an effect without a cause, and as, to take for example Criminal cases, the particulars of external situation and conduct will in general correctly denote the motive for Criminal action, the absence of all evidence of an inducing cause is reasonably regarded, where the fact is doubtful, as affording a strong presumption of innocence (5) Preparation is also relevant, it being obviously important in the consideration of the question whether a man did a particular act or not, to know whether he took any measures calculated to bring it about. Premeditated action must necessarily be preceded not only by impelling motives but by appropriate preparations (6) The existence of a design or plan is usually employed evidentially to indicate the subsequent doing of the act planned

(1) As to the inferences to be drawn from absconding, see R v Sorob Roy, 5 W. R, Cr, 28, 30 (1866).

(2) Steph Dig, Art 7, illust (d); see s. 9, illust (c), post

(3) See R v Lillyman, 2 Q. B. (1896), 167 C C R; R v. Osborne, 1 K. B. (1905), 551

(4) R. v MacDonald, 10 B L. R., App 2 (1872), the absence of the accused at the time when a complaint is made against him, in cases coming within the illustration, does not affect the relevancy of such complaint and therefore does not exclude it, ib. In England evidence of complaint is now admissible only in cases of rape and kindred offences against females— Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., [illegible] illustration shows that the rule is otherwise in this country. See R. v V [illegible] 397, [illegible] [illegible] v. [illegible] [illegible] complaints as evidence of [illegible] Cerse [illegible]

[illegible] Cr. [illegible] Ev. [illegible] 129 [illegible] 454 [illegible] Burrill Circ. Ev. [illegible]

or designed.(1) Preparation is an instance of previous conduct of the party [illegible] her conduct also, whether of [illegible] or subsequent, and whether [illegible] vant fact, is also admissible, the conduct of a party being always extremely relevant, for reasons some of which appear in the Commentary to the section See Introduction, ante, and Notes, post

s. 3 ("Fact in issue")
s. 3 ("Relevant")
s. 3 ("Fact")
ss. 10, 14, 17—39, 155, 157

(Statements relevant under other sections.) ss. 17—31 (Oral and Documentary admission) s 50 (Opinion on relationship expressed by conduct.)

Motive, Preparation and Conduct—Steph. Dig, Art. 7; Wills' Circumstantial Evidence, passim, Best, Ev, §§ 91, 92, 452—467; Burrill on Circumstantial Evidence; Arthur Wills on Circumstantial Evidence; Phillip's Famous Cases on Circumstantial Evidence passim; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 121; Norton, Ev., 107; Cunningham, Ev., 93; Taylor, Ev, §§ 104, 1204, 1205; Roscoe, N P. Ev, 28, 67; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed, 7, 14—22, 83; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 63; Wigmore, Ev, §§ 117, 237, et seq Statements accompanying Acts—Steph. Dig., Arts. 7, 8; ib, Note V, Best, Ev, § 495, Greenleaf, Ev, § 108, Wharton, Ev, §§ 258, 259. Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 47; Starkie, Ev, 51—53, 87—89, 166—171; Taylor, Ev., §§ 583—589; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 51-53; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 68—73; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 23; Statements affecting Conduct—Steph. Dig., Art 8; Taylor, Ev., §§ 809—816; Best, Ev., §§ 574, 575, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 241; Norton, Ev., 106; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 64—66; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed., 430—439, Wharton, Ev., §§ 1136, 1155.

COMMENTARY.

Motive; preparation; conduct

Motive in the correct sense is the emotion supposed to have led to the act. The external fact, which is sometimes styled the motive, is merely the possible existing cause of this "motive" and not identical with the motive itself; and the evidentiary question is not whether that external fact is admissible as a motive, but whether it is admissible to show the probable existence of the emotion or motive.(2) Generally the voluntary acts of sane persons have an impelling emotion or motive.(3) It has, therefore, already been observed that the absence of all evidence of an inducing cause is reasonably regarded, where the fact is doubtful, as affording a strong presumption of innocence (4) If there

(1) See Wigmore, Ev, 237. Design or plan should be distinguished from intent The latter in the substantive law is a proposition in issue Design or plan is evidence of intent, ib Design should also be distinguished from emotion or motive, though the same facts may be evidence of either

(2) Wigmore, Ev, § 117

(3) See Wigmore, Ev., § 118 Norton, Ev, 107 In Palmer's case (see Steph. Introd, 107—158) Rolfe, B., in addressing the jury, said :—"Had the prisoner the opportunity of administering poison; that was one thing. Had he any motive to do so; that is another." Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 356

(4) Wills' Circumstantial Evidence, 6th Ed, 260; Burrill's Circ. Ev., 281, et seq.; Best, Ev., § 453; see illusts (a), (b). The absence of all motive for a crime, when corroborated by independent evidence of the prisoner's previous insanity, is not without weight: R. v. Sheikh Mustaffa, 1 W R, Cr, 19 (1864); R. v Sorob Roy, 5 W. R., Cr., 28, 31 (1866); R. v Bahar Ali, 15 W. R., Cr, 46 (1871); Dil Gazi v. R (1907), 34 C, 686 [absence of motive]; R v. Jaichand Mundle, 7 W R., Cr, 60 (1867), proof of motive not necessary. "In estimating probabilities, motives cannot, in a general sense, be safely left out of the account. Where the motive is a pecuniary one, the wealth of the offender is no unimportant consideration" Per Sir Lawrence Peel, C. J, in R. v. Hedger, 131 (1852) Evidence as to the motives with which a prisoner commits an offence should be direct evidence of the strictest character, R. v Zuhir, 10 W. R., Cr., 11 (1868). The motives of parties can only be ascertained by inference drawn from facts Taylor v. Williams, 2 B. and Ad., 845, 857.

be any motive which can be assigned, the adequacy of that motive is not in all cases necessary. Atrocious crimes have been committed from very slight motives (1) The mere fact, however, of a party being so situated that an advantage would accrue to him from the commission of a crime, amounts to nothing, or next [illegible] A letter written by the s[illegible] the Company declined to [illegible] of the defendant's threats [illegible] conclusive) evidence that the [illegible] the defendant's threats.(3) Further, the existence of motives invisible to all except the person who is influenced by them must not be overlooked (4) "It is [illegible] order [illegible] But [illegible] it that "every act must have a motive, i.e., an impelling emotion (which is not strictly correct) yet it is always possible that this necessary emotion may be undiscoverable and thus the failure to d[illegible] kinds of evidence to prove a [illegible] of one kind may be more s[illegible] mere absence of any one kind cannot be fatal. There must have been a plan to do the act (we may assume) the accused must have been present (assuming it was done by manual action) but there may be no evidence of preparation, or there may be no evidence of presence; yet the remaining facts may furnish ample proof. The failure to produce evidence of some appropriate motive may be a great weakness in the whole body of proof, but it is not a fatal one as a matter of law. In other words there is no more necessity in the law of evidence to discern and establish the particular existing emotion or some possible one, than to use any other particular kind of evidential fact "(5) An emotion may impel against, as well as towards, an act Thus a defendant's strong feelings of affection for a deceased person would work against the doing of violence upon him and would thus be relevant to show the not-doing (6)

The reasons which exist for the relevancy of evidence of preparation or design have been already given Design may be proved by an utterance in which it is asserted; by conduct indicating the inward existence of design; by evidence of prior or subsequent existence of the design as indicating its existence at the time in question (7) Previous attempts to commit an offence are closely allied to preparations for the commission of it, and only differ in being carried one step further and nearer to the Criminal act, of which, however, like the former, they fall short.(8) Preparation and previous attempts(9) are instances of previous conduct of the party influencing the fact in issue or relevant fact; but other conduct also, whether of a party or of an agent to

---

(1) Per Lord Campbell, C J, in R v Palmer, cited in Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 63; R v. Hedger, supra, 131

(2) Best, Ev, § 453.

(3) Skinner & Co. v Shew & Co, L. R, 2 Ch D (1894), 581

(4) As to acts apparently motiveless, see R. v. Haynes, 1 F & F, 666, 667; R. v Michael Stokes, 3 C & K., 185, 188, and next note.

(5) Wigmore, Ev, § 118, citing Pointer v. U S, 151 U. S, 396 (Amer) [the absence of evidence suggesting a motive is a circumstance in favour of the accused: but proof of motive is never indispensable to conviction] State v Rathbun, 74 Conn, 524 (Amer) [the other evidence may be such as to justify a conviction without any motive being shown]

(6) Wigmore, Ev, § 118

(7) Id, § 237, et seq, e.g., possession of tools, materials, preparations, journeys, experiments, enquiries, and the like

(8) Best, Ev, § 455; s 14, post, illusts. (i), (j), (o), as to the probative force of, and informative circumstances connected with, preparation and previous attempt, see Best, Ev, §§ 456, 457.

(9) See illusts (c), (d), & s. 14, illusts (i), (j), (o) a party, whether previous(1) or subsequent(2), and whether influencing or influenced by a fact in issue or relevant fact, is also made admissible under this section

The second clause applies to the party's agents as well as the party himself. " Party " includes not only the plaintiff and defendant in a Civil suit, but parties in a Criminal prosecution, as for instance, a prisoner charged with murder.(3) The conduct need not, to be relevant, be contemporaneous. Though concurrence of time must always be considered as material to show the connection, it is by no means essential.(4) " If such conduct influences or is influenced " means " if such conduct directly and immediately influences or is influenced."(5) The conduct of a party is extremely relevant (6) It should be remembered that a man's conduct is not only what he does but also what he refrains from doing and that the latter is often the more significant (7) The illustrations given are so many instances of natural presumptions which the Court or jury may draw From preparations prior, or flight subsequent to, a crime, may be inferred or presumed the guilt of the party against whom such conduct is proved.(8) Other presumptions from conduct arise in the case of flight(9), silence(10), evasive or false responsion(11) (v. post), possession of documents, or property connected with the offence(12), change of demeanour in, or in the circumstances of, the accused(13) as his becoming suddenly rich, his squandering unusual sums of money and the like, attempts to stifle or evade justice or mislead enquiry(14) (as flight, keeping concealed, concealing things, obliteration of marks, subornation of evidence, bribery, collusion with officers and the like) and fear indicated by passive deportment(15), as by trembling, stammering, starting, etc., or by a

---

(1) See illusts (d), (e) as to previous and subsequent conduct, see Best, Ev, § 452

(2) See illusts (c), (i)

(3) R. v Abdullah, 7 A, 385, 399 (1885) (F B), in which the terms of this section are discussed, see R v. Arnall, 8 Cox, C C, 439. 3 Russ, Cr., 489.

(4) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 68, Whitley Stokes, 856, Taylor, Ev., §§ 588, 589, Rouch v. G W R, 1 Q B, 60, but see also R v Bedingfield, 14 Cox, 341 ; Agassiz v. London Tram Co, 21 W. R. (Eng), 199, R v Goddard, 15 Cox, 7; Lees v. Marton, 1 M. & R., 210, Thompson v Trevanion, Skin, 402 ; v post

(5) R v Abdullah, supra, 395, 396 ; contra, per Mamood, J, ib, 400

(6) Ib, 394, Balmakand v Ghansam, 22 C, 391, 404, 406 (1894); R. v. Ishri (1907); 29 A, 46; Dalip Singh v. Nawal Kunwar, P. C. (1908), 30 A., 258 [intention inferred from subsequent conduct of accused], R v. Heramun, 5 W. R., Cr, 5 (1866) ; R. v. Malik, 37 A, 395 (1915) [presumption of guilty intent], Karali Prasad Guin v King-Emperor, 44 C., 359 (1917) See as to conduct R. v. Jora Hasji, 11 Bom. H. C. R, 245 (1874), and Wigmore, Ev, sub voc.

(7) Ram Narain Singh v Chota Nagpur Banking Association, 43 C, 332 (1915), per Woodroffe, J. See Watson v. Mohesh Narain Roy, 24 W R, 176 (1875).

(8) Norton, Ev, 107.

(9) Illust (i), ante, absconding is usually but slight evidence of guilt, R. v. Sorob Roy, 5 W. R, Cr., 28 (1866) ; R v. Gobardhan, 9 A, 528, 568 (1887) ; as to the obsolete maxim "fatetur facinus qui judicium fugit" (he who flies judgment, confesses his guilt), see Best, Ev, §§ 460—465, Norton, Ev, 110; see s. 9, illust. (c), post.

(10) v. post.

(11) Norton, Ev, 106, 107, and post ; Best, Ev, 574, see Moriarty v. L. C. & D. Ry, ante, for an example of inferences from conduct of the character above mentioned, see R v Sami, 13 M, 426, 432 (1890).

(12) Illust. (i), ante, see R. v. Courvoisier, Norton, Ev, 111 ; Taylor, Ev., § 595; R v Cooper, 1 Q. B. D, 15. Letters, etc, found in a man's house after his arrest are admissible in evidence if their previous existence has been proved; R. v. Amir Khan, 9 B. L R, 36, 70, 71 (1871).

(13) Best, Ev., § 459.

(14) Arthur P. Wills' Circ. Ev., 138; Best, Ev, § 460; Norton, Ev., 110, 111, Illusts (e), (i), ante, R v Dunellan in Steph Introd, 75—81 and Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 376, 380 ; destruction of marks, see R. v. Cook, and R v. Greenacre, cited in Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed, 134—136 and Norton, Ev, 111.

(15) Best, Ev., § 466 Trial of Eugene Aram cited in Wills' Circ Ev, 6th Ed, 121, 122, and Norton, Ev, 111, 112; R. v Peter Ram, 3 W. R, Cr, 11 (1865) [conduct of accused before and after crime]; R. v Beharee, 3 W. R., Cr., desire for secrecy(1), e g., as by disguising the person or choosing a spot supposed to be out of the view of others. Where a woman charged with a murder led the Police to a place where she produced ornaments which the victim had worn at the time of the murder, this was held to be conduct admissible in evidence against her.(2) The conduct or demeanour of a prisoner on being charged with the crime, or upon allusions being made to it, is frequently given in evidence against him.(3) But evidence of this description ought to be regarded with caution (4) Again in order to ascertain the real intention of parties to an instrument evidence of what they have done under it since its execution is relevant. The principle upon which such evidence is admitted, is contained in the maxim optimus interpres rerum usus.(5) And so in the case of the Attorney-General v. Drummond,(6) Lord Chancellor Sugden said :—" Tell me what you have done under such a deed, and I will tell you what that deed means." As to the admissibility of judgments under this section, see case noted below(7): and as to the admissibility of opinion on relationship, expressed by conduct, see section 50, post. Instances of admission by the conduct or acts of a party to Civil suits are of frequent occurrence. A party's admission by conduct as to the existence or non-existence of any material fact may always be proved against him(8), and evidence on his part 23, 24 (1865) [conduct of the prisoner since arrest ; feigning insanity , general demeanour].

---

(1) Best, Ev., § 467; Norton, Ev , 113.

(2) R v Misri (1909), 31 A , 592.

(3) R v Smithers, 5 C & P , 332 ; R v Bartlett, 7 C & P , 832 , R v Mallory, 13 Q. B D , 33 , R v. Tattershall, 2 Leach, 984; R v. Phillips, 1 Lew, C. C., 105 ; R. v Tate, C. C. A (1908), 2 K B , 680, at p. 915 ; R v. Cramp, 14 Cox, 390.

(4) 1 Phillips and Arnold, 10th Ed , 405 , Roscoe, Cr. Ev , 53, 12th Ed , 48

(5) Robert Watson & Co. v Mohesh Narain, 24 W. R., 17 (1875), in which the question was whether a pottah conveyed an estate for life only or an estate of inheritance, their Lordships of the Privy Council said :—" In order to determine this question their Lordships must arrive as well as they can at the real intention of the parties, to be collected chiefly, no doubt, from the terms of the instrument itself, but to a certain extent also from the circumstances existing at the time of its execution, and further by the conduct of the parties since its execution " In this case the pottah was less than 20 years old at the time of the institution of the suit, from which it appears that in India the maxim is not restricted to ancient documents, i e, documents at least 30 years old (see Field, Ev , 6th Ed , 68, Taylor, Ev., §§ 1204, 1205 ; Roscoe, N. P Ev , 28). See also Girdhar Naggyshet v Ganpat Moroba, 11 Bom H C R , 129 (1874) ; Nidhikrishna v. Nistarini, 13 Bom L R , 416, 420 (1874), s c , 21 W. R , 386 , Cheetun Lall v Chutterdharee Lall, 19 W R., 432 (1873) , Rani Radha Lall v. Gireedharee Sahoo, 20 W R , 243 (1873) , [boundary dispute] . Narsingh Dyal v Ram Narain, 30 C , 883, 896 (1903), as to usage affecting contracts, see s 92, Prov. 5, post and note, with respect to the course of dealing between the parties, when the meaning of a document is doubtful Bourne v. Galliff, 11 C & F., 45 [evidence of former transactions] , Harrison v Barton, 30 L J, Ch., 213 ; Forbes v Watt, L R , 2 H L. Sc & D , 214 ; Royal Exchange Ass Corp v. Tod, 8 T L R , 669 , Taylor, Ev , § 1198, but not when it is clear (Marshall v Berridge, 19 Ch D , 233, 241 , Iggulden v May, 9 Ves , 233), the sense in which both, but not one only, of the parties have acted on it, is admissible in explanation, Phipson, Ev , 5th Ed , 591. Evidence of previous dealings is admissible only for the purpose of explaining the terms used in a contract and not to impose on a party an obligation as to which the contract is silent Haji Mahomed v E Spinner & Co , 2 B L R , 691 (1900) , Kulada Prosad Deghoria v. Kali Das Naik, 42 C., 536 (1915). For conduct showing intention not to be bound by contract, see Mathura Mohan Saha v. Ram Kumar Saha, 43 C , 790 (1916) See generally as to the admissibility of extrinsic evidence to affect documents the introduction to Chapter VI, post

(6) Dru & War , 368

(7) The Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari Singh, 12 A 1, 12, 45 (1889), and notes to s 13, post

(8) Taylor, Ev , §§ 804, 806, and cases there cited The original draft of the Evidence Act contained the following section " A conduct of any party to any proceeding upon the occasion of anything being done or said in his presence in relation to matters in question, and the things so said or done, are relevant facts when they render probable or improbable any relevant fact alleged or denied in to explain or rebut such admissions is also receivable.(1) The plaintiff's title to sue, or the character in which the plaintiff sues, or in which the defendant is sued, is frequently admitted by the acts and conduct of the opposite party; and in some cases, the admission, though not strictly an estoppel, is practically conclusive. Thus, if B has dealt with A as farmer of the post-horse duties, it is evidence in an action by A against B to prove that he is such farmer: and payment of money is an admission against the payer, that the receiver is the proper person to receive it.(2) So also suppression of d[illegible] that their contents are unfavourable to the [illegible] When A brings an action against B to recover [illegible] its B's possession of the land.(3) Mere subscription of a paper, as witness, is not in itself proof of his knowledge of its contents (4) When a landlord quietly suffers a tenant to expend money in making alterations and improvements in the premises, it is evidence of his consent to the alterations.(5) And when a party is himself a defendant (whether in a Civil or Criminal proceeding), and is charged as bearing some particular character, the fact of his having acted in that character will, in all cases, be sufficient evidence, as an admission that he bears that character, without reference to his appointment being in writing Thus upon an indictment against a letter-carrier for embezzlement, proof that he acted as such was held to be sufficient, without showing his appointment.(6) Delay in suing to enforce alleged rights may be construed as an admission of their non-existence (7) Conversations that explain a man's conduct are admissible in evidence (8) As to written and oral admissions, see s. 17, post: and for further instances of admissions by conduct, see the next paragraph but one.

Statements accompanying and explaining acts

In English law such statements are said sometimes to be admissible as forming part of the vague and unsatisfactory term res gestæ. The first Explanation declares that mere statements as distinguished from acts do not constitute conduct "It points to a case in which a person whose conduct is in dispute mixes up together actions and statements; and in such case those actions and statements may be proved as a whole. For instance, a person is seen running down a street in a wounded condition, and calling out the name of his assailant, and the circumstances under which the injuries were inflicted. Here what the person says and what he does may be taken together and proved as a whole."(9) A statement may be admissible, not as standing alone, but as respect of the person so conducting himself" The provisions of this proposed section are, however, incorporated in other parts of the present Act; see present sections, s 11, post, s 114, illusts (g), (h); Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 120; as to conduct of family showing recognition of family arrangement, see Bhubaneswari Devi v Harisaran Surma, 6 C., 724 (1881)

(1) Melhuish v. Collier, 15 Q. B., 878; and s 9, post; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 430—439.

(2) Roscoe, N. P., Ev., 67; Radford v. M'Intosh, 3 T. R, 632; Peacock v Harris, 10 East, 104; James v. Bion, 2 Sin & St. 606; Taylor, Ev., p 567, note; Norton, Ev., p. 114; as to estoppel arising from the acts of a party see s. 115, post

(3) Stanford v. Hurlstone, L. R., 9 Ch, 116.

(4) Harding v. Crethorn, 1 Esp., 58.

(5) Doe v. Allen, 3 Taunt, 78, 80; Doe v. Pye, 1 Esp., 366; Neale v. Parkin, 1 Esp, 229, Stanley v White, 14 East, 332

(6) Roscoe, Cr Ev, 7; R. v. Borrett, 6 C. & P., 124; see s 91, exception (1), post, and notes thereto. See Taylor, Ev, § 173

(7) Juggurnath v. Syud Shah Mahomed, 14 B L R, 386 (1874): Rajendra Nath v Jogendro Nath, 14 M. I. A, 67 (1871), s c, 15 W. R (P. C.), 41.

(8) R. v. Gandfield, 2 Co. C. C. 43.

(9) R v Abdullah, supra, 395, 396, per Petheram, C J.: "But the case would be very different if some passer-by stopped him and suggested some name, or asked some question regarding the transaction. If a person were found making such statements without any question first being asked, then his statements might be regarded as a part of his conduct. But when the statement is made merely in response to some question or objection it shows a state of things introduced not by the fact explaining conduct in reference to relevant facts. So it was held that the answers to his superior officer given by an accused person in explanation of an official irregularity could be proved against him if subsequently ascertained to be false.(1) Conduct may be equivocal without statements explanatory and elucidatory of it. Statements accompanying acts are in fact part of the res gestæ just as much as the acts themselves They are often absolutely necessary to show the animus of the actor. They have been styled verbal acts(2) Thus a payment by a debtor may be explained by his request to apply it to a certain debt. If a debtor leaves home, his intent to avoid his creditors may be shown by what he said when leaving.(3) The declarations are not admissible simply because they accompany an act: the latter itself must be in issue or relevant: the admissibility of such a statement depends upon the light it throws upon an act which is itself relevant.(4) The Evidence Act makes "those statements admissible, and those only, which are the essential complements of acts done or refused to be done, so that the act itself or the omission to act requires a special significance as a ground for inference with respect to the issues in the case under trial"(5) It is not every declaration that accompanies and purports to explain a fact that will be received, e g, a declaration that is equivocal(6), or is a mere expression of opinion(7), or is obviously concocted to serve a purpose(8); in other words the statements must really explain the acts(9), and the declaration must relate to, and can only be used to explain, the fact it accompanies and not previous or subsequent facts(10) unless the transaction be of a continuous nature.(11) "It is sometimes said that the declaration and act must be by the same person (12) But though such declarations are often the only ones material, the rule is by no means so strictly confined It is an every-day practice in Criminal cases to receive the declarations of the victim, as well as those of the assailant So, in cases c [illegible] common [illegible] been held [illegible] participants, if neither parties nor agents, are inadmissible(14); but this limitation cannot be taken as invariable, for the exclamations of mere by-standers may sometimes be both material and admissible evidence.(15) The declarations are no proof of the fact they accompany; the existence of the latter must be in issue, but by the interposition of something else" Ib, but see ib., 400, per Mahmood, J, and ante

---

(1) S v Ganesh, 4 Bom L R, 284 (1902)

(2) Norton, Ev, 106, Bateman v Bailey, 5 T R, 512, Hyde v Palmer, 3 B. & S, 657, 32 L J, Q B, 126, Bennison v Cartwright, 5 B. P. & S, 1

(3) Bateman v Bailey, supra, Roscoe, N P. Ev, 52

(4) Wright v Tatham (1838), 5 Cl & Fin, 670, R. v Bliss, ib, 550, Hyde v Palmer, supra; Roscoe, N P Ev, 53, "When any facts are proper evidence upon an issue all oral or written declarations which can explain such facts, may be received in evidence," Wright v Tatham, supra, per Baron Park See Steph Dig, p 161

(5) R v Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12, 17 (1878), per West, J

(6) R v Bliss, supra, R v Wainwright, 13 Cox, 171; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 53.

(7) Wright v Tatham, supra

(8) Thompson v Trevanion, supra, R v Abrahams, 2 C. & K, 550; Brodie v. Brodie, 44 L T. N S, 307, Starkie, Ev., 89, and see American cases, and authorities in Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 47

(9) See remarks in R v Rama Birapa, supra.

(10) Hyde v Palmer, supra.

(11) Bennison v. Cartwright, supra, Rawson v Haig, 2 Bing, 99

(12) Howe v Malkin, 27 W R (Eng), 340, 40 L T, 196

(13) R v Gordon, 2 How St Tr, 520; R v Hunt, 3 B & Ald., 574, R v. O'Connell Arm & Tr. R., 275, the present section deals only with statements by parties, the declarations mentioned in the text would be admissible under s. 10, post

(14) R v Petcherini, 7 Cox, 79, Bruce v Nicolupolo, 11 Ex., 129.

(15) See note (12), supra, ante such evidence may be admissible under s. 6, ante, see s 6, illust (a) and note, ante.

established independently."(1) As to the admissibility of declarations as evidence of mental and physical conditions, see the fourteenth section, post. Illustrations (j) and (k) are illustrations of statements accompanying and explaining the conduct of a person an offence against whom is being enquired into. Under these illustrations, the terms in which the complaint was made are relevant.(2) " A distinction is to be marked here between a bare statement of the fact of rape or robbery, and a complaint The latter evidences conduct; the former has no such tendency. There may be sometimes a difficulty in discriminating between a statement and a complaint. It is conceived that the essential difference between the two is that the latter is made with a view to redress or punishment and must be made to some one in authority—the Police, for instance, or a parent, or some other person to whom the complainant was justly entitled to look for assistance and protection For instance, a petition impugning the conduct of a Police officer and begging that he may be put on trial is a complaint within the meaning of the Criminal Procedure Code.(3) The distinction is of importance; because while a complaint is always relevant [illegible] under particular [illegible] used as corro- [illegible] a statement as [illegible] h the 25th and 26th sections, post, and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by those sections.(5)

In England it is now held that in prosecutions for rape and offences of a similar character, a statement in the nature of a complaint made by the prosecutrix to a third person, not in the presence of the accused, may be given in evidence provided such statement is shewn to have been made at the first opportunity which reasonably offered itself after the commission of the offence.(6) It was formerly doubted whether the particulars of the complaint could be disclosed by the witnesses for the Crown, either as original or as confirmatory evidence; but it is now settled that they may be so given in evidence in this class of cases, but only in this class, not as being evidence of the truth of the charge against the accused, but as evidence of the consistency of conduct of the prosecutrix with the story told by her in the witness-box and as negativing consent on her part.(7) It was at one time thought that this evidence was only admissible in cases where non-consent was a material element (8) This however is not now the law.(9)

In the second Explanation " statement " includes documents addressed to a person and shown to have come to his actual knowledge.(10) The statements whether oral or written must affect the conduct : if they cannot be shown to have done so they are inadmissible under this section. " Statements made in the presence of a party are admissible as the groundwork of his conduct. [illegible] false or evasive [illegible] nature of an ad- [illegible] false responsion

(1) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 47 et seq.

(2) As to the English rule on this point, see Steph. Dig, p. 162; Taylor Ev, §581; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 25; see R. v. Macdonald, supra; Norton Ev, 114; Whitley Stokes 827; R. v. Lillyman, 31 L. J., 383 (June 20th, 1896), 2 Q. B. (1896), 167; R. v. Osborne (1905), 1 K. B. 551.

(3) Gangadhar Pradhan v. Emperor, 43 C., 173 (1915), but see Emperor v. Phulel. 35 A., 102 (1913) (accusation not made as a complaint).

(4) Norton, Ev, 114. See Wills' Ev., 11, for meaning of "complaint" with Cr. Pr. Code, s. 196, see Apurba Krishna Bose v. R. (1907), 35 C., 141; R. v. Sham Lall (1889), 14 C, 707.

(5) R v Nana, 14 B, 260 (1889).

(6) R v. Osborne (1905), 1 K. B., 551.

(7) R v. Osborne (1905), 1 K. B., 551; R v. Lillyman (1896), 2 Q. B, 167; R. v. Rowland (1898), 62 J. P, 459.

(8) R. v. Kingham (1902), 66 J. P., 393.

(9) Taylor, 581.

(10) Illust. (h), ante; Wright v. Tatham (1838), 5 Cl. and Fin, 670.

would be equivocal per se, and might be unintelligible without our knowledge of what led to it. His act upon the statement, and the statement, are so blended together, that both form part of the res gestæ, and on this ground again, the statement is as receivable as the act. In point of fact, it is the conduct of the party upon the statement being made, that is the material point; the statements themselves are only material as leading up to and explaining that.(1) The mere fact that statements have been made in a party's presence or documents found in his possession, though it may render them admissible against him as original evidence—e g., as showing knowledge or complicity—will afford no proof per se of the truth of their contents; the ground of reception for the latter purpose is that the party has, by his conduct or silence, admitted the accuracy of the assertions made."(2) And in a recent case it has been held that to render documents found in the possession of a prisoner admissible against him in proof of the contents it must be shown that by some act, speech or writing he has manifested a knowledge of all or any of them, and it has been also held that this would apply more strongly when of the documents in question some had been received by him and others written by him.(3) In the case of statements made to, or in a party's presence, he may either reply to them or keep silent(4), or his conduct may be otherwise affected by them (5) When the statement in reply accompanies and explains an act other than the statement, it may be relevant under this section or the section relating to oral or documentary admissions; when it is unaccompanied by any act, it may be relevant under the latter sections Such statements made in a party's presence and replied to, will be evidence against him of the facts stated to the extent that his answer directly or indirectly admits their truth (6) But a party's silence will render statements made in his presence evidence against him of their truth(7) only when he is reasonably called on to reply to such statements. Care must be taken in the application of the maxim qui tacet consentire videtur (silence gives consent): for in many cases, but little reliance can be placed on this circumstance.(8) Admissions from silence or acquiescence

---

(1) Norton, Ev, 106, 107. "It is a general rule that a statement made in the presence of the prisoner, and which he might have contradicted if untrue, is evidence against him," per Field, J., in R v. Mallory, 15 Cox, 456, 458.

(2) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 241, and authorities cited at head of commentary A party may, on similar grounds, be affected by the acquiescence of his agents or others for whose admissions he is responsible, ib ; Haller v. Worman, 3 L T. N. S, 741, Price v Woodhouse, 3 Ex, 616, and see section, supra

(3) Lalit Chandra Chowdhury v R (1911), 39 C, 119; Barindra Kumar Ghose v R. (1909), 37 C, 91 ; Wright v Tatham (1838), 5 Cl and Fin, 670

(4) Illust (g), ante, Neile v Jakle, 2 C & K., 709, supra

(5) Illusts (f), (h), ante

(6) v. post, s 17 et seq ; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 241 ; Taylor, Ev, § 815, Jones v. Morrell, 1 C & K., 266 ; R v John, 7 C. & P, 324 ; Child v. Grace, 2 C. & P, 193; R v. Welsh, 3 F & F, 275 and note to this case in 3 Russ. Cr, 488

(7) Neile v Jakle, supra, Hayslep v Gymer, 1 A & E., 165, Price v Burva, 6 W R. (Eng), 40 ; R v. Cox, 1 F. & F, 90, R v Mallory, 15 Cox 458.

(8) See Child v Grace, 2 C & P, 193, per Taddy Serjt "The not making an answer may under some circumstances be quite as strong as the making one " per Best, C J, "Really it is most dangerous evidence A man may say this is impertinent in you and I will not answer your question " See also Moore v Smith, 14 Serg & R, 393 ; Lucy v. Mouflet, 5 H & N, 229, Wiedemann v Walpole (1891), 2 Q B, 534, Norton, Ev, 113. "So statements made in a party's presence during a trial are not generally receivable against him merely on the ground that he did not deny them, for the regularity of judicial proceedings prevents the free interposition allowed in ordinary conversation" Melen v Andrews, 1 M & M, 336, R v Appleby, 2 Starkie, N. P C, 33, R v Turner, 1 Moo C C, 347, Child v Grace, supra. Even here, however, cases may occur in which the refusal of a party to repel a charge made in a Court of Justice : Simpson v Robinson, 12 Q B, 512 ; or to cross-examine or contradict a witness; R v Coyle, 7 Cox 74, or to reply to an affidavit : Morgan v Evans, 3 C & F, 159, 203; Freeman v Cox, 8 Ch D., 148, Hampden v. Wallis, 27 Ch. D., 251, "may frequently occur with reference to unanswered letters or failure to object to an account. Here the question will also be whether there was any duty or necessity to answer or object. The rule has been stated by Bowen, L. J., to be that, "silence is not evidence of an admission, unless there are circumstances which render it more reasonably probable that a man would answer the charge made to answer every be evidence of generally imply

an admission (3) But it is otherwise if the writer is entitled to an answer; so, in the case of a letter written by A to B, to which the position of the parties ntract or mportant

rtain old objected

f time by account.

It is said however in Taylor on Evidence to be doubtful how far these cases would be followed at the present day, and whether (apart from any special circumstances under which the account is sent in) any valid distinction can be drawn between accounts rendered between merchants and those between other persons, and that with regard to these latter it now appears to be clear that the mere fact that they have been kept by the addressee without remark is no evidence that he has acquiesced in their contents (5) Letters and other papers found in a party's possession will occasionally in a Civil suit be evidence against him, as raising an inference that he knows their contents and has acted upon afford a strong presumption that the imputations made against him are correct" In Sookram Misser v W Crowdy, 19 W. R, 283—285 (1873), Phear, J, said "It is true that silence on the part of defendant during the trial of a case in regard to any matter brought against him in the course of the case might possibly be of some value afterwards irrespective of the decree, as amounting to an admission on his part that that which was alleged and with regard to which he had kept silence was true" See Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 241, and see American cases there cited : and Cunningham's Ev, 95 and 96 So when a Judge at a trial made a proposal as to the course of proceedings in the presence of counsel who raised no objection, it was held not open to counsel subsequently to question the propriety of the course to which he had impliedly given his assent ; Morrish v. Murrey, 13 M. & W., 52, and "if a client be present in Court and stand by and see his solicitor enter into terms of an agreement he is not at liberty afterwards to repudiate it" Swinfen v. Swinfen, 24 Beav, 549, 559, Asiatic Steam Navigation Co. v. Bengal Coal Co. (1908), 35 C., 751.

---

(1) Wiedemann v. Walpole, supra, at p. 539 and see per Willes, J., in Richards v. Gellatly, L. R., 7 C. P. at p. 131 ; the relation between the parties must be such that a reply might be reasonably expected Norton, Ev., 113; Edwards v. Toulls, 5 M. & G, 624 "The only fair way of stating the rule of law is, that in every case you must look at all the circumstances under which the letter was written, and you must determine for yourself whether the circumstances are such that the refusal to reply alone amounts to an admission :" per Kay, L. J, in Wiedemann v Walpole, 2 Q B. (1891), 541 ; and see per Jenkins, C. J., in R. v Bal Gangadhar, 28 B, at p. 491 (1904)

(2) Norton, Ev, 113 See also Roscoe, N P Ev., 53.

(3) See Fairlie v Denton, 3 C & P., 103 ; "what is said to a man's face he is in some degree collected on to contradict, if he does not acquiesce in it, but it is too much to say that a man by omitting to answer a letter admits the truth of the statements it contains," per Lord Tenderden, or "that every paper a man holds purporting to charge him with a debt or liability is evidence against him :" Doe v. Frankis, 11 A & E, 792, per Lord Denman, and see Richards v Gellatly, L. R, 7 C. P., 127 ; Wiedemann v Walpole, supra.

(4) Lucy v Mouflet, 5 H & N., 229; Edwards v Toulls, supra ; Richardson v. Dunn, 2 Q B, 218; Gaskill v. Skene, 14 Q B, 664 ; Fairlie v. Denton, supra ; Freeman v. Cox, supra ; Hampden v. Wallis, supra them, and they are frequently received in Criminal prosecutions.(1) So, also, the opportunity of constant access to documents may sometimes, by raising a presumption that their contents are known, and of non-objection, afford ground for affecting parties with an implied admission of the truth or correctness of such contents.(2) Thus the rules of a club or the proceedings of a society recorded by the proper officer and accessible to the members(3) or an account-book kept openly in a club-room(4) are evidence against the members. On similar grounds books of account which have been kept between master and servant, tradesman and shopman, banker and customer or co-partners(5), will occasionally be admitted as evidence even in favour of the party by whom they have been written, provided that the opposite party has had ample opportunities for testing from time to time the accuracy of the entries (6) In the case cited below the accused was convicted of theft on the evidence of an accomplice which was treated as corroborated in material particulars by the depositions of a Police officer and the complainant to the effect that the accused pointed out the house which he had entered on the night of the offence and the various places in the house connected with the offence

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 810, and cases there cited.

Held : (1) that the evidence of the Police officer and the complainant as to the pointing out of the various places by the accused was really evidence of the confession of his guilt made while he was in the custody of the Police officer and was therefore inadmissible under ss 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act of 1872, (2) that the evidence could not be treated as evidence of conduct apart from the accompanying statements under this section; and (3) that the statement made by the Police officer to the complainant in the presence of the accused that he (the accused) was going to show the various places connected with the theft was not admissible under explanation 2 to this section because the conduct apart from the accompanying statements was not shown to be relevant, and, secondly, because under the circumstances such a statement could not be said to affect the conduct of the accused (7)

Facts necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts.

9. Facts necessary to explain or introduce a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which support or rebut an inference suggested by a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which establish the identity(8) of any thing or person whose identity is relevant, or fix the time or place at which any fact in issue or relevant fact

(1) Lalit Chandra Chowdhury v. R (1911), 39 C, 119

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 812 See notes to s. 14, post

(3) Raggett v Musgrave, 2 C & P, 556, Alderson v Clay, 1 Starkie, 405, Aspitel v Sercombe, 5 Ex, 147

(4) Wilzie v Adamson, 1 Phillips, Ev, 339

(5) See Lindley, Partnership, 536, 5th Ed, and cases there cited : and note to s 18, post

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 812, and cases there cited as to books of a Company see Lindley, Company Law, 312, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 243, 244, 344, and books of Corporations, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1781—1783, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 243, 244, 352, Roscoe, N P Ev, 123, 214—215, Grant on Corporations, 317—319, and note to s 35 post

(7) Emp v Hira Gobar, 21 Bom. L R, 724 s c, 52, I A., 601; 20, Cr. L. J., 681.

(8) See as to identity, Introduction to ss 45—51, post (opinion evidence) Wigmore, Ev, § 410, et seq Witnesses may state their belief as to the identity of persons present in Court or not and may also identify absent persons by photographs produced and proved to be theirs [Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 376 Frith v Frith, L R P D (1896), p 74 ; note to s 35, post Introduction to ss 45—50, post, Rogers, Expert Testimony, § 140] The same rule applies to identification of things (ib) It is well settled that for certain purposes photographs may be received in evidence Thus whenever it is important that the locus in quo should be described to the jury, it is competent to introduce in evidence a photographic view of it So also in an action to recover damages for assault committed with a raw hide a plaintiff was allowed to introduce a ferrotype of his back taken three days after the injury, the person taking the same having testified that it was a happened, or which show the relation of parties by whom any such fact was transacted, are relevant in so far as they are necessary for that purpose.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether a given document is the Will of A.

The state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged Will may be relevant facts.(1)

(b) A sues B for libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A; B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true.

The position and relation of the parties at the time when the libel was published may be relevant facts as introductory to the facts in issue.

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are irrelevant, though the fact that there was a dispute may be relevant if it affected the relations between A and B.(2)

(c) A is accused of a crime

The fact that, soon after the commission of the crime, A absconded from his house is relevant, under section 8, as conduct subsequent to, and affected by, facts in issue.

The fact that at the time when he left home, he had sudden and urgent business, at the place to which he went, is relevant, as tending to explain the fact that he left home suddenly.

The details of the business on which he left are not relevant, except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden and urgent (3)

(d) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A. C, on leaving A's service, says to A 'I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer' This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct which is relevant as a fact in issue (4) correct representation Rogers, op cit. Harris' Law of Identification, §§ 12, 157—178, 352, 590, 642. As to photographic copies of writings for purpose of comparison, see s. 73, post.

---

(1) As explanatory or introductory. Also when the question is Will or no Will, such facts may contradict or support the terms of the alleged Will whence forgery might be presumed or negatived. Such facts would then "rebut or support an inference suggested by a fact in issue" (Norton, Ev., 116). It is to be observed that the factum and not the construction of the Will is here the matter in issue As to evidence of surrounding circumstances in aid of construction, see Introduction to Chap. VI, post.

(2) The object with which what would otherwise be collateral matter is receivable here, is to show the malice or animus of the libeller, though to go into the full details of a quarrel would be too remote and would waste too much time. It is sufficient to show that there was a quarrel, Norton, Ev., 117. Simpson v. Robinson, 12 Q B., 511 : see s. 14, illust. (c), post.

(3) The presumption or "inference" arising from the act of absconding is thus 'rebutted.' The fact of absconding is in itself equivocal. It [illegible] the result of guilty knowledge [illegible] or it [illegible] be perfectly innocent Anything, therefore, that the party says at the time of the act is receivable as explanatory of a relevant fact. It would also be receivable as part of the res gestæ and as a declaration accompanying an act. The question frequently arises in bankruptcy, when it is necessary to decide whether leaving the house is an act of bankruptcy or not. In order to prove the intent with which the bankrupt departed from his dwelling-house evidence of what he said is admissible as forming part of the res gestæ. Norton, Ev., 118; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 52, Bateman v. Bailey, 5 T. R., 512; Ambrose v Clendon, Ca. t., Hardw., 267; Rouch v. G W Ry Co., 1 Q. B., 51; Smith v Cramer, 1 N. C., 585. The details, just as in illust. (b), are not admissible generally except as corroborating the allegation of the suddenness and urgency of the emergency which caused the departure. Declarations made or letters written during absence from home, are admissible as original evidence, since the departure and absence are regarded as one continuing act. Taylor, Ev., §§ 588, 589.

(4) v. post; Hadley v. Carter, 8 New Hamp P., 40; Brukowsky v. Thacker, Stink and others, 6 B. L. R., 107.

(e) A, accused of theft, is seen to give the stolen property to B, who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says, as he delivers it, 'A says you are to hide this.' B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction (1)

(f) A is tried for a riot, and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob The cries of the mob are relevant, as explanatory of the nature of the transaction (2)

Explanatory facts

Principle.—As the 7th and 8th sections provide generally for the admission of facts causative of a fact relevant or in issue, the present section may be said generally to provide for facts explanatory of any such fact (3) There are many incidents which, though they may not strictly constitute a fact in issue, may yet be regarded as forming a part of it, in the sense that they accompany and tend to explain the main fact, such as identity(4), names, dates, places, the description, circumstances and relations of the parties and other explanatory and introductory facts of a like nature (5) The particulars receivable will necessarily vary with each individual case; it is not all the incidents of a transaction that may be proved; for the narrative might be run down into purely irrelevant and unnecessary detail (6) By the answers to some of such questions, if sufficiently particular for the purpose, the fact is individualized (7) See also Commentary, post.

s 3 ("Fact")
s. 3 ("Fact in issue") s 11 (Rebuttal of inference, etc)
s 3 ("Relevant")

Steph Dig, Art 9, Steph Introd, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 47, Cunningham, Ev, 98, Norton, Ev, 115, Wills' Ev, 2nd Ed, 65, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 410—416.

COMMENTARY.

The seventh section, ante, provides for evidence of the state of things under which relevant facts or facts in issue happened, and the 14th and 15th sections, post, for evidence of similar facts, closely connected with the main fact, and explanatory of it. Evidence in support, and particularly in rebuttal, of inferences is of a similar explanatory character (8) The eleventh section is very like the present one as to rebutting an inference and forms an instance of sections overtopping one another.(9) All the abovementioned facts qualify, explain, or complete the main fact in some material particular. A statement which can be shown to be explanatory under this section may be admissible irrespective of whether the person against whom it is given, heard it, or was present when it was made (10) But it is necessary to distinguish the purpose for which it is admissible "It is presumed that the statements made by C in the one case, and B in the other [illusts (d), (e), ante], are only to be receivable

(1) v. post

(2) This illustration is founded on the case of R v Lord George Gordon, 21 How. St Tr, 514, 529 "In the case put, the cries would be made in the presence of the leader, though they were the cries of third parties, not of himself, his silence would be equivalent to an admission that he accepted and acquiesced in those cries as explanatory of the common objects of himself as well as of those he led Under the effect of the next section such cries would be evidence against the accused, even if he was not present, upon proof of a conspiracy between himself and the rioters, joint and common, for the preparation of a wrongful act" Norton, Ev, 119 In R v Hunt, 3, B & Ald, 566 576, evidence given of banners and inscriptions was held to be properly admissible to show the general character and intention of an assembly

(3) Cunningham, Ev, 98

(4) See Norton, Ev, 119, R v Rickman, 2 East, P. C, 1035, R. v Rooney, 7 C & P., 517, R v Fursey, 6 C & P, 81; Wills' Ev, 47

(5) See R v Amir Khan, 9 B L R., 36, 50, 51 (1871)

(6) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 47, the facts are relevant, "in so far as they are necessary for that purpose," s. 9, supra.

(7) Bentham cited in Norton, Ev, 44

(8) Illust. (c).

(9) Norton, Ev., 115, and Introduction, ante

(10) See illusts (d), (e)

as evidence that such statements were made, as declarations accompanying and explaining an act, not of the truth of them as affecting B or A respectively. Without some proof of authority given by the parties to be affected, to those making the statements, it is clear that a very dangerous innovation is introduced, whereby persons may suffer in life, person, or property by statements put into their mouths behind their backs; a principle which the law of evidence has hitherto entirely eschewed."(1) Identity may be thought of as a quality of a person or thing. The essential assumption is that two persons or things are thought of as existing and that the one is alleged because of common features to be the same as the other. The process of inference operates by comparing common marks found to exist in the two supposed separate objects of thought with reference to the possibility of their being the same. It follows, that its force depends on the necessariness of the association between the mark and a single object. Where a circumstance, feature or mark may commonly be found associated with a large number of objects, the presence of the feature or mark in two supposed objects is little indication of their identity, because on the general principle of relevancy the other conceivable hypotheses are so numerous, i e., the objects that possess that mark are numerous, and therefore two of them possessing it may well be different. But where the objects possessing the mark are only one or a few, and the mark is found in two supposed instances, the chances of the two being different are nil or are comparatively small For simplicity's sake the evidential circumstances may thus be spoken of as a mark. But in practice it rarely occurs that the evidential mark is a single circumstance. It is by adding circumstance to circumstance that we obtain a composite feature or mark which, as a [illegible] h more than a single object.(2) [illegible] ions in issue as to the pedigree of [illegible] of BS, or of one MS belonging t [illegible] an attested copy of a rubkar (or Magistrate's judgment) in some proceedings long anterior to the suit, was tendered in evidence, in which rubkar GS was described as the son of BS It was held that the rubkar was admissible in evidence under the provisions of this section. Where one of the main questions for determination in a case was whether a document impugned was or was not presented before the Registrar by one NS, a comparison of the thumb-impression of the person who presented the document with that of NS, was held to be admissible under this section if the similarity of those impressions could establish the identity of that person with NS (4) A and B were charged with theft committed in 1914 in the house of a prostitute, evidence was brought forward to shew that C and D committed a theft in the h[illegible] what similar circumstances. Held, [illegible] was not admissible either under this [illegible] B were the same persons as C and D.(5) It often happens that a place or a time is marked significantly by an utterance there or then occurring so that the identification of it may alone be made, or not be made, by permitting the various witnesses to mention the utterance as an identifying mark. This utterance, not being used as an assertion to prove any fact asserted therein,

(1) Norton, Ev., 118, 119; per contra, Cunningham, Ev., 98-99, it will be seen from the illustrations themselves that the statement in illust. (d), is relevant as explanatory of C's conduct: and in (e) of "a fact which is part of the transaction."

(2) Wigmore's Evidence, § 411. Circumstances identifying persons are corporeal marks, voice, mental peculiarities, clothing, weapons, name, residence and other circumstances of personal history, ib, § 413

(3) Radhan Singh v. Kanayi Dichit, 18 A, 98 (1895).

(4) R v. Fakir Mahomed, 1 C W. N., 33, 34 (1896); see as to identity, and post, s 11, and Introductions to ss 45—51 is not obnoxious to the hearsay rule and may therefore be proved like any other identifying mark. The utterance cannot, however, be used as having any assertive value. From this use of identifying utterances the following superficially similar uses should be distinguished (a) mentioning a third person's utterance as a reason for observing a particular fact, (b) mentioning it as a reason for recollecting a particular fact; (c) using one's own prior utterances of a fact to corroborate one's present testimony and repel the suggestion of recent contrivance.(1)

(5) Emp. v. Panchu Das, 47, C, 671, (F B.), s c., 24 C. W. N, 501; 31, C. L. J. 402.

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design.

10. Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done, or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.

Illustration.

Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen

The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writings advocating the object in view at Agra, and F transmitted from Delhi to G, at Cabul, the money which C had collected at Calcutta, and the contents of a letter written by H, giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant, both to prove the existence of the conspiracy and to prove A's complicity in it, although he may have been ignorant of all of them, and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it

Principle.—The rule which says that a man shall be chargeable with the acts and declarations of his agent or fellow-conspirator is not a rule of evidence.(2) A conspiracy makes each conspirator liable under the Criminal law for the acts of every other conspirator done in pursuance(3) of the conspiracy Consequently the admissions of a co-conspirator may be used to affect the proof against the others on the same conditions as his acts when used to create their legal liability The inclusion of tort-feasors enacts the same rule in its application to Civil liability for torts (4) The tests therefore are the same whether that which is offered is the act or the admission of the co-conspirator or joint tort-feasor; in other words the question is one of substantive law and its solution is not to be sought in any principle of evidence (5) The principle is substantially the same as that which regulates the relation of agent and principal. When various persons conspire to commit an offence or actionable wrong (e.g, co-trespassers or other tort-feasors) each makes the rest his agents to carry the plan into execution. The acts done by any one in reference to the common intention (v. post) is considered to be the act of all These acts are themselves evidence of the corpus delicti, the conspiracy to be established,

(1) Wigmore, Ev, § 416

(2) Prof Thayer in American Law Review, XV, 80 As to procedure see Abdul Salim v King Emp, 35, C. L. J., 279.

(3) See, however, as to this notes post

(4) See R v Hardwicke, 11 East, 578, 585

(5) Wigmore, Ev, § 1079.

they are relevant "for the purpose of proving the conspiracy," as well as the part which each conspirator took in it.(1) s 3 ("Relevant.") s. 136 (Fact proposed to be proved only admissible on proof of some other fact)

s 3 ("Fact")

Steph Dig, Art 4, and Note III; Taylor, Ev., §§ 590—597; Best, Ev., § 508, 3 Russell's Crimes, 109—176; Norton, Ev., 120, Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 348—359; Mayne's Penal Code, ss 107, 121A, Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 167, 168; Wigmore, Ev., § 1079.

COMMENTARY.

onspiracy The provisions of the section are wider than those of the English Law according to which the act or declaration must have been done or said in the execution or furtherance of the common purpose (2) Thus mere narratives and admissions of past events have been held to be inadmissible as such as against any conspirators, except those by whom, or in whose presence, such statements were made (3) Under the present section anything said or done in reference to the common intention is admissible, and thus the contents of a letter written by a co-conspirator giving an account of the conspiracy is relevant against the others, even though not written in support of it or in furtherance of it.(4) It is not necessary that the co-conspirator, whose act or declaration it is sought to prove, should be tried or indicted.(5) The act or declaration of the co-conspirator may have been done or made by a stranger to, and in the absence of, the party against whom it is offered; or without his knowledge, or before he joined the combination(6); or even after he left it.(7) This last-mentioned provision is contrary to the English rule, according to which acts and declarations of others are not admissible against a conspirator if done or made after his connection with the conspiracy has ceased.(8)

There must be an issue as to the existence of the conspiracy and "reasonable ground"(9) for belief in the existence of the conspiracy must be shown, before evidence is given of the acts of persons who, but for such conspiracy, would be strangers to one another. (a) The existence or fact of conspiracy must be proved before evidence can be given of the acts of any person not in the presence of the prisoner. This must, generally speaking, be done by evidence of the party's own acts (10) But owing to the difficulties in the way of such proof a deviation has, in many cases, been made from the general rule, and evidence of the acts and conduct of others has been admitted to prove the existence of a conspiracy previous to the proof of the defendants' privity.(11) But

(1) Steph. Dig, Note III, p 160; Norton, Ev, 121; Taylor, Ev., § 590; 3 Russ, Cr, 143, 144, Best, Ev., § 508; R. v Amir Khan, 9 B. L. R., 36 (1871); s c., 17 W. R., Cr, 15; R v. Amiruddin, 9 B L. R., 36 (1871); s. c, 15 W. R., Cr., 25, and cases there and in the text-books (supra) cited.

(2) Steph. Dig, Art. 4, and text-books cited, ante.

(3) R. v. Hardy, 24 How. St Tr., 718, where an account given by one of the conspirators in a letter to a friend of his own proceedings in the matter not intended to further the common object and not brought to A's notice was held not to be relevant as against A; see also R. v. Blake, 6 Q. B, 826; Steph. Dig, Art. 4, Illusts. (a), (b); Taylor, Ev., §§ 593, 594

(4) See Illustration to section; and Field's Ev., 6th Ed, 72; Cunningham, Ev, 100, Whitley Stokes, 527.

(5) Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 354, 355.

(6) See Illust., ante; R. v. Brandreth, 32 How. St. Tr., 857, 858; R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P, 311; Taylor, Ev., § 592.

(7) See Illust, ante

(8) R v. Hardy, 24 How. St. Tr., 718, 731; Taylor, Ev, § 595.

(9) Kadambini Dasi v. Kumudini Dasi, 30 C., 983 (1903), s. c., 7 C W. N., 808; Shahebar Ma v. Emperor, 18 C. L. J., 590 (1913).

(10) 1 East. P. C, 96 cited in argument in R. v Amir Khan, supra, 55; Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed., 352.

(11) Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 352; 2 Starkie, 2nd Ed, 234.

in respect of such conduct a distinction has been made between declarations accompanying acts(1) (which are admissible), and mere detached declarations and confessions of persons not defendants, not made in the prosecution of the object of the conspiracy, and which being mere "hearsay" are not evidence even to prove the existence of a conspiracy.(2) The persons must have conspired together to commit an offence or actionable wrong. There must have been some pre-concert. A conspiracy within the terms of this section contemplates something more than the joint action of two or more persons to commit an offence. If that were not so, the section would be applicable to any offence committed by two or more persons jointly with deliberation, and this would import into a trial a mass of hearsay evidence, which the accused persons would find it impossible to meet.(3) The agreement to conspire may be inferred from circumstances which raise a presumption of a concerted plan to carry out an unlawful design.(4) (b) After the existence of a conspiracy has been established, the particular defendants must be proved to have been parties to it.(5) (c) After these two facts have been proved the acts and declarations of other conspirators in reference to their common intention may in all cases be given in evidence against the defendants; and under the present section, letters written and declarations made by any of the conspirators which are not part of the res gestæ of the conspiracy and are in the nature of mere admissions are admissible as against the rest (6) "It is necessary to prove the existence of [illegible] e, when you [illegible] and having [illegible] prisoner acts done by any of the parties, whom you have connected with the conspiracy, [illegible]

by proof which actually brings the parties together; but may be shown, like any other fact, by circumstantial evidence.(8) This section is strictly conditional on there being ground to believe that two or more have conspired (9) The statement of an accused made after arrest and not amounting to a confession

---

(1) v. s 8, ante

(2) 2 Starkie, Ev, 235, cited in Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 354; "the mere assertion of a stranger that a conspiracy existed amongst others to which he was not a party would clearly be inadmissible, and although the person making the assertion confessed that he was party to it, this on principle fully established would not make the assertion evidence of the fact against strangers" ib, see also 3 Russ, Cr., 144

(3) Nogendrabala Dabee v. R, 4 C W. N, 528, 530 (1900) As to evidence of conspiracy, see Subrahmania Aiyyar v R, 28 C, 797 (1901); R v Tirumal Reddi, 24 M, 547 (1901); Templeton v. Laurie, 25 B, 230 (1900), [conspiracy to obtain conviction of accused person, and as to what amounts to evidence of abetment of conspiracy], Abdul Salim, v. King Emp 35, C. L J, 279 (1921), see Kalil Munda v. R, 28 C, 797 (1901).

(4) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R (1909), 37 C., 91

(5) Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 354, Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42 C, 957 (1915)

(6) v supra, and Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 350, 351, and as to proof, generally ib, 13th Ed, 352—356, The Queen's Case, 2 B & B, 310, Norton, Ev, 120, 3 Russ, Cr, 144, and cases there cited, but see also s 136, post

(7) Per Pennefather, C J, in R. v. McKenna, Ir Circ Rep, 461, cited in Taylor, Ev, p 525

(8) Taylor, Ev, s 591, 3 Russ Cr, 148, the evidence may be entirely circumstantial and the existence of the conspiracy collected from collateral circumstances, R v Parsons, 1 W R., 392, Roscoe, Cr Ev., 13th Ed., 354—355 "It is perfectly true that the dark covertness of crime cannot often be laid open, that conspiracies like other crimes must be generally supported by circumstantial proof," per Sir Lawrence Peel, C. J. in R v Hedger, p. 129 (1852).

(9) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R. (1909), 37 C., 91.

is not admissible in evidence against a co-accused either under this section or s. 30 of the Evidence Act, but only against himself. The admission does not however affect the conviction when no stress was laid on such statement by the Trial and Appellate Courts.(1).

Evidence that some of the accused ran cocaine and gambling dens long before existence of the conspiracy which was the subject of the charge, was held admissible, the prosecution case being that some of the accused were first thrown together by frequenting or running such dens, and that they continued to meet at such places for the purposes of the conspiracy charged. The evidence of an excise inspector of raids on the dens was admissible as leading up to the admissions made to him.(2)

When facts not otherwise relevant become relevant

11. Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant—

(1) If they are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact.

(2) If by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether A committed a crime at Calcutta on a certain day.

The fact that, on that day A was at Lahore, is relevant.(3)

The fact that, near the time when the crime was committed, A was at a distance from place where it was committed, which would render it highly improbable, though not impossible, that he committed it, is relevant.(4)

(b) The question is, whether A committed a crime.

The circumstances are such that the crime must have been committed either by A, B, C or D. Every fact which shows that the crime could have been committed by no one else, and that it was not committed by either B, C or D, is relevant.(5)

Principle.—The object of a trial being the establishment or disproof by evidence of a particular claim or charge, it is obvious that any fact which either disproves or tends to disprove or tends to prove that claim or charge is relevant.

s. 3 ("Fact")
s. 3 ("Relevant")
s. 3 ("Fact in issue.")
s. 13 (Transaction inconsistent with existence of right or custom)

Steph. Dig, Art. 3, Steph Introd., 160, 161; Norton, Ev., 124, Whitley Stokes, II, 819; Cunningham, Ev., 102; Taylor, Ev, §§ 322—325, Wills' circ, Ev., Passim; Roscoe N. P. Ev., 85, 86, 931, 934; Wigmore, Ev, §§ 135—144.

---

(1) Sital Singh v Emp, 46 Cal. 700. s. c., 30 C. L. J, 255 : 54, I. C, 53.

(2) Ib.

(3) An alibi the relevancy of which is its entire inconsistency with the hypothesis that the accused committed the crime. Norton, Ev., 124, see R. v. Sakharam Mukundji, 11 Bom. H. C. R, 166 (1874); and s 103, illust. (c), post; see observations on an alibi as a defence in R. v. Parbhudas, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 97 (1897); Wills' Circ. Ev., 6th Ed., 279.

(4) This example is of a fact rendering the hypothetical fact on the other side not positively impossible, but highly improbable, as often happens when the question is, whether there was time for the accused to have gone from the place where he says he was to the scene of the crime and returned again.

(5) This is a disjunctive hypothetical syllogism—X is either A or B or C; but it is not B or C; therefore it is A; see Whitley Stokes, 861, note (3), Cunningham, Ev, 103; Norton, Ev, 124.

COMMENTARY.

Inconsistency : Probability

While the seventh section defines the meaning of the term 'relevancy' in quasi-scientific language, the present section contains a statement in popular language of what in the former section is attempted to be stated in scientific language. The practical effect of these two sections is to make every relevant fact admissible as evidence (1) It has been said that the terms of this section, which are very extensive(2), must be read subject to the restrictive operation of other sections in the Act(3): that it may possibly be argued that the effect of the second paragraph of this section would be to admit proof of facts of the irrelevant character mentioned in the Introduction (ante): but that this was not the intention of the section, is shown by the special provisions in the following part of this Chapter as to the particular exceptions which exist to the general rules which exclude as irrelevant the four classes of evidence already mentioned in the Introduction, and is also shown by indications in other portions of the Act.(4) The sort of facts which the section was intended to include, are facts which either exclude or imply, more or less distinctly, the existence of the facts sought to be proved.(5) In the word of West, J., this section " is, no doubt, expressed in terms so extensive that any fact which can, by a claim of ratiocination, be brought into connexion with another, so as to have a bearing upon a point in issue, may possibly be held to be relevant within its meaning. But the connections of human affairs are so infinitely various, and so far-reaching, that thus to take the section in its widest admissible sense would be to complicate every trial with a mass of collateral inquiries limited only by the patience and the means of the parties. One of the objects of a law of evidence, is to restrict the investigations made by Courts within the bounds prescribed by general convenience, and this object would be completely frustrated by the admission on all occasions, of every circumstance on either side, having some remote and conjectural probative force, the precise amount of which might itself be ascertainable only by a long trial and a determination of fresh collateral issues, growing up in endless succession, as the enquiry proceeded. That such an extensive meaning was not in the mind of the Legislature, seems to be shown by several indications in the Act itself The illustrations to the eleventh section do not go beyond familiar cases in the English

---

(1) Markby, Ev., 17, 18

(2) " Some degree of latitude was designedly left in the wording of the section (in compliance with a suggestion from the Madras Government, on account of the variety of matters to which it might apply." Steph Introd, 160, 161.

(3) The meaning of the section would have been more fully expressed, if words to the following effect had been added to it .—" No statement shall be regarded as rendering the matter stated highly probable within the meaning of this section unless it is declared to be a relevant fact under some other section of this Act" Ib, 161, see observations on this section in Whitley Stokes, 819 It is to be observed, however, that the section says "Facts" not otherwise relevant (i e, under ss 6-10, 12, and subsequent sections) are relevant, etc

(4) Steph Introd, 160 " It may, for instance, be said : A (not called as a witness) was heard to declare that he had seen B commit a crime This makes it highly probable that B did commit that crime Therefore A's declaration is a relevant fact under s 11, cl. (2) This was not the intention of the section, as is shown by the elaborate provisions contained in the following part of the Chapter II (ss. 12—39) as to particular classes of statements, which are regarded as relevant facts, either because the circumstances under which they are made invest them with importance, or because no better evidence can be got" ib.

(5) Ib "the words 'highly probable' point out that the connection between the facts in issue and the collateral facts sought to be proved must be so mediate as to render the co-existence of the two highly probable," per Mitter, J., R v M J. Vyapoory Moodeliar, 6 C, 655, 662 (1881)

'If an improperly wide scope be given to the section, the latter might seem to contain in itself and to supersede all the other provisions of the Act as to relevancy" Cunningham, Ev., 103.

law of evidence."(1) All evidence which would be held to be admissible by English Law would be properly admitted under this section.(2) There must always be room for the exercise of discretion when the relevancy of testimony rests upon its effect towards making the affirmative or negative of a proposition "highly probable," and with any reasonable use of the discretion, the Court ought not to interfere.(3) In order that a collateral fact may be admissible as relevant under the eleventh section, the requirements of the law are (a) that the collateral fact must itself be established by normally conclusive evidence, and (b) that it must, when established, afford a reasonable presumption or inference as to the matter in dispute.(4)

Any fact material to the issue which has been proved by the one side may be disproved by the other, whether the contradiction is complete, i.e., inconsistent with a relevant fact under the first clause of this section, or such as only to render the existence of the alleged fact highly improbable under the second clause (5) There are five common cases of the argument of inconsistency (a) the absence of the person charged in another place (alibi); (b) the absence of a husband (non-access), a variety of the preceding, (c) the survival of any alleged deceased person after the supposed time of death, and (d) the self-infliction of the harm alleged Thus the theory of an alibi is that the fact of presence elsewhere is essentially inconsistent with presence at the place and time alleged and therefore with personal participation in the act.(6) So to disprove a rape, evidence is admissible that the prisoner had for many years been afflicted with a rupture which rendered sexual intercourse impossible.(7) When the question was whether a deed was forged or not, it was held admissible to prove that the titles recited in the deed as those of the then reigning Sovereign were not in fact then used by that Sovereign.(8) The question being whether A lent money to B, evidence of the property of A about the time of the alleged loan is admissible as tending to disprove it.(9) Again, under this latter clause of the section, facts may be put in evidence in corroboration of other relevant facts, if they render them highly probable.(10) So where two or more persons have perished by a common calamity such as shipwreck, and the question is whether A survived B, the law of England raises no presumption either of survivorship or contemporaneous death: but if any circumstances connected with the death of either party can be proved, the whole question of survivorship resemblance, or want of resemblance, of A to B is admissible.(12) So also circumstances may be proved which render the fact of payment of a debt probable, as, for instance, the settlement of accounts subsequent to the accruing of the debt, in which no mention is made of it.(13) Where defendants Nos. 2 and 4

---

(1) R. v Parbhudas, 11 B. H. C. R., 90, 91 (1874), R v Vajiram, 16 R., 414, 425 (1892); see note to s. 14, post

(2) R. v. Vajiram, supra, 430, per Telang, J.

(3) R. v. Parbhudas, supra, 94, per West, J.

(4) Bibi Khaver v. Bibi Rukha, 6 B. L. R., 983 (1904).

(5) S. 9 is very similar to the present section as to rebutting an inference; Norton, Ev., 115, v. ante.

(6) Wigmore, Ev., §§ 135 et seq

(7) 1 Hale, P. C., 835; Best, Ev., § 450.

(8) Lady Ivy's case, 10 St. Tr, 615; Steph. Dig Art. 9, illust. (d); see also Field, Ev, 6th Ed, p. 39, note.

(9) Dowling v. Dowling, 13 Ir. C. L., 241, cited in Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 103.

(10) Norton, Ev, 124.

(11) Taylor, Ev, § 203; Best Ev, § 410; Underwood v Wing, 4 D. M. & G., 633; Wing v. Angrave, 8 H. L. C, 183.

(12) Burnaby v. Baillie, 42 Ch. D, 282, 290.

(13) Colsell v. Budd, 1 Camp, 27; as also that the party claiming to have paid the debt was afterwards in possession of the document creating it: Brembridge v. Osborne, 1 Starkie, 374; see for similar cases, Taylor, Ev., §§ 178, 138;

sold a jote to defendant No. 1, which they obtained under a partition, and subsequently colluded with the plaintiff and denied the said partition, as well as the sale, the statements previously made by them, which went to show that there had been a partition and they had changed their attitude, were held to be admissible as against them under the third clause of twenty-first section and the second clause of the eleventh section of the Evidence Act.(1) In a case in which indicative of an intention that any one of these leases was perpetual should leases. The Court, correct in its broad irge number of these leases, there was recogn recognition was not exp peculiar to the leases to indicated by the acts and conduct of the parties was to make these leases perpetual would make it highly probable that the same was the intention with regard to the leases in dispute, and the facts relating to these leases would, therefore, have been relevant facts under the second clause of this section But then belonged (2) When the question was whether a deceased person had married a lady, and a draft of a Will, not written by the testator himself and containing no mention of the lady, was tendered in evidence under this section it was held to be inadmissible inasmuch as it was not a written statement made by the deceased testator.(3) Where in a suit for rent of land from defendant, plaintiff lease.(4) It has been held that when the question is whether the accused is an habitual cheat the fact that he was a member of an organization formed for the purpose of habitual cheating is relevant under this section, and that the facts of such membership and such cheating may be proved against each of the members of the organization.(5) And it has been held that an intercepted letter written by the accused referring to a telegram signed with a different name but sent from his address was relevant against him under this section as primâ facie evidence that he had sent the telegram.(6) A and B were charged with theft committed in 1914 in the house of a prostitute; evidence was brought forward to show that C and D committed a theft in the house of another prostitute in 1918 in somewhat similar circumstances Held, (Chaudhuri, J., dissenting) that the evidence was not admissible either under s 9 or under this section to prove that A and B were the same persons as C and D.(7) As to the question of admissibility of judgments under this section, see notes to the thirteenth section post.(8) As to the admissibility of depositions made by a

Best, Ev., § 406, and other cases dealt with by these authors under the head of presumptive evidence

(1) Bibi Gyannessa v. Mussammat Mobarakunnessa, 2 C W N, 91 (1897)

(2) Narsingh Dyal v Ram Narain, 30 C., 883, 896, 897 (1903)

(3) Haji Saboo v Ayeshabai, 7 C. W N, 665 (1903), s c, 27 B, 485

(4) Kaung Hla Pru v San Paw, 3 L. B. R, 90

(5) Kalu Mirza v R. (1909), 37 C., 91.

(6) Booth v Emperor, 41 C., 545 (1914).

(7) Emperor v Panchu Das, 47 C., 671, F B, s. c, 24, C W N, 501

(8) And Tepu Khan v Rojoni Mohun 2 C W N., 501 (1898), Lakshman v Amrit, 24 B., 593, 599 (1900)

person since deceased, it has been held that unless they are admissible under sections 32 and 33, the present section will not avail to make them evidence.(1) An entry made in a register of indoor patients in a hospital is admissible in evidence to prove that the person mentioned in the entry was in the hospital on a certain date.(2) The accused was charged with having caused grievous hurt to one of his wives and killed another. The wounded woman, on the day of occurrence on her arrival in hospital made a statement to a Magistrate to the effect that it was accused who had attacked herself and co-wife. This statement was admitted and placed before the jury. Held that the mere fact that the woman made a statement had no bearing on the main fact in issue and this section does not justify the admission of the contents of the statements.(3)

On questions of title, repeated acts of ownership with respect to the same property are, under the thirteenth section, post, receivable, and even acts done with respect to other places connected with the locus in quo by " such a common character of locality as to give rise to the inference that the owner of one is likely to be the owner of the other "(4) are sometimes under the present section receivable. In Jones v. Williams, (5) Parke, B., said that " evidence of acts in another part of one continuous hedge adjoining the plaintiff's land was admissible in evidence on the ground that they are such acts as might reasonably lead to the inference that the entire hedge belonged to the plaintiff." " In other words, they are facts which, by the eleventh section of the Evidence Act, are relevant, because they make the existence of a fact in issue highly probable."(6) When a question as to the ownership of land depends on the application to it of a particular presumption, capable of being rebutted, the fact that it does not apply to other neighbouring pieces of land similarly situated is deemed to be relevant.(7) So when the question is, whether A, the owner of one side of a river, owns the entire bed of it, or only half the bed at a particular spot, the fact that he owns the entire bed a little lower down than the spot in question is deemed to be relevant.(8) In like manner it has been held that when the question is, whether a piece of land by the roadside belongs to the lord of the manor, or to the owner of the adjacent land, the fact that the lord of the manor owned other parts of the slip of land by the side of the same road is relevant.(9) And in a suit brought by the plaintiff against several defendants to prevent encroachments by the defendants, it was held that the admission of one of the defendants in a previous suit to which the other defendants were not parties, as to the common character of the portion of the land between his house and the plaintiff's and also a similar statement in a deed put in by another of the defendants to prove his title to his own house, were admissible in evidence to establish the common character of the entire lane as alleged by the plaintiff. The fact of common ownership of other parts of

(1) Bela Rani v Mehabir Singh (1912), A. C., 34 A, 341.

(2) Amolak Ram v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J., 141.

(3) Emperor v. Abdul Sheikh, 23, C. W. N., 933.

(4) Jones v. Williams, 2 M. & W., 326 ; Bristow v. Cormican, 3 App. Cas., 641, 670 ; Neill v. Devonshire, 8 App. Cas, 135 ; Lord Advocate v. Lord Blantyre, 4 App. Cas, 791 ; Sabram Sheikh v. Odoy Mahto, 1 Pat, 375 (1922), Taylor, Ev., §§ 322—325 ; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 85, 86, 931, 934 ; Steph. Dig, Art. 3; see note to s 13 post. The rule in Jones v. Williams, 2 M. &. W., 326, and Lord Advocate v. Lord Blantyre, 4 App. Cas., 791, was observed upon in Mohini Mohan v. Promoda Nath, 24 C, 259 (1896). See Sabran Sheikh v Odoy Mahto, 1 Pat, 375 (1922)

(5) Jones v Williams, at p 331.

(6) Naro Vinayak v Narhari, 16 B., 125, 128 (1891), per Sargent, C. J., referred to in Bibi Gyannessa v. Mussammat Mobarakunnessa, 2 C. W. N., 91, 94 (1897).

(7) Steph. Dig, Art. 3.

(8) Ib, Jones v. Williams, 2 M. & W., 326 (see note to s. 13, post) ; followed in Naro Vinayak v. Narhari, ante.

(9) Ib.; Doe v. Kemp, 7 Bing, 332; 2 Bing, N. C., 102 ; Taylor, Ev., §§ 320—325.

the lane should be treated as relevant to the issue as to the common character of the entire lane on the principle laid down in this section.(1) It has been recently held that documents not inter partes containing recitals of boundaries of other lands are not admissible in evidence under this section.(2) Where one of the main questions for determination in a case was whether a document then impugned was or was not presented before the Registrar by one NS, a comparison of the thumb-impression of the person who presented the document with that of NS was held to be admissible under the second clause of this section if dissimilarity of the impressions made the identity of that person with NS improbable (3) Where the parties to a suit are at issue on a vital question and the evidence is conflicting, the safest principle for the Court is to consider which story fits best with the admitted circumstances and the resulting probabilities.(4)

In suits for damages, facts tending to enable Court to determine amount are relevant.

12. In suits in which damages are claimed, any fact which will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages which ought to be awarded, is relevant.

Principle.—In suits in which damages are claimed, the amount of the damages is a fact in issue. See Note, post.

s. 3 ("Fact") s. 3 ("Relevant")
s. 55 ("Character as affecting damage")

Roscoe, N. P. Ev, passim, sub voc. "damages", Norton, Ev, 124, Mayne on Damages, 4th Ed. (1884), Alexander's "Indian Case-Law on Torts," 3rd Ed., 1891; Pollock on Torts, 2nd Ed., 1890; Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act), ss. 73—75, 117, 118, 125, 150—152, 154, 180, 181, 205, 206, 211, 212, 225, 235 259; Cunningham and Shephard's Indian Contract Act, 11th Ed., 1915.

COMMENTARY.

Damages.

Damages, which are the pecuniary satisfaction which a plaintiff may obtain by success in an action, are, unless expressly admitted, deemed to be a fact in issue (5); damages may be claimed either in actions or contracts(6) or tort.(7) The question as to when damages may be recovered, and the amount of damages recoverable in particular suits, as well the defences pleadable in such suits, is a portion of the particular branch of the substantive law under the provisions of which these suits are brought(8); and therefore the present section does not specify how the facts made relevant by it are to be related with the injured property, person or reputation, but lays down generally, that evidence tending to "determine," i e, to increase or diminish the damages is admissible (9) Thus in an action for libel, other libellous expressions by the defendant, whether used before or after the commencement of the suit, are sometimes admissible for the plaintiff, to show the malevolence of the defendant, and so to enhance damages On the other hand, evidence of circumstances, which, according to the law of libel, have the effect of mitigating

(1) Naro Vinayak v Narhari, supra.
(2) Saroj Kumar Acharji v Umed Ali Howladar, 25 C W N, 1022 (1921), nor (it was there held) under s 13 post.
(3) R v. Fakir Mahomed, 1 C W N, pp. 33, 34 (1896); v. ante, s. 119, n 1
(4) Davis v Maung Shwe Go (1911), 38 I A, 155
(5) See Roscoe, N P Ev, 86, 878.
(6) See Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 73—75, 117, 118, 125, 150—152, 154, 180, 181, 205, 206, 211, 212, 225, 235, 259.
(7) See Alexander's "Indian Case Law on Torts," Pollock on Torts, Draft Indian Civil Wrongs Bill, ib., p. 517.
(8) See Mayne on Damages, Roscoe, N P. Ev., sub voc. "Damages"
(9) Norton, Ev., 124; Roscoe, N P. Ev, 86.

damages are admissible in evidence for the defendant.(1) In an action for breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff may give evidence of the defendant's fortune, for it obviously tends to prove the loss sustained by the plaintiff; but not in an action for adultery(2); nor for seduction(3); nor for malicious prosecution, for it is nothing to the purpose in an action on tort "whether the damages come out of a deep pocket or not."(4) Injury to the feelings is irrelevant in an action on contract as an element of damage; but in actions on tort heavy damages may be given on this score. In Hamlin v. Great Northern Railway Company(5) it was said: "The case of a contract to marry has always been considered as a sort of exception, in which not merely the loss of an establishment in life, but, to a certain extent, the injury to a person's feelings in respect to that particular species of contract, may be taken into account; but, generally speaking, the rule is this: in the case of a wrong, the damages are entirely with the jury, and they are at liberty to take into consideration the injury to the party's feelings and the pain he has experienced, as, for instance, the extent of violence in an action of assault; and many topics, and many elements of damage, find place in an action for tort, or wrong of any kind, which certainly have no place whatever in an ordinary action of contract."(6) The leading case on the subject of damages in the case of breach of contract—Hadley v Baxendale(7)—is the foundation of the rule contained in section 73 of the Indian Contract Act; according to which rule the damages which the plaintiff ought to receive should be such as naturally arose in the usual course of things from the breach, or such as the parties knew, when they made the contract, to be likely to result from the breach of it. All facts showing the amount of such damage are relevant under this section; but no damages can be ordinarily recovered by an action of contract that are not capable of being specifically stated and appreciated.(8) Neither in actions on contract nor on tort must the damage be too remote(9); and evidence of damage of such a character will not be admissible, nor, in general, will

---

(1) Roscoe, N P Ev, 864, 878; evidence in mitigation and aggravation of damages may be further illustrated by the decided cases on action for seduction, assault, false imprisonment, trespass, trover, etc Thus where the defendant had given the plaintiff in charge of a constable for felony, he was allowed to show reasonable ground of suspicion in mitigation of damages. Chinn v. Morris, Ry. & M., 424; v. Roscoe, N. P. Ev., passim, sub voc. "damages"; Norton, Ev., 126. So also in actions for assault, the provocation offered by the plaintiff would be relevant under this section: in the case of action against Railway Companies for injuries received, the position, and circumstances and earnings of the plaintiff, the precautions taken by the Company, and the contributory negligence if any, of the plaintiff. See Cunningham, Ev., 105

(2) James v. Biddington, 6 C & P, 589; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 86; Hodsoll, v Taylor, post, 81.

(3) Hodsoll v. Taylor, L. R., 9 Q. B, 79; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 86, and p 911 as to evidence in aggravation.

(4) Per Blackburn, J, in Hodsoll v. Taylor supra, quoting Lord Mansfield.

(5) 36 L J, Ex., 20; 1 H. & N., 408; per Pollock, C. B (this was an action for damages for breach of contract). See Williams v. Curtis, 1 C. B., 841.

(6) See Williams v. Curtis, 1 C. B, 841; Sears v Lyons, 2 Starkie, 317; this principle is well illustrated in actions for libel where the injury to the feelings is always an element of consideration. Norton, Ev., 126, the circumstances of time and place, when and where the insult was given, require different damages; thus it is a greater insult to be beaten upon the Royal Exchange than in a private room per Bathurst, J, Tullidge v. Wade, 3 Wils, 19, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 913; and in trespass the jury may consider not only the pecuniary damage sustained but also the intention with which the act has been done, whether for insult or injury; per Abbott, J, Sears v. Lyons, 2 Starkie, 318; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 937.

(7) 23 L. J., Ex., 179, 182; 9 Ex., 341; see Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s. 73; Cunningham and Shephard's Indian Contract Act, 11th Ed. (1915).

(8) Per Pollock, C. B., in Hamlin v. G N. Ry Co, supra at p. 23.

(9) Act IX of 1872, s. 73; Alexander, op. cit, 9.

evidence of facts tending to show damage, or of facts in aggravation or mitigation of damages, be relevant under this section, unless the damage or aggravating or mitigating facts are of the kind and character which the substantive law recognises. The question when, and under what circumstances, evidence of character may be given in Civil actions with a view to damages, is dealt with by section 55, post, and in the notes thereto.

Facts relevant when right or custom is in question.

13. Where the question is as to the existence of any right or custom, the following facts are relevant :—

(a) any transaction by which the right or custom in question was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence :

(b) particular instances in which the right or custom was claimed, recognised or exercised, or in which its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from.

Illustration

The question is whether A has a right to a fishery. A deed conferring the fishery on A's ancestors, a mortgage of the fishery by A's father, a subsequent grant of the fishery by A's father irreconcilable with the mortgage, particular instances in which A's father exercised the right, or in which the exercise of the right was stopped by A's neighbours are relevant facts.

Principle.—In such cases every act of enjoyment or possession is a relevant fact, since the right claimed is constituted by an indefinite number of acts of user exercised animo domini (1) Ownership may be proved by proof of possession ; and that can be shown by particular acts of enjoyment(2), these acts being fractions of that sum total of enjoyment which characterises dominium (3) This also is the best evidence, with the exception of that afforded by judicial recognition, which is only admissible in proof of matters of a public nature, that is public or general rights and cus[illegible] sible in proof of such rights and customs.(5) [illegible] rights and customs is not that which is afford[illegible] as to their existence, but by the examination of actual instances and transactions in which the alleged custom or right has been acted upon, or not acted upon, or of acts done, or not done, involving a recognition or denial of their existence.(6) " In the absence of direct title-deeds, acts of ownership are the best proofs of title "(7) Acts of ownership, when submitted to, are analogous to admissions or declarations by the party submitting to them that the party exercising them has a right to do so, and that he is therefore the owner of the property upon which they are exercised. But such acts are also

(1) Wills' Ev, 2nd Ed, 60

(2) Jones v Williams, 2 M. & W, 326, foll Sabran Sheikh v. Odoy Mahto, 1 Pat, 375 (1922).

(3) Wills' Ev, 2nd Ed, 61.

(4) v s. 42, post : see remarks of Edge, C J., and Tyrrell, J, in Gurdyal Mal v Jhandu Mal, 10 A, 586 (1888)

(5) v ss. 32, cl (4), 48

(6) See remarks of Turner, J, in Lachman Rai v Akbar Khan, 1 A, 440 (1877), and Gopalayyan v Raghupatiayyan, 7 Mad H C Rep, 250, 354, post: and remarks of Westrop, C. J, in Bhagwandas Tejmal v. Rajmal, 10 Bom. H C R., 261 (1873) ; Steph. Dig, Arts 5 and 6 and case there cited; Taylor, Ev § 1683; v Ranchhoddas Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar, 10 B, 439, post . v Commentary, post, and note to ss 32, cls (4), (7), and 42, 48, as to long usage being the best exponent of right, see Nilakandhen Nambudirapad v. Padmanabha Revi Varma, 18 M., 1 (1895)

(7) Per Jackson, J, in Collector of Rajshahy v. Doorga Sonduree, 2 W. R., 212 (1865).

admissible of themsel,es proprio vigore, for they tend to prove that he who does them is the owner of the soil.(1)

s. 3 ("Relevant.")

s. 32, Cl. (4), (Public right or custom; opinion of person not called as witness)

s. 32, Illust. (i). (Illustration of "public right.")

s. 32, Cl. (7) (Statements in Document relating to "transaction.") s 42 and Illust. (Judgments relating to matters of a public nature.)

s. 48 and Illust. (General Custom or rights; opinion of witnesses on.)

s. 48, Explanation. (Meaning of "general custom or right") s 48, Illust. (Illustration of "general custom or right.") s 49 (Opinions as to usage, etc.)

s. 51 (Grounds of opinion.)

s. 92, Prov. 5. (Usage and Custom imported into contract.)

The following Acts refer to custom :—Acts XXI of 1850, s 1 (Non-forfeiture of right by loss of caste); XV of 1856 (Re marriage of Hindu widows); IV of 1872, ss 5 (a), 7 (Punjab of 1920 and X of 1922); II of 1901 (N-W. P. Rent), XVIII of 1881, s 67 (Land Revenue, Central Provinces); II of 1882, s. 1 (Indian Trusts as amended by Acts XXI of 1917 and XXXI of 1920) See also Act XIV of 1920 (Religious Trusts); V of 1882, ss 18, 20 (Easements); VIII of 1884, s. 40 (Punjab Courts as amended by Acts VI of 1918 and IX of 1919);

1 O acts II of 1913, III of 1916, XVII of Acts XVIII of 1919 and XVIII of 1920);

, 320: Starkie, Ev., §§ 123-139; Roscoe, N P Ev., 24, 25, 53, 54, 934; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 96, Best, Ev, §§ 366-399, 499; Wills' Ev, 2nd Ed., 60

COMMENTARY.

Right The right mentioned in this section is not a public right only: the Illustration shows this is not so, the right there mentioned being a private one.(2) Three kinds of rights are thus included in the Act :—(a) private, e g, a private right of way; (b) general, siderable class of persons use the water of a parti right is nowhere defined previous definition is a general one, though (if the distinction made in English law between the terms "general" and "public" be accepted) every general right is not a public one.

There was at one time a conflict of decisions as to whether the term is to be understood as comprehending all legal rights (including a right of ownership) or only incorporeal rights. In the leading case Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, Jackson, J., and Garth, C. J., were of opinion that the rights referred to, in the section, were incorporeal rights. "What is referred to in the section cited is evidently a right which attaches either to some property or to status; in short, incorporeal rights, which though transmissible, are not tangible or objects of the bodily senses."(5) "It may be difficult perhaps to define precisely the scope of the word 'right,' but I think it was here intended to include those properties only of an incorporeal nature, which in legal phraseology are generally called 'rights,' more especially as it is used in conjunction with the

(1) Starkie, Ev, 470, note F.: Jones v. Williams, 2 M. & W., 326, v post.

(2) Surja Narain v. Bissambhar, 23 W. R., 311 (1875): see Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall (F. B.), 6 C., 187 (1880), per Garth, C. J.

(3) S. 48 and illust.

(4) S. 32, cl. (4), illust. (i) and illust. to s. 42 which last section also deals with the subject of public rights.

(5) Per Jackson, J, in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C, supra, 184; Mitter, J., dissenting word 'custom.' It is certainly used in that sense in subsequent parts of the Act (v. the forty-eighth section, and the fourth sub-section of the thirty-third section) which deal with matters of public or general 'right or custom.' "(1) On the contrary it has been held by Mitter, J., that the contention that the section in question refers only to incorporeal rights, whether of a public or private nature, is not warranted by any general principle, it being difficult to suggest a reason which would justify the existence of a distinction between the rules applicable to the proof of corporeal and incorporeal rights, respectively, whether of a public or private nature (2) Quite recently also Banerjee, J, observed as follows(3) :—" It has been said that the right spoken of in this section is an incorporeal right. I do not think that there is any sufficient reason for putting this limitation on the meaning of the term as used by the section." So also in Bombay, it has been held that the words " rights and customs " should be understood as comprehending all rights and customs recognised by law, and therefore as including a right of ownership(4) : and in Allahabad that the word " right " in both clauses (a) and (b) includes a right of ownership, and is not confined, as held by the majority (sed qu. majority) in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, to incorporeal rights.(5) It would seem now to be generally held that the term " right " includes all rights and is not limited to incorporeal rights. As to antiquity in the case of a right no less than of a custom, usage for a number of years, certainly raises a presumption that such right or custom has existed beyond the time of legal memory (6)

Custom or usage.

" Custom " as used in the sense of a rule which in a particular district, class, or family has from long usage, obtained the force of law(7), must be (a) ancient(8) , (b) continued, unaltered, uninterrupted, uniform, constant(9) ;

---

(1) Per Garth, C. J, 186, ib, Mitter, J., dissenting · and see Kalidhun v. Shiba Nath, 8 C., 505 (1882). The undermentioned cases decided prior to Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall (1880), may be consulted on this point : Koondo Nath v Dheer Chander, 20 W. R, 345 (1873) (right of succession to office) ; Neamut Ali v. Gooroo Dass, 22 W. R, 365 (1874) (itmamee right to lands) ; Guttee Koiburto v. Bhukut Koiburto, 22 W. R, 457, Daitarai Mohanti v. Jugo Bundhoo, 23 W R, 293 (1875) ; followed in Sabran Sheikh v. Odoy Mahto, 1 Pat, 375 (1922) ; Hansa Kooer v Sheo Gobind, 24 W. R, 431 (suit for lands) ; Mohesh Chunder v Dino Bandhu, 24 W R, 265 ; Lachmeedhur v. Rughoobur, 24 W R, 284 ; Omer Dutt v Burn, 24 W. R, 470 (suits for rent) , Nerangi Bhikabhai v Dipa Umed, 3 B, 3 (1878) (suit for chirda allowance)

(2) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, 6 C, 180, v. supra, Pontifex, J, expressed no opinion upon this particular point and Morris, J, merely agreed with Garth, C. J., in holding that the former judgment was inadmissible

(3) In Tepu Khan v Rajoni Mohan, 2 C W N., 501, 504 (1898)

(4) Ranchhoddas Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar, 10 B, 439 (1886), per Sargent, C J.

(5) Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, 12 A, 13, 24 (F B), and see Ramasami v. Apparu, 12 M, 9 (1887) (suit for money claimed under alleged right) ; Venkatasami v. Venkatreddi, 15 M, 12 (1891), suit for declaration of title to land ; Vythilinga v Venkatacha, 16 M, 194 (1892), suit for possession of land Followed in Sabran Sheikh v. Odoy Mahto, 1 Pat, 375 (1922)

(6) Ramasami v Appavu, 12 M, 14 (1887).

(7) Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 3 I A, 259 (1876) ; s c, 26 W. R, 55 ; Sivananan ja Perumal v Meenakshi Æ Ammal, 3 Mad H C. R, 77 (1866).

(8) Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 3 I A, 259 (1876) , Lala v Hira Singh, 2 A, 51 (1878) ; Doe d Jogomohon v Nimu Dasi, Montriou's Cases of Hindu Law, 596 (length of time necessary) ; Joy Kishan v. Doorga Narain, 11 W R, 348 (1860) (id) ; Juggomohun Ghose v Manickchund, 7 M I A, 282 (1859), s c, 4 W R. (P C), 8 Amrit Nath v Gouri Nath, 6 B L R, 238 (1870) , Rajah Nagendur v Ruhoonath Narain, W R (1864), 20 , Ramalakhmi Ammal v Sivananan ja Perumal, 17 W R 553 (1872) , Perumal Sethurayar v M Ramalinga Sethurayar, 3 Mad H C R, 77 (1866) , Gopalayyan v Roghupattiayyan, 7 Mad. H C R, 254 (1873) (usage must also be public) See Ramasami v Apparu, 12 M, 14, ante, and Bhau Nanaji v Sundrabai, 11 Bom H C R, 271, post, Durga Charan Mahto v Raghunath Mahto, 18 C L J 559 (1913)

(9) Lala v Hira Singh, 2 A, 49, supra · Jameela Khaton v Pagul Ram, 1 W. R., 250 (1864) ; Beni Madhub v. Joi

(c) peaceable and acquiesced in(1); (d) reasonable(2); (e) certain and definite(3); (f) compulsory and not optional to every person to follow or not.(4) The acts required for the establishment of customary law must have been performed with the consciousness that they spring from a legal necessity(5); and (g) must not be immoral.(6) In a recent case it was said that a custom must be proved to be immemorial, recoverable, uninterrupted and also certain as regards its nature in the locality and persons affected by it(7); in this case it was said that a custom is void at law if there is proof that it originated within the time of memory but proof of its existence for a longer period will put the onus on those who assail it. And in another recent case it was said that a custom [illegible] the law has left undetermined, [illegible] rity of a given class and must [illegible] l continuous instances.(8) The Privy Council has held that it is permissible to adduce evidence of a family custom which varies the strict Mahommedan Law.(9)

The right mentioned in the section being a public or private right (v. ante), the 'custom' must also on proper principles of construction, include a private custom.(10) The word 'custom' as used in this section is not, however, limited to ancient custom, but includes all customs and usages. So it has been held under section 48, which deals with general customs and rights, that evidence [illegible] include what the people [illegible] ular place. It may be [illegible] or it may be one which [illegible] regularly and ordinarily

---

Krishna, 7 B. L. R., 154, 155 (1869); Juggomohun Ghose v. Manikchund, 7 M. I. A., 282, s. c., 4 W. R. (P. C.), 8, supra; Amrit Nath v. Gauri Nath, 6 B. L. R., [illegible]

Patel Maninal, 16 B., 470 (1891); Perumal Sethurayar v. M. Ramalinga Sethurayar, 3 Mad. H. C. R., 77, supra; Soorendronath Roy v. Mussamut Heeramonee, 12 M. I. A., 81 (1868), s. c., 10 W. R. (P. C.), 35, Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C. R., 57 (1866), (acts must also be plural) Rajkishen Singh v. Ramjoy Surma, 1 C., 195 (1872) (discontinuance); [illegible] supra, Luchmeeput Singh v. Sadaulla Nushyo, 9 C., 699 (1882); Ransordas Bhogilall v. Kesrising Mohun, 1 Bom. H. C. R., 229 (1863), Arlapa Najah v. Narsi Keshavji, 8 Bom. H. C. R. (A. C.), 19 (1871); C. R. DeSouza v. Pestanji Dhanjibhai, 8 B., 408 (1884); Rajah Varma v. Ravi Varmah, 1 M., 235 (1877); Nyanmutullah Ostagur v. Gobind Churn, 6 W. R., Act X, 40 (1866); Kuar Sen v. Mamman (1895), 17 A., 87; Shadi Lall v. Muhammad Ishaq Khan (1910); 33 A., 257.

(3) Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal, 3 I. A., 285, supra; Rajkishen Singh v. Ramjoy Surma, 1 C., 195, 196, supra; Lala v. Hira Singh, 2 A., 48, supra; Lachman Rai v. Akbar Khan, 1 A., 440 (1877); Bhagawan Das v. Balgobind Singh, 1 B. L. R., S. N., x (1868); Tekaet Doorga v. Tekaet Doorga, 20 W. R., 157 (1873); Ramalakhmi Ammal v. Sivananja Perumal, 17 W. R., 553, ante.

(4) Eshan Chandra Samanta v. Nilmoni Singh (1908), 35 C., 851 (riparian owner's right to irrigate) Mussamut Parbati Kunwar v. Rani Chandrapal Kunwar, 8 O. C., 94; and v. P. C. (1909), 36 I. A., 125.

(5) Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 Mad. H. C. R., 57, supra; Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan, 7 Mad. H. C. R., 254 (1873).

(6) [illegible]

21 C., 149.

(7) Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar, 42 C., 455 (1915)

(8) Kunhambi v. Kalanthar, 38 M., 1052 (1915); see Moult v. Halliday, 1 Q. B., 125 (1898).

(9) Muhammad Ismail Khan v. Lala Sheomukh Rai, P. C., 17 C. W. N., 97 (1902).

(10) Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A. 16 (1889).

(11) Dalglish v. Yusuffer Hossain, 23 C., 427 (1896); Sariatulla Sarkar v. Pran Nath, 26 C., 184 (1898).

practised there is usage.(1) So a business-usage as distinguished from a Common Law custom need not be long established or strictly uniform(2), nor need an agricultural custom have existed from time immemorial.(3) The word is used in this and other sections of the Act in its widest sense, including all customs ancient or otherwise and all usages. Three classes of custom or usage are thus dealt with in the Act, (a) private; (b) general(4); (c) public.(5)

Instances of the first class are family customs and usages termed kulachar, or in Upper India, Rasm wa riwaj-i-khandan (v post) (6)

The expression "general custom" is defined to include customs common to any considerable class of persons.(7) These are (a) local, termed desachar, e g., in the Broach and other Gujarat districts wakf property, which is inalienable by Mahommedan Law, may be by custom of the district alienated (8) In the same district, and more especially in parts of Eastern Bengal, the right of pre-emption which is based on Mahommedan Law, is allowed and enforced by customs as between Hindus also(9), (b) caste or class; of which the Khojah and Memon Cases(10), and the right of divorce marital by usage of particular castes, the customs of religious brotherhoods attached to Hindu temples and the like(11), afford examples. English Municipal Law, owing to historical development, limits custom to a particular locality only. Sir Erskine Perry in the Khojah's Case has remarked that this peculiar Municipal rule of English Law can have no application to India, where customs are seldom local and are mostly personal or caste customs, (c) Trade customs or usages (v post).

Public custom is nowhere defined in the Act It is not clear, if any, and if so what, meaning is to be attached to the word "public" as distinguished from the word "general" in the Act In speaking of matters of public and general interest the terms 'public' and "general" are sometimes used as synonyms, meaning merely what concerns a multitude of persons (12) But regard being had to the admissibility of hearsay testimony, a distinction has (in English Law) been made between them; the term "public" being strictly applied to that which concerns every member of the State and the term "general" being confined to a lesser, though still a considerable, portion of the community. In matters strictly public, reputation from any one appears to be receivable. If, however, the right in dispute be simply general; that is, if those only who live in a particular district, or adventure in a particular enterprise, are interested in it, hearsay from persons wholly unconnected with the place or business would be not only valueless, but probably altogether inadmissible (13) But as the Indian Evidence Act(14) makes no such distinction as to admissibility, merely requiring in all cases a probability of knowledge on the part of the declarant, the distinction ceases to be of importance in India (15) Again the expression "general custom or right" is explained to include (not mean

(1) Dalglish v Yusuffer Hossain, 23 C, 427 (1896); Sariatulla Sarkar v Pran Nath, 26 C, 184 (1898)

(2) Juggomohun Ghose v Manikchund, 7 M, I, A, 263, 282

(3) Tucker v Linger, 8 App Cas, 508, in which case the local custom had grown up within the last 30 or 40 years.

(4) v s 48, post.

(5) v s 32, cl. (4), post.

(6) v Norton, Ev, 190

(7) v s 48, and illust post

(8) Abas Ali v Ghulam Muhammad, 1 Bom H C R, 36 (1863)

(9) Shaikh Koodru v Mohinee Mohun, 13 W R (F. B), (1870); Inder Narain v. Mahomed Nasiruddeen, 1 W R, 235 (1864), and the cases cited in Field's Ev 115

(10) Perry's Or Ca., 110, Karim Khatav v Pardhan Manji, 2 Bom H. C R, 276 (1886)

(11) See Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 500, 501, where a large number of cases of family, local, caste and class custom are collected

(12) Taylor, Ev, § 609, Gresley Ev, 305, see notes to s. 32, cl. (4), post

(13) Taylor, Ev, § 609

(14) v s 32, cl. (4)

(15) See Norton, Ev., p. 186

and include ")(1) customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons: in fact such matters as would, according to the English rule, fall within the expression "matter of general interest."(2) The expression therefore would appear to have a more extended meaning and to be applicable also to those which are cases spoken of in English law as "matters of public interest."

Custom or usage occupies a prominent place in Hindu Law (of which it forms a branch), and wherever it obtains, supersedes its general maxims. "Immemorial custom," says Manu, "is transcendent law."(3) Clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law.(4) The Digest subordinates in more than one place the language of text to custom and approved usage.(5) Where a custom is proved to exist, it supersedes the general law; which, however, still regulates all beyond the custom.(6) A custom is some established practice at variance with the general law. There cannot therefore be a custom to do that which the general law permits any one to do or abstain from at his own will.(7)

"Facts." The third section contains the general definition of the term "fact" as used in this Act. The particular facts which are relevant under this section are "transactions" and "instances," as to the meaning of which (v. post.) See also note on the admissibility of judgments (post).(8)

"Transactions" "Instances." The facts made relevant are (a) transaction, (b) instances. Neither of these terms is defined by the Act. (a) A "transaction" is the doing or performing of ... performance; that which is done; ... A transaction is something alr... either something which is now going on, or, if ended, is still contemplated with reference to its progress or successive stages.(9) "We use the word 'proceeding' in application to an affray in the street, and the word 'transaction' to some commercial negotiations that have been carried on between certain persons. The 'proceeding' marks the manner of proceeding, as when we speak of proceedings in a Court of law." The "transaction marks the business transacted; as the transactions on the exchange"(10) "A 'transaction,' as the derivation denotes, is something which has been concluded between persons by a cross or reciprocal action as it were."(11) "A 'transaction' in the ordinary sense of the word, is some business or dealing which is carried on or transacted between two or more persons."(12) The qualifying characters of the transaction spoken of in the

---

(1) It does not therefore (accepting the distinction between "public" and "general") exclude public custom: "When a definition is intended to be exclusive it would seem the form of words is "means and includes," per Jackson, J., R v. Ashutosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 493 (1878).

(2) v. Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 195.

(3) See the authorities set out in judgment of West, J., in Bhau Nanaji v. Sandraba, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 262 (1874); and Tara Chand v. Rib Ram, 3 Mad. H C. R, 50 (1866).

(4) Collector of Madura v. Muttu Ramalinga, 1 B. L. R., 12 (1868); cited and and applied in Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 17 A., 339 (1895); but held to have been misapplied by the Privy Council, s. c., 21 A., 412 (1899).

(5) Bhyah Ram v. Bhyah Ugur, 13 M. I. A., 390 (1870), s. c., 14 W. R. (P. C.), 1

(6) Neelkisto Deb v. Beer Chunder, 12 M. I. A., 542 (1869); s. c., 12 W. R. (P. C.), 21

(7) Sri Braja Kisora v. Kundana Devi, 3 C. W. N., 378, 380 (1899), P. C.

(8) v. also ss. 3, 11, ante.

(9) Webster's Dictionary, sub nom. "Transaction"

(10) Crabb's Synonyms.

(11) Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 185 (1880), per Jackson, J., transaction, in its largest sense, means that which is done, ib., 175, per Mitter, J.

(12) Ib. at p. 186, per Garth, C. J., who added "If the parties to a suit were to adjust their differences inter se the adjustment would be a transaction; and by a somewhat strained use of the word the proceedings, in a suit, might also be called transactions, but to say that the decision of a Court of Justice is a transaction appears to me a misapplication of the term." See also Ranchhoddas v. Bapu Narhar, 10 B., 442 (1886), but see as to judgments, post.

section are (a) creation, (b) . . . assertion, (f) denial, (g) inconsistency . . . characters of " instances." (b) An " . . . is offered, as an illustrative case; something cited in proof or exemplification: a case occurring; an example.(1) The qualifying characters of the "instances" spoken of by the section are (a) claim, (b) recognition (common both to "instances" and "transactions"), and (c) exercise (which is peculiar to "instances" only), and instances in which the exercise of the right or custom was disputed, asserted or departed from. It will have been observed that the section distinguishes between a claim and an assertion. Under the second clause, however, instances are admissible in which the exercise of a right or custom was asserted. The word "assertion" includes both a statement and enforcement by act. Ordinarily the evidence tendered under this section will be evidence of acts done, but a verbal statement not amounting to, and not accompanied by, any act would also be admissible if it amounted to a "claim."

Road-cess papers and deeds of sale were held to be evidence quantum valeant as transactions and instances in which rights were asserted and recognised.(2) Documents showing recognition of alleged right by Government . . . t while in charge . . . the mehal merely . . . made under the . . . the accuracy of . . . possession or of assertion of right under the thirteenth section.(4) In a suit for possession of land, the plaintiffs claimed title under a lease from the shrotiemdars of the village where the land was situated. The defendants, who had obstructed the plaintiffs from taking possession of part of the land, claimed to have permanent . . . itled not to the land . . . plaintiffs tendered . . . me village showing that they were pura kudis merely:—Held, that these documents were admissible, that the defendants were not of course concluded by them, but that the documents were relevant evidence under the thirteenth section as showing the tenure on which the village was held (5) Decisions are conflicting as to whether previous judgments and decrees not inter partes, are(6), or are not(7), included

(1) Webster's Dictionary sub nom, "instance"

(2) Dattari Mohanti v Jugo Bundho, 23 W. R, 293 (1875), followed in Sabran Sheikh v. Odoy Mahto, 1 Pat, 375 (1922).

(3) Surjo Narain v. Bissambhur Singh, 23 W. R, 311 (1875) And see Sremutty Nitya Kali v. Sarat Chandra Bose, 51 I C 866.

(4) Junmajoy Mullick v Dwarkanath Mytee, 5 C, 287 (1879) And see Shashi Bhusan Dhur v. Nawab of Murshidabad, 49 I C, 957.

(5) Vythilinga v Venkatachala, 16 M, 194 (1892)

(6) Neamut Ali v Gooro Dass, 22 W R, 365 (1874), Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C 175 (1880), per Mitter, J, cur dissent, Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, 12 A, 43 (1889), per Mahmood J, cur dissent

(7) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall (F B), 6 C, 183, 185, 187, per curiam, Mitter, J dissent, Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, 12 A, 14, 27, 28, per curiam, see remarks of Sargent, C J, in Ranchhoddas Krishnadas v Bapu Narhar, 10 B, 442 (1886), "former judgments are not themselves transactions," but the suit in which they were made is a "transaction," per Straight, J, 12 A, 25, supra It was said by Ranade, J, "that the interpretation placed upon the words 'right,' and 'transaction' in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall seems not to have been accepted by the Privy Council and its correctness is questioned in the Full Bench judgment of the Allahabad High Court in the Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari in so far as the exclusion of such judgments from being received as evidence under any section is concerned" Lakshman v Amrit, 24 B, 599 (1900) in the term "transaction," or are(1), or are not(2), included in the words "particular instances" (v post). In some cases it has been held that judgments and decrees are not themselves "transactions" or "instances," but the suit in which they were passed and made is a "transaction," or "instance." So in the undermentioned case Banerji, J., observed as follows: "If the existence of the judgment is not a transaction within the meaning of clause (a) of the thirteenth section it proves that a litigation terminating in the judgment took place; and the litigation comes well within the meaning of the clause as being a transaction by which the right now claimed by the defendants was asserted. So again litigation which is evidenced by the existence of the judgment was a particular instance within the meaning of clause (b) of the thirteenth section in which the right of possession now claimed by the defendants was claimed."(3) In a case where a dispute existed between the proprietors of two estates, A and B, as to the right to water flowing through an artificial watercourse on estate B, belonging to the defendants, proceedings were taken in the Criminal Courts by the owners of estate A against some ryots of estate B in consequence of their having closed the watercourse. These proceedings led to a razinamah, or deed of compromise, which was relied on as evidence before the Privy Council. Their Lordships said: "This agreement is a clear acknowledgment of right to this overflow. It was objected that this razinamah does not bind the proprietors of B; but although it was apparently made between tenants, it seems to have been subsequently acted upon, and may be properly used to explain the character of the enjoyment of the water."(4) Their Lordships also referred to certain proceedings under section 320 of the Cod[illegible] (corresponding to the section 147 of the Coc[illegible] a claim was made as to the right to use the [illegible] ving that the proprietors of B do not seem to have challenged the decision of the Magistrate, [illegible] existence [illegible] a recital [illegible] iant to do nothing contrary to it. The deed was executed before action brought by the present plaintiffs, and also by a plaintiff who had died since the institution of the suit, and, as the plaint alleged, by a "considerable majority" of the family; but the defendant was not a party to it. The deed was held to be admissible [illegible] e the Crown claimed [illegible] A, who in proof of [illegible] ionally fishing there, (b) having watchers during the spawning season, and (c) of binding his tenants,

---

(1) Koondo Nath v Dheer Chunder, 20 W R, 345 (1873), Jianatulla Sirdar v Ramani Kant, 15 C., 233 (1887); Ramasami v Appavu, 12 M., 9 (1887); and see Byathamma v. Avulla, 15 M., 19 (1891).

(2) "Record and not the judgment alone admissible as an instance," Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari Singh, 12 A., 14, 28, supra, per Edge, C. J., and Tyrrell, J., "former judgment not itself an instance, but the suit in which it was made is an instance." ib., 25, per Straight, J., and see Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 171, supra

(3) Tepu Khan v Rojoni Mohun, 2 C. W. N., 501, 504 (1898); Srimati Alijan v. Hara Chandra, S A., 106 of 1902; Cal. H. C., 1st July, 1904; and see Mahomed Amin v. Hasan (1907), 31 B., 143.

(4) Ramessur Pershad v. Koonj Behari, 4 C., 640 (1878).

(5) As to this case, Edge, C. J., observed "apparently this razinamah was admissible under s 9; the record of the proceedings in the Criminal Court, which the Judicial Committee admitted in evidence might be admissible under s 9 or under s 13 (b)." 12 A., 16 "In Raja Run v. Mussamat Lucho (11 C., 310), the Judicial Committee would possibly have held that the record in the rent-suit, of which the judgment referred to former part, was admissible under s. 13 (b)." and see Hira Lal v. A. Hills, 11 C. L. R., 530 (1882). See also Venkatasami v. Venkatreddi, 15 M., 12 (1891), post and note on "Admissibility of judgments," post.

(6) Hurronath Mullick v. Nittanund, 10 B. L. R., 263 (1873); see s. 32, cl. (7).

in their leases, to protect the fishing, and prevent all others from fishing (1) In a case decided prior to the Act, measurement chittas were admitted as primâ facie evidence that long before the case originated and the suit was thought of, the plaintiff put forward his rights to certain lands as mal lands.(2) The question is whether A has a right of fishery in a river: licenses to fish granted by his ancestors, and the fact that the licensees fished under them are relevant.(3) The question is whether A owns land: the fact that A's ancestors granted leases of it is relevant.(4) The question is whether there is a public right of way over A's land. The facts that persons were in the habit of using the way, that they were turned back, that the road was stopped up, that the road was repaired at the public expense, and A's title-deeds showing that for a length of time, reaching beyond the time when the road was said to have been used, no one had power to dedicate it to the public, are all relevant (5) A petition to the [illegible] eld to be an [illegible] ged that land [illegible] from which [illegible] by which the [illegible] as a "trans- [illegible] itled to infer that there had been a previous grant, though the release of itself did not constitute [illegible] tice in old times for the [illegible] judgments and that the [illegible] Dewany Adalut, these [illegible] instances in which the right in question was claimed and disputed and disallowed (8) And generally speaking, title to property, corporeal or incorporeal, may be proved under this section, or (if the section be held to be applicable to incorporeal rights only, which it is submitted is not the case) under this and the preceding sections by evidence of acts of ownership and enjoyment, such as the receipt of rents and profits, the discharge of the burdens or repairs of the property, the granting of licenses and leases and the like; while in rebuttal, proof is admissible that [illegible]

Admissibility of judgments and decr[ees] as trans[ac]tions or [in]stances

Judgments qua judgments or adjudications upon questions in issue and proofs of the particular points they decide are only admissible either as (a) res judicata(11), or (b) as being "in rem"(12), or (c) as relating to matters

(1) Lord Advocate v Lord Lovat, L R., 5 App Cas, 273, in this case an ancient document was tendered to prove ancient possession and held to be admissible, the rule being that such documents, coming out of the proper custody and purporting on the face of them to exercise ownership, such as a lease or license, may be given in evidence as being in themselves acts of ownership and evidence of possession, see notes to s 90, post See also Malcolmson v O'Dea, 10 H L Cas, 593, and note to s 90, post.

(2) Debee Pershad v Ram Coomar 10 W R, 443 (1868), see note to s 32, cl. (7), post

(3) Rogers v Allen, 1 Camp, 309 See also Neill v. Duke of Devonshire, L R 8 App Cas, 135

(4) Doe v. Pulman, 3 Q B, 622, 623, 626

(5) Steph Dig, Art 5, illust. (c), as to proof of custom by instances, see Vishnu v Krishnan, 7 M, 3 (1883)

(6) Shamanand Das v Rama Kanta, 32 C, 6, 17 (1904)

(7) Lakhi Chandra v. Kali Kumar, 10 C. W. N, xxii (1905)

(8) Bhaya Dirguj Deo v Pande Fateh Bahadoor Ram, 3 C L J, 521

(9) Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 60. Phipson Ev. 5th Ed 96, Jones v Williams, 2 M & W, 326 As to repairs constituting an act of ownership, see 4 C W. N, ccii

(10) Soroj Kumar Acharji v. Umed Ali Houladar 25 C W N, 1022 (1921) nor (it was held) under s 11, ante

(11) Under s 40, post.

(12) Under s 41, post

of public nature.(1) In (a) they are between the same parties: in (b) they are declared by law to be conclusive proof against all persons of certain(2) matters only: in (c) though not conclusive, they are relevant as adjudications against persons not parties to them, the reason being that in matters of public right the new party to the second proceeding as one of the public has been virtually a party to the former proceeding.(3) But judgments, orders and decrees, other than those admissible by sections 40, 41, 42 may be relevant under section 43, if their existence is a fact in issue or is relevant under some other provision of the Act.(4) In the sections relating to judgments the judgment is admissible as the opinion of the Court on the questions which came before it for adjudication. Ordinarily judgments are not admissible as between persons who were not parties and do not claim under the parties to the previous litigation. But there are exceptions to this general rule.(5) The cases particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case (6) Section 43 is one of the group of sections relating to judgments and contains the provision applicable to cases relating to the relevancy of judgments as evidence against strangers (7) Under that section a judgment may be admissible as relevant under some other provision of the Act. So a previous judgment has been admitted not in order to prove an adjudication, but in order to prove an admission made by a predecessor in title of the party against whom the document was sought to be used.(8) This being so, the question on

re

a

or under clause (b), as "particular instances." This question has been the subject of many conflicting decisions.

alcutta cisions

In the Calcutta High Court such judgments were up to 1880 frequently admitted(10), the word "transaction" being, it was said(11), large enough to allow the proceedings in former suits to be admitted, not as conclusive, but of such weight as the Court may think they ought to have. Upon this principle previous judgments and proceedings in suits were admitted as relevant in the undermentioned cases.(12) In 1880, the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court

(1) Under s 42, post.

(2) See Kanhaya Lall v. Radha Churn, 7 W. R., 344 (1867).

(3) Per Pontifex, J., in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 183 (1880).

(4) S. 43, post.

(5) Hira Lall v. A. Hills (11 C. L. R, 530); per Field, J. (1882).

(6) Per Garth, C. J., in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 192.

(7) Tefu Khan v. Rojoni Mohun, 2 C. W. N., 501, 505 (1898).

(8) Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala, 18 M., 73, 78 (1895).

(9) Other than public or general rights and customs in regard to which (being matter of a public nature) adjudications inter alia have always been admissible and are now so under s. 42 of the Act: v. Taylor, Ev., § 1683; Madhub Chunder v. Tomee Betwah, 7 W. R, 210 (1867); Nallathambi Battar v. Nellakumara Pillai, 7 Mad. H. C. R., 306 (1873); Ramasami v. Appavu, 12 M, 9; and s. 42, post.

(10) See Lala Ranglal v. Deonarayan Tewary, 6 B. L R., 69 (1870), Doorga Das v. Nurendro Coomar, 6 W. R, 232 (1866); Koondoo Nath v. Dheer Chander, 20 W. R., 345 (1873), and remarks of Couch, C. J., in Neamut Ali v. Gooroo Doss, 2 W. R., 365 (1874), and of Mitter, J., in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 179 (1880); (and see R. v. Keshub Mohajan, 8 C., 993 (1882); remarks of Garth, C. J.)

(11) Per Couch, C. J., in Neamut Ali v. Gooroo Doss, 22 W. R., 366.

(12) Guttee Koiburto v Bhukat Koiburto, 22 W. R, 457 (1874); [the judgments appear to be inter partes.] Roopchand v. Hur Kishen, 23 W. R., 162 (1875); Daitari Mohanti v. Jugo Bundhoo, 23 W. R., 293 (1875) followed Sabran Shaikh v.

in the case of Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall(1) considered the question. This was a suit to recover possession of certain property. The Lower Court allowed the plaintiff to put in evidence against the defendant a judgment in a former suit between the defendant and others and to which the plaintiff was no party. It judgment was admissible in evidence under this section as being a transaction by which a right claimed in this suit by the plaintiff was asserted and denied. Both the Lower Courts considered the judgment admissible in evidence, and, apparently upon the strength of it, decided in the plaintiff's favour. The question referred to the Full Bench was whether under the thirteenth section or any other section of the Evidence Act, the judgment in the former suit, which was admitted and acted upon as evidence in this suit, was admissible. It was held (Mitter, J., dissenting)—that the former judgment was not admissible as evidence in the subsequent suit, either as a "transaction" under the thirteenth section or as a "fact" under the eleventh section or under any other section of the Evidenc decided

J., disse

under se

42, is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit either as a res judicata, or as proof of the particular point which it decides, unless between the same parties or those claiming under them.(2) It has been said that this judgment practically decided that except in the case of judgments in rem, and judgments relating to matters of a public nature, a judgment, in order to be evidence, must be such as would operate by way of estoppel or res judicata (3). This interpretation, however, of the judgment is, it is submitted, incorrect. What the Full Bench held was that a judgment or decree was not admissible under this section, but it might be evidence under others by virtue of the operation of section 43; and that in any case a judgment not inter partes was not admissible in proof of the particular point it decided; that is, it was not admissible in its character of a judicial opinion and as having the effect more or less of res judicata.

In a subsequent suit, however, which was one for rent, the amount of the land held by the defendant was questioned, and it was contended that the land

---

Odoy Mahto, 1 Pat., 375 (1922); Mohesh Chunder v. Dino Bundhoo, 24 W. R., 265 (1875); Luchmeedhur Pattack v. Rughoobur Singh, ib., 284; Hunsa Kooer v. Sheo Gobind, ib., 431; Omer Dutt v. Burn, ib., 470 (1875); [ex parte decree].

(1) 6 C., 171.

(2) See the following cases in which the principle laid down in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall was concurred in and followed: Hira Lal v. A. Hills, 11 C. L. R., 530 (1882); Ram Narain v. Ramcoomar Chunder, 11 C., 562 (1885); Mohendra Lall v. Kosomoyi Dassi, 12 C., 207 (1885); and affirmed in Surendra Nath v. Brojo Nath, 13 C. (F. B.), 352 (1886). [see Gobind Chunder v. Sri Gobind, 24 C., 330 (1896)]. "In the conclusion of that judgment we fully concur," per Tyrrell, J., Duthoit, J., Shadal Khan v. Amin-ullah Khan, 4 A., 96 (1881) post; R. v. Keshab Mahajan; R. v. Udit Pershad, 8 C., 993 (1882); see remarks of Edge, C. J., Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A., 13 (post), 1886; and see as to the effect of this decision the remarks of Parker, J., and Handley, J., in Byathamma v. Avulla, 15 M., 23 (1891), post.

(3) Surendra Nath v. Brojo 13 C., 352, 353 (1886).

Fatteh Lall, but it was held that they afforded some evidence in corroboration of the plaintiff's case, and that they furnished evidence of particular instances in which a custom was claimed.(1) It may, however, be said that the judgments in this case were admissible as referring to a matter of a public nature, viz., the customary hath in the pergunnah So also where the issue was whether certain land was lakhiraj or rent-paying, previous decrees were admitted to show the character of the land, and to show that in respect of the land which was alleged to be lakhiraj, a claim for rent was successfully made on a former occasion (2) It was said: "We do not use them as evidence in the way in which judgments and decrees are often used between the same parties, that is to show that there has been a previous adjudication on a question of title. We take it that these decrees are not evidence of any decision of a Court of Justice, that the land is mal or lakhiraj. We do not consider that in so deciding we are in any way violating the principle laid down in the Full Bench decision in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall. On the contrary, and in order to prevent there being any misapprehension, we desire to say that we entirely concur in the principle of that decision so far as it was concerned with the facts which were then before the Court."(3) Though this case recognised the principle laid down in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, it would seem to be excluded by it, in that the previous litigations were used not merely to show that claims for rent had been made but that such claims were successful The claims could only take on this character by reference to the judgments as adjudications so asserting it. In a suit for possession of land the defendant offered in evidence a judgment obtained by him in a suit to which the plaintiff or his predecessors in title were not parties Objection was raised to this judgment that it was not inter partes and was therefore inadmissible. It was held, on the authority of Davies v. Lowndes(4) and Ramessur Persad Narain Sing v. Koonj Behari Pattuk(5), that this judgment was admissible in evidence to show the character of the defendant's possession and the nature of the enjoyment had in the lands (6) The case of Davies v. Lowndes referred to in this judgment was an action to recover lands. A decree in a suit between the defendant's father, and other persons unconnected with the plaintiff, which directed that the father should be let into possession of the estate as his own property, was held admissible on behalf of the defendant not as proof of any of the facts therein stated, but for the purpose of [illegible] imed, [illegible] kind [illegible] deci- [illegible] ry.(8) [illegible] all v. Fatteh Lall(9) appeared to have been shaken by the subsequent Privy Council decision in the case of Ram Bahadur Singh v. [illegible] Council held that a previous judgment, thou [illegible] in the case) and by the decision of the Calcutt [illegible] Mukerji v. Drobo Moyi Dabia(11), and in th [illegible] already mentioned. The Court further observed that it did not understand why, if the judgments which were dealt with in the two last-mentioned case could be properly used as evidence for one purpose or another, the judgmen

(1) Jainutulla v. Romani Kant, 15 C, 233 (1887).
(2) Hira Lall v. Hills, 11 C. L. R, 528 (1882).
(3) Per Field, J, ib, 530; Ramessur Persad v. Koonj Behari, 4 C, 633 (1878), referred to
(4) 1 Bing, N. C., 607.
(5) 4 C, 633, v. ante.
(6) Peari Mohun v. Drobomoy, 11 C., 745 (1885); in this case the judgment was properly admissible under s. 43
(7) 1 Bing N. C., 607; s c., 6 M & Gr, 471, 520; Taylor, Ev., § 1668; see note to s. 43, post.
(8) 13 C, 352 (1886).
(9) 6 C, 171 (1880).
(10) 11 C, 301 (1884).
(11) 11 C., 745 (1885).
(12) 11 C L. R, 528 (1882).

adduced in this case could not be used as evidence. The Full Bench, however, upon the authority of Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall(1), considered the judgment to be inadmissible. In a subsequent case(2), these two Full Bench decisions were distinguished, it being held that a decree for possession made by a Court under the ninth section of the Specific Relief Act in a suit beyond the pecuniary limits of that Court's jurisdiction, although not res judicata, was some evidence of dispossession by the defendants in a subsequent suit against the same defendants to recover mesne profits In this case the fact of the judgment having been given was admissible. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court(3) subsequently expressed the opinnon that the decisions in the case of Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall(4), and Surendra Nath Pal Choudhry v. Brojo Nath Pal Chowdhry(5), must be regarded as materially qualified owing to the decisions of the Privy Council they referred to(6), because these decisions establish that under certain circumstances and in certain cases the judgment in a previous suit to which one of the parties in the subsequent suit was not a party may be admissible in evidence for certain purposes and with certain objects in the subsequent suit This expression of opinion, which was obiter, has been dissented from by Geidt, J., in a subsequent case(7) to which reference will be made.(8) In the last-mentioned case the question was whether one A was a partner with J An award made by an arbitrator in a previous suit brought by A against J was tendered to show the alleged partnership; Geidt, J., held that the award was not admissible; Ghose, J., that it was, agreeing in the view that the Privy Council decisions referred to had qualified the rule laid down by the Full Bench and stating that he was disposed to think that the Privy Council had in these cases adopted the dissentient opinion of Mitter, J., in the Full Bench A decree obtained by a co-sharer landlord for rent has been held to be evidence as to the rate of rent in a suit by another co-sharer for rent.(9)

Bombay decisions.

The Bombay High Court has concurred(10) in the judgment given in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall. In the case cited the plaintiff sued to recover arrears of rent for a certain sho [illegible] The defendant contended it was only [illegible] he plaintiff relied upon the evidence of [illegible] d-writing in the book of the firm of which the plaintiff's brother and the defendant were partners. To prove the bonâ fides of these entries the plaintiff offered in evidence a judgment given in favour of the plaintiff's brother in a suit brought by the defendant, charging him (the plaintiff's brother) with improperly debiting their firm with Rs. 250 as the rent of the shop. It was held that the judgment was not admissible, Sargent, C. J., remarking: "As to the term 'transaction,' it is doubtless one of large [illegible] a strained use of it, be held to be applicable [illegible] the result of holding it to be so applicable in [illegible] to effect a most important departure from the English rule of evidence which would make judgments, decrees and verdicts of juries only admissible in matters of public interest, it may well be doubted if such was the intention of the framer of the Code."(11) Later it was said: "It is not easy to reconcile this conflict of views in particular instances, but apparently the cases, which decide that judgments, not inter

(1) 6 C., 171 (1880).
(2) Jamullah Sheikh v. Inu Khan, 23 C., 69 (1896).
(3) Tepu Khan v. Rojoni Mohun, 25 C., 522, s c.; 2 C. W. N., 501 (1898).
(4) 6 C., 171 (1880).
(5) 13 C., 352 (1886).
(6) Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain, 22 C., 53 (1895); Bhitto Kunwar v. Kesho Pershad, 24 I. A., 10 (1897).
(7) Abinash Chunder v. Poresh Nath, 9 C. W. N., 402 (1904).
(8) v. post, p. 183
(9) Byomkesh Chakravarty v. Jagadishvar Rai, 22 C. W. N., 304.
(10) In Ranchhoddas v. Bapu Narhar, 10 B., 439 (1886).
(11) Ib., 422; Naranji Bhikhabhai v. Dipa Umed, 3 B., 3, referred to and distinguished partes, are not admissible in evidence, proceed chiefly on the ground that those or less, of res judicata.

admitted in evidence,
be used to show the conduct of the parties, or show particular instances of the exercise of a right or admissions made by ancestors, or how the property was dealt with previously, they may be used under the eleventh or thirteenth section as 'exceptions recognised under section 43 as relevant evidence."(1) This decision was followed in the undermentioned case. The judgments rejected by the lower Appellate Court were not inter partes but were in suits brought by other creditors against the same defendants, in which the existence of the partnership denied in the suit was asserted with success. It was held that the judgments were admissible in evidence and must be treated as relevant but not as conclusive as to the existence of the partnership.(2) Sed quære. And in the case now cited a house had been passed to the plaintiff by a registered sale-deed by his deceased father; and subsequent to the sale certain mortgagees of the father had brought a suit on the mortgage against the plaintiff and his father and mother, on which suit the sale had been held to be a sham transaction. On the plaintiff bringing on second appeal that this case could not be distinguished from the two last mentioned cases, and that the proceedings in the suit on the mortgage were admissible as relevant evidence because the plaintiff and the defendants, either by themselves or their predecessors, were parties to that suit, and that the said proceedings came within the words "particular instances in which the right was claimed," and it was held by Beaman, J., that the judgment in the suit on the mortgage was admissible to prove that the genuineness of the sale-deed was then questioned but could not be used for any ulterior purpose.(3)

Madras decisions. The Madras High Court has also concurred(4) in the judgment given in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall. In a suit brought by the trustees of a temple to recover from the owners of certain lands in certain villages money claimed under an alleged right as due to the temple, judgments in other suits against other persons in which claims under the same right had been decreed in favour of the trustees of the temple were admitted (5) It was said: "We concur with the majority of the learned Judges who decided, in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, that a judgment of the character there under consideration, viz., as to whether a certain person was or was not the heir to another, is neither a transaction nor a fact in the sense in which the words are used in the thirteenth section in that case could not be are not of the character rmination in the previous suits was whether the payments then claimed, and which are in contest in the present suits, were claimable as of right, and in one case whether they were so claimable from a particular class of persons, viz., Christians; and it appears to us that, when a right of the character now in question is at issue, such judgments are admissible in evidence as evidence of "particular instances in which the right or custom was 'claimed,' and 'in which its exercise was disputed, asserted or departed from,' and was further adjudicated upon; and that the right was a right

(1) Per Ranade, J., in Lakshman v. Amrit, 24 B., 598, 599 (1900).
(2) Govindji Jhaver v. Chhotalal Velsi, 2, Bom L. R., 651 (1900).
(3) Mahamad Amin v. Hasan (1906), 31 B, 143; and see Dharnidar v. Dhundiraj (1903), 5 B. L. R., 230.
(4) In Subramanya v. Paramasuaran, 11 M., 123 (1887); Ramasami v. Appavu, 12 M., 13 (1887).
(5) Ramasami v. Appavu, 12 M, 9 (1887).

of the character dealt with under the thirteenth section of the Evidence Act.
... support of it in the case those who hold lands in le, the payment claimed nature' within the meaning of section 42 of the same Act. The question for determination before us is not dissimilar in principle from that reported in Naranji Bhikhabhai v. Dipa Umed (1) The right now claimed appears to us to be as much a right of the character indicated in the thirteenth section of the

that the case came within s. 42. But apart from this the judgment may have been admissible to explain the nature of the payments made, viz., that they had been made after suits brought and that the payments were thus claimable as of right and were not voluntary. In a suit to establish the plaintiff's title to certain lands he put in evidence (a) a conveyance in favour of his father; (b) a sale-certificate issued to his father's vendor, (c) an order made in certain execution-proceedings in which was recited a petition by his father asserting his title; (d) a judgment obtained by his father in which his title was recognized Neither the defendants nor their predecessors were parties to any of these instruments or proceedings: held that none of these documents were conclusive, since the defendants were not parties to them, but that they were relevant evidence as tending to show that the plaintiff's ancestors had dealt with the site as their own for a long term of years (3) In this case documents A and B were clearly admissible as documents of title. D was an assertion of right; C the judgment set out to pleas of the parties and from these it appeared that the defendant's predecessors had parted with the property to the plaintiff's father, though the admission was attempted to be avoided by an allegation of an agreement to return the property. But as to this it may doubtless be
...ose as the Jujju Lall judgment intiff had was held that the opinion expressed in the former judgment was not a relevant fact within the meaning of the Evidence Act In the case before us it is not the

This, we think, is a relevant fact." (4) In this case the document referred to as a judgment was an entry in the Court-diary of the District Munsif and was held to be admissible under section 35, post.

The question was considered by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the case of The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh (5) In Allahabad decisions

(1) 3 B, 3, supra.

(2) Ramasami v Appavu, 12 M, 13 (1887), referred to in Byathamma v Avulla, 15 M, 24 (1891) (v. post), and Vythialinga v Venkatachala, 16 M., 196 (1892)

(3) Venkatasami v Venkatreddi, 15 M., 12 (1890).

(4) 15 M., at pp 23, 24 (1891), Krisnasami v. Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M., 73, 77 (1895).

(5) 12, A, 1 (F. B.) (1889) [as to the effect of this decision see Lakshman v Amrit, 24 B., 599 (1900), a case prior to this will be found in 4 A., Shadal Khan v. Amin ul-lah Khan, where at p 96, Tyrrell, this case the plaintiff, Palakdhari Singh, had sued a Hindu widow, to establish his right of inheritance in certain villages which had belonged to the widow's ... d falsely ... e widow ... was her son by her deceased husband. The suit was dismissed on the merits by the Court of first instance and by the High Court on appeal. After the widow's death the plaintiff brought a suit against one Dalip Narain Singh, whom the Collector as Manager of the Court of Wards, had accepted as the minor son, the defendant in the first suit, and against the Collector, as such Manager, for possession of the same villages upon the same grounds as those put forward in the former suit:—Held by the Full Bench that the judgments of the Court of first instance and the High Court in the former suit did not operate as res judicata in the present suit, but (Brodhurst, J., dissenting on this point)(1) that they were admissible in evidence in the present suit. Held, per Edge, C. J., and Tyrrell, J., that the judgments were not admissible under the eighth section or the ninth section, nor was either of them a "transaction," or a "fact," within the meaning of the thirteenth section. But the record and not the judgments alone in the former suit was admissible under the clause (b) of the thirteenth section, independently of section 43, as evidence of a particular instance in which the alleged right of the plaintiff to the property now in suit was at the time claimed and disputed, the word "right," in both clauses (a) an ... being ... poreal ... decree ... that under section 43 of the Evidence Act the question was whether the existence of the former judgments was a fact in issue or relevant under some other provisions of the Act. Here the question was not as to the existence of the former judgments and decrees as a fact in issue or relevant fact; but though section 43 declared judgments, orders and decrees, other than those mentioned in sections 40, 41, and 42, irrelevant qua judgments, orders and decrees, it did not make them absolutely inadmissible when they were the best evidence of something that might be proved aliunde. The former judgments and decrees ...

the best evidence. Per Brodhurst, J.: That for the reasons given by Garth, ...

J., and Duthoit, J., say: "In the conclusions of that judgment (Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall), we fully concur"].

(1) Per Brodhurst, J.: "My opinions on the points that have been referred are in accordance with the judgment of the Court in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall:" ib at p. 27.

(2) Sed quære whether the judgment could be used as a recognition of right. The defendant's right was only recognised in the sense that in the opinion of the Court it was found to exist that is adjudicated upon. By "recognition" in the section was meant, it is submitted, "admitted" not "adjudicated" upon; v. post, but see also Abinash Chandra v. Poresh Nath, 9 C. W. N., 402, at p. 415; per Ghose, J., "or it is a transaction recognising the right of Abinash in that property within the meaning of s. 13 of the Evidence Act and Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall at p. 181; per Mitter, J., where he held that the judgment was relevant because it recognised the right of the plaintiff and made therefore the existence of the fact in issue in the subsequent suit highly probable.

A recent decision of the Lahore High Court holds that a previous judgment could only be used for the purpose of showing that the right had been called in question but that the finding of the Court was not relevant.(1) Lahore decision.

The Privy Council have in the following reported instances admitted in evidence judgments and orders not between the same parties.(2) Privy Co[uncil] decisions

Where to actions of ejectment by a zemindar, the defendants pleaded a ghatwali tenure of the mouzahs in dispute under permanent mokurruri and dur-mokurruri rights at fixed rents from before the decennial settlement, it was held that certain decrees in 1817 and 1845 relating thereto, to which the zemindar's predecessors in title were not parties, but which sustained the defendants' claim to hold at fixed rents, were admissible in evidence as showing ancient possession and assertion of title many years ago ; and that taken with other evidence, they established the defendants' possession at a uniform rent for so relate ; and that in former suits the parties asserted the same rights which they were then asserting ; and that to this extent the judgments were admissible even though the plaintiff was no party to them. The Privy Council made no reference to this section. It is true that it cited the findings of the Lower

...ved of them. ... the answer- ... rtain of the ... against him. ... d not. But ... ice was that of the judgment, and the existence of the judgment was admissible as a fact in issue under section 43, post.(4) The result of this decision appears to be that the judgments were admitted under section 43 as facts in issue and also (if the Privy Council be taken to have affirmed the decision of the High Court on this point) as evidence of assertions of right under this section. But neither Court treated the judgments as adjudications having the effect of a kind of qualified and inconclusive res judicata (5)

(1) Inder Singh v. Fateh Singh, 1, Lahore, 540.

(2) See Tepu Khan v. Rojoni Mohun, 25 C., 522, s. c., 2 C. W. N., 501, 503 (1898).

(3) Ram Ranjan v. Ram Narain 22 Ind App 60 (1894), s. c., 22 C., 533.

(4) Per Geidt, J. in Abinash Chandra v. Poresh Nath, 9 C. W. N., 402, 408 (1904). The Judgment, however, was not treated as proof that the amount decreed was the correct amount payable, but that that particular amount was by the decree made payable, ib., at p. 410.

(5) Which appear to have been the view entertained by Ghose, J., in the last-mentioned suit.

In Bhitto Kunwar v. Kesho Pershad Misser(1), their Lordships of the Privy Council, speaking of a judgment in a former suit against one of the defendants, Bacha Tewari, observed: "this decision is not conclusive against Bacha Tewari, as the suit was not between the same parties as the present suit, but their Lordships agree with the Subordinate Judge that it was admissible as evidence against him" In this case a decree obtained against the defendant that a Will was revoked was held not to be [illegible] in a suit against him brought by other plaintiffs, but admissible as [illegible] no mention of this section in the judgment; [illegible] previous decisions were admitted are not stated in the report. An opinion, however, has been expressed that as the matters in controversy in the suit in which the decree was passed related to public charitable purposes the prior decision was brought within the terms of section 42 which treats of judgments relating to matters of a public nature.(2) Whether the judgment might or might not have been admissible on this ground, the Authors have ascertained from the records of the Allahabad High Court(3) that this was not the ground on which the Subordinate Judge (whose decision was approved by the Privy Council) admitted it in evidence. The plaintiff claimed the property in suit as the heir of Ramkishen. If the property were subject to a trust and Ramkishen had been in possession as trustee, then plaintiff had no title to it; otherwise if there were no trust and both Ramkishen and Bacha Tewari had beneficial possession The fifth issue, therefore, was whether there was a trust, and this involved the question whether Bhawani had revoked the Will creating the trust. The second and fourth issues were as to the time since when possession had been held and what was the nature of the possession of Ramkishen, the plaintiff's alleged predecessor, and of the defendant Bacha Tewari. These were all facts in issue As showing that they did not hold as trustees, evidence was given of an agreement of the 4th January, 1850, under which Ramkishen and Bacha Tewari held the proper[illegible] of the provision [illegible] that they got p[illegible] ant as proprietc[illegible] that referred to [illegible]
it declared that the estate was in the possession of Bacha Tewari (who was as well as his mortgagee, a party to that suit), as a trustee under the Will. It was, however, held in that suit that the Will was revoked and therefore the property was not subject to a trust. At the date of that suit Bacha Tewari was in possession of his moiety. He continued to hold after the suit and held under a title which negatived the trust, namely, the title declared by the judgment in question. "This decision (the Subordinate Judge said and, as the Privy Council held, correctly) in the opinion of the Court is admissible as evidence against Bacha Tewari, although the plaintiff was not a party to it—as showing the character of the possession of Ramkishen and Bacha Tewari over the estate in respect of which the agreement of 1850 was made." He could not after this decree have held as trustee when the trust was negatived by it. The judgment was therefore relevant and admitted, not under this section, but its existence was either a fact in issue under the forty-third and fifth sections or relevant as explaining a fact in issue under the forty-third and ninth sections.

in Co. Neither of these decisions appear to affect the Full Bench decision in Gujju at ll v. Fatteh Lall.
(2) could

The de (1) 24 I. A., 10 (1897); 1 C. W. N., in the Court (2) Abinash Chandra v. Poresh Nath, adjudicate N., 402 (1904), at p. 409; per Geidt, J., this was doubted by Ghose, J. in the same case; see p. 382.

(3) See Appendix.

In the later case of Dinomoni Chowdhrani v. Brojomohini Chowdhrani(1) in which however, this section was expressly referred to, the facts were as follows:—The suit was instituted by B. M. C. as the widow and executrix of H. N. C., against J. C. to r partly a reformat of her villages. I of H. N. C., whereupon proceedings took place in the Criminal Court under section 318 of the Criminal Procedure Code, XXV of 1861, in the course of which H. N. C. was found to be in possession of the land, and an order was passed by the Magistrate confirming his possession. Some time after, a third party, a neighbouring proprietor, commenced a dispute which also terminated by an order of the Criminal Court under section 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), dated 19th June, 1876, in favour of H. N. C. In 1888, further possessory proceedings took place in the Criminal Court under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1882, as the result of which the defendant J. C. was found to be in possession, and by an order of 31st December, 1888, she was confirmed in possession of the land in dispute. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit and rejected the Criminal proceedings of 1876 as being inadrty to them.
vant for the that which t time. On rs (made in 1867, 1876 and 1888), are merely police-orders made to prevent breaches of the peace. They decide no question of title; but under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1882 (relating to disputes as to immovable property), the Magistrate is, if possible, to decide which of the parties is in possession of the land in dispute; and if he decides that one of the disputants is in possession, the Magistrate is to make an order declaring such party to be entitled to retain possession until evicted in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction. The Criminal Procedure Acts in force in 1866 and 1876 were to the same effect. These police-orders are, in their Lordships' opinion, admissible in evidence on general principles as well as under the thirteenth section of the Indian Evidence Act to show the facts that such orders were made. This necessarily makes them evidence of the following facts, all of which appear from the orders themselves, viz., who the parties to the dispute were, what the land in dispute was; and who was declared entitled to retain possession. For this purpose and to this extent such orders are admissible in evidence for and against every one when the fact of possession at the date of the order has to be ascertained. If the lands referred to in such an order are described by metes and bounds, or by reference to objects or marks physically existing, these must necessarily be ascertained by extrinsic evidence, i.e., the testimony of persons who know the locality. If the orders refer to a map, that map is admissible in evidence to render the order intelligible: and the actual situation of the objects drawn or otherwise indicated on the map must, as in all cases of his sort, be ascertained by extrinsic evidence. So far there appears to be no difficulty. Reports accompanying the orders or maps and not referred to in the orders may be admissible as hearsay evidence of reputed possession (Taylor on Evidence, § 517). But they are not otherwise admissible, unless they are made so by the thirteenth section of the Indian Evidence Act. To bring a report within that section the report must be 'a transaction in which the right or custom in question was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied or which was inconsistent with its existence.' These words are very wide and are wide enough to let in the reports forming part of the proceedings in 1867, 1876 and 1888. Their Lordships are of opinion that the

(1) Dinomoni Chowdhrani v. Brojomohini Chowdhrani, 29 C. 187 (1901); s.c., 29 I. A., 24.

High Court did not err in receiving the report made in the proceedings of 1876, to the reception of which Mr. Cohen objected."

Summary. It is true that the Privy Council refer to this section but their judgment shows that the "police-orders" as they are called but which were apparently the judgments or orders of Magistrates in proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, were also admissible on "general principles." What these are is not stated. But as the Judicial Committee has also held that before a document can be admitted it must be shown to be admissible under the Evidence Act, it must have here referred to some other section than the present one. This being so, the expression of opinion as regards this section was obiter. In fact the judgments or orders were admissible as facts in issue under the fifth section. The suit was to recover possession, and it was obviously admissible to show on the question whether a party had possession at a particular time that an order had been passed retaining him in possession. It might, of course, have been shown that notwithstanding such order he had not or did not get possession, but in the absence of such evidence the presumption would be that what was ordered to be done was carried out. It is, however, clear that neither as facts in issue nor as "transactions" nor "instances" under this [illegible] that is, [illegible] Were [illegible] t would create no difficulty at all. With all respect, however, it may be questioned how the order of the Magistrate could be a "transaction" or "instance" of the character mentioned in this section, except on the ground that it "recognised" the right to possession of a particular party or was "inconsistent" with the possession of the opposite party as to which, see post. What the reports were which were admitted is not stated in the decision, but this matter does not immediately touch that under discussion. It does not appear that the section was originally intended to refer to judgments, but to the acts and statements of persons which may be submitted for the consideration and determination of a Court and not to the judgments, decrees and orders of the Court itself. The section itself, which is intelligible enough, seems to have been intended to refer to matters such as those given in illustrations of it. Considerable difficulties, however, arise from the case-law treating of the applicability of the section to judgments, decrees and orders. It must be remembered that some of the judgments in the cases referred to were in fact admissible under other sections of the Act. There is no question that for some purposes and apart from this section judgments may be relevant The point is whether this section can be quoted as a ground for their admission.

In the first place the evidence tendered must be that of a "transaction" or "instance." Then assuming it is a "transaction" it must be one of the character mentioned in clause (a) or if it is an "instance" it must be an instance of the facts mentioned in clause (b). It seems, with all respect to contrary views, to be an incorrect use of language to describe a judgment as a "transaction." But if it can be so described or as an "instance" it must come also within the other terms of the clauses in which these words appear. It is obvious that a [illegible] es [illegible] es [illegible] or [illegible] th of the litigants before it or of those persons whose acts and statements the law treats as their own. Then even assuming a judgment is a transaction it cannot be said to create or modify a right or custom The right or custom either exists or it does not before the cause comes to trial. The Court merely finds that before and at the date the suit was instituted the right or custom did or did not exist. If the parties litigating had no right the Court cannot give it to them. And if a right or custom exists the Court has no jurisdiction to modify either. The only words in the section which may with any show of reason be made applicable to judgments is the word " recognized " in clauses (a) and (b), and the phrase " which was inconsistent with its existence " in clause (a). But it seems that neither were in fact intended to apply. The recognition referred to in the section appears to be, like the other acts mentioned, an act of a person and not of a tribunal. It is an act of admission. A Court, however, does not admit a right, but adjudicates upon it. Lastly, apart from the question whether a judgment is a " transaction," the " inconsistency " mentioned would appear to refer to the same class of facts as the others stated in the section. In one sense if a right is claimed and a judgment is produced which pronounces against it, that judgment may be said to be inconsistent with the existence of that right. But the inconsistency referred to in the section appears to be that which is inherent in the nature of two opposed facts, such as that referred to in the first part of illustration (a) to the eleventh section and not the " inconsistency " (if indeed it can be correctly so described), which exists between facts evidencing a right or custom and an opinion (for such is the judgment of a Court), pronouncing against the existence of such right or custom. A judgment is indeed inconsistent in no sense unless it has been correctly rendered Inconsistency of fact, however, is shown when two opposed facts are proved and no explanation is offered of their apparent inconsistency.

If this view of the section be correct, then as held by the Full Bench in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall(1) a judgment or decree is not admissible at all under this section, though it may be admissible either as a fact in issue or as a relevant fact under other sections of the Act Whatever, however, may be the effect, [illegible] stated). The [illegible]

[illegible] under this section were not stated Possibly it was admitted as a recognition of right, or as being inconsistent with the right claimed by the defendant, or as evidence of an assertion of right on the part of the plaintiff. It is on the last mentioned ground that the argument for the admissibility of judgments has commonly been founded. Acts of ownership in respect of the subject-matter of a litigation may be shown by proof of particular transactions or instances of the character mentioned in the section. These may be transfers of property such as gifts, sales, leases, mortgages or acts of enjoyment, such as the actual exercise of a right and the like A claim, however, may be asserted or denied in a litigation as well as in or by any other of the modes [illegible]

(1) Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, 6 C, 171 (1880)

(2) Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain, 22 C, 533 (1894) , Bhitto Kunwar v Kesho Pershad, 19 A, 277 (1897)

(3) Dinomoni Choudhrani v Brojomohini Choudhrani, 29 C, 187 (1901)

(4) Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A, 14 25, 28 (1889) , Tepu Khan v Rajoni Mohun, 2 C W. N, 501, 504 (1898) , s c., 25 C., 522

(5) Ib, v ante It seems, however a somewhat forced use of language to call a litigation a transaction

(6) Ib, v ante Jainullah v Ramcrt Kant, 15 C, 233 (1887); Ramasami v Appavu 12 M, 9 (1887)

(7) Tepu Khan v Rajoni Mohun 2 C W N, 501, 504 (1898), s c, 25 C, 522; S M Alijan v Hara Chandra S A, 106 of 1902 Cal H C, 1 July 1904

case the relevant fact is the litigation, and the judgment is only the proof of it. There may be cases in which a judgment is the only proof of the assertions of the parties. But it may be objected that a claim is asserted or denied in the pleadings, in the issues, or in the evidence given in support or denial of those issues. If these are available, are not they the proper evidence of the claim made? The judgment is the judicial opinion rendered on the claims of the parties. It is not their claim, though it may in common with other parts of the proceedings record it. Whether judgments can be said to recognise or be inconsistent with rights has already been dealt with. In short, great difficulties ensue in the application of this section to judgments. But whether admissible under this section or not, it is clear that the reasons(1) given for a former judgment or decree cannot be relied on to show that in subsequent litigation either of the parties were right or wrong in their assertion or denial of the claim litigated and adjudicated upon. If in a suit by A against B, the former asserts a claim which is declared to be well founded by the judgment in that suit; such assertion may be evidence in a subsequent litigation between A and C, tending to show that in the last mentioned litigation A is also entitled to a decree. But the opinion given in favour of A in the first suit is not relevant to prove that the judgment should also be in his favour in the subsequent suit. So to use a judgment is to use it in respect of the judicial opinion which it contains. Such an opinion may have been given on a different state of facts and was moreover rendered in the absence of the parties sought to be affected by it. Judgments considered as judicial opinions are only relevant under ss. 40—42. In this respect and to this extent the law appears to be the same now as it was before the Privy Council decisions which have been said to materially qualify it. The decision of the Full Bench holds that a judgment not in rem or of a public nature and not inter partes is not relevant under this section "as proof of the particular point it decides" in the sense indicated. The sole object for which it was sought in this case to prove the former judgment was to show that in another suit against another defendant the plaintiff had obtained an adjudication in his favour on the same right claimed. The plaintiff in short said "another Court has decided the same point in my favour; so the decision should be in my favour again" The dissentient Judge thought that because the plaintiff produced this prior favourable decision it therefore rendered the case of the plaintiff in the subsequent suit more probable. No decision of the Privy Council has ever sanctioned such a use of a judgment. But the existence of a judgment may be a fact in issue(2) or otherwise relevant.(3) Thus, if A has obtained a decree for the possession of land against B, and C, B's son, murders A in consequence, the existence of the judgment is relevant as showing motive for a crime (4) So again in a suit for malicious prosecution the judgment in the Criminal proceeding is evidence to establish the fact of acquittal, the fact, namely, that the Cri[illegible] ff in the Civil action (5) [illegible] plain the character of part [illegible] the

(1) The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari, 12 A, 1 (1889); Ahjan v. Hara Chandra, supra.

(2) Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain, 22 C, 533 (1894); Dinomoni Chowdhrani v. Brojomohini Chowdhrani, 29 C, 187 (1901).

(3) Apparently (amongst others) under this section. Dinomoni v. Brojomohini Chowdhrani, supra; though it should be noted as already stated that in one sense the opinion was obiter as the judgment in question was held also to be admissible on general principles; v. ante, Ram Ranjan v. Ram Narain, supra, if that decision admitted the decrees also on the ground stated by High Court In so far as it may be held that these decisions admit judgments under this section they appear to have altered the law laid down in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, according to which the section did not apply to judgments at all.

(4) S. 43, illust. (d).

(5) v. s 43, post.

property in suit.(1) And so the finding of a judgment may be referred to in all other cases where the record is matter of inducement or merely introductory to other evidence.(2) And judgments are admissible where sought to be used to show the conduct of the parties, or to show particular instances of the exercise of a right, or admission made by ancestors or how the property was dealt with previously.(3) Other instances are afforded by the Privy Council decisions cited.

Judgments, orders and decrees relating to matters of a public nature relevant to the enquiry, that is, public or general rights and customs, are relevant and admissible, but are not conclusive proof of that which they state.(4)

Proof of custom and right

The existence of any custom or right may be proved under this section by evidence of "transactions" or "instances"(5) A statement contained in any deed, will or other document which relates to any such "transaction" as is mentioned in clause (a) is relevant, if the person by whom such statement is made is dead or cannot be found, or if he is incapable of giving evidence, or his attendance cannot be procured without an unreasonable amount of delay or expense (6) The statement, written or verbal, giving the opinion of a person not called as a witness for similar reasons, as to the existence of any public right or custom, or matter of public or general interest as to the existence of which he would have been likely to have been aware, is relevant, provided it were made before any controversy as to such right, custom or matter had arisen (7) But such evidence of the controversy is inadmissible (8) When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right (this includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons), the opinion as to the existence of such custom or right of persons who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed, are relevant(9), and the grounds upon which such opinions are based are also relevant (10) [illegible] they relate to matters, that is, [illegible] ey are not conclusive proof of that [illegible] y evidence," it has been said, "of an enforcement of a custom is a final decree based on the custom"(12) Custom being in derogation of the general rules of law, must be construed and proved strictly.(13) In Ramalakhmi Ammal v. Shivanantha Perumal Sethurayer the Privy Council said :—" Their Lordships are fully sensible of the importance and justice of giving effect to long-established usage existing in particular districts and families in India ; but it is of the essence of special usages, modifying the ordinary law of succession, that they should be ancient and invariable ; and it is further essential that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence."(14) Thus evidence which may suffice to raise a

---

(1) Peary Mohun v Drobomoyi Dabia, 11 C, 49 (1885), v ante

(2) See Commentary to s 43, post.

(3) Lukhshman v Amrit, 24 B, 598, 599 (1900)

(4) v. s 42, post, and note

(5) See in Jugmohandas Mangaldass v Mangaldas Nathubhoy, 10 B., 543; observations on proof by instances and v Anant Singh v Durga Singh (1910), 37 I A, 191

(6) S 32, cl (7), post, and Hurronath Mullick v. Nittanund, 10 B L R, 263, ante.

(7) S. 32, cl. (4), post

(8) Ekradeshwar Singh v Janeshwari Bahuasin, P C 42 C, 582 (1915)

(9) S 48 post

(10) S 51, post

(11) S 42, post, and notes

(12) Gurdayal Mal v Jhandu Mal, 10 A 568, v s 42, post

(13) Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal 3 I A, 285 Beni Madhub v Jai Krishna, 7 B. L R, 154, Janki Prasad Singh v. Dwarka Prasad Singh, 35 A, 391 (1913) (case of insufficient proof)

(14) Ramalakhmi Ammal v Sivanatha Perumal, 17 W R, 553, ante, Musamat Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chandrapal Kunwar S O C, 94 and v P. C (1909), 36 I A, 125, see Janki Misir v Ranno Singh, 35 A, 472 (1913) (strict proof of each sale to a stranger where custom of pre-emption disputed).

case the relevant fact is the litigation, and the judgment is only the proof of it. There may be cases in which a judgment is the only proof of the assertions of the parties. But it may be objected that a claim is asserted or denied in the pleadings, in the issues, or in the evidence given in support or denial of those issues. If these are available, are not they the proper evidence of the claim made? The judgment is the judicial opinion rendered on the claims of the parties. It is not their claim, though it may in common with other parts of the proceedings record it. Whether judgments can be said to recognise or be inconsistent with rights has already been dealt with. In short, great difficulties ensue in the application of this section to judgments. But whether admissible under this section or not, it is clear that the reasons(1) given for a former judgment or decree cannot be relied on to show that in subsequent litigation either of the parties were right or wrong in their assertion or denial of the claim litigated and adjudicated upon. If in a suit in the first suit is not relevant to prove that the judgment should also be in his favour in the subsequent suit So to use a judgment is to use it in respect of the judicial opinion which it contains. Such an opinion may have been given on a different state of facts and was moreover rendered in the absence of the parties sought to be affected by it Judgments considered as judicial opinions are only relevant under ss. 40—42. In this respect and to this extent the law appears to be the same now as it was before the Privy Council decisions which have been said to materially qualify it. The decision of the Full Bench holds that a judgment not in rem or of a public nature and not inter partes is not relevant under this section "as proof of the particular point it decides" in the sense indicated. The sole object for which it was sought in this case to prove the former judgment was to show that in another suit against another defendant the plaintiff had obtained an adjudication in his favour on the same right claimed. The plaintiff in short said "another Court has decided the same point in my favour; so the decision should be in my favour again." The dissentient Judge thought that because the plaintiff produced this prior favourable decision it therefore rendered the case of the plaintiff in the subsequent suit more probable. No decision of the Privy Council has ever sanctioned such a use of a judgment. But the existence of a judgment may be a fact in issue(2) or otherwise relevant (3) Thus, if A has obtained a decree for the [illegible] B's son, murders A in consequence, the [illegible] nt as showing motive for a crime.(4) So [illegible] cution the judgment in the Criminal proceeding is evidence to establish the fact of acquittal, the fact, namely, that the Criminal proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff in the Civil action (5) Again a reference to the finding of a judgment may explain the character of party's possession and the nature of the enjoyment had in the

(1) The Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari, 12 A, 1 (1889); Alijan v Hara Chandra, supra.

(2) Ram Ranjan v. Ram Narain, 22 C, 533 (1894); Dinomoni Chowdhrani v. Brojomohini Chowdhrani, 29 C., 187 (1901).

(3) Apparently (amongst others) under this section. Dinomoni v. Brojomohini Chowdhrani, supra; though it should be noted as already stated that in one sense the opinion was obiter as the judgment in question was held also to be admissible on general principles; v. ante, Ram Ranjan v. Ram Narain, supra, if that decision admitted the decrees also on the ground stated by High Court. In so far as it may be held that these decisions admit judgments under this section they appear to have altered the law laid down in Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, according to which the section did not apply to judgments at all.

(4) S. 43, illust. (d).

(5) v. s. 43, post.

property in suit.(1) And so the finding of a judgment may be referred to in all other cases where the record is matter of inducement or merely introductory to other evidence.(2) And judgments are admissible where sought to be used to show the conduct of the parties, or to show particular instances of the exercise of a right, or admission made by ancestors or how the property was dealt with previously.(3) Other instances are afforded by the Privy Council decisions cited.

[illegible] to th admi

Proof of custom and right

The existence of any custom or right may be proved under this section by evidence of "transactions" or "instances."(5) A statement contained in any deed, will or other document which relates to any such "transaction" as is mentioned in clause (a) is relevant, if the person by whom such statement is made is dead or cannot be found, or if he is incapable of giving evidence, or his attendance cannot be procured without an unreasonable amount of delay or expense.(6) The statement, written or verbal, giving the opinion of a person not called as a witness for similar reasons, as to the existence of any public right or custom, or matter of public or general interest as to the existence of which he would have been likely to have been aware, is relevant, provided it were made before any controversy as to such right, custom or matter had arisen (7) But such evidence of the controversy is inadmissible (8) When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right (this includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons), the opinion as to the existence of such custom or right of persons who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed, are relevant(9), and the grounds upon which such opinions are based are also relevant (10) [illegible] tters, that is, [illegible] proof of that [illegible] een said, "of an enforcement of a custom is a final decree based on the custom "(12) Custom being in derogation of the general rules of law, must be construed and proved strictly (13) In Ramalakhmi Ammal v. Shivanantha Perumal Sethurayer the Privy Council said :—"T [illegible] he importance and justice of giving effect [illegible] in particular districts and families in Indi [illegible] usages, modifying the ordinary law of succession, that they should be ancient and invariable ; and it is further essential that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence."(14) Thus evidence which may suffice to raise a

---

(1) Peary Mohun v Drobomoyi Dabia, 11 C, 49 (1885), v ante
(2) See Commentary to s 43, post.
(3) Lukkshman v Amrit, 24 B, 598, 599 (1900)
(4) v s 42, post, and note
(5) See in Jugmohandas Mangaldass v Mangaldas Nathubhoy, 10 B, 543, observations on proof by instances and v Anant Singh v Durga Singh (1910), 37 I A, 191
(6) S 32 cl (7), post, and Hurronath Mullick v Nittanund, 10 B L R, 263, ante
(7) S 32, cl (4), post.
(8) Ekradeshwar Singh v Janeshwari Bahuasin, P C 42 C 582 (1915)
(9) S 48 post
(10) S 51, post
(11) S 42, post, and notes
(12) Gurdayal Mal v Jhandu Mal, 10 A 568, v s 42, post
(13) Hurpurshad v Sheo Dyal, 3 I. A., 285, Beni Madhub v Jai Krishna, 7 B. L R, 154, Janki Prasad Singh v. Dwarka Prasad Singh, 35 A, 391 (1913) (case of insufficient proof).
(14) Ramalakhmi Ammal v Sivanatha Perumal, 17 W R, 553, ante ; Musamat Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chandrapal Kunwar, 8 O C, 94 and v P. C. (1909), 36 I A, 125, see Janki Misir v. Ranno Singh, 35 A, 472 (1913) (strict proof of each sale to a stranger where custom of pre-emption disputed).

presumption may be insufficient to prove a customary right.(1) The course of practice upon which the custom rests must not be left in doubt but be proved with certainty.(2) "The most cogent evidence of custom is not that which is afforded by the expression of opinion as to its existence, but the examination of instances in which the alleged custom has been acted upon, and by the proof afforded by judicial or revenue records or private records or receipts, that the custom has been enforced."(3) "The acts required for the establishment of customary law ought to be plural, uniform and constant. They may be judicial decisions, but these are not indispensable for its establishment, although some have thought otherwise."(4) The evidence should be such as to prove the uniformity and continuity of the usage and the conviction of those following it, that they are acting in accordance with law, and this conviction must be inferred from the evidence. Evidence of acts of the kind, acquiescence in those acts, their publicity, decisions of Courts, or even of panchayats, upholding such acts, the statements of experienced and competent persons of their belief that such acts were legal and valid, will all be admissible, but it is obvious that, although admissible, evidence of this latter kind will be of little weight if unsupported by actual examples of the usage asserted.(5) A customary right to impos[illegible] mony [illegible] to tw[illegible] certai[illegible]
shown to have been well established in a family cannot be defeated by proof that in one case it was not enforced.(7) The existence of a custom may be inferred from long enjoyment not exercised by permission, stealth or force (8) What the law requires before an alleged custom can receive the recognition of the Court and so acquire legal force, is satisfactory proof of usage so long and invariably acted upon in practice as to show that it has, by common consent, been submitted to as the established governing rule of the particular family, class or district or country.(9)

Local usage (desachar), if it really exists, being a custom prevalent over a [illegible] one particular estate, must, from its univer- [illegible] of proof than family custom or usage To [illegible] ice must be precise and conclusive.(10) See in the undermentioned case observations on the usage of books of history to prove a local custom.(11)

A caste-custom prohibiting widows from adopting, is one which before the Court can give judicial effect to it, ought to be established by very clear proof

---

(1) Ramakanta Das Mohapatra v Shamanand Das Mohapatra, P. C (1908), 36 C., 590

(2) Sivananarija Perumal v Mutu Ramalinga, 3 Mad H. C. R. 77, ante.

(3) Lachman Rai v Akbar Khan, I. A, 440, per Turner, J, as to proof of instances see Rahimatbai v. Hirbai, 3 B 34 (1877)

(4) Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 3 M H. C R, 57, ante. As to the plurality of acts and the onus probandi in the case of an allegation of custom, see Desai Ranchoddas v Rawal Nathubhai, 21 B, 116, 117 (1895), and see further as to onus, the case of Rahimatbai v. Hirbai, 3 B, 34 (1877).

(5) Gopalayyan v Raghupatiayyan, 7 Mad H. C R, 254 (1873); but see Eranjoli Illath v Eranjoli Illath, 7 M., 3 (1883)

(6) Kummaru Reddi v. Nagayasami Thambichi Naicker (1907), 31 M, 17; and see Peary Mohan Mukerjee v. Jote Kumar Mukerjee (1906), 11 C. W. N., 83.

(7) Ekradeshwar Singh v. Jalmeshwari Balmesin, P. C, 42 C., 582 (1915).

(8) Shadi Lal v Muhammad Ishaq Khan (1910), 33 A, 277. Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar, 42, C, 455 (1915).

(9) Sivananarija Perumal v. Mutu Ramalinga, 3 Mad H C. R., 77, ante, and v. Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Maz-ud-din Khan, P C. (1911), 39 C. 418

(10) Tekact Doorga v Tekaetnee Doorga, 20 W. R, 157, ante.

(11) Vallabha v. Mudusudanam, 12 M., 495 (1889).

that the conscience of the members of the caste had come to regard it as forbidden. It must be shown that a uniform and persistent usage has moulded the life of the caste.(1)

In order to establish a family-custom at variance with the ordinary law of inheritance it is necessary that it should be established by clear and positive proof(2) (v. ante). And the more unusual the custom the stricter must be the proof.(3) To establish a kulachar or family-custom of descent, one at least of two things must be shown—either a clear, distinct and positive tradition in the family that the kulachar exists; or a long series of instances of anomalous inheritance from which the kulachar may be inferred.(4) It is said in the case of Sumrun Singh v. Khedun Singh(5) that "to legalise any deviation from the strict letter of the law, it is necessary that the usage should have been prevalent during a long succession of ancestors, when it becomes known by the name of kulachar." But a distinct tradition in the family supplies the place of ancient examples of the application of the usage (6) It has been doubted whether to the general

nothing to prenodern uniform usage, presume an indefinitely ancient usage of the like kind, in the absence of circumstances leading to a contrary inference, but no such presumption can be made where the practice is traced to a recent agreement (8) Where the plaintiff sued the defendants for possession of an estate on the assertion that she was the daughter of the last undisputed owner, and the defendants resisted the claim on the ground that she was excluded by a custom prevailing in the family and tribe to which the parties belonged, it was held that there was no objection to a party pleading that a custom exists both in a family and in the tribe to which the family belongs, but he must prove that it is binding on

'd by the Privy Council that evidence of a ng daughters from the inheritance of an issue as to the custom of succession in a partible estate governed by [illegible] does not make this evid discontinuance must be hel

"Usage of Trade," v. post

---

(1) Patel Vandravan v Patel Manilal, 16 B, 470 (1891), see Jugmohandas Mangaldas v. Mangaldas Nathubhai, 10 B, 528, ante

(2) Rajah Nugender v Rughoonath Narain, W. R (1864), 20 ante. For recent Privy Council decision on family custom, see Nitra Pal v. Jai Pal, 19 A, 1 (1896), Mohesh Chunder v Satrughan Dhal, 29 C, 343 (1902); in which decrees not inter partes were admitted as evidence of custom; Chandika Baksh v Numa Kunwar, 24 A., 273 (1901); see also Mailathi Anni v. Subbaraya Mudaliar, 24 M, 650 (1901) [Migration of Hindu subject of French India—custom.]

(3) Ganga Singh v Chedi Lall 33 A, 605

(4) Maharani Hiranath v Ram Narayan, 9 B L R, 274, 294 (1872)

(5) 2 Sel Rep, 116; New Ed, 147

(6) Maharani Hiranath v Baboo Ram, supra, 295; as to kulachar determining succession to an impartible estate, see Subramanya Pandya v Siva Subramanya, 17 M, 316 (1894), Mohesh Chunder v Satrughan Dhal, 29 C, 343 (1902)

(7) Tara Chand v Reeb Ram, 3 Mad H C R, 57, 58 (1886), Madhavrav Raghavendra v Balkrishna, 4 B H C R. (A C), 113 (1886), distinguished in Bhau Nanaji v Sundrabai, 11 Bom H C. R, 271 (1874), Musamat Parbati Kuar v Rani Chandrapal Kuar, 8 O C, 94 See also Mayne's Hindu Law, § 51, 5th Ed. (1892)

(8) Bhau Nanaji v Sundrabai, 11 Bom H C R, 271, ante, following Shephard v Payne, 31 L J C P, 297, and Lord Waterpark v Fennel, 7 H L., 650, see also Ramasami v Appavu, 12 M 14 ante and Joy Kishen v. Doorga Narain, 11 W R, 38, ante

(9) Musst Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chunderpal Kunwar 8 O. C, 94 and P. C (1909), 36 I A 125, and v Shivagunga's case (1863) 3 M I A, 539

(10) Soorendranath v Mussamat Heeramonee 10 W R (P C), 35 (1868); I C, 195, ante.

It must be proved that the right or custom shown to have been exercised on some particular occasion is the same with the right or custom which has to be proved. In England the custom of one manor is not admissible to prove the instance of another unless some connection can be shown between them, as, for instance, that the custom in question is a particular incident of the general tenure which is proved to be common to the two manors.(1) So also where evidence of a right exercised in a particular locality was given, it was said: "Ownership may be proved by proof of possession, and that can be shown by acts of enjoyment of the land itself; but it is impossible in the nature of things to confine the evidence to the very precise spot on which the alleged trespass may have been committed: evidence may be given of acts done on other parts, provided there is such a common character of locality between those parts and the spot in question as would raise a reasonable inference that the place in dispute belonged to the plaintiff if the other parts did. It has been said in the course of argument that the defendant had no interest to dispute the acts of ownership not opposite his own land: but the ground on which such acts are admissible is not the acquiescence of any party; they are admissible of themselves proprio vigore, for they tend to prove that he who does them is owner of the soil; though if they are done in the absence of all persons interested to dispute them, they are of less weight,—that observation applies only to the effect of the evidence."(2) See notes to s. 42, post. The fact that a custom was not pleaded in litigations between members of the community where it might have been pleaded is relevant evidence, and the question of its relevancy is not affected by the circumstance that some of those suits were still pending in Courts at the time of the trial.(3)

Usage of Trade

It has been said "that these words are to be understood as referring to a particular usage to be established by evidence and perfectly distinct from that general custom of merchants, which is the universal established law of the land, which is to [illegible] not from evidence in [illegible] to contradict the l[illegible] be consistent wit[illegible] oped by judicial dec[illegible] departments of trade, where a general usage has been judicially ascertained and established, it becomes part of the law merchant which Courts of Justice are bound to know and recognise; bu[illegible] so becomes incorporated in [illegible] be proved by evidence of [illegible] been acted upon, and not by evidence of opinion only.(7) Usage of trade may be proved by multiplying instances of usage of different merchants if it appears to be the same as that of other merchants.(8) With reference to the evidence necessary to support an alleged usage, the Privy Council said that "there needs not either the antiquity, the uniformity or the notoriety of custom, which in respect of all these, becomes a local law. The usage may be still in course of growth; it may require evidence for its support in each case; but in the result it is enough, if it appears to be so well-known and acquiesced in, that it may reasonably be presumed to have been an ingredient tacitly imported by

(1) Marquis of Anglesey v. Lord Hatherton, 10 M & W., 235; and Taylor, Ev., § 320, Roscoe, N P. Ev., 85; as to manorial rights, see note to s. 42, post.

(2) Jones v Williams, 2 M & W., 326, per Parker, B.; Taylor, Ev, 309, 310; see s. 11, ante.

(3) Mariam Bibi v Shaik Mahomed Ibrahim 28 C. L J., 306; S. C., 48 I A, 561.

(4) 1 Smith, L. Cas, 9th Ed, 581, 582.

(5) Meyer v Desser, 16 C. B N S, 660, Indian Contract Act, s. 1.

(6) Roscoe, N P Ev., 24, 25, and cases there cited.

(7) Mackenzie v. Dunlop, 3 Macq H L Cas, 22; Cunningham v. Faublanque, 6 L & P, 44; but see s. 49, post.

(8) Volkart Bros v. Vettevelu Nadan, 11 M, 465 (1887).

the parties into their contract."(1) The usage must be shown to be certain(2), ... quiesced in(4) that everybody in the ... it, if he took the pains to enquire.(5) ... be inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act(6) or repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract made between the parties.(7)

14. Facts showing the existence of any state of mind—such as intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will or good-will towards any particular person, or showing the existence of any state of body or bodily feeling—are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind, or body, or bodily feeling, is in issue or relevant.

Facts showing existence of state of mind or of body, or bodily feeling.

Explanation 1.—A fact relevant as showing the existence of a relevant state of mind must show that the state of mind exists not generally, but in reference to the particular matter in question.

Explanation 2.—But where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence, the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of this section, the previous conviction of such person shall also be a relevant fact.(8)

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article.

The fact that, at the same time(9), he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles, of which he was in possession, to be stolen.(10)

---

(1) Juggomohun Ghose v. Manickchand, 7 Moo. Ind. App, 282 (1859), s. c, 4 W R. (P. C), 8, per Sir J Coleridge cited and applied in Palakdhari Rai v. Manners, 23 C, 179, 183 (1895) [usage in landholder's estate]

(2) Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan, 11 M., 462, 466, ante

(3) Arapa Nayak v. Narsi Keshavji & Co, 8 Bom H C R. (A C), 19 (1871); Ransordas Bhogilal v Keersing Mohanlal, 1 Bom H C. R, 231 (1863), Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan, 11 M, 462, 466, ante.

(4) See Mackensie Lyall v. Chamroo Singh, 16 C, 702 (1889), Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan, 11 M, 462, 466, ante.

(5) Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan, 11 M, 461, 462, Plaice v Allcock, 4 F. & F. (1074), per Willes, J. Foxal v International Land Credit Co, 16 L J N S, 637

(6) Act IX of 1872, s 1 see Madhab Chander v Rajcoomar Das, 14 B L R, 76 (1874).

(7) Volkart Bros v Vettevelu Nadan, 11 M, 461, J G Smith v Ludha Ghella, 17 B, 129 (1892), see note to s. 29, proviso 5, post

(8) These Explanations were substituted for the original explanation to s 14, by Act III of 1891, s 1 (1) see also Cr Pr Code, s 310 (Act V of 1898), and R v Naba Kumar, 1 C W N, 146 (1897), in which the alterations effected in this section and in s. 54 are discussed.

(9) See 34 & 35 Vic., c 112, s 19, R v. Drage, 14 Cox, 85, R v Carter, 12 Q B D, 522

(10) According to English law such evidence of intention in the case of indictments for receiving stolen goods is admissible only subject to certain limitations see Steph Dig, Art. 11, 34 & 35 Vic, c 112 s 19, Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 12th Ed 84, 778, 788, and cases there cited. This illustration makes no reservation as to ownership or time, so that though the stolen property belonged to other person than the prosecutor and without reference to the lapse of time since it was stolen, evidence of its possession may under the Act be given against the accused, its weight

(b) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to another person a counterfeit coin which, at the time when he delivered it, he knew to be counterfeit.

The fact that, at the time of its delivery, A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin, is relevant (1)

The fact that A had been previously convicted of delivering to another person as genuine a counterfeit coin, knowing it to be counterfeit, is relevant.(2)

(c) A sues B for damage done by a dog of B's, which B knew to be ferocious.

The facts that the dog had previously bitten X, Y and Z, and that they had made complaints to B, are relevant.(3)

(d) The question is, whether A, the acceptor of a bill of exchange, knew that the name of the payee was fictitious.

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee, if the payee had been a real person is relevant as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person.(4)

(e) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B.

The fact of previous publications by A respecting B showing ill-will on the part of A towards B, is relevant, as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question.

---

in each case being left to the discretion of the Court, Norton, Ev, 132, see Penal Code, s 411, and s 21, illust (d) and s. 114, illust (a), post. R. v Cassy Mul, 3 W R, Cr, 10 (1865) ; R v Narain Bagdee, 5 W R, Cr, 3 (1866), R. v. Motee Jolaha, 5 W R, Cr, 66 (1866) , the test of a correct presumption of guilt in a prisoner not being able to account for the property on his premises is dependent on the fact whether the surrounding circumstances of the case really and properly raise such a presumption ; Re Meer Yar Ali, 13 W. R, Cr, 70, 71 (1870) , R v. Samiruddin, 18 W. R, Cr, 25 (1872), see Wigmore, Ev, § 324

(1) See R v Nur Mahomed, 8 B, 223 (1883) R. v. Vajiram, 16 B., 414 (1892) This illustration speaks only of possession, but it is only a single illustration of the "knowledge" spoken of in the section. Evidence of other utterings would be equally receivable under the section to establish guilty knowledge Norton, Ev., 134 ; R. v Whitley, 2 Leach, 986, cited in R v Vajiram ; Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society, 4 C. P. D, 102 ; R v. Green, 3 C. & K., 204. In England it is now well-settled that evidence of uttering counterfeit coin on other occasions than that charged is evidence to show guilty knowledge , Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 83, 84 ; and that utterings after that for which the indictment is laid may be given in evidence for this purpose as well as those which take place before : R. v. Foster, 24 L J, M C., 134 ; see s. 15, illust. (c); proof of the prisoner's conduct (as for example, that he passed by different names) is clearly admissible; R. v. Tattersall, 2 Leach, 984, R. v Phillips, 1 Lew. C. C, 105; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 12th Ed, 82, 83; v s 8, ante. In the case of forged instruments similar evidence of possession and uttering has been constantly admitted in England (v post). But whether evidence is admissible of uttering other forged instruments, where these are uttered subsequently to that with which the prisoner is charged, seems to some extent doubtful Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 12th Ed, 82-84 (v post) See Penal Code, ss 239-241 , 471, 463-477, passim, and see s 21, illust (e), post, R v. Kisto Soonder, 2 W. R, Cr, 5 (1865) [counterfeit seals and forged documents], Wigmore, Ev, § 309.

(2) This Illustration was substituted for the original Illustration (b) to s 14, by Act III of 1891, s 1 (2).

(3) See Thomas v. Morgan, 2 C M & R, 496 , Judge v Cox, 1 Starkie, 285 ; Hudson v Robert, 6 Ex, 697; Cox v. Burbidge, 13 C. B N. S, 430 ; Roscoe, N. P Ev, 748. In the case of wild and naturally ferocious animals such as lions, tigers, monkeys, etc., it is not necessary to prove 'scienter,' i e, that the defendant knew and was well aware that the animals were ferocious, dangerous or mischievous as the case may be: knowledge will be presumed (May v. Burdett, 9 Q. B, 112). But in the case of dogs, horses and other domestic animals, 'scienter' must be proved in order to entitle the plaintiff to damages The law Relating to Dogs by F Lupton, 1888, pp. 4, 7; cf. also Penal Code, s 289; Norton, Ev, 134.

(4) This is the case of Gibson v. Hunter, 2 H Bl, 288; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 85; Taylor Ev. § 338.

The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that A repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant, as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B (1)

(f) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, whereby B being induced to trust C, who was insolvent, suffered loss.

The fact that, at the time when A represented C to be solvent, C was supposed to be solvent by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him is relevant, as showing that A made the representation in good faith.(2)

(g) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B, upon a house of which A is owner by the order of C, a contractor. A's defence is that B's contract was with C.

The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant, as proving that A did, in good faith, make over to C the management of the work in question, so that C was in a position to contract with B on C's own account and not as agent for A (3)

---

(1) Not only is the publication of other libels evidence, but the mode of their publication, to show quo animo they were published (see Bond v. Douglas, 7 C & P, 626, where libellous handbills were carried backwards and forwards before the plaintiff's door) As the existence of previous ill-feeling throws light upon the animus with which the libel was published, so does the absence of previous quarrel, or the fact that the accused merely repeated what he had heard, afford evidence of the absence of malicious intention But in civil suits this will only be receivable in mitigation of damages (v. ante) Norton, Ev, 135, see Pearson v. Le Maitre, 5 M & Gr., 700, and cases collected in Roscoe, N P. Ev, 864, and Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 579. Taylor, Ev., § 340, See Kaikhusru Noroji v. Jehangir Byramji, 14 B, 532 (1890)

(2) Here the gist of the action is fraud (see Pasley v. Freeman, 2 Smith, L C, 74) Bonâ fides may necessarily always be given in evidence for where there is bonâ fides, there can be no fraudulent intent Shrewsbury v Blount, 2 M & G, 475, Roscoe, N P Ev, 853, the illustration is an example, Norton, Ev, 136 In a case for a false representation of the solvency of A B, whereby the plaintiffs trusted him with goods, their declarations at the time, that they trusted him in consequence of the representation are admissible in evidence for them Fellowes v. Williamson, 1 M & M, 306, and see Vacher v Cocks, ib, 353 The case on which the illustration is based is Sheen v Bumpstead, 2 H & C 193, in which Cockburn, C J, said: "With regard to the question put to the other witnesses respecting the general reputation of W for trustworthiness as a tradesman, I think it also admissible It was important to ascertain the state of mind of the defendant at the time he made the presentation complained of, and that could only be shown by inference A plaintiff may not be able to bring home to the defendants by direct and positive evidence a knowledge of the falsehood of his representation, the plaintiff may, however, prove certain facts which necessarily lead to that inference Now suppose the plaintiff had called every tradesman in the town to say not only that W was insolvent, but that his insolvency was notorious, would it not have been a fair and obvious remark to the jury that the defendant must have known what was the common knowledge of every other tradesman? On the other hand, if, after the plaintiff has established a primâ facie case against the defendant the latter calls a number of tradesmen, who have had dealings with W, and they say that at the time the defendant made the representation they believed that W was perfectly solvent, is not that strong evidence—morally at least—from which the jury may infer that what was the common opinion of tradesmen in the neighbourhood was shared by the defendant and that in making the representation he acted in good faith?" And see Barrow v Hem Chunder Lahiri (1908), 35 C, 495

(3) This is the case of Gerish v Charter, 1 C B, 13. "The evidence was material and was properly admitted It intended to show that the defendant was not seeking to evade payment for goods ordered for his benefit, but that he had actually paid the person with whom alone he had contracted It showed that the defendant conducted himself like a party who was dealing with 'C' as a principal and not as an agent;" per Maule J ib "A considerable body of evidence had been given by the plaintiff to show that 'C' interfered in the matter as the defendant's agent which this evidence went directly to negative," per Cresswell J ib "In an action for goods sold and delivered a general form of defence is 'I am liable to pay another person, and in such cases the jury usually comes to the conclusion that the defendant wants to keep the goods without paying for them. Here, therefore, it was material for the (h) A is accused of the dishonest misappropriation of property which he had found, and the question is whether, when he appropriated it, he believed in good faith that the real owner could not be found.

The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was(1), is relevant, as showing that A did not, in good faith, believe that the real owner of the property could not be found.

The fact that A knew, or had reason to believe, that the notice was given fraudulently by C, who heard of the loss of the property, and wished to set up a false claim to it, is relevant, as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith.(2)

(i) A is charged with shooting at B with intent to kill him. In order to show A's intent, the fact of A's having previously shot at B may be proved (3)

(j) A is charged with sending threatening letters to B Threatening letters previously sent by A to B may be proved, as showing the intention of the letters.(4)

(k) The question is whether A has been guilty of cruelty towards B, his wife.

Expressions of their feeling towards each other shortly before or after the alleged cruelty, are relevant facts.(5)

(l) The question is, whether A's death was caused by poison.

Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms, are relevant facts (6)

(m) The question is, what was the state of A's health at the time when an assurance on his life was effected.

Statements made by A as to the state of his health at or near the time in question are relevant facts.(7)

(n) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use, whereby A was injured.

The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage, is relevant defendant to show the boná fides of his defence by proving payment to such third person, and that was the effect of the evidence in question," per Erle, J, ib

---

(1) "And in such a manner that A knew or probably might have known of it." Steph. Dig., Art 11, illust (j) See also Norton, Ev., 137; some evidence should be given that the notice was within his knowledge

(2) In the instances given in the illustration the first is to negative good faith, the second to rebut the presumption of malâ fides raised by the first; see Penal Code, s. 403, Expl. (2), Norton, Ev, 136, 137; Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 549, R. v. Thurburn, 1 Den C. C. R, 387; 18 L. J. M. C., 140; in which, and in the judgment of Parke, B, the whole law with reference to larceny of goods found is considered.

(3) This illustration, which is taken from the case of R. v. Voke, R. & R, 531, is in principle like illust. (o), post: the difference between the two illustrations is that this illustration is a case of shooting with intent to kill, while illust (o) is of murder outright. In R v Voke, the prisoner was indicted for maliciously shooting at the prosecutor Evidence was given that the prisoner fired at the prosecutor twice during the day. In the course of the trial it was objected that the prosecutor ought not to give evidence of two distinct felonies, but Burrough, J., held, that it was admissible on the ground that the counsel for the prisoner, by his cross-examination of the prosecutor had endeavoured to show that the gun might have gone off by accident, that the second firing, was evidence to show that the first was wilful and to remove the doubt if any existed in the minds of the jury; see Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 83; Norton, Ev, 137.

(4) See R. v. Robinson; East, P. C, 1110, in which previous letters, sent by the prisoner were read in evidence as they served to explain the letter on which he was indicted.

(5) See Taylor, Ev, s 582 This and the two following illustrations relate to feelings; the first to mental feelings of "ill-will" or "good-will:" the two last to "bodily feelings" (v text, post).

(6) See R. v. Gloster, 16 Cox., 471; R. v Johnson, 2 C & K., 354.

(7) See Aveson v. Kinnaird, 6 East, 188; R v. Nicholas, 2 C. & K., 246; 2 Cox, C C., 136; R. v. Guttridge, 9 C & P, 471

The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let to hire, is irrelevant (1)

(o) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead.

The fact that A on other occasions, shot at B is relevant, as showing his intention to shoot B

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant.

(p) A is tried for a crime.

The fact that he said something indicating an intention to commit that particular crime, is relevant.

The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class, is irrelevant.

Principle.—If the existence of a mental or bodily state or bodily feeling is, as is assumed by the section, in issue or relevant, it is clear that facts from which the existence of such mental or bodily state or bodily feeling may be inferred are also relevant. The second Explanation is merely a particular application of the general rule contained in the body of the section The rejection of the general fact by the first Explanation rests on the ground that the collateral matter is too remote, if indeed there is any connection with the factum probandum.

s 3 ("Fact") s. 21, cl (2) ("Admission consisting of statements of existence of state of mind or body")
s 3 ("Relevant") ss 102, 106, 111 (Burden of proof)

Steph Dig, Art II and Note VI; Taylor, Ev, §§ 580—586, 150, 160, 812, 1665, 1666 340—347, 188, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 50, 69, 130—142; Lindley, Partnership, 536, Chitty's Equity Index, 4th Ed, "Notice"; Brett's Leading Cases in Equity, 2nd Ed, 260; Roscoe N P. Ev., 633—635, 847—855, 736 et seq; Norton, Ev, 131—140, Swift, Ev, 111; Cunningham, Ev., 117, 119. Pollock's Law of Fraud in India (1894) 44, 45, 61, 65, 66, 76, 77; First Report of the Select Committee, 31st March 1871, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 79—85, Lindley's Company Law, 6th Ed., 432, 433; Bevan's Principles of the Law of Negligence (1889); Cr. Pr. Code, s 310; Contract Act, s 17, Best, Ev, p 86, §§ 255, 433; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 73—75; Wigmore, Ev, §§ 309—370, 581, 658—661, 1962, 1963

COMMENTARY.

States of mind or of body or bodily feeling

Facts, it has been seen, are either physical or psychological; the former being the subject of perception by the senses, and the latter the subject of consciousness (2) A person may testify to his own intent. But if his acts and conduct are shown to be at variance and inconsistent with the intent he swears to, his own testimony in his own favour would ordinarily obtain very little credit.(3) Of facts which cannot be perceived by the senses, intention, fraud, [illegible] But a man's intention is a matter [illegible] man's mind is as much a fact as the [illegible] very difficult to prove what the state of a man's mind at a paticular time is, but if it can be ascertained it is as much a fact as anything else"(5) The latter class of facts, however, are incapable of direct proof by the testimony of witnesses, their existence can only be ascertained either by the confession of the party whose mind is their seat

(1) This and the two following illustrations refer to the Explanation, illust. (a) illustrates "negligence' as well, illust (o) should be read in conjunction with illust (i), ante \ text, post

(2) \ ante, s 3, illust (d)

(3) Wigmore, Ev., § 581

(4) See First Report of the Select Committee 31st March 1871 Emp v Panchu, 47 C 671 (F B), s c, 24 C. W. N., 501.

(5) Edington v Fitzmaurice, 29 Ch D, App 483 (1885) per Bowen L J see Pollock's Law of Fraud in India p 61 or by presumptive inference from physical facts.(1) It has been debated whether the "opinion rule" excludes testimony to another person's state of mind.(2) But it may be safely and in general said that a witness must speak to facts and let the inference from those facts be drawn by the Court or jury.(3) This section is in accordance with the principle laid down in numerous cases(4) that, to explain states of mind, evidence is admissible, though it does not otherwise bear upon the issue to be tried. As regards this principle there is no difference between Civil and Criminal cases.(5) The present section makes general provision for the subject, and the next section is a special application of the rule contained in the present one. The subject of the existence of states of mind is one of the most important topics with which judicial enquiries are concerned; in Criminal cases they are the main consideration; and in Civil cases they are often highly material, as for instance, where there is a question of fraud, malicious intention, or negligence. The present section is framed to avoid all technicalities as to the class of cases or the time within which the fact given as evidence of mental or bodily condition, must have occurred. The only point for the Court to consider, in deciding upon the admissibility of evidence under this section, is whether the fact can be said to show the existence of the state of mind or body under investigation (6) The same considerations will, it is apprehended, determine the question of the admissibility of facts subsequent to the fact in issue to prove intent and other like questions.(7) So also, though the collateral facts sought to be proved should not be so remote in

(1) See Balmakand Ram v Ghansam Ram, 22 C, 391, 406 (1894) [proof of intention need not be direct, it will be enough if it is proved like any other fact (and the existence of intention is a fact) by the evidence of conduct and surrounding circumstances] The Deputy Remembrancer v Karuna Baistobi, 22 C., 164, 174 (1894), R v Rhutten Ram, 2 W. R, Cr, 63 (1865), R v. Beharee, 3 W. R, Cr, 23, 24, 27 (1865) [exclamations as evidence of guilty intention: conduct of prisoner] · Re Meer Yar Ali, 13 W. R, Cr, 71 (1870) [ib]: R. v. Rookni Kant, 3 W R, Cr., 58 (1865) [province of jury to judge of intention]: R v. Gookool Bowree, 5 W R, Cr., 33, 38 (1866) [to some degree of course the intentions of parties to a wrongful act must be judged of by the event]· R v Gora Chand, 5 W. R, Cr, 45, 46 (1866), [presumption of intention must depend upon the facts of each particular case], R v. Shuruffooddeen, 13 W R, Cr., 26 (1870) [a guilty knowledge is not necessarily a thing on which direct evidence can be afforded. It is a matter of conscience and connected with the secret motives of a man's conduct: it must be inferred from facts]: R v Bleesdale, 2 C. & K., 765 (felonious intent), R v Mogg, 4 C. & P, 364 (ib.), R. v. Lloyd, 7 C & P, 318 (lustful intent); R. v. Bholu, 23 A, 124 (1900), cited in notes to s 106 [Assembling for the purpose of committing dacoity evidence of intention] R. v. Papa Sani, 23 M, 159 (1899); Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, supra [obtaining girls for prostitution; evidence of intent], and as to declarations as proof of intention, see R. v. Petcherini, 7 Cox, C. C, 79. As to burden of proof, see ss 102, 105, 106, post.

(2) Wigmore, Ev, §§ 1962, 1963 The answer to the objection in § 661 seems to be that in such case the witness is submitting his inference to the jury. Because the jury have themselves to draw the inference that is no reason why the witness should be allowed to do so As to the different meanings of "belief" or "impression" as signifying the degree of positiveness of original observation or recollection (in which case there is no legal objection) or lack of actual personal observation (in which case the evidence is excluded), see ib, 658

(3) Swift, Ev, 111. "A witness must swear to facts within his knowledge and recollection and cannot swear to mere matters of belief."

(4) See judgment of Williams, J., in R. v Richardson, 2 F. & F., 346.

(5) Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society, 4 C P. D, 102

(6) Cunningham, Ev., 117.

(7) Thus, according to English law, on charges for uttering counterfeit coin, utterings after that for which the indictment is laid may be given in evidence; but the point is doubtful in the case of forged instruments; and in the case of false pretences it is still doubtful whether pretences made subsequently to the one charged are admissible; but it seems both on authority and on principle that they are not, as it is possible the guilty intention may not have arisen until after the acts upon which the charge is founded. Roscoe, Cr Ev, 94 time as not to afford a reasonably certain ground for inference, yet such remoteness will, as a rule, go to the weight of the proffered evidence only.(1) But evidence of intent to deceive will be inadmissible if it is unnecessary, as in an action for an injunction to restrain the use of a trade-mark where the defendant's goods were (on the face of them and having regard to the surrounding circumstances) plainly calculated to deceive. Here the defendant was taken to have intended the reasonable and natural consequences of his own acts (2) In the next case cited the appellant was convicted under s. 209, Indian Penal Code of having made false claims in three suits brought against certain persons. [illegible] ecuted and convicted [illegible] Held, that evidence [illegible] cified in the charges were properly admitted under this and the next section for the purpose of showing the ill-will or enmity of the appellant towards defendants, in those suits as a body, but the evidence relating to suits brought by other persons, when no case of a conspiracy between them and the appellant was alleged or established, was inadmissible (3)

Proof of mental and conditions.

The mental and physical conditions of a person may be proved either by that person speaking directly to his own feelings, motives, intentions, and the like, or by the evidence of another person detailing facts from which the given condition may be inferred · but such other person may not in general testify the state of mind of the first, as to which he can have no direct knowledge, and may only state those external and perceptible facts which may form the material of the Court's decision (4) So in a case for malicious prosecution, where the defendant himself was called and was asked in chief, " Had you any other object in view, in taking proceedings, than to further the ends of justice ? " The question was admitted (5) And in cases of obtaining goods on false pretences, the prosecutor is constantly asked, not only in cross-examination, but in chief, with what motive, or for what reasons, or on what impression he parted with the goods (6) So on a question of domicile, A may state what his intention was in residing in a particular place (7) In a suit by a house-agent against the former owner of a house in which the question was whether the former was entitled to receive from the latter a commission by reason of having effected the sale of the house " through his intervention," the Judge at the trial, in order to ascertain whether any acts of the plaintiff conduced to the completion of the sale, put the following question to the purchaser :—" Would you, if you had not gone to the plaintiff's office and got the card (a card to view the premises, with terms of sale written by the plaintiff's clerk on the back), have purchased the house ? " and, overruling an objection, received his answer, which was, " I should think not."(8) But it is obvious that in many cases such evidence may

---

(1) R. v Whiley, 2 Leach, C C, 983, cited in R v. Vajiram, 16 B, 431 (1892); "True it is that the more detached the previous utterings are in point of time, the less relation they will bear to the particular uttering stated in the indictment, and when they are so distant the only question that can be made is whether they are sufficient to warrant the jury in making any inference from them as to the guilty knowledge of the prisoners, but it would not render the evidence inadmissible," per Lord Ellenborough See also per Lord Blackburn in R v Francis, 12 Cox, C C, 612, 614

(2) Nunna Lal Serowjee v Jawala Prasad (1908) 35 C, 311, Saxlehmer v Appollinaris Co (1897), 1 Ch, 893.

(3) Raghunath Lal v Emp, 22 C W N, 494 s c, 19 Cr L J 776

(4) See Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 50, 51; Cunningham, Ev, 117, but as to the opinion of experts see s 45, post, v ante, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 581, 1962—1963.

(5) Hardwick v Coleman, 1 F & F, 531

(6) Hardwick v Coleman, 1 F & F., 531, note and see R v Hongill, 1 Dear, C C 315, R v Dale, 7 C & P, 352

(7) Wilson v Wilson, L R, 2 P & D, 435 444

(8) Mansell v Clements L R 9 C P, 139 In a suit by A against B for goods sold and delivered, in which B pleaded that the debt became due from him jointly with one C, who was still alive, and the not be reliable, and in other cases may not be had. The mental and physical conditions of a person must then be proved by the evidence of other persons who speak to the outward manifestations known to them, of states of mind and body. Such manifestations may be either by conduct, conversation or correspondence.(1) To prove mental and physical conditions "all contemporaneous manifestations of the given condition, whether by conduct, conversation, or correspondence, may be given in evidence as part of the res gestæ, it being for the Court or jury to consider whether they are real or feigned. Thus, the answers of patients to enquiries by medical men and others are evidence of their state of health, provided they are confined to contemporaneous symptoms, and are not in the nature of a narrative as to how, by whom, such symptoms were caused.(2) And if the condition of the patient before or after the time in issue be material, his declarations at such times as to his then present condition are equally receivable.(3) Not only may a party's own statements, but those made to him by third persons,(4) be proved for the purpose of showing his state of mind at a given time (5) Thus where the question was whether a person knew that he was insolvent at a certain time, his own statements implying consciousness of the fact as well as letters from third persons refusing to advance him money, were held to be admissible after the fact of his insolvency had been proved independently (6) In addition to evidence of contemporaneous manifestations of the given condition, collateral facts are admitted to show the existence of a particular state of mind Acts unconnected with the act in question are frequently receivable to prove psychological facts such as intent.(7) In order to show this, similar acts done by the party are relevant: but similar acts are not relevant to prove the existence of the particular fact in issue, being inadmissible for this purpose under the rule by which similar but unconnected acts are excluded (8) Thus when a man is on his trial for a specific crime, such as uttering a forged note or coin, or receiving an article of stolen property, the issue is whether he is guilty of that specific act. To admit therefore as evidence against him other instances of a similar nature clearly is to introduce collateral matter. This cannot be with the object of inducing the Court to infer that because the accused has committed a crime of a similar description on other occasions, he is guilty on the present; but to establish the criminal intent and to anticipate the defence that he acted innocently and without any guilty knowledge, or that he had no intention or motive to commit the act; and generally to interpret acts, which, without the admission of such collateral evidence, are ambiguous.(9) In other words, the existence replication traversed the joint liability:—Held, that with a view to prove B's sole liability, the witness who proved the giving of the order could not be asked the question "with whom did you deal"; but that the proper enquiry was as to the acts done: Bonfield v. Smith, 12 M. & W, 405.

---

(1) See Wright v. Tatham, 7 A & E, 324.

(2) Aveson v Kinnaid, 6 East, 188; R. v. Nicholas, 2 C. & K., 246; R v. Gloster, 16 Cox, 471, illusts. (l), (m).

(3) R v Johnson, 2 C. & K., 354.

(4) Vacher v Cocks, 1 M. & M., 353; Lewis v. Rogers, 1 C. M. & R., 48; Whart, § 254

(5) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 50; see Taylor, Ev., §§ 580—586.

(6) Ib, 39, Thomas v. Connell, 4 M. & W., 267; Vacher v. Cocks, 1 M. & M., 353; Cotton v. James, ib., 273.

(7) Best Ev, 255

(8) See notes to s. 8, ante; "When there is a question whether a person said or did something, the fact that he said or did something of the same sort on a different occasion may be proved if it shows the existence on the occasion in question of any intention, knowledge, good or bad faith, malice or other state of mind, or any state of body or bodily feeling, the existence of which is in issue or is deemed to be relevant to the issue; but such acts or words may not be proved merely in order to show that the person so acting or speaking was likely on the occasion in question to act in a similar manner" Steph. Dig, Art. 11, and see note VI, ib

(9) Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed, 79; Norton, Ev., 131; R. v. Cole, 1 Phillips, Ev. 508; R. v. Richardson, 2 F. & F., 343; Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society, of the fact in issue must be always independently established, and for this purpose evidence of similar and unconnected acts is inadmissible: but when once the fact in issue is so established, such similar acts may be given in evidence to prove the state of mind of the party by whom it was done (1) Thus in a trial for forgery, proof of similar transactions which are not the subject [illegible] he forgery(2); [illegible] that a certain [illegible] ve the state of mind of the accused.(3) Again, when several offences are so connected that proof of one can be arrived at through evidence going to prove the others, the evidence is not on that account excluded (4)

Scope of the Section.

In R. v. M. J Vyapoory Moodeliar(5), Garth, C. J, said: "Section 14 seems to me to apply to that class of cases which is discussed in Taylor on Evidence, 6th Edition, sections 318—322,—that is to say, cases where a particular act is more or less criminal or culpable, according to the state of mind or feeling of the person who does it, as, for instance, in actions of slander or false imprisonment, or malicious prosecution, where malice si one of the main ingredients in the wrong which is charged, evidence is admissible to show that the defendant was actuated by spite or enmity against the plaintiff, or, again, on a charge of uttering coin, evidence is admissible to show that the prisoner knew the coin to be counterfeit, because he had other similar coins in his possession, or had passed such coin before or after the particular occasion which formed the subject of the charge. The Illustrations to section 14 as well as the authorities cited in Taylor, show with sufficient clearness the sort of cases in which this evidence is receivable. But I think we must be very careful not to extend the operation of the section to other cases, where the question of guilt or innocence depends upon actual facts, and not upon the state of a man's mind or feeling [illegible] ft or any other crime on [illegible] imes on other occasions [illegible] of documents suspected to be forged, was held to be no evidence to prove that he had forged the particular documents with the forgery of which he was charged "(6) In R. v. Parbhudas(7), West, J., said: "The possession by an accused of several other articles deposed to have been stolen, would, no doubt, have some probative force on the issue of whether he had received the particular articles which he was charged with having dishonestly received, and the receipt or possession of which he denied altogether, yet in the first illustration to section 14, it is set forth as) a preliminary to the admission of testimony as to the other articles that 'it is proved that he was in possession of (the) particular stolen article

4 C. P D, 106 (fraud); R v Balls, L R., 1 C C., 328, and cases cited, post "There is no principle of law which prevents that being put in evidence which might otherwise be so, merely because it discloses other indictable offences," per Williams, J, in R v. Richardson, supra, 346, Roscoe, Cr Ev., 85, Makin v Attorney-General for New South Wales, L. R, 1894, App Cas, 65

(1) R v Parbhudas, post, R v Vajiram, post, R v M. J Vyapoory Moodeliar, post

(2) Krishna Govinda Pal v Emperor, 43 C, 788 (1915).

(3) Emperor v Yakub Ali 39 A, 178 (1917), and see Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor, 42 C, 957 (1915) Baharuddin v Emperor, 18 C L J, 578 (1913), Girdhari Lal v Emperor, 11 Cr L J, 428 (1909).

(4) R v Parbhudas, 11 Bom H C R, 90, 93 (1894), and R v. Ellis, 6 B & C, 145, cited in R v Parbhudas, supra, and R v Vajiram, 16 B, 304 (1892).

(5) 6 C, 645, 659 (1881)

(6) R v Parbhudas, supra, R v Nur Mahomed, 8 B, 223, 225 (1883), in which the former case was distinguished and in which it was held that evidence of the possession and attempted disposal of coins of an unusual kind is relevant on a charge of uttering such coins soon afterwards when the factum of uttering is denied.

(7) 11 Bom H C R 90 91 (1874) "A fully argued case where Mr. Justice West gives a full and lucid exposition of s 14 of the Indian Evidence Act," per Jardine, J., in R v Fakirappa, 15 B., 502 (1890)

The receipt and possession are not allowed to be proved by other apparently similar instances, only the gu[illegible] (o) to the same section makes [illegible] person murdered, evidence of [illegible] caused the death; yet it is certain that in the issue of whether A actually shot B or not, the fact that he had previously shot at him, would have some probative force; so, too, would proof of a general malignity of disposition by evidence that 'A was in the habit of shooting at people, with intent to murder them,' yet this evidence is excluded, even as proof of A's intention, either as too remotely connected with the particular intention in issue, or as raising collateral questions, which could not properly be resolved in the case."(1) In the same case Melville, J., said(2): "It appears to me that the Indian Evidence Act does not go beyond the English Law." As to the latter Lord Herschell said(3): "The mere fact that th[illegible] commission of other crimes does not rend[illegible] issue before the jury, and it may be so [illegible] whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental or to rebut a defence which would otherwise be open to the accused' In R. v Bond it was held that where the defence to a criminal charge is that the acts alleged to constitute the crime were done by the accused for an innocent purpose, evidence that the accused did the same acts for an improper purpose on another occasion, is admissible as evidence negativing the defence, although it is evidence which proves the commission of another offence by the accused. In this case a person who was qualified to be and had acted as a surgeon was indicted for procuring a miscarriage. The evidence was that he had used certain instruments and the defence was that he was performing a lawful operation. It was proved that he had ceased to practise as a surgeon; and evidence was tendered by the prosecution that he had on a previous occasion used the same instruments in the same manner on another person with the avowed intention of procuring a miscarriage. This evidence was held admissible by the Court of Crown Cases Reserved;—Lord Alverstone, C. J., and Ridley, J., dissenting on the grounds that primâ facie there was no necessary connection between the act charged on the indictment and the other act alleged in the evidence, and that evidence of prior acts of a similar kind is not admissible when the only question is the purpose for which an act was done.(4) In a recent case in the Allahabad High Court, where the accused was charged with cheating, it was held that evidence of his having cheated others not named in the charge was inadmissible because this section only applies to cases where a particular act is more or less culpable according to the state of mind of the accused.(5) And in the Calcutta High Court it has been recently held that where evidence was tendered of false representations of the same character as the one charged and made to persons similarly situated, such evidence was admissible to prove dishonest intent in reference to the particular transaction charged, on the ground that section 15 is an application of the general rule laid down in this section, and that the words of this section and of Illustrations (o) of this section and (a) of section 15 show that it is not necessary that all the acts should form part of one transaction but only that they should form part of a series of similar occurrences.(6) The Illustrations (e), (i) and (j) are on the point of

(1) R v Parbhudas, supra.

(2) Ib, at p. 97.

(3) Makin v. Attorney-General of New South Wales (1894), A. C, 57; cited in R. v. Wyatt (1904), A. C., 57.

(4) R. v Bond, C C. R. (1906), 21 Cox, p. 252.

(5) R. v. Abdul Wahid Khan, 34 A., 94; following R. v. Vyapoory Moodeliar (1881), 6 C, 655.

(6) R v Devendra Prosad, A C. (1909), 36 C. 573, distinguishing R v. Holt (1860), Bell G. C. 280; and Makin v. Attorney-General for N. S. W. (1894), A. C, 57; R. v Bond (1906), 2 K B., 389; R v. Rhodes (1899), 1 Q B, 77; R v Ollis (1900), 2 Q B, 758.

ledge: (f), (g) and (h) of good faith (n) l (m) of mental and bodily feeling: (n),

Intention. The question of intention is sufficiently illustrated by the Illustrations (e), (i) and (j) to the present section, by the cases illustrating guilty knowledge, and by the next section; and is further considered in the notes to the last-mentioned section and in the preceding and succeeding paragraphs.(3) "A man is not excused from crimes by reason of his drunkenness, but although you cannot take drunkenness as any excuse for crime, yet when the crime is such that the intention of the party committing it is one of its constituent elements, you may look at the fact that a man was in drink in considering whether he formed the intention necessary to constitute the crime."(4) In the recent case of R v Meade the rule on this point was stated by the English Court of Criminal Appeal as follows: "A man is taken to intend the natural consequences of his acts This presumption may be rebutted in the case of a sober man in many ways It may be rebutted in the case of a man who is drunk by showing his mind to have been so affected by the drink he had taken that he was incapable of knowing that what he was doing was dangerous, i e, likely to inflict serious injury. If this be proved, the presumption that he intended to do grievous bodily harm is rebutted"(5) When a person does an act with some intention other than that which the character and circumstances of the act suggest, the burden of proving that intention is upon him (6) The question of intention is to be inferred from legal evidence of facts, and not from antecedent declarations by the accused himself, upon occasions distinct from and antecedent to the transaction (7) In a recent case in the Madras High Court it was said that a man must be held to intend the natural and ordinary consequences of his acts, irrespective of his object in such acts, if at the time he knew what the natural and ordinary consequences would be; and that if he does an act which is primâ facie illegal, the fact that he did it with some other object, will not make it legal unless that object would, in the circumstances, make it legal (8) In this case, it was held that where a man with the object of establishing a fraudulent title to a house, broke into it in its owner's absence and took forcible possession, he was rightly convicted irrespective of that object. And in a recent case in the Allahabad High Court where accused had been found in complainant's house at 2 A M and had proffered no explanation at the time, but had afterwards stated (without being able to prove) that he had gone there to have illicit intercourse with a widow, it was held that his presence of guilty intent (9) But on a subse Court where accused was able to pr held that he was guilty of no offence (10)

Knowledge and notice. Facts which go to prove guilty knowledge may be proved. In R v Whiley(11), Lord Ellenborough, in deciding that to prove the guilty knowledge of an utterer of a forged bank-note, evidence may be given of his having previously uttered other forged notes knowing them to be forged, observed that

(1) As to whether an act was accidental or intentional, v s 15, post

(2) See Norton Ev, 131

(3) See cases cited in first paragraph of Commentary, ante.

(4) R v Doherty 16 Cox, 306 per Stephen, J, R v Ram Sahoy, W R, Gap No Cr, 24 (1864)

(5) R v Meade C C A (1909) 1 K B 895

(6) S 106 post Illust (a) R v Kanhai, 35 A, 329 (1913), R v Subbappa Chunnappa 15 B, 808 (1912), R v Hammam, 35 A, 560 (1913)

(7) R v Petcherini 7 Cox C C 79, 83 per Greene B, as to declarations accompanying an act, s 6 and s 8 ante and notes thereto

(8) Sellamuthu Servaigaran v Pallamuthu Karuppan 35 M 1186 (1912) per Benson C J (Sankaran Nair J diss)

(9) R v Malik 37 A 395 (1915)

(10) R v Ghaya Bhar 38 A 517 (1916)

(11) 2 Leach C C 983 cited as R v Wylie, 1 B & P (N R), 92

"without the reception of other evidence than that which the mere circumstances of the transaction itself could furnish, it would be impossible to ascertain whether they uttered it with a guilty knowledge of its having been forged or whether it was uttered under circumstances which showed their minds to be free from guilt." In the case of R. v. Tattersall mentioned by Lord Ellenborough in R. v Whiley, the question reserved by Chambre, J., was "whether the prisoner had not furnished pregnant evidence, and whether the jury, from nfer his knowledge in another?" The were at liberty to make such an infer-een acted on are mostly common cases of uttering forged documents or base coins, but they are not confined to those cases"(1) Passing from the case of guilty knowledge, knowledge may be inferred from the fact that a party had reasonable means of knowledge, i.e., possession of documents containing the information, especially if he has answered, or otherwise acted upon, them; or from the fact that such documents, properly addressed, have been delivered at, or posted to, his residence.(2) So execution of a document, e g., of a deed or a will, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, implies knowledge of its contents(3); though mere attestation necessarily does not.(4) Access to documents may also sometimes raise a presumption of knowledge.(5) But there is no presumption of law that a director knows the contents of the books of a company.(6) And shareholders are not, as between themselves and their directors, supposed to know all that is in the company's books.(7) The publication of a fact in a Gazette or newspaper is receivable to fix a party with notice, though (unless the case is governed by Statute)

(1) R. v Francis, 12 Cox, 612, 616, per Lord Coleridge, C J, s c, L. R., 2 C C R, 128 In this case the prisoner was indicted for endeavouring to obtain an advance from a pawn-broker upon a ring by the false pretence that it was a diamond ring, evidence was held to have been properly admitted to show that two days before the transaction in question the prisoner had obtained an advance from a pawn-broker upon a chain which he represented to be a gold chain but which was not so, see R v. Vajiram, supra, 443, R v Cooper, 1 Q. B D, 19; R. v Foster, Dear, 456, R v Weeks, L & C., 18, Taylor, Ev., § 345, as to guilty knowledge, see Lolit Mohun v R, 22 C, 313, 322 (1894), The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Baistobi, 22 C, 168, 169 (1894), Re Meer Yar Ali, 13 W. R., Cr, 70, 71 (1870), [it is an error in law to consider the fact of the prisoner leaving his defence to his counsel as in any way whatever indicating any guilty knowledge]. R v Nobokristo Ghose, 8 W R, Cr, 87, 89 (1867), R v Shuruffoodden, 13 W. R, 26 (1870), R v Abaji Ramchandra, 15 B, 89 (1890), Re Ramjoy Kurmokar, 25 W. R., Cr., 10, 13 (1876)

(2) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 130; Vacher v Cocks, 1 M & M., 353, Cotton v. James, ib., 275, as to documents found after the arrest of a prisoner, v. s. 8, ante, or intercepted in the post, R. v Cooper, 1 Q B. D, 15 [when a letter is put in course of transmission the Postmaster-General holds it as the agent of the receiver, ib, 22].

(3) In re Cooper, 20 Ch. D., 611; Taylor, Ev, §§ 150, 160.

(4) Harding v Crethorne, 1 Esp, 58, v. s 8, ante, it does not necessarily follow that a witness is aware of the contents of the deed of which he attests the execution Salamat Ali v Budh Singh, 1 A., 306, 307 (1876) See Rajlakhi v. Gokul Chandra, 3 B L R., P. C, 57, 63 (1869); Ramchunder v Hari Das, 9 C., 463 (1882); and notes to s 115, post; Banga Chandra Dhur Biswas v Jagat Kishore, P. C, 44 C, 186 (1917); Lakhpati v. Rambodh Singh, 37 A, 350 (1915), but see Kandasami Pillai v Nagalinga Pillai, 36 M, 565 (1913), practice in Madras

(5) E g, in the case of books kept between partners, master and servant, etc, see s. 8, ante, p 137, Lindley, Partnership, 536, Taylor, Ev, § 812; see Mackintosh v Marshall, 11 M. & W., 116 [The shipping list at Lloyds stating the time of a vessel's sailing is primâ facie evidence against an underwriter as to what it contains, as the underwriter must be presumed to have a knowledge of its contents from having access to it in the course of his business]

(6) Hallmark's case, L R, 9 Ch D. 329, per Bramwell, J., ib, 333: "I will only add that it seems to me in general extremely objectionable to imply that a man had knowledge of facts contrary to the real truth This ought only to be done where there is some duty on the part of the man to inform himself of the facts"

(7) Lindley, Company Law, 6th Ed, 432, 433, and cases there cited it is always advisable, and sometimes necessary, to furnish evidence that the party to be affected has probably read the paper.(1) The notoriety of a fact in a party's calling or vicinity may also in some cases support an inference of knowledge (2) When the existence of a state of mind is in question, all facts from which it may be properly inferred are relevant. And so when the question was whether A, at the time of making a contract with B, knew that the latter was insane: it was held that the conduct of B, both before and after the transaction, was admissible in evidence to show that his malady was of such a character as would make itself apparent to A at the time he was dealing with him.(3) See also Illustrations (a), (b), (c) and (d) to the section. "Notice" has also been made the subject of substantive law and of statutory definition in the Transfer of Property and Indian Trusts Acts.(4) This definition codifies the law as to notice which existed before these Acts were passed.(5) Notice to an agent is notice to the principal (6) And notice to one of several trustees is notice to all (7) Constructive notice is of two kinds: there is the notice through an agent, which Lord Chelmsford has called "imputed notice", the other is that which he thought should more properly be called "constructive notice," and means that kind of notice which the Courts have raised against a person from his wilfully abstaining from making enquiries, or inspecting documents.(8) In such cases the Courts are said to raise a presumption of knowledge which is not allowed to be rebutted, and whatever is sufficient to put a person of ordinary prudence on enquiry is constructive notice of all to which that enquiry would lead (9) In a case in the Calcutta High Court it was said that whatever puts a person on enquiry amounts to notice when such enquiry becomes a duty and would, in the exercise of ordinary intelligence, lead to a knowledge of the facts and that constructive notice will be imputed to one who designedly refrains from enquiry for the purpose of avoiding notice (10) So notice of a deed or a trust, is notice

---

(1) See notes to s 67, post Taylor Ev, §§ 1665, 1666, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 131, Steph Dig., Art 11, illust (n), where the question was whether A, the captain of a ship, knew that a port was blockaded it was held that the fact that the blockade was notified in the Gazette was relevant, Harratt v Wise, 9 B & C, 712

(2) See illust (f), ante and note, though mere rumour or reputation is in admissible, R v Gunnel, 16 Cox, 154, Greenslade v Dare, 20 Beav, 284 [Evidence of the general reputation of the insanity of a person, in the neighbourhood in which he resided is admissible to prove that a person was cognisant of that fact]

(3) Beavan v McDonnell 10 Ex 184, Lovat v Tribe, 3 F & F, 9, but see also Greenslade v Dare, ante

(4) S 3, Act IV of 1882, amended by Act III of 1885 (Transfer of Property) s 3, Act II of 1882 (Indian Trusts) See cases collected in Shephard and Brown's Commentaries on the Transfer of Property Act

(5) Churaman v Balli 9 A, 599

(6) Act IX of 1872 (Contract) s 229 cf the English Conveyance Act 1882 45 & 46 Vic, c 39; as to notice of dishonour of negotiable instruments see Act VI of 1901 (Negotiable Instruments amended by subsequent Acts See Pearson's Law of Agency in British India, 430

(7) Godefroi on Trusts 677

(8) Kettlewell v Watson, L R, 21 Ch D, 685, 724, per Fry, J a person refusing a registered letter sent by post cannot afterwards plead ignorance of its contents; Loot Ali v Peary Mohun, 16 W R, 223 (1871)

(9) See Phipson Ev, 5th Ed, 131, 132; Jones v Smith, 1 Hare, 43, Shephard and Brown supra 14 as to whether registration operates as constructive notice, ib, 21 and Shan Mull v Madras Building Co 15 M 268 277 (1891), Balmakundas v. Moti Narayan, 8 B, 444 (1891), Joshua v Alliance Bank 22 C 185 (1894) Brett's L C in Eq 2nd Ed, 260 Chitty, Eq Index 4th Ed 'Notice' and as to notice to agent trustee counsel, partner, solicitor v ib and ante For a purchaser to be affected with constructive notice through his solicitor the latter himself must have actual notice, Greender Chunder v Mackintosh 4 C 897 (1879), and notice acquired only before the employment as solicitor began is not sufficient Chabildas Tallu Bhai v Dayal Mowji P C (1907) 31 B 566 of its terms.(1) And the acceptance of a contract in a common form without objection is constructive notice of its contents.(2) So when title-deeds were deposited by way of equitable mortgage with a Bank which omitted to investigate the title, the Bank was held to have constructive notice of a charge which they might have discovered (3) And when a share of a trust-fund was assigned and the trustees did not enquire into the title of the alleged assignee they were held to have constructive notice of it.(4) But a Company to whom a vessel is transferred cannot be fixed with constructive notice of the possible liability of the vendors for the unpaid costs of their solicitors even though the actual vendor and the promoter of the company were one and the same person.(5) Where the sellers at an auction-sale so conducted themselves with reference to the sale that bidders were induced to leave and the purchaser was present and had notice of these circumstances, it was held that he was affected with notice of the impropriety of the sale.(6)

(10) Radha Madhab Paikara v Kalpataru Ray, 17 C L J., 209 (1913).

Good and bad faith: fraud, malice

"It is a truth confirmed by all experience that in the great majority of cases fraud is not capable of being established by positive and express proofs. It is by its very nature secret in its movements, and if those whose duty it is to investigate questions of fraud are to insist upon direct proof in every case the ends of justice would be constantly, if not invariably, defeated. We do not mean to say that fraud can be established by any less proof, or by any different kind of proof, from what is required to establish any other disputed question of fact, or that circumstances of mere suspicion which lead to no certain result should be taken as sufficient proof of fraud, or that fraud should be presumed against anybody in any case ; but what we mean to say is that, in the generality of cases, circumstantial evidence is our only resource in dealing with questions of fraud, and if this evidence is sufficient to overcome the natural presumption of honesty and fair dealing and to satisfy a reasonable mind of the existence of fraud by raising a counter presumption, there is no reason whatever why we should not act upon it."(7) act may generally be inferred from any facts v In such cases the information (whether true often be material. Where in answer to a charge of theft the accused alleges a claim to the property, the Court should not convict him of theft if the claim was made in good faith (even if it proves to be unfounded) and this should be determined by considering all the circumstances.(9) Although the opinions and acts of other parties are not generally admissible, yet when opinions and acts lead to the formation of a belief in another man, and that belief is the fact in issue, those opinions and acts acquire a legal evidentiary relation and become admissible. So to show the bonâ fides of a party's belief as to any matter, it is admissible to show the state of his knowledge and that he had reasonable grounds for such belief.(10)

---

(1) Patman v. Harland, 17 Ch D, 353; Brett's L. C in Eq, 260, and cases there cited; Rajaram v. Krishnasami, 16 M., 301 (1892)

(2) Watkins v. Rymill, 10 Q. B. D, 178.

(3) Bank of Bombay v. Suleman Somji, P. C. (1908), 33 B, 1; following In re Oucale's Estate (1886), Ir. L. R, 17 Ch. D, 361.

(4) Davis v. Hutchings (1907), 1 Ch, 356, following Jones v. Smith (1841), 1 Hare, 43 (1843), 1 Ph, 244

(5) The Birnam Wood, C. A. (1907), R. 1.

(6) Chabildas Lallubhai v. Dayal Mowji, P. C. (1907), 31 B, 566.

(7) Per Dwarkanath Mitter, J., in Mothoora Pandey v. Ram Ruchya, 11 W. R, 482, 483 (1869); s. c., 3 B. L R (A. C), 108; but fraud and dishonesty are not to be assumed upon conjecture, however probable: Sheikh Imdad Ali v. Mussummat Kootby, 6 W. R. (P. C.), 24 (1842), s. c, 3 Moo. I. A., 1: as to secrecy as evidence of fraud, see Joshua v. Alliance Bank of Simla, 22 C, 185 (1894); see cases cited in notes to ss. 102, 111, post.

(8) Whart, § 35, cited in Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 134

(9) Arfan Ali v Emperor, 44 C, 66 (1917).

(10) Derry v. Peck, 14 App Cas, 337: "A man's own assertion of what he believed or recollection of what he thinks was actuated by dishonest motives.(1) And the defendant may show representations made by him to others with the view of proving his own bonâ fides (2) Where A and B were charged with conspiring to defraud C by representing that A owned certain property, and B's defence was that he honestly believed the representation, being himself the dupe of A; it was held that letters between A and B (not communicated to C) prior to the completion of the transaction, regarding it, were admissible in B's favour.(3) See further as to the question of good faith Illusts. (f), (g), and (h), ante. "Malice in doing an act has generally to be proved by the previous or subsequent conduct(4) and relations of the parties, e g, previous enmity, threats, quarrels and violence; while in rebuttal, previous expressions of good-will and acts of kindness may be shown."(5) Malice may even be implied from the manner in which an action is conducted in which it is in issue; and in cases of libel the mode of publication, or the repetition of the libel, is material to show the defendant's animus.(6) "On questions involving negligence and other qualities of conduct, when the criterion to be adopted is not clear, the acts or precautions proper to be taken under the circumstances, or even the general practice of the community on the subject, are admissible as affording a standard by which the conduct in question may be gauged."(7) In a suit in which the question was whether the pupils at a certain school were properly treated, evidence was held to be admissible of the general treatment of boys at schools of the same class, as affording a criterion of what the treatment should have been at the school in question (8) As to state of body and bodily feeling, see Illusts. (l) and (m), and ante, s. 14.

Explanations. The explanations to the section are illustrated by the Illustrations (n), (o), (p) and (q) appended to it. The rejection of the general facts rest on the ground that the collateral matter is too remote, if, indeed, there is any connection with the factum probandum (9) The meaning of the first Explanation is "that the state of mind to be proved must be not merely a general tendency or disposition, towards conduct of a similar description to that in question,

(1) Huntingford v. Massey, 1 F. & F, 690, Taylor, Ev, § 340

(2) Shrewsbury v Blount, 2 M & Gr, 475

(3) R v Whitehead, 1 Dowl & Ry., 61

(4) Thus in Taylor v Williams, 2 B. & Ad, 845; the question being whether A acted maliciously in prosecuting B,—an affidavit filed by the clerk to A's solicitor, and used for the purpose of preventing persons becoming bail for B when he was arrested, was held admissible as showing A's malice

(5) For meaning of malice and fair comment and for tests of good faith, see R v Abdool Wadood Ahmed (1907), 31 B, 293

(6) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 135, 136; Taylor, Ev, §§ 340-347. See Illust. (e), ante, as to bonâ fides, see R v. Labouchere, 14 Cox, 419; Scott v. Sampson, 8 Q. B D, 491

(7) Ib, citing Ball, Leading Cases on Tort, 224—227; East, P. C, 263, 264; Whart, Negligence, s 46, and cases, post. See also Bevan's Principles of the Law of Negligence (1889), Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 736, et seq, and cases there cited, and Best, Ev, p 86. "when the facts are settled the existence of negligence is a question of law though reference is thereby implied to a standard of reasonable care and common experience with which the judge must often be necessarily unacquainted." In the case of a railway accident Willes, J., said: "I go further and say that the plaintiff should also show with reasonable certainty what particular precaution should have been taken, Daniel v Metropolitan Ry. Co, L R, 3 C P, 216, 222 In some cases, however, negligence will be presumed from the mere happening of an accident; see Taylor, Ev, § 188

(8) Boldron v Widows, 1 C. & P., 65; but evidence is not admissible of the comparative treatment of boys at any other particular school, ib.

(9) Norton, Ev, 139; see remarks of Willes, J, in Hollingham v. Head, 27 L. J. C. P., 241; "To admit such speculative evidence would, I think, be fraught with great danger. If such evidence were held admissible, it would be difficult to say in an action of an assault, that the plaintiff might not give evidence of former assaults committed by the defendant upon other persons of a particular class for the purpose of showing that he was a quarrelsome individual, and therefore that it was highly probable that the particular charge of assault was well founded. The extent to which this sort of thing might be carried is inconceivable."

weight than evidence of isolated thefts.(1) In a trial for an offence of keeping a common gaming house under the fourth section of the Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887, Bom.), evidence that the accused had been previously convicted of the same offence is admissible to show guilty knowledge or intention.(2) In a case in the Calcutta High Court it was held that evidence of association with men accused in a different trial was irrelevant under this section because it was not "in reference to the particular matter and also under the next section because it did not form part of a series of similar occurrences."(3)

In several cases the question of evidence of intention in a charge of sedition has been discussed [illegible] series of speeches [illegible] it was held that [illegible] ction as evidence of the intention of the speaker in respect of the speeches which formed the subject of the charge.(4) In another case it was held that seditious articles published in the same newspaper, but not forming part of the subject of the charge on which the prisoner was then being tried, were admissible to show the intention of the persons who printed or published the articles which were the subject of the charge, since under Act XXV of 1865, section 7 (which throws the onus on the accused), the printer or publisher is responsible for everything that appears in the newspaper unless he can prove absence in good faith, without knowledge that during his absence seditious matter would be published.(5) In another case it was held that articles not forming part of the subject of the charge and appearing in other issues of the newspaper were [illegible] proof of his [illegible] ould be amen- [illegible] tred, disaffec- [illegible] be amenable on proof that such feelings were actually excited by it or that he intended them to be so(6) and it has also been held that under the Newspapers (Incitement and Abetment) Act VII of 1908, s. 3, no question of intention arises.(7)

Facts bearing on question whether act was accidental or intentional.

15. When there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional or done with a particular knowledge or intention, the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, is relevant.

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of burning down his house in order to obtain money for which it is insured.

The facts that A lived in several houses successively, each of which he insured, in each of which a fire occurred, and after each of which fires A received payment

---

(1) Bhona v. R. (1911), 38 C., 408

(2) R. v. Alloomiya Hassan, 5 Bom. L R, 805 (1903), Jacob, J, diss s. c, 28 B, 129 (1903).

(3) Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, 42 C., 957 (1915).

(4) Chidambaran Pillai v. R. (1908), 32 M. 3, and see R v. Jogendra Chundra Bose (1892), 19 C, 35; Apurba Krishna Bose v. R, 35 C., 141; R. v. Bal Gangadhar Tilak (1898), 22 B, 112; R v. Amba Prosad (1898), 20 A, 55; R. v. Bond (1906), 2 K. B, 389.

(5) R. v. Phanindra Nath Mitter (1908), 35 C., 945, dissenting from R. v. Bal Gangadhar Tilak (1897), 22 B, 112.

(6) Manomohan Ghose v. R. (1910), 38 C, 253; R. v Amba Prosad (1897), 20 A, 55.

(7) Girija Sundar Chuckerbutty v. R, 36 C, 405.

(8) The words in brackets were added by s 2, Act III of 1891, and appear to have been overlooked in R. v. Alloomiya Hassan, 5 Bom. L R, 805 (1903); s c, 28 B., 129, where Jacob, J., states that this section invites consideration of the question of intention only as opposed to accident. See also per Chaudhuri, J., in Emperor v. Panchu Das, 47 C, 671, F. B.

from a different Insurance Office, are relevant, as tending to show that the fires were not accidental.(1)

(b) A is employed to receive money from the debtors of B. It is A's duty to make entries in a book showing the amounts received by him. He makes an entry showing that on a particular occasion he received less than he really did receive. The question is, whether this false entry was accidental or intentional.

The facts that other entries made by A in the same book are false, and that the false entry in each case was in favour of A, are relevant (2)

(c) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to B a counterfeit rupee. The question is, whether delivery of the rupee was accidental.

The facts that, soon before or soon after the delivery, to B, A delivered counterfeit rupees to C, D and E, are relevant, as showing that the delivery to B was not accidental.(3)

Principle.—The facts are admitted as tending to show system and therefore intention; this section is therefore an application of the rule laid down in the preceding one (4) It will always be a matter of discretion, whether there is a sufficient and reasonable connection between the fact to be proved and the evidentiary fact. If there is no common link they cannot form a series, and this is the gist of the section.(5)

s. 14 (Facts relevant to show knowledge or intention.) s. 3 ("Relevant.")

Steph Dig, Art. 12; Norton, Ev., 140; Cunningham, Ev., 120; Taylor, Ev., § 323, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 157; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 67.

COMMENTARY.

So where the question was whether Z murdered A (her husband) by poison in September 1818, the facts that B, C and D (Z's three sons), had the same poison administered to them in December 1818, March 1819, and April 1819, and that the meals of all four were prepared by Z, were held to be relevant to show that such administration was intentional and not accidental, though Z was indicted separately for murdering A, B and C, and attempting to murder D.(6) This case and the case of R. v. Garner (infra) were discussed in R. v. Neil Cream(7) when Hawkins, J., admitted evidence of subsequent administrations of strychnine by the prisoner to persons other than and unconnected with the woman of whose murder the prisoner was then convicted. Where A promised to lend money to B on the security of a policy of insurance, which B agreed to effect in an Insurance Company of his (A's) choosing, and B paid the first premium to the company, but A refused to lend the money except upon terms which he intended B to reject, and which B rejected accordingly, it was held that the fact that A and the Insurance Company had been engaged in similar Accident or system.

(1) This illustration is founded on the case of R. v. Gray, 4 F. & F., 1102, the authority of which is doubted in Steph. Dig., Art. 12, note, and see Norton, Ev., 140, 141; but see contra R. v Vajiram, 16 B., 433; v. also R. v. Debendra Prosad, A. C. (1909), 36 C., 573.

(2) Founded on R. v. Richardson, 2 F. & F., 343; Steph. Dig., Art. 12, illust. (b).

(3) This illustration is very like illust. (b) to s. 14. The one speaks of possessing, the other of passing, other false coins. The presumption is the same; Norton, Ev., 140.

(4) See Steph. Dig., Art 12; and Cunningham, Ev., 120, and R. v. Debendra Prosad (supra).

(5) Norton, Ev., 140.

(6) R. v. Geering, 18 L. J. M. C., 215, cited in R. v. Richardson, 2 F. & F., 346; R. v. Francis, 12 Cox, C. C., 615; Hales v. Albion Life Assurance Society, 4 C. P. D., 101, 102; see R. v. Garner, 3 F. & F., 681; R. v. Cotton, 12 Cox, 400; R. v. Heeson, 14 Cox, 40; R. v. Roden, 12 Cox, 630; see Taylor, Ev., § 328 and note, and Steph. Dig., Art. 12, illust. (c) and note.

(7) Cited in Steph. Dig., p. 20, note; 116 C. C. C., Sess. Pa., 1451.

transactions was relevant to the question whether the receipt of the money by the company was fraudulent.(1) Where a prisoner was charged with the murder of her child by poison, and the defence was that its death resulted from an accidental taking of such poison, evidence to prove that two other children of hers and a lodger in her house had died previous to the present charge from the same poison was held to be admissible.(2) Upon the trial of a prisoner for the murder of her infant by suffocation in bed, held that evidence tendered to prove the previous death of her other children at early ages was admissible, although such evidence did not show the causes from which these children died.(3) Upon the trial of an indictment for using a certain instrument with intent to procure a miscarriage, it is relevant, in order to prove the intent, to show that at other times, both before and after the offence charged, the prisoner had caused miscarriages by similar means (4) In a trial for forgery evidence of similar transactions not included in the charge is relevant as proof of intention though not as proof of the forgery.(5) Under an indictment for arson, where the prisoner was charged with wilfully setting fire to her master's house :—Held that two previous and abortive attempts to set fire to different portions of the same premises were admissible, though there was no evidence to connect the prisoner with either of them.(6) Where the plaintiff in an action of negligence alleged that he had contracted an infectious disease through the negligence of the defendant, a barber, in using razors and other appliances in a dirty and insanitary condition, and in support of his case he tendered the evidence of two witnesses who deposed that they had contracted a similar disease in the defendant's shop .—Held that as the negligence alleged was not an isolated act or omission, but was a dangerous practice carried on by the defendant, the evidence of those witnesses was admissible.(7) Facts to establish that A and B have " hunted in couples " and in several instances, taken part in thefts from rich prostitutes, that is, a series of incidents from 1914 to 1918, to establish that they have lived together and had transactions together, that a system had been followed by them, that they used to go about together under different names, and had associated together with an evil motive, namely, the commission of thefts from rich prostitutes were sought to be given in evidence. Held (Chaudhuri, J., dissenting) that such evidence was not admissible either under s. 14 or under s. 15 of the Evidence Act. The gist of this section is that unless there is sufficient and reasonable connection between the fact to be proved and the evidentiary fact, that is, unless there is in substance some common link, they cannot form a series. Evidence of general disposition, habit and tendencies is not revelant. Evidence of collateral offence cannot be received as substantive evidence of the offence on trial though under s. 14, evidence may [illegible] re the factum of such intention on lil [illegible] not merely the weight of the evide [illegible] conduct as would authorise a reasonable inference of a systematic pursuit of the same criminal object. Per

(1) Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society, L R, 4 C. P. D, 94; Steph Dig, Art. 12, illust. (d). See R. v. Wyatt, 1904, 1 K. B, 188, cited in notes to last section

(2) R. v. Cotton, 12 Cox., 400; R. v. Weering, supra, followed

(3) R. v. Roden, 12 Cox, 630, following R. v Cotton, supra; it was objected by the counsel for the prisoner, that the evidence admitted in R. v. Cotton, pointed directly to prior acts of poisoning, but in this case it was not proposed to prove that the four children died from other than natural causes: per Lush, J.: The value of the evidence cannot affect its admissibility "The principle of R. v. Cotton applies."

(4) R v. Dale, 16 Co., 703; R. v. Bond, C. C R, 1906, 21 Cox, 256, in which Lord Alverstone, C. J., said: "If R v Dale is to be construed to authorize the admissibility of evidence of prior acts of a similar kind where the act is admitted and the only question is the purpose for which it was done, it goes too far."

(5) Krishna Govinda Pal v. Emperor, 43 C, 783 (1915).

(6) R. v. Bailey, 2 Cox, C. C., 311.

(7) Hales v. Kerr (1908), 2 K. B., 601. 'Times' L. R., V. 24, p. 779.

Chaudhuri, J.—It is wrong to say that this section only deals with intention as opposed to accident. Evidence tending to show that the accused have been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment is not admissible, unless upon the issue whether the acts charged against the accused [illegible]

In general, whenever it is necessary to rebut, even by anticipation, the defence of accident, mistake or other innocent condition of mind, evidence may be given to prove that the accused has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific kind and proximate in time to the conduct in question (2)

16. When there is a question whether a particular act was done, the existence of any course of business, according to which it naturally would have been done, is a relevant fact. Existence of course of business when relevant.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether a particular letter was despatched.

The fact that it was the ordinary course of business for all letters put in a certain place to be carried to the post, and that that particular letter was put in that place, are relevant.(3)

(b) The question is, whether a particular letter reached A

The facts that it was posted in due course, and was not returned through the Dead-letter Office, are relevant.(4)

Principle.—Evidence of the existence of the course of business is relevant as laying a foundation for the presumption which the Court may raise from the course of business when proved. The Court may then presume that the common course of business has been followed in the particular case(5) ; and this presumption is but an application of the general maxim omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta, and proceeds on the well-recognised fact that the conduct of men in [illegible]

(1) Emperor v. Panchu, 47 C., 671 (F B.); s. c., 24 C. W. N., 501; 31 C. L. J., 402.

(2) Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, 42 C., 957 (1915), in which it was said that R v. Holt, 8 Cox 44 (1860), is no longer of authority

(3) Hetherington v. Kemp, 4 Camp., 193; Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B., 65, 66 (1897), and see Skilbeck v. Garbett, 7 Q. B., 846, Trotter v. Maclean, L. R., 13 Ch. D., 574, Ward v. Lord Londesborough, 12 C. B., 252; Steph Dig., Art. 13, illust. (b); but the course of business may be contradicted, Stocken v. Collin, 7 M. & W., 515; see also ss 50 and 51 of the Repealed Act II of 1855

(4) Warren v. Warren, 1 C. M. & R., 250, 3 Esp., 54; 3 C. & P., 250; and see Saunderson v. Judge, 2 H. L., 500; Woodcock v. Houldsworth, 16 M. & W., 124; Abbey v. Hill, 5 Bing., 299; Plume's case, R. & R., 264; Kent v. Lowen, 1 Camp., 178, Steph. Dig., Art. 13, illust. (c); see Jogendro Chundro Chunder v. Dwarka Nath, 15 C., 681, 683 (1888).

(5) S. 114, illust. (f), post; the matter dealt with by this section is treated by English text-writers under the subject of presumption.—The ordinary course of business is proved and the Court is asked to presume that, on the particular occasion in question, there was no departure from the ordinary and general rule; see authorities cited, supra, and Field Ev., 122; Dwarka Doss v. Baboo Jankee, 6 M. I. A., 93 ["It is reasonable to presume that that which was the ordinary course was pursued in this case"] of an act having been done or not done, which act is the subject of contest.(1) It would seem to be axiomatic that a man is likely to do, or not to do, a thing, or to do it, or not to do it in a particular way, according as he is in the habit of doing or not doing it.(2) But the course of business must be clearly made out in order to establish that connection between the facts proved and sought to be proved which is the foundation of the presumption.(3)

s 114, illust (f) (Presumption as to course of business.) | s. 3 ("Relevant") | s. 3 ("Fact.") Steph. Dig., Art. 13; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 316—323; Norton, Ev., 141; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 43, 374, 213; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 91, Taylor, Ev., §§ 176—182; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 82, Best, Ev., § 403; Cunningham, Ev., 121; Wigmore, Ev., § 92.

COMMENTARY.

Course of business.

As to the meaning of the words "course of business," see notes to the second clause of thirty-second section, post. The section relates to private as well as public offices. Illustration (a) relates to the former; Illustration (b) to the latter, namely, the post office itself.(4) Where it was sought to prove that a certain indorsement had been made on a (lost) license entered at the Custom House, it was held to be relevant to show that the course of office was not to permit the entry without such indorsements.(5) And where the question was [illegible] that A's practice was to pay all [illegible] that B was seen with the rest [illegible] heard to complain.(6) So also where the demand was for the proceeds of milk sold daily to customers by the defendant as agent to the plaintiff, and it appeared that the course of dealing was for the defendant to pay the plaintiff every day the money which she had received, without any written voucher passing, it was ruled that it was to be presumed that the defendant had in fact accounted, and that the onus of proving the contrary lay on the plaintiff.(7) Where evidence was admitted of a book-keeper's custom of handing over collateral notes to the teller as indicating that it was done in this instance, Sherwood, J., said: "It is really immaterial whether he was able to do more than to verify his entries and prove his invariable custom. These things being proven, the presumption arises therefrom that the usual course of business was pursued in this particular instance. Every one is presumed to govern himself by the rules of right reason and consequently that he acquits himself of his engagements and duty. Whenever it is established that one act is the usual concomitant of another, the latter being proved, the former will be presumed; for this is in accord with the experience of common life. It is simply the process of ascertaining one act from the existence of another."(8)

[illegible] ostal and telegraph [illegible] purpose in the cus- [illegible] ted(9) is proved to

(1) Walker v. Barron, 6 Minn., 508, 512 (Amer.).

(2) State v. Railroad, 52 N. H., 528, 532 (Amer.), per Sargent, C. J. See Wigmore, Ev., § 92.

(3) See Cunningham, Ev, 121.

(4) Norton Ev., 141.

(5) Butler v. Allnut, 1 Starkie, 222; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 106; Taylor, Ev., § 180A, see also Van Omeeron v. Dowick, 2 Camp, 44, Waddington v. Roberts, L. R., 3 Q B, 579, Mason v. Wood, 1 C. P. D, 63

(6) Lucas v. Navosiletski, 1 Esp, 296; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 107; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 37, and see Sellen v. Norman, 4 C. & P., 80.

(7) Evans v. Birch, 3 Camp, 10; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 37.

(8) Mathias v. O'Neil, 94 Mo., 527; 6 S. W, 253 (Amer.).

(9) See Walter v. Haynes, Ray, & M., 149, Burmester v. Barron, 17 Q. B., 828; Taylor, Ev., s. 179, no inference should be drawn from the posting of a letter that it was properly addressed; Ram Das v. The Official Liquidator, Cotton Ginning Co., Ld, Cawnpore, 9 A., 366, 384 (1887).

deciphered,—are primâ facie evidence that the letters were in the post at the [illegible] stmark on a letter has been admitted [illegible] but a postmark may be contradicted [illegible] ng.(3) The presumption, in the case of the post office, that a letter properly directed and posted will be delivered in due course(4), will be extended to postal telegrams now that the inland telegraphs form part of the Government postal system.(5)

In certain cases special provision has been made by Statute with respect to matters with which this section is concerned. Thus in the case of documents served by post on companies, in proving service of such a document it is sufficient to prove that it was properly directed, and that it was put as a registered letter into the post office.(6)

---

(1) Fletcher v. Braddyll, 3 Stark. R., 64, Stocken v. Collin, 7 M. & W, 515, R v Johnson, 65, Taylor, Ev, s. 179 and cases there cited, Powell, Ev., 94, Wigmore, Ev., § 95.

(2) Abbey v. Hill, 5 Bing, 299; R. v. Plumer, R. & Ry, 264, Kent v. Lowen, 1 Camp, 177, Roscoe, N. P Ev., 213 & 214 & Steph Dig, Art. 13, illust. (a): a letter is presumed to have arrived at its destination at the time at which it would be delivered in the ordinary course of postal business; Stocken v. Collin, ante; Powell, Ev., 95.

(3) Stocken v. Collin, supra; Burr Jones, Ev., § 46

(4) British and American Telegraph Co v. Colson, L. R, 6 Ex, 122, per Bramwell, B.

(5) Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 43; see also as to the telegraphic messages s. 88, post.

(6) Act VII of 1913 (Indian Companies) If a notice given under the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881 s. 94) is duly directed and sent by post, and miscarries, such miscarriage does not render the notice invalid.

ADMISSIONS.

[illegible] ...al with the subject of admissions ... d to form exceptions to the rule ... correct. Admissions are sometimes used as merely discrediting a party's statement by showing that he has on other occasions made statements inconsistent with the case afterwards set up. Their effect in such a case is merely destructive It is their inconsistency with the party's present claim that gives them logical force and not their testimonial credit. For in such cases the truth of the admission is not relied on, and therefore they are not obnoxious to the hearsay rule (1) In effect and broadly it may be stated that anything said by a party may be used against him as an admission, provided it exhibits the quality of inconsistency with the facts now asserted by him in pleadings or testimony. It follows that the subject of an admission is not limited to facts against the party's interest at the time; for [illegible]

[illegible] But an admission ... or a fact relied ... evidence of the truth of its contents and as possessing an evidentiary force per se. It is then equivalent to affirmative testimony for the party offering it. Admissions in such cases have a testimonial value independent of the contradiction; and being the statements of persons not witnesses, form exceptions to the hearsay rule. In this sense it has been said that:—"The general rule is, that every material fact must be proved by testimony on oath. There is an exception to that rule, namely, that the declarations of a party to the record, or of one identified in interest with him, are, as against such party, admissible in evidence."(4) The statements which are the subject of these sections are admitted firstly as infirmative of the case made: and secondly, when amounting to proof for the adversary, because in respect of the persons making them there is some security for their accuracy which [illegible]

An admission is only [illegible] ative in interests(5); [illegible] shall not be allowed [illegible] perience testifies that, as men consult their own interest, and seek their own advantage, whatever they say or admit against their interest or advantage may, with tolerable safety, be taken to be true as against them, at least until the contrary appears.(7) Where in a petition there is an inadvertent admission as to the nature of certain property, it is open to both sides to give evidence as to whether the person who made the admission was or was not acquainted with

(1) Wigmore, Ev., § 1048, et seq.

(2) Ib

(3) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 213.

(4) Spargo v. Brown, 9 B. & C., 935, 938, per Bayley, J.

(5) S. 21 and note thereto, post; the exceptions to this rule are contained in s. 21, cls. (1), (2). The admissibility of books of account under s. 34 is also an instance of statements made by a person being offered on his own behalf. An admission may further be proved on behalf of a party if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission, s. 21, cl. (3).

(6) Best, Ev., § 519.

(7) Best, Ev., § 519; Taylor, Ev., § 723.

the incidents of the property when he made the statement. (Chatterjee and Panton, J. J.)(1)

Admissions. An admission has been defined to be a statement which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, and which is made by any of the persons and under the circumstances in the following sections mentioned.(2) In English law, the term admission is usually applied to civil transactions, and to those statements of fact in criminal cases which do not amount to acknowledgments of guilt or which do not suggest the inference of guilt; the term 'confession' being generally restricted to acknowledgments of guilt or statements which suggest the inference of guilt.(3)

Besides admissions written and oral, a party may make admissions by his conduct. These are not mentioned in the seventeenth section, as they have already been dealt with in the eighth section, ante. Admissions by assumed character, conduct, silence, and the like, are not exceptions to the hearsay rule; they are usually original circumstantial evidence of the facts to which they relate.(4) Analogous to admissions by conduct is the rule which treats as admissions by a party statements made in his presence and not denied by him; provided the circumstances were such as to make a denial necessary or appropriate.(5)

Confessions A confession is " an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime, stating or suggesting the inference that he committed that crime."(6) There is a distinction between admissions and confessions in the Act(7), which, however, as it does not contain a definition of the word " confession," does not itself declare in what that distinction exists The nature of this distinction has, however, been the subject of judicial consideration in the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts. In the first place, as sections 17—31 deal with admissions generally, and include sections 24—30 which treat of confessions as distinguished from admissions, it would appear that confessions are a species of which an admission is the genus. All admissions are not confessions but all confessions are admissions. Thus a statement amounting under sections 24—30 to a confession, in a criminal proceeding may be an admission under the twenty-first section, in a civil proceeding. So statements made to the police by [illegible] 'operty which is the subject-matter of [illegible] inadmissible as evidence against the [illegible] h they are charged, are admissible as evidence with regard to the ownership of the property in an enquiry under section 523 of the Criminal Procedure Code (8) The present portion of the Act adopts the term " Admission " as the generic term for both civil and criminal proceedings, and uses the particular term " confession " for admissions (a) in criminal proceedings; (b) made by a particular person, viz., an accused

(1) Dinabandhu Nandi v. Mannu Lall Parik, 52 I. C., 443.

(2) S. 17, post; see Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 149.

(3) Taylor, Ev., 724.

(4) Best, Ev., American Notes, p. 488; Norton, Ev., 142. As to admissions by conduct, see Powell, Ev., 277; Taylor, Ev., § 804; s. 8, ante. Confessions, like admissions in civil cases, may be inferred from the conduct of the prisoner and from his silent acquiescence in the statement of others made in his presence, respecting himself; Taylor, Ev., § 907.

(5) Best, Ev., ib.; see notes to s. 8, ante.

(6) Steph. Dig., Art. 21; the Act contains no definition of a "confession."

(7) R. v Macdonald, 10 B. L. R., App. 2 (1872), per Phear, J., R. v. Dabee Pershad, 6 C., 530 (1881); R. v. Meher Ali, 15 C., 389, 593 (1888); R. v. Nilmadhub, 15 C, 595 (1888), per Petheram, C. J.:—"If the contents of the document did not amount to a confession, the document itself would be relevant as an admission under s 21," ib., 607. None, however, of the above cases indicate the difference between "admissions" and "confessions." See as to this: R. v. Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, 539 (1884); R. v. Jagrup, 7 A., 646 (1885); R. v. Pandharinath, 6 B, 34 (1881); R. v Nana, 14 B, 260, 263 (1884).

(8) R. v. Tribhovan Maneckchand, 9 B, 131, 134 (1884).

person(1); (c) of the particular character denoted in the following definition: "A confession is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime (a) stating, or (b) suggesting the inference that he committed the crime."(2) Therefore not only statements which amount to a direct acknowledgment of guilt are confessions, but also inculpatory statements, which, although they fall short of actual admissions of guilt yet suggest an inference of guilt All inculpatory statements, however, are not "confessions," but only such as fall short of being an admission of guilt, and from which an inference of guilt follows.(3) A statement which is intended by the maker to be self-exculpatory may be nevertheless an admission of an incriminating circumstance(4); [illegible] o a confession or not bein [illegible] that it leads to an infer [illegible] it is proposed to prove against a person accused of an offence to establish that offence(5); while under the term "admission" are comprised all other statements amounting to admissions within the meaning of the seventeenth and eighteenth sections, ante Statements by way of confession which are excluded by sections 24—30 are inadmissible under the eighth section, ante. This latter section, therefore, in so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct," must be read in connection with the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sections, and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by these sections.(6) As in the case of admissions in civil suits, the principle upon which the reception of confessions depends is the presumption that a rational being will not make admissions prejudicial to his interest and safety unless when urged by the promptings of truth and conscience.(7) In such cases the maxim is "Habemus optimum testem, confitentem reum."(8) If prisoners really voluntarily confess, their confessions are the best possible evidence against them; and a verdict based on voluntary confessions is just as good as a verdict based on the testimony of credible witnesses (9)

But self-harming evidence is not always receivable in criminal cases as it is in civil. There is this condition precedent to its admissibility that the

---

(1) R. v Tribhovan Maneckchand, 9 B, 131, 134, R v. Jagrup, 7 A, 646, 648 (1885)

(2) Steph. Dig, Art 21, adopted and followed in R. v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 539 (1884); R. v. Nana, 14 B, 260, 263, F. B (1889), R. v. Kangal Mali, 41 C, 1905; see Rampal v. Emperor, 20 All. L. J., 128, R. v. Jagrup, 7 A, 646 (1885). [In this last case Straight, J., was of opinion that the word "confession" cannot be construed as including a mere inculpatory admission which falls short of being an admission of guilt, but he also added that he did not find anything in Mr. Stephen's definition at variance with the view he took. It may, however, be pointed out that the rule contended for is not that every inculpatory statement is a confession, but only such as fall short of being an admission of guilt and from which an inference of guilt follows. As to "plenary" and "not plenary" statements, see Best, Ev, § 524]; see also R. v. Pandharinath, 6 B, 34 (1881).

(3) Hakiman v. R, 51 P. L. R., 1905; 2 Cr. L J, 230, and see notes to s. 25, post.

(4) R. v. Pandharinath, 6 B., 34, 37 (1881)

(5) R v. Tribhovan Maneckchand, 9 B., 131, 134 (1884); it is "an admission of a criminating circumstance on which the prosecution mainly relies"; R v. Pandharinath, 6 B, 34, 37 (1881); R. v. Nana, 14 B, 260, 263 (1889).

(6) R. v. Nana, 14 B., 260 (1889); see also R. v Jora Hasji, 11 Bom. H. C R., 24 (1874); R. v. Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12 (1878); and s. 82, post.

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 865; Best, Ev., § 524; Phillips & Arnold, Ev, 401; R. v. Yellaraddi, 6 Bom. L. R., 773, in which also the question of the importance to be attached to variation in confessional statements is discussed

(8) "In criminal cases a deliberate confession carries with it a greater probability of truth than an admission in civil cases, the consequences being more serious and penal." Phillips & Arnold, Ev., 402 In R. v. Baddry, 2 Den at p 446, Erle, J., said, "I am of opinion that when a confession is well proved it is the best evidence that can be procured" party against whom it is adduced must have supplied it voluntarily or at least freely.(1)

(9) R. v. Wusir Mundul, 25 W. R., Cr., 25, 26 (1876).

A prisoner may be convicted on his own uncorroborated confession(2). But in order to support a conviction the admission by the prisoner must be an admission of guilt. So where some prisoners during a preliminary investigation stated that the crime was committed by other persons and that any share they had in it was under compulsion, it was pointed out that, though such a statement contained an important admission, it was not an admission of guilt, and that upon such a statement alone no person ought to be convicted.(3) Confessions have been divided by English text-writers into two classes, namely, judicial and extra-judicial. Judicial confessions are those which are made [illegible] ceedings. Either [illegible] by a sentence of [illegible] er the protecting caution and oversight of the Judge.(4) Extra-judicial confessions are those which are made by the party elsewhere than before a Magistrate, or in Court; this term embracing not only express confessions of crime, but all those admissions and acts of the accused, from which guilt may be implied. All voluntary confessions of this kind are receivable in evidence on being proved like other facts (5) Whether, however, extra-judicial confessions, if uncorroborated, are under English law of themselves sufficient for conviction, has been doubted. In each of the English cases usually cited in favour of the sufficiency of this [illegible] as a matter of practice and prudence, at any rate in all but exceptional cases, that view which regards such confessions, when uncorroborated, as insufficient an opinion which "certainly best accords with the humanity of the criminal law," and with the great degree of caution applied in receiving and weighing the evidence of confessions in other cases. Moreover, it seems countenanced by approved writers on this branch of the law.(8) Further, the words actually used [illegible] ascertained. And if a s [illegible] it must be taken as a [illegible] d into it.(9) The Court should not accept merely the conclusions at which the witnesses, deposing to a confession, themselves arrived, from the answers which the accused gave to questions put by them.(10) As to retracted confessions, see note to s 24, post.

Persons by whom admissions may be made.

Admissions may be made by (a) a party to the proceeding.(11) And a party to the proceeding may be affected by the admissions of the following persons;

---

(1) Best, Ev., § 551.

(2) R. v. Ranjeet Sonial, 6 W. R., Cr., 73 (1866); R. v. Hyder Jalaha, ib, 83 (1866); or on his own admission coupled with the evidence, R. v. Kallychurn, 7 W. R., Cr, 59 (1867); as to the effect of extra-judicial confession, v. post.

(3) R. v. Kristo Mundul, 7 W. R., Cr., 8 (1867).

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 866; v. ante; R. v Bhuttun Rujwan, 12 W. R., Cr., 49 (1869); as to the effect of judicial confessions and as to retracted confessions, v. s 24, post

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 867; R. v. Gopeenath, 13 W. R., 69 (1870); [a confession made to a private individual may be evidence against the prisoner if proved by the person before whom the confession was made], R. v Mohan Lal, 4 A., 46, 94 (1881). R v Bysago Noshyo, 8 W. R, Cr., 28 (1877).

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 868.

(7) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 109; The report of the case there cited in this connection [R v. Jhurree, 7 W. R, Cr., 41 (1867), (a voluntary and genuine confession is legal and sufficient proof of guilt)] does not state the nature of the confession.

(8) Taylor, Ev., s. 868.

(9) Pika Bewa v. R. (1912); 39 C., 855

(10) R v. Soobjan, 10 B. L. R., 332, 335 (1873); R. v. Mohan Lal, 4 A., 46, 49 (1881).

(11) S. 18, post.

(b) an agent to such party duly authorized(1) ; (c) a person who has a proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject-matter of the suit(2) ; (d) a predecessor in title or a person from whom the party to the suit has derived his interest(3) ; (e) a person whose position it is necessary to prove in a suit when the statement would be relevant in a suit brought by or against himself(4) ; (f) a referee, or a person to whom a party to the suit has expressly referred for information.(5) Where several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of [illegible] admissions of any one of those persons are [illegible] fellows, whether they be all jointly suing or [illegible] relate to the subject-matter in dispute and were made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered.(6) The requirement of the identity in the legal interest between the joint owners is of fundamental importance. The admission of one co-plaintiff or co-defendant is not receivable against another merely by virtue of his position as a co-party in the litigation. If the rule were otherwise, it [illegible] an opponent's claims merely [illegible] and then employing that per[illegible] is not by virtue of the person's relation to the litigation that the admission of one can be used against the other ; it must be because of some priority of title or of obligation.(7) Plaintiffs who were two out of five brothers, sued to establish their right to a two-fifth share in properties, which were sold in execution of a money decree against another brother " U " and purchased by the defendant on the allegation that the properties, when sold, were the joint family properties of the five brothers. The defendant, whose case was that the brothers were not joint at the date of the sale, and that the properties were exclusively owned by U, put in a deposition given by another brother K in the suit in which the money decree against U was passed, in the course of which K stated that the family was not joint and the properties belonged exclusively to U. Held, that the deposition of K in the previous suit was not admissible as admission against the plaintiff.(8) Guardians of person of an infant are not competent to bind the ward by an admission as to his proprietary rights. An admission by a Court-of-Wards cannot bind or prejudice the infant proprietor.(9) An admission made by a landlord is not binding on his tenant, and, this being so, a compromise entered into between the proprietors of certain land and others, whereby the parties to the compromise become joint proprietors of the land has no binding effect upon the tenants of the land (10) In a criminal trial, if it is intended to bind a master by the statement of his servant, the relationship of master and servant must be strictly proved.(11) Generally with respect to the person whose admissions may be received, the doctrine is, that the declarations of a party to the record or of one identified in interest with him are as against such party receivable in evidence.(12) But if they proceed from a stranger they are in general inadmissible.(13) The act has rendered

(1) S. 18, post.
(2) Id.
(3) Id.
(4) S 19, post.
(5) S. 20, post; see notes to ss. 18—20, post.
(6) Dileshwar Ram v. Nohar Singh, 48 I C, 193.
(7) Ambar Ali v. Lutfe Ali, 45 C., 159; s. c, 25 C. L. J., 619; 21 C. W. N., 996.
(8) Nagendra Nath Ghosh v. Lawrence Jute Co., 25 C. W. N, 89.
(9) Banwari Lal Singh v. Dwarka Nath Missir, 29 C. L J, 377; s. c., 52 I. C., 825.
(10) Puran Pande v. Dhanpat Tewari, 53 I C., 739.
(11) Emperor v Pitbaran Singh, 19 Cr. L J, 789; s. c., 4 Pat. L. W., 120
(12) Taylor, Ev., § 740; Spargo v. Brown, 9 B. & C., 938.
(13) Id ; Barough v White, 4 B. & C., 328.

such admissions receivable in the two cases mentioned in the nineteenth and twentieth sections, post.(1)

Subject to the provisions of the thirtieth section relating to confessions by persons who are being tried jointly for the same offence, the general rule is that an accused person can only be affected by the admissions or confessions of himself, and not by those of agents, accomplices or strangers(2); unless made in his presence and assented to by him.(3) Nor, of course, can such confessions be used in his favour. As to admissions by prosecutors, v. post, notes to ss. 17—20.

Time when, and persons to whom, admissions may be made

When a party sues, or is sued, personally, any admission made by him on any former occasion may be given in evidence against him. Such admissions may have been made by him while a minor. For though a minor, as he cannot appoint an agent(4), cannot be bound by the admissions of an agent purporting to act for him, yet admissions made by the minor himself may be proved in an action brought against him after obtaining his majority.(5) When a party sues, or is sued, personally, an admission made by him on a former occasion, while sustaining a representative character, may also be given in evidence against him. Thus where a person, when defending a suit as guardian for a minor, made an affidavit of certain facts, this affidavit was held to be evidence against that person of the facts sworn to, in a subsequent action against him personally.(6) But admissions made by a person sued or suing in a representative character are not admissions, unless they were made while the party making them held that character(7); such persons therefore cannot affect the party represented by their admissions made before sustaining, or after they have ceased to sustain, their representative character.(8) Further, statements by a party interested in the subject-matter, or by a person from whom interest is derived, must have been made during the continuance of the interest(9); and statements by the persons mentioned in the nineteenth section must have been made whilst the person making them occupied the position, or was subject to the liability, in the section mentioned (10) Answer given by an insolvent in former proceedings are admissions even if his examination in such proceedings was not authorised.(11)

So far as its admissibility in evidence is concerned, it is in general immaterial to whom an admission is made.(12) Thus an admission made to a stranger is as receivable as one made to an opponent. "It has indeed been held that, in order to render an account stated binding on a party, the admission of

(1) As to when admissions proceeding from strangers are admissible, see Taylor, Ev., §§ 759—765, 740, v. post; the admissibility, however, of the evidence in the case of referees may be said to be grounded on the principle of agency; the party referring to another makes that other his agent for the purpose of making the particular admission; Wills, Ev., 112.

(2) Taylor, Ev., §§ 904-906; 3 Russ, Cr., 485-491; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 46—48; see as to admissions by agents, post; and as to admissions by co-proprietors, v. s. 10, ante.

(3) R. v. Moulton Cox, 1 F. & F., 90; R. v. Mallory, 15 Cox, 456, 458; Taylor, Ev., 901.

(4) Act IX of 1872 (Contract), s 183; and see s. 11, id; v. post.

(5) O'Neill v. Read, 7 Ir. L. R., 434, cited in Field, Ev., 165; "such admissions might relate to the receipt of goods or to other matters, but would not, of course, affect the question of liability in cases in which a minor would not be liable on a contract unless such contract were ratified by him after attaining his majority." Field, Ev, 165; see Dharmaji Vaman v. Gurrar Shrinivas, 10 Bom. H. C. R., 311 (1873).

(6) Beasley v. Magrath, 2 Sch. & Lef., 31, 34; Taylor, Ev., § 755; Stanton v. Percival, 5 H. L C., 257.

(7) S 18, post; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 171

(8) See Steph. Dig., Art. 16, and post

(9) S. 18, post.

(10) S 19, post.

(11) Joseph Perry v. Official Assignee, 47 C., 254; s. c., 24 C. W. N., 425.

(12) Best, Ev., § 528.

liability must be made to the opposite party or his agent(1); but this only refers to the effect of the admission, not to its admissibility."(2) Even an admission made in confidence to a legal adviser or a wife is receivable, if proved by a third person.(3). So private memoranda never communicated to the opposite side or to third persons are evidence against a party(4); as are admissions made to himself in mere soliloquy.(5) But what a person has been heard to say while talking in his sleep seems not to be legal evidence against him, however valuable it may be as indicative evidence; for here the suspension of the faculty of judgment may fairly be presumed complete (6)

So with regard to voluntary confessions, subject to the provisions of the [illegible] or saying to his wife or any other person in confidence will be receivable in evidence, provided that, in the latter case, it is proved by some person other than the wife, counsel, or solicitor.(7) An admission of crime, when fairly made after due warning, is not inadmissible simply because, at the time it was made no formal accusation had been made against the party making it.(8)

Nature and form of admission

In respect of the nature of admissions no difference exists, in regard to [illegible] incidental [illegible] ne other [illegible] admission is in general immaterial.(10) Thus admissions are receivable which are made parol, or are contained in books of account or letters(11), documents (e g., a map) [illegible]

---

(1) Breckon v. Smith, 1 A. & E., 488; Hughes v. Thorpe, 5 M. & W., 667; Bates v. Townley, 2 Exch, 156; Taylor, Ev., § 799.

(2) Best, Ev, § 528

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 881 [see ss 122, 126—129, post].

(4) Bruce v. Garden, 17 W. R. (Engl), 990, Whart., Ev., § 1123.

(5) R. v. Simons, 6 C. & P., 540; Best, Ev., § 521.

(6) Best, Ev, § 529; R. v. Elisabeth Sippets, Kent, Summ. Ass., 1839, cited, ib.; Gore v. Gibson, 13 M & W., 623, 627.

(7) See Taylor, Ev, § 881, and cases cited ante, see ss. 25, 26, post; see also R. v Sageena, 7 W. R., Cr., 56 (1867).

(8) R. v. Ram Churn, 4 W. R, Cr., 10 (1865).

(9) Taylor, Ev., § 800.

(10) Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 151; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 220; Best, Ev., § 521; as to admissions "without prejudice," see s. 23, post.

(11) Rai Sri Kishen v. Rai Huri Kishen, 5 M I. A, 432, 443 (1853); R. v. Hanmanta, 1 B., 610, 617 (1877), v. post; a letter containing an admission does not require a stamp before it can be admitted in evidence; Situl Pershad v. Monohur Das, 23 W. R., 325 (1875); see also Narain Coomary v. Ram Krishna, 5 C, 864, where an entry, showing the extent of the holding and the amount of the rent, made in a book belonging to the lessor, and signed by the lessee, was held relevant as an admission, though neither stamped nor registered, and v. Galstaun v. Hutchinson (1912), 39 C, 789.

(12) Huronath Sircar v. Preonath Sircar, 7 W R, 249 (1867).

(13) Byathamma v. Avulla, 15 M, 19 (1891).

(14) Obhoy Gobind v. Beejoy Gobind, 9 W. R, 162 (1869); Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, 14 B. L. R., App. 3 (1874); s. c., 21 W. R., 414 v, post and see cases cited post, passim.

(15) Girish Chunder v. Shama Churn, 15 W. R., 437 (1871).

(16) Ib.; Gour Lall v. Mohesh Narain, 14 W. R., 484 (1871); and see post; Mohun Sahoo v. Chutto Mowar, 21 W R., 34 (1874), as to statements filed in Court in name of pardanashin, see Asmutoonissa Bibee v. Alla Hafiz, 8 W. R., 468 (1867).

(17) Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 84, 85; Hurish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R., 303 (1874); Bhugmunt Narain v. Loll Jha, Marshall, 48 (1862); Legal Remembrancer v. Matilal Ghose, 41 C., 173 (1914) (affidavit in answer to motion).

admission within the meaning of the eighteenth section.(1) Entries in books of account, though proved not to have been regularly kept, may yet be relevant as admissions.(2) Admissions may be also contained in recitals and descriptions in deeds(3); horoscopes(4); receipts, or mere acknowledgments given for goods or money, whether on separate papers, or indorsed on deeds, or on negotiable securities; banker's pass-books; accounts rendered, such as a solicitor's bill; sworn inventories and declarations by executors which operate as an admission of assets(5), and survey maps.(6) The omission of a claim by an insolvent in a schedule of the debts due to him given on oath is an admission that it is not due.(7) A statement in a bill of sale is evidence against those who are parties to it, the seller and the purchaser and the person who purchased from such last mentioned purchaser.(8) Statements recorded in a rent-suit under Act X of 1859 which do not conform to the requirement of the sixtieth section, cannot be relied on as admissions.(9) Even an invalid instrument may operate as an admission as to collateral matters(10); but not one which is not duly stamped(11), except in criminal cases.(12) A return made to a collector by an occupant of land stating the amount of the rent, is an admission as to the amount of the rent binding upon the occupant and all who claim under him.(13) As to admissions in doul fehrists, or in notices to enhance rent, see cases noted below.(14) Though a judgment is generally irrelevant as between strangers, it may be relevant as between strangers if it is an admission.(15) Thus where A sued B, a carrier for goods delivered by A to B, a judgment recovered by B against a person to whom he had delivered the goods, was held to be relevant as an admission by B that he had the goods.(16) "It is true that a record is sometimes admitted in evidence, in favour of a stranger against one of the parties, as containing a solemn admission by such party in a judicial proceeding with respect to a certain fact. But this is no real exception to the rule requiring mutuality, because the record is admitted in this case not as a judgment conclusively establishing the fact but as the deliberate declaration or admission of the party himself that the fact was so. It is therefore to be treated according to the principles governing admissions, to which class of evidence it properly belongs."(17) And where in a suit the plaintiff's case was that his grandfather V, the second son of K, was adopted by the latter's brother A, and that he, the plaintiff, was consequently entitled to a moiety of the family property as representative of A, the other moiety going to certain of the defendants representing K's branch, a judgment and other documents in a previous suit brought by K, in which suit the adoption of V by A was stated by K, were admitted in evidence against the

(1) Hurish Chunder v Prosunno Coomar, 22 W R., 303 (1874); as to pleadings in the same proceedings, v post As to the admissibility in England of pleadings in other actions, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 237

(2) R v Hanmanta, 1 B, 610, 617 (1877), v. post.

(3) Taylor, Ev., 91—100, 858, Roscoe, N P Ev., 76; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 465, 466, v post; Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder, 4 I. A., 52 (1876).

(4) Raja Goundan v Raja Goundan, 17 M 134 (1893)

(5) Taylor, Ev, §§ 859, 860

(6) See notes to s 36, post, and cases there cited

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 804; Nicholls v. Downes, M. & Rob., 13, Hart v. Newman, 3 Camp, 13

(8) Soojan Bibee v Achmut Ali, supra.

(9) Pogha Mahtoon v. Gooroo Baboo, 24 W R., 114 (1875).

(10) Whart, § 1124, cited in Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed, 193, 194

(11) Act II of 1899 (Stamp), s. 34, amended in 1922

(12) Ib, cl (2); other than proceedings under Ch XII (Disputes as to immovable property) Ch. XXXVI (Maintenance of wives and children) of Act V of 1898 (Criminal Procedure).

(13) Avudh Beharee v. Ram Rai, 18 W. R., 105 (1872).

(14) Gunga Pershad v. Gogun Singh, 3 C, 2 (1877); see also Narain Coomary v Ram Krishna, 5 C., 864 (1880); Judoonath v. Rajah Baroda, 22 W. R., 220 (1874).

(15) Steph. Dig, Art. 44.

(16) Tiley v. Cowling, 1 Ld. Ry., 744; s. c. B. N. P., 243; Steph. Dig., Art. 44, illust. (e), Taylor, Ev., § 1694.

(17) Taylor, Ev., § 1694.

defendants, not in order to prove an adjudication between third parties, but in order to prove a statement made by the predecessor in title of the parties was sought to be used.(1) Though ct of conviction cannot be considered ilty in the Criminal Court may be so As to admissions made in pleadings, see notes to the fifty-eighth section, post.

Hearsay and opinion

Personal knowledge is not required. "An admission is receivable although its weight may be slight, which is founded on hearsay(4), or consists merely of the declarant's opinion or belief(5); but where the admission is an inference from facts not personally known to the declarant, the Court may disregard the inference and look to the facts(6); and a bare statement that a party 'is informed,' without the addition of his belief in the information, will not amount to an admission."(7) The ground appears to be that even if a party has no personal knowledge, the admissions would ordinarily not be made except on evidence which satisfies the party who is making them that they are true (8)

Effect and circumstances of admissions.

An admission, merely as an admission, is not conclusive against the person who makes it (9) The latter may show that he was mistaken, or was not telling the truth, he may diminish the importance to be attached to it in any way he can; he is not precluded from contradicting it so far as the admission is merely an admission, he may induce the Court to disbelieve or disregard it if he can.(10) The circumstances under which an admission was made may always, therefore, be proved to impeach, or (since the weight of an admission depends on these circumstances) to enhance its credibility.(11) An admission, however, may operate as an estoppel, in which case the person who made it is not permitted to deny it (12) As to the effect of admissions as dispensing with proof, see the fifty-eighth section, post. There may be a withdrawal of any statutory admission unless there should be some obligation not to withdraw sion are action, Under this Act the fact of compulsion would affect the weight of the evidence only. As to admissions made "without prejudice," see the twenty-third section, post. With regard to the effect of confessions both judicial and extra-judicial, v. ante, Introductory note to ss. 17—19. Confessions are irrelevant in criminal proceedings if made under the circumstances mentioned in the twenty-fourth

(1) Krishnasami v Rajagopala, 18 M, 73, 77, 78 (1895)

(2) I e, to establish the truth of the facts upon which it was rendered, see notes to s 43, post

(3) Sumbo Chunder v Modhoo Kyburt, 10 W R, 56 (1868), Field Ev, 6th Ed, 184.

(4) Wigmore, Ev, § 1053, Re Perton, 53 L T, 707 (1885) [statement of a person as to his illegitimacy, see also R v Walker, Cox, 99, in Taylor, Ev, § 737 (1885); the point is treated as doubtful, as to statements by an agent containing hearsay or opinions, see The Actaeon, 1 Spinks, E & A, 176, The Solway, 10 P. D, 137.

(5) Deo v Steel, 3 Camp, 115.

(6) Bulley v Bulley, L. R, 9 Ch., 739, 747

(7) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 219; Wills, Ev., 108 1 Daniel's Ch. Pr., 6th Ed, 575, Taylor, Ev, § 737, Trimblestown v. Kemmis, 9 C & F 780, 784—786; Roe v. Ferrars, 2 B & P, 542, in which case it was held that if the defendant gives in evidence an answer in Chancery of the plaintiff it will not entitle the plaintiff to avail himself of any matters contained in such answer which are only stated as hearsay, but see Taylor, Ev, § 737; as to admissions which operate by way of estoppel, see s 115, post

(8) Kitchen v. Robbins, 29 Ga., 713, 716 (Amer), cited in Wigmore, Ev., § 1053.

(9) S 31, post

(10) See Cunningham, Ev., 23, 24

(11) See notes to s 31, post; "Admissions depend much upon the circumstances under which they are made"; R. v. Simmonsto, 1 C. & K., 164, 166, per Wightman, J

(12) Ss. 31, 115—117, post

(13) Mahommad Iman v. Husain Khan, 26 C 81 (1898).

(14) Taylor, Ev., §§ 798—799; Roscoe, N. P., Ev., 63.

admission within the meaning of the eighteenth section.(1) Entries in books of account, though proved not to have been regularly kept, may yet be relevant as admissions.(2) Admissions may be also contained in recitals and descriptions in deeds(3); horoscopes(4); receipts, or mere acknowledgments given for goods or money, whether on separate papers, or indorsed on deeds, or on negotiable securities; banker's pass-books; accounts rendered, such as a solicitor's bill; sworn inventories and declarations by executors which operate as an admission of assets(5), and survey maps.(6) The omission of a claim by an insolvent in a schedule of the debts due to him given on oath is an admission that it is not due.(7) A statement in a bill of sale is evidence against those who are parties to it, the seller and the purchaser and the person who purchased from such last mentioned purchaser.(8) Statements recorded in a rent-suit under Act X of 1859 which do not conform to the requirement of the sixtieth section, cannot be relied on as admissions.(9) Even an invalid instrument may operate as an admission [illegible] except in [illegible] nd stating [illegible] it binding [illegible] who claim under him.(13) As to admissions in dowl fehrists, or in notices to enhance rent, see cases noted below.(14) Though a judgment is generally irrelevant as between strangers, it may be relevant as between strangers if it is an admission.(15) Thus where A sued B, a carrier [illegible] judgment recovered by B against a person to [illegible] was held to be relevant as an admission by B [illegible] rue that a record is sometimes admitted in evidence, in favour of a stranger against one of the parties, as containing a solemn admission by such party in a judicial proceeding with respect to a certain fact. But this is no real exception to the rule requiring mutuality, because the record is admitted in this case not as a judgment conclusively establishing the fact but as the deliberate declaration or admission of the party himself that the fact was so. It is therefore to be treated according to the principles governing admissions, to which class of evidence it properly belongs."(17) And where in a suit the plaintiff's case was that his grandfather V, the second son of K, was adopted by the latter's brother A, and that he, the plaintiff, was consequently entitled to a moiety of the family property as representative of A, the other moiety going to certain of the defendants representing K's branch, a judgment and other documents in a previous suit brought by K, in which suit the adoption of V by A was stated by K, were admitted in evidence against the

---

(1) Hurish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R. 303 (1874); as to pleadings in the same proceedings, v. post. As to the admissibility in England of pleadings in other actions, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 237

(2) R. v. Hanmanta, 1 B., 610, 617 (1877), v. post.

(3) Taylor, Ev., 91—100, 858; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 76; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 465, 466, v. post; Konwar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder, 4 I. A., 52 (1876).

(4) Raja Goundan v. Raja Goundan, 17 M., 134 (1893)

(5) Taylor, Ev., §§ 859, 860.

(6) See notes to s. 36, post, and cases there cited.

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 804; Nicholls v. Downes, M. & Rob., 13; Hart v. Newman, 3 Camp., 13

(8) Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, supra.

(9) Pogha Mahtoon v. Gooroo Baboo, 24 W. R., 114 (1875).

(10) Whart., § 1124, cited in Phipson, Ev., 3rd Ed., 193, 194

(11) Act II of 1899 (Stamp), s. 34, amended in 1922.

(12) Ib., cl. (2); other than proceedings under Ch. XII (Disputes as to immovable property). Ch. XXXVI (Maintenance of wives and children) of Act V of 1898 (Criminal Procedure).

(13) Arudh Beharee v. Ram Rai, 18 W. R., 105 (1872).

(14) Gunga Pershad v. Gogun Singh, 3 C., 2 (1877); see also Narain Coomary v. Ram Krishna, 5 C., 864 (1880); Judoonath v. Rajah Baroda, 22 W. R., 220 (1874).

(15) Steph. Dig., Art. 44.

(16) Tiley v. Cowling, 1 Ld. Ry., 744; s. c. B. N. P., 243; Steph. Dig., Art. 44, illust. (e); Taylor, Ev., § 1694.

(17) Taylor, Ev., § 1694.

defendants, not in order to prove an adjudication between third parties, but in order to prove a statement made by the predecessor in title of the parties defendants against whom the document was sought to be used.(1) Though a judgment of a Criminal Court or verdict of conviction cannot be considered in evidence in a civil case(2), a plea of guilty in the Criminal Court may be so considered as evidence of an admission (3) As to admissions made in pleadings, see notes to the fifty-eighth section, post

Hearsay and opinion

Personal knowledge is not required "An admission is receivable although its weight may be slight, which is founded on hearsay(4), or consists merely of the declarant's opinion or belief(5); but where the admission is an inference from facts not personally known to the declarant, the Court may disregard the inference and look to the facts(6), and a bare statement that a party 'is informed,' without the addition of his belief in the information, will not amount to an admission."(7) The ground appears to be that even if a party has no personal knowledge, the admissions would ordinarily not be made except on evidence which satisfies the party who is making them that they are true (8)

Effect and circumstances of admissions.

An admission, merely as an admission, is not conclusive against the person who makes it.(9) The latter may show that he was mistaken, or was not telling the truth, he may diminish the importance to be attached to it in any way he can; he is not precluded from contradicting it: so far as the admission is merely an admission, he may induce the Court to disbelieve or disregard it if he can.(10) The circumstances under which an admission was made may always, therefore, be proved to impeach, or (since the weight of an admission depends on these circumstances) to enhance its credibility.(11) An admission, however, may operate as an estoppel, in which case the person who made it is not permitted to deny it (12) As to the effect of admissions as dispensing with proof, see the fifty-eighth section, post. There may be a withdrawal of any gratuitous admission unless there should be some obligation not to withdraw it (13) According to English law admissions obtained under compulsion are evidence against a party [illegible] action, answers to interrogator[illegible] Under this Act the fact of com[illegible] only. As to admissions made [illegible] section, post. With regard to the effect of confessions both judicial and extra-judicial, v. ante, Introductory note to ss 17—19. Confessions are irrelevant in criminal proceedings if made under the circumstances mentioned in the twenty-fourth

---

(1) Krishnasami v. Rajagopala, 18 M, 73, 77, 78 (1895).

(2) I.e, to establish the truth of the facts upon which it was rendered; see notes to s 43, post.

(3) Sumbo Chunder v Modhoo Kyburt, 10 W R, 56 (1868), Field Ev., 6th Ed, 184.

(4) Wigmore, Ev., § 1053, Re Perton, 53 L. T, 707 (1885) [statement of a person as to his illegitimacy, see also R. v. Walker, Cox, 99, in Taylor, Ev., § 737 (1885); the point is treated as doubtful; as to statements by an agent containing hearsay or opinions, see The Actaeon, 1 Spinks, E. & A., 176; The Solway, 10 P. D, 137.

(5) Deo v. Steel, 3 Camp, 115.

(6) Bulley v. Bulley, L. R., 9 Ch., 739, 747.

(7) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 219; Wills, Ev, 108; 1 Daniel's Ch. Pr, 6th Ed, 575; Taylor, Ev, § 737; Trimblestown v. Kemmis, 9 C. & F 780, 784—786; Roe v. Ferrars, 2 B & P., 542, in which case it was held that if the defendant gives in evidence an answer in Chancery of the plaintiff it will not entitle the plaintiff to avail himself of any matters contained in such answer which are only stated as hearsay, but see Taylor, Ev., § 737, as to admissions which operate by way of estoppel, see s 115, post

(8) Kitchen v. Robbins, 29 Ga., 713, 716 (Amer), cited in Wigmore, Ev., § 1053.

(9) S 31, post

(10) See Cunningham, Ev., 23, 24

(11) See notes to s 31, post; "Admissions depend much upon the circumstances under which they are made"; R. v. Simmonsto, 1 C. & K., 164, 166, per Wightman, J.

(12) Ss 31, 115—117, post

(13) Mahommad Iman v Husain Khan, 26 C. 81 (1898).

(14) Taylor, Ev., §§ 798—799; Roscoe, N. P, Ev., 63.

section, post, unless they come within the provisions of the twenty-eighth section. But if no inducement (within the meaning of the twenty-fourth section) has been held out relating to the charge, it matters not, as far as admissibility is concerned, in what way a confession has been obtained, though of course the manner in which it has been procured may affect its weight.(1) Before using a statement (oral or written) as an admission, the facts which make it an admission must be proved.(2)

Matters provable by admission

"Admissions are receivable to prove matters of law, or mixed law and fact though (unless amounting to estoppels) these are generally of little weight, being necessarily founded on mere opinion. Thus, a defendant's admission that his trade was a nuisance has been received.(3) So, a prisoner's admission of a former [illegible] t, evidence to support a conviction [illegible] always be proved in this manner. [illegible] uncorroborated, has on more than [illegible] where considered trustworthy, upon which to grant a divorce,(5) though if corroboration is available(6) it must be produced.(7) But, contrary to the English rule, oral admissions are not receivable to prove the contents of documents, except where secondary evidence is admissible or the genuineness of a document produced is in question.(8) The execution of documents (whether attested or not) which are not required by law to be attested may be proved by admission or otherwise.(9) And even in the case of documents required by law to be attested, the admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself is sufficient proof of its execution as against him (10) Admissions may even sometimes be received as to matters protected by privilege, provided they are proved by a third person (v. ante).

The whole admission must be considered

The whole statement containing the admission must be taken together(11), for though some part of it may be favourable to the party, and the object is only

(1) See Taylor, Ev., § 881, s. 29, post, and notes thereto

(2) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R. (1909), 37 C, 91.

(3) R v. Nevile, 1 Peak, N P., 125; see also as to this case, R v Fairie, 8 E. & B, 486, but see also note (7), post

(4) R v Savage, 13 Cox, 178, [sic., sed., q. whether reference intended is not, R. v. Flaherty, 2 C. & K., 782]; R. v. Savage, overrules the previous decision of R. v Newton, 2 M & Rob., 503, 1 C. & R, 164, s c. nom., R. v. Simmonsto, in R v. Philp, 1 Moo C. C., 263, however, a declaration of the prisoner, showing who were (according to his own belief), his co-partners, was rejected when by reason of the invalidity of the document evidencing the transfer of their shares, their legal title to them could not be established.

(5) Robinson v. Robinson, 1 S & T., 362, Williams v. Williams, L. R., 1 P. & D, 29, Getty v. Getty (1907), P. 334.

(6) White v. White, 62 L. T., 663.

(7) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 219; in regard to admissions involving matters of law it is said in Phillips, Ev, p 344 10th Ed.:—"Where admissions involve matters of law, as well as matters of fact they are obviously in many instances entitled to very little weight, and in some cases, they have been altogether rejected." Thus it has been held, that the discharge of a defendant by a Court of Quarter Sessions, under an Insolvent Act, could not be established by proof of an acknowledgment of the discharge by the plaintiff himself; for the discharge might have been irregular and void, or might have been mistaken by the plaintiff: Scott v. Clare, 3 Camp., 236; Summersett v. Adamson, 1 Bing, 73; Morris v. Miller, Burr, 2057 As to admissions and estoppels on points of law, see Tagore v. Tagore, I A., Sup Vol., 71 (1872); Surendra Keshav v Doorgasundari, 19 I. A., 115, 116 (1892), Gopee Lall v. Musst. Sree Chandraolee, 11 B L. R., 395 (1872); and Dungariya v. Nand Lal, 3 A. L. J., 53; an admission on a point of law is not a "thing" within the meaning of s. 115.

(8) S 22, post, as to written admissions, see s 65, cl. (b), post.

(9) S 72, post; see Taylor, Ev., §§ 414, 1843, Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s 26.

(10) S. 70, post; Taylor, Ev, §§ 1848, 1853.

(11) Taylor, Ev., § 725; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 159; Sooltan Ali v. Chand Bibee, 9 W. R., 130 (1868), explained in Shaikh Shurfuraz v. Shaikh Dhunoor, 16 W. R., 257 (1871) [a party cannot select particular passages and read them without the context]; Jodunath Roy v. Raja Baroda, to ascertain what he has conceded against himself, and what may therefore be presumed to be true, yet, unless the whole is received, the true meaning of the part which is evidence against him, car[illegible] whole of what he said at the same time, [illegible] given in evidence, it does not follow th[illegible] be regarded as equally deserving of credit; but the Court must consider, under the circumstances, how much of the entire statement they deem worthy of belief, including as well the facts asserted by the party in his own favour, as those made against him (2) The rule applies equally to written, as to verbal admission (3) Thus where in a suit for rent at an enhanced rate after notice the plaintiff set forth that the defendant and his predecessors had been holding the tenure without any change in the rent; but alleged also that the tenure had its origin at a period long after the permanent settlement, it was held that the defendant was not at liberty to avail himself of such portion of the admission as afforded a ground for the presumption of uniform payment from the permanent settlement without accepting the latter part of the admission which rebutted such presumption.(4) The principle upon which the rule is grounded is, that if a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used against him apart from that qualification; an unfair use is not to be made of a party's statement, by trying to convert into a particular admission by him that which he never intended to be such an admission.(5) But though it is the rule that an admission which is qualified in its terms, must be ordinarily accepted as a whole, or not taken at all as evidence against a party, yet when a party makes separate and distinct allegations without any qualification, this rule does not apply. It is by no means the case that no portion of a party's statement can by any possibility be given in evidence against him, without every portion of the statement from the beginning to the end being also read.(6) A distinction must also be drawn between the case where an admission by one party has merely the effect of relieving the other party from giving proof of a particular fact, and the case where one party, failing to adduce independent evidence in his favour, attempts to rely on the statement of the other party as an admission. In the latter case, as 22 W R., 220 (1874); Niamut Ullah v. Himmut Ali, 22 W. R, 519 (1874); Pulin Beharee v. Watson & Co, 9 W. R, 190 (1868), explained in Baikanthanath Kumar v Chandra Mohan, 1 B. L. R. (A. C), 133, 10 W. R, 190; Radha Charan v. Chander Monee, 9 W. R., 200 (1868); Rajah Nilmoney v. Ramanoograh Roy, 7 W. R, 29 (1867); Tarince Pershad v Dwarkanath, 15 W. R., 451 (1871). [A plaintiff abandoning his own case and falling back on the admissions of the defendant, is bound to take those admissions as they stand in their entirety; by so taking them he would on his own part concede the truth of those statements contained in the admissions of the defendant other than the particular statements on which he specifically relied; Ishan Chunder v. Haran Sirdar, 11 W. R, 535 (1869); Lallah Probhoo v. Sheonath, W. R., 1864, Act X, 27; Konuar Doorganath v. Ram Chunder, 4 I A., 52 (1876).

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 725; Thomson v. Austen, 2 D & R, 361; Fletcher v. Froggatt, 2 C. & P., 566, Cobbett v Grey, 4 Ex R, 729.

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 725; and cases there cited; Rajah Nilmoney v. Ramanoograh Roy, 7 W. R., 29 (1867); [the Court is not bound to believe the whole of the statement]; Sooltan Ali v. Chand Bibee, 9 W. R., 130 (1868); Shaikh Shurfuraz v. Shaikh Dhunoo, 16 W. R., 257 (1871) id.; Stanton v. Percival, 5 H. L. C., 293; Ishan Chunder v. Haran Sirdar, 11 W. R., 535 (1869). [For instance if the Judge upon the evidence really believes that the payments credited in a plaintiff's book were made, although he disbelieves the entry as to the amount of debits, there is nothing inequitable in his giving the defendant the benefit of the payments.] But though the Judge may believe one part and disbelieve the other, he ought not to do so without some good reason; Lallah Probhoo v. Sheonath, W. R., 1864, Act X, 27.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 726.

(4) Judoonath Roy v. Rajah Ecroda, 22, W. R., 220 (1874).

(5) Baikanthanath Kumar v. Chandra Mohan, 1 B. L R. (A. C.), 133 (1868); 10 W. R, 190; explaining Poolia Beharee v. Watson & Co, 9 W. R. 190 (1868).

(6) Ib.; see s 30, post; and notes thereto

the party relies on the admission, he must take the whole of it together; in the former case, the one party cannot be said to use the admission of the other as evidence at all. Under the Civil Procedure Code, "it is the duty of the Court to examine the written statements in order to see on what points the parties are at issue, to lay down the issues and to receive and consider the evidence adduced on the points in dispute, but the Court will not allow the parties to waste its time by producing evidence to establish that which has never been contradicted; and therefore to lay down that when a defendant admits any one fact contained in the written statement of the plaintiff, and thereby excludes independent evidence thereof, he is entitled to say that the plaintiff has relied on his statement as evidence, and that he (the defendant) is, in consequence, in a position to claim that the whole of it may be read as evidence in his own favour, is a proposition which cannot be maintained. If a party wishes to give evidence in his own favour, of course it is in his power to come forward like any other witness and subject himself to examination and cross-examination in open Court, but until he has subjected himself to cross-examination, no statement which he may volunteer can be used as any evidence in support of his own case, unless the right, so to use it, has accrued from the deliberate act of his adversary. A party cannot himself determine that his own statement shall be used as evidence in his favour."(1)

Weight to be given to admissions

As in the case of admissions in civil cases, admissions in criminal cases must be taken as a whole, and the general rule is that the whole of a confession must be given in evidence, and read and taken together. "There is no doubt that, if a prosecutor uses the declaration of a prisoner, he must take the whole of it together, and cannot select one part and leave another(2); and, if there be either no other evidence in the case, or no other evidence incompatible with it the declaration so adduced in evidence must be taken as true But if, after the whole of the statement of the prisoner is given in evidence, the prosecutor is in a situation to contradict any part of it, he is at liberty to do so, and then the statement of the prisoner and the whole of the other evidence must be left to the jury for their consideration, precisely as in any other case where one part of the evidence is contradictory to another."(3) A confession is evidence for the prisoner as well as against him: it must be taken altogether; but still the jury may, if they think proper, believe one part of it and disbelieve another. The Court is at liberty to disregard any self-exculpatory statements contained in the confession which it disbelieves.(4) When the prosecution relies on such a statement as the only evidence of an offence, care must be taken that nothing is read into the statement.(5)

---

(1) Shaikh Shurfuraz v. Shaikh Dhunoo, 16 W. R., 257 (1871), per Ainslie, J.

(2) R. v. Chokoo Khan, 5 W. R., Cr., 70 (1866); R. v. Sheikh Boodhoo, 8 W. R., Cr., 38 (1867); R. v. Gour Chand, 1 W. R., Cr., 17, 18 (1864); R. v. Chullundee Poramanick, 3 W. R., Cr., 55, 56 (1856); R. v. Beshor Bewa, 18 W. R., Cr., 29 (1872), R. v. Nityo Gopal, 24 W. R., Cr., 80 (1875); Goloke Chunder v. The Magistrate of Chittagong, 25 W. R., Cr., 15 (1876), [admission not amounting to confession of guilt], R. v Sonaoollah, 25 W R Cr., 23, 24 (1876), R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B 452, 459, 479 (1889): "If one part of a conversation is relied on as proof of a confession of the crime the prisoner has a right to lay before the Court the whole of what was said in that conversation, or at least so much as is explanatory of the part already proved, and perhaps, in favorem vitæ all that was related to the subject-matter in issue." The Queen's case, 2 Br & Bing., 297; as to distinct or opposing statements by the accused, see R v Soobjan, 10 B. L. R., 332 (1873); R v Nityo Gopal, 24 W. R. Cr. 80 (1875), and v Pika Bewa v [illegible] (1912), 39 C., 855.

(3) R. v. Jones, 2 C. & P [illegible] Bosanquet, J.

(4) R v. Clewes, 4 C. & P [illegible] v. Dada Ana, supra at pp 45[illegible] Balaji, cited [illegible], 479; R v [illegible] W. R., Cr., 23 24 (1876), [illegible] the Court [illegible] to the [illegible] Govind [illegible] C [illegible]

(5) [illegible]

"Evidence of oral admissions ought always to be received with great caution. Such evidence is necessarily subject to much imperfection and mistake; for either the party himself may have been misinformed, or he may not have clearly expressed his meaning, or the witness may have misunderstood him, or may purposely misquote the expression used. It also sometimes happens that the witness, by unintentionally altering a few words, will give an effect to the statement completely at variance with what the party actually said."(1) So where a plaintiff sued for a sum said to be due upon a settlement of account and. instead of producing and proving the account current between himself and the defendant, produced evidence to prove the admission of the debt, the Privy Council said: "They consider that it is a very dangerous thing to rest a judgment upon verbal admissions of a sum due, especially when there are other means of proving the case, if a true one"(2) But where an admission is deliberately made, and precisely identified, the evidence it affords is often of the most satisfactory nature.(3) Admissions depend very much upon the circumstances under which they are made (4)

As in the case of admissions in civil proceedings, the evidence of oral confessions of guilt ought to be received with great caution.(5) But a deliberate

[illegible]

...ent (9) In order to determine whether statements are confessions the whole statements

...n must be

...e case, the disregard

In trials

by jury, it is the duty of the Judge to lay the confessions properly before the jury, pointing out the circumstances bearing for, and against, their value, but it is for the jury to form an opinion as to their weight.(12) "A judge, in fact, is hardly justified in treating a confession made by a prisoner before a magistrate, as a mere piece of evidence which a jury may deal with in the same way as they would with the evidence of a witness of doubtful veracity. If a prisoner has confessed before a magistrate, the attention of the jury should be

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 161.

(2) Lalla Sheopershad v. Juggernath, 10 Ind. Ap., 74, 79, 13 C. L R, 271

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 861.

(4) R v Simmonsto, 1 C & K, 164, 166; see notes to s 31, post

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 862.

(6) Id, § 865; v. ante, Introduction See as to the degree of credit to be given to confessions, Roscoe, Cr, Ev, 13th Ed, 35, 36, 1 Phillips & Arn, Ev., 402, 10th Ed, R. v Dada Ana, 15 B, at p 480 (1889).

(7) Emperor v Pramathanath Bagchi, 30 C L. J, 503: as to whether statement suggesting inference of guilt was confession, see Pan Gang v Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J, 42 A statement which suggests an inference of guilt may amount to a confession though the person making it may directly repudiate his participation in the crime, Jasoda v. Emperor, 53, I. C., 691.

(8) Smith v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J., 189.

(9) Hasnu v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J., 737; s c., 53, I. C., 145.

(10) Ah Foong v. Emperor, 22 C. W. N, 834; s c., 28 Cr. L. J., 105.

(11) Kamoda v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J., 785; s c., 46 I C., 705.

(12) R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B., 452, 461, 478 (1889); R. v. Mania Daval, 10 B., 497, 502 (1886).

the party relies on the admission, he must take the whole of it together; in the former case, the one party cannot be said to use the admission of the other as evidence at all Under the Civil Procedure Code, "it is the duty of the Court to examine the written statements in order to see on what points the parties are at issue, to lay down the issues and to receive and consider the evidence adduced on the points in dispute, but the Court will not allow the parties to waste its time by producing evidence to establish that which has never been contradicted, and therefore to lay down that when a defendant admits any one fact contained in the written statement of the plaintiff, and thereby excludes independent evidence thereof, he is entitled to say that the plaintiff has relied on his statement as evidence, and that he (the defendant) is, in consequence, in a position to claim that the whole of it may be read as evidence in his own favour, is a proposition which cannot be maintained. If a party wishes to give evidence in his own favour, of course it is in his power to come forward like any other witness and subject himself to examination and cross-examination in open Court; but until he has subjected himself to cross-examination, no statement which he may volunteer can be used as any evidence in support of his own case, unless the right, so to use it, has accrued from the deliberate act of his adversary. A party cannot himself determine that his own statement shall be used as evidence in his favour."(1)

Weight to be given to admissions

As in the case of admissions in civil cases, admissions in criminal cases must be taken as a whole, and the general rule is that the whole of a confession must be given in evidence, and read and taken together. "There is no doubt that, if a prosecutor uses the declaration of a prisoner, he must take the whole of it together, and cannot select one part and leave another(2); and, if there be either no other evidence in the case, or no other evidence incompatible with it the declaration so adduced in evidence must be taken as true But if, after the whole of the statement of the prisoner is given in evidence, the prosecutor is in a situation to contradict any part of it, he is at liberty to do so, and then the statement of the prisoner and the whole of the other evidence must be left to the jury for their consideration, precisely as in any other case where one part of the evidence is contradictory to another."(3) A confession is evidence for the prisoner as well as against him: it must be taken altogether; but still the jury may, if they think proper, believe one part of it and disbelieve another. The Court is at liberty to disregard any self-exculpatory statements contained in the confession which it disbelieves.(4) When the prosecution relies on such a statement as the only evidence of an offence, care must be taken that nothing is read into the statement.(5)

(1) Shaikh Shurfuraz v. Shaikh Dhunoo, 16 W. R., 257 (1871), per Ainslie, J.

(2) R v Chokoo Khan, 5 W R., Cr, 70 (1866); R v. Sheikh Boodhoo, 8 W. R., Cr., 38 (1867); R. v. Gour Chand, 1 W. R, Cr., 17, 18 (1864); R. v. Chullunder Poramanick, 3 W. R., Cr., 55, 56 (1856); R v. Beshor Bewa, 18 W. R., Cr., 29 (1872), R. v. Nityo Gopal, 24 W. R., Cr, 80 (1875); Goloke Chunder v. The Magistrate of Chittagong, 25 W. R, Cr, 15 (1876); [admission not amounting to confession of guilt]; R. v. Sonaoollah, 25 W R, Cr. 23, 24 (1876); R. v Dada Ana, 15 B. 452, 459, 479 (1889); "If one part of a conversation is relied on as proof of a confession of the crime the prisoner has a right to lay before the Court the whole of what was said in that conversation, or at least so much as is explanatory of the part already proved, and perhaps, in favorem vitæ all that was related to the subject-matter in issue" The Queen's case, 2 Br & Bing, 297; as to distinct or opposing statements by the accused, see R. v. Soobjan, 10 B. L. R, 332 (1873); R. v Nityo Gopal, 24 W. R, Cr., 80 (1875), and v. Pika Bewa v. R. (1912); 39 C, 855.

(3) R. v. Jones, 2 C. & P., 699, per Bosanquet, J.

(4) R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P., 221, 226; R. v Dada Ana, supra at pp 459, 479; R. v. Babaji, cited, ib, 479; R. v. Sonaullah, 25 W. R., Cr., 23, 24 (1876); it may be that the Court would attach very little weight to the exculpatory parts: R v. Amrita Govinda, 10 B. H. C. R., 497, 500 (1873).

(5) Pika Bewa v R. (supra).

"Evidence of oral admissions ought always to be received with great caution. Such evidence is necessarily subject to much imperfection and mistake; for either the party himself may have been misinformed, or he may not have clearly expressed his meaning, or the witness may have misunderstood him, or may purposely misquote the expression used. It also sometimes happens that the witness, by unintentionally altering a few words, will give an effect to the statement completely at variance with what the party actually said."(1) So where a plaintiff sued for a sum said to be due upon a settlement of account and instead of producing and proving the account current between himself and the defendant, produced evidence to prove the admission of the debt, the Privy Council said: "They consider that it is a very dangerous thing to rest a judgment upon verbal admissions of a sum due, especially when there are other means of proving the case, if a true one "(2) But where an admission is deliberately made, and precisely identified, the evidence it affords is often of the most satisfactory nature.(3) Admissions depend very much upon the circumstances under which they are made (4)

As in the case of admissions in civil proceedings, the evidence of oral confessions of guilt ought to be received with great caution (5) But a deliberate

[illegible]

part (9) I [illegible] hole of the stat[illegible] nts are self-exc[illegible] be taken as a [illegible] the accused be[illegible] ard any statement contained in the confession which it disbelieves (11) In trials by jury, it is the duty of the Judge to lay the confessions properly before the jury, pointing out the circumstances bearing for, and against, their value, but it is for the jury to form an opinion as to their weight.(12) "A judge, in fact, is hardly justified in treating a confession made by a prisoner before a magistrate, as a mere piece of evidence which a jury may deal with in the same way as they would with the evidence of a witness of doubtful veracity. If a prisoner has confessed before a magistrate, the attention of the jury should be

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 161.

(2) Lalla Sheopershad v Juggernath, 10 Ind Ap, 74, 79, 13 C. L R, 271

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 861

(4) R v Simmonsto, 1 C & K, 164, 166, see notes to s 31, post

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 862

(6) Id, § 865, v. ante, Introduction. See as to the degree of credit to be given to confessions, Roscoe, Cr, Ev, 13th Ed, 35, 36, 1 Phillips & Arn, Ev, 402, 10th Ed, R v. Dada Ana, 15 B, at p 480 (1889).

(7) Emperor v Pramathanath Bagchi, 30 C. L. J, 503 · as to whether statement suggesting inference of guilt was confession, see Pan Gang v Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J, 42 A statement which suggests an inference of guilt may amount to a confession though the person making it may directly repudiate his participation in the crime, Jasoda v. Emperor, 53, I C, 691.

(8) Smith v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J., 189.

(9) Hasnu v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J., 737; s c., 53, I. C., 145.

(10) Ah Foong v. Emperor, 22 C. W. N, 834; s c., 28 Cr. L. J., 105.

(11) Kamoda v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J., 785; s c., 46 I C., 705.

(12) R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B., 452, 461, 478 (1889); R. v. Manja Dayal, 10 B., 497, 502 (1886).

drawn to the question whether there was any reason to suppose that that confession was made under any undue influence; and if there is no reason to suppose anything of the kind, the jury should be told so and advised that they may act upon it."(1) The infirmative hypotheses affecting self-criminative evidence have been in particular dealt with in the works of Bentham and Best.(2) False confessions are either the result of mistake (which may be of fact or of law) or are intentional. In the case of intentionally false confession the field of motive must be searched for such causes as mental and bodily torture, desire to stifle further inquiry; weariness of life, vanity, desire to benefit or injure others, and motives originating in the relation of the sexes. False confessions are not confined to cases in which there has really been a crime committed. Frequently such confessions have been made under hallucination of events which are impossible. The above causes affect more or less every species of confessional evidence. But extra-judicial statements are subject to additional infirmative hypotheses such as mendacity in the report, mis-interpretation of the language used and incompleteness of the statement.(3)

Admission defined

17. An admission is a statement, oral or documentary, which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, and which is made by any of the persons, and under the circumstances, hereinafter mentioned.

Admission by party to proceeding or his agent.

18. Statements made by a party to the proceeding, or by an agent to any such party, whom the Court regards, under the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly authorised by him to make them, are admissions.

By suitor in representative character.

Statements made by parties to suits, suing or sued in a representative character, are not admissions, unless they were made while the party making them held that character;

Statements made by—

By party interested in subject-matter.

(1) Persons who have any proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject-matter of the proceeding, and who make the statement in their character of persons so interested, or

By person from whom interest derived.

(2) Persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject-matter of the suit, are admissions, if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statements.

Admission by person whose position must be proved as against party to suit.

19. Statements made by persons whose position or liability it is necessary to prove as against any party to the suit, are admissions, if such statements would be relevant as against such persons in relation to such position or liability in a suit brought by or against them, and if they are made whilst the person making them occupies such position or is subject to such liability.

---

(1) R. v. Shahabut Sheikh, 13 W. R., Cr., 42, 43 (1870), per Norman, C. J.

(2) Best, Ev., §§ 554—573, Norton, Ev., 155, 161.

(3) Ib

Illustration.

A undertakes to collect rents for B.

B sues A for not collecting rent due from C to B

A denies that rent was due from C to B.

A statement by C that he owed B rent is an admission, and is a relevant fact as against A, if A denies that C did owe rent to B

20. Statements made by persons to whom a party to the suit has expressly referred for information in reference to a matter in dispute are admissions.

Admissions by person expressly referred tc by party t suit.

Illustration

The question is, whether a horse sold by A to B is sound

A says to B—' Go and ask C, C knows all about it,' C's statement is an admission.

Principle.—The reception of admissions considered as exceptions to the rule against hearsay is grounded upon the fact that what a person says may be presumed to be true as against himself, and when not obnoxious to that rule upon the fact of inconsistency But the very ground of this presumption excludes such an inference when the declarations of a person are tendered as

When broadly stated in such a manner as to include these exceptions, the rule is that the declarations of a party to the record, or of one identified in interest with him, are as against such party receivable in evidence.(3) This identity of interest which determines the relevancy of the admission includes (a) agency(4); (b) proprietary or pecuniary interest(5), which includes (a) joint interest(6); (b) real as opposed to nominal interest(7); (c) derivative interest.(8) Statements by strangers are not generally relevant (9) But to this general rule also there are certain exceptions (10) In respect of the admissions of agents, the general principle applies qui facit per alium facit per se. There is a legal identity of the agent with the principal. If the principal constitutes the agent his representative in a certain transaction, whatever the latter does in the lawful prosecution of that transaction is the act of the principal (11) Agency is the ground of reception of declarations by partners and joint contractors and referees (12) In respect of declarations by persons having a proprietary or pecuniary interest

admission

pleader for before the institution of the suit to arrange a settlement, this was held admissible against

(1) Best, Ev., § 519; Wills, Ev., 103, but see also Taylor, Ev., § 723; v. ante, Introduction, and s 21, post.

(2) In re Whiteley, L R, 1 Ch (1891), 558, 563, 564, Stanton v. Percival, 5 H L Cas, 273.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 740

(4) Ss 18, 20; see post.

(5) S. 18, cl. (1), see post.

(6) See p. 196, post.

(7) See post

(8) S. 18, cl. (2), see post.

(9) Steph Dig, Art. 18; Taylor, Ev., § 740, see post.

(10) Taylor, Ev, §§ 759—765, see post, and s. 19.

(11) Taylor, Ev., s. 602; Best, Ev., § 531, see post. As to admissions by agents, see the judgment of Sir W. Grant in Fairlie v. Hastings, 10 Vessey, J., 123.

(12) See post; and Introduction, ante.

(13) In re Whiteley, L. R., 1 Ch. (1891), 558, 563; Chalho Singh v. Jharo Singh, 39 C., 995 (1912).

all the defendants.(1) This rule depends upon the legal principle that persons seised jointly are seised of the whole; each being seised of the whole, the admission of either is the admission of the other and may be produced in evidence against that other. That is applied from real property law to other matters (2) In the case of parties who have a real as opposed to a nominal interest, the law in regard to this source of evidence looks chiefly to the real parties in interest, and gives to their admissions the same weight as though they were parties to the record.(3) Lastly, in the case of derivative interest, the party against whom the admission is sought to be used takes what he claims in the subject-matter from the person who made the admission, as where it is sought to read against the heir an admission made by the ancestor. The ground upon which admissions bind those in privity with the party making them is (as in the case of the other above-mentioned exceptions) that they are identified in interest.(4) "He (the person against whom the admission is read) stands in the shoes of the party making the admission. He can only claim what he claims because he derives title in that way; and therefore it is only fair, according to legal principles, that he should be bound by the admissions of him through whom he claims."(5)

s. 3 ("Document.") s. 3 ("Fact in issue")
s. 3 ("Relevant fact") ss. 22, 65, cl. (b) (Admissions as to documents) s. 21 (Proof of admissions)
s. 31 (Effect of admissions.)
s. 23 (Admissions "without prejudice.") ss. 24-30 (Rules with regard to admissions which amount to confessions)

Admissions generally:—Steph. Dig., Arts 15—20; Taylor, Ev, §§ 723—861; Wharton, Ev., 1075—1220; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 62—79; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 213—240; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 149—179; Best, Ev., §§ 518 et seq; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 420—445; Norton, Ev., 142—154, Gresley, Ev., 456; Phillips & Arn., Ev., 308—401; Greenleaf, Ev., Ch. XI, Wigmore, § 1048, et seq. By agents.—Steph. Dig, Art. 17; Taylor, Ev, §§ 602, 605; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 69—71; Best, Ev, § 531, p 487; Evan's Principal and Agent, 187—193, 2nd Ed.; Norton, Ev, 144; Pearson's Law of Agency in British India, 426—428; Powell, Ev., 290; Story on Agency, §§ 134, 135; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 47; Wigmore, Ev., § 1078. By persons having proprietary or pecuniary interest.—Steph. Dig, Arts. 16, 17; Taylor, Ev., §§ 743—754, 787, 756—758, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 67; Act IX of 1908 (Limitation), s 21 By persons from whom interest is derived:—Steph. Dig, Art. 16; Taylor, Ev., §§ 787—794, 758, 90. By stranger:—Steph. Dig., Art. 18, Taylor, Ev., §§ 740, 759—765 By referees:—Steph. Dig, Art. 19, Taylor, Ev., §§ 760—765

COMMENTARY.

Parties. As to admissions by parties (when sued or suing personally) made when a minor, or when holding a representative character, v. ante, p. 220, and as to nominal parties, guardians and next friends, v. post; admissions may be made by parties at any time(6), and either in a present or past(7) litigation. It is not

(1) Meajan Matbar v. Alimuddi Mia, 44 C, 130 (1917), per Sanderson, C. J & Mookerjee, J

(2) In re Whiteley, per Kekewich, J.: The declarations of partners and joint contractors are admissible both on the ground of joint-interest and of agency; Taylor, Ev., §§ 598, 743, Steph. Dig, Art. 17, see post.

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 756, see post.

(4) Ib., § 787.

(5) In re Whiteley, L. R. 1 Ch. (1891), 558, 561 per Kekewich, J.

(6) Unless the admission is one made by a person suing or sued in a representative character, in which case it must be made whilst the person making it sustains that character, s 18, ante; and see Steph. Dig Art, 16, v. ante, Introduction necessary that the prior litigation should have been between the same parties and in this respect a distinction must be drawn between statements admissible under the present sections, and those admissible under the thirty-third section, post And so it was held that the deposition of a person in a suit to which he was not a party, was, in a subsequent suit in which he was defendant, evidence against him and those who claimed under or purchased from him, although he was alive and had not been called as a witness. The thirty-third section (post) did not apply to such a deposition, which was admissible under the present section, although it might have been shown that the facts were different from what they were stated to be in the former case (1) And an admission by a jaghirdar, in a suit brought by Government to assess the lands, that the lands were comprised in a zemindari, is evidence of that fact in a suit by the zemindar to resume those lands.(2) Admissions by the parties in a former arbitration may be used in evidence in a subsequent suit (3) The second paragraph of the eighteenth section settles a point which appears to be one of some doubt in England.(4) Therefore, where parties sue or are sued in a representative character [e g., as assignees of an insolvent(5), executors, administrators, trustees, and the like] statements made by them before they were clothed with that character will [illegible] the persons they [illegible] .ee of a bankrupt

(7) Hurish Chunder v. Prosunno Coomar, 22 W. R, 303 (1874); Obhoy Govind v. Beejoy Gobind, 9 W. R., 162 (1869); Sheo Surn v. Ram Khelawan, 14 W. R, 165 (1870); Grish Chunder v. Shama Churn, 15 W. R., 437 (1871); Bhugwan Chunder v. Mechoo Lall, 17 W.

[illegible] . The admissions
[illegible] s of the donor.(8)
[illegible] nission by parties
[illegible] f the deceased (9)
The representative capacity of a person who represents a minor comes to an end by the death of that minor (10) In respect of co-representatives it seems that the admission of one executor will not bind another, at any rate, if the admission was not made in the character of executor (11) The admissions of an executor are not receivable against an administrator appointed during the absence of the executor.(12) Where one of several trustees had admitted that he had money of the trust-estate in his hands, and it was submitted that this admission of one of them bound the rest, it was held that it would, if they were all personally liable, but not where they were only trustees (13) Under the

---

R., 372 (1872); Kashee Kishore v. Bama Soondaree, 23 W. R., 27 (1875); Forbes v Mir Mahomed Taki, 5 B L. R, 529 (1870), 14 W R. (P. C.), 28; 13 M. I. A, 438; see also cases cited, ante, p 221. *In a suit by A and B, parties not entitled to the property of a deceased Hindu, as his heirs against C and D, an admission by the person legally entitled to the property, made in a petition filed in the suit, that by her gift or relinquishment plaintiffs had a title to the property, was held to be evidence that such title existed anterior to the commencement of the suit: Gour Lall v. Mohesh Narain, 14 W R., 484 (1871)

(1) Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, 14 B. L. R, App. 3 (1874); 21 W. R., 414.

(2) Forbes v. Mir Mahomed Taki, supra.

(3) Huronath v. Preonath, 7 W. R, 249 (1867), and admissions made before an arbitrator are receivable in a subsequent trial of the cause, the reference having proved ineffectual: Gregory v. Howard, 3 Esp., 113; Slack v. Buchanan. Pea P., 5.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 755; Steph Dig, Art. 16.

(5) Merely to speak of the "plaintiff-assignee," is not an admission of the plaintiff's title as assignee; Clarke v. Mullick, 2 M. I A, 263, 269 (1839).

(6) S. 18, ante; Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L J, Ch, 125, 140, 141.

(7) Fenwick v Thornton, 1 M & M, 51; see Taylor, Ev., § 755

(8) Dwarkanath Bose v. Chundee Churn, 1 W. R, 339 (1865).

(9) Chunder Kant v. Ramnarain Dey, 8 W. R, 63 (1867).

(10) Hulodhur Roy v. Jupoo Nath, 14 W. R, 162 (1870).

(11) Chunder Kant v. Ramnarain Dey, 8 W. R., 63 (1867); and see Tullock v. Dunn, Ry. & M., 416; Scholey v. Walton, 12 M. & W., 513, 54; Fox v. Waters, 12 A. & E., 43; Taylor, Ev., § 750; Act IX of 1908, s 21 (Indian Limitation Act); Williams on Executors, 1796, 1813, 1937.

(12) Rush v. Peacock, 2 M. & Rob., 162.

(13) Davis v. Ridge, 3 Esp, 101; and see Skaife v. Jackson, 3 B. & C., 421 [in which it is also said that a receipt for money is not like a release pleadable in bar; it is nothing more than a primâ facie eighteenth and twenty-first sections the admissions of a person accused in criminal proceedings will be receivable. But in England it appears to be doubtful whether in any case a prosecutor in an indictment is a party to the inquiry in such a sense as that an admission by him could be received in evidence to prove facts for the defence. Of course this does not refer to the admission of facts which would go to his reputation for credibility as a witness in the case; these may always and under all circumstances be proved by the admission of the witness himself.(1)

Co-defendants.

[illegible] admission can only be given in evidence against [illegible] inst any other party.(2) An admission or even [illegible] of several defendants in a suit, is no evidence [illegible] It is a fundamental proposition that a plaintiff cannot sue for more than his own right, and that no defendant can, by an admission or consent, convey the right, or delegate the authority to one, for more than his own share in property.(4) "In general, the statement of defence made by one defendant cannot be read in evidence, either for or against his co-defendant: neither can the answers to interrogatories of one defendant be read in evidence, except against himself; the reason being, that, as there is no issue between the defendants, no opportunity can have been afforded for cross-examination; and moreover, if such a course were allowed, the plaintiff might make one of his friends a defendant, and thus gain a most unfair advantage. But this rule does not apply to cases where the other defendant claims through the party whose defence is offered in evidence, nor to cases where they have a joint-interest, either as partners or otherwise in the transaction. Wherever the admission of one party would be good evidence against another party, the defence of the former may à fortiori, be read against the latter."(5) Similarly, the admissions or confessions of a respondent are not admissible evidence against a co-respondent(6); nor à fortiori against the petitioner.(7) Nor are those of parties engaged in a joint-tort, or joint crime, receivable against each other, except to the limited extent, and under the circumstances, in the tenth section (ante), mentioned.

Agents

He who sets another person to do an act in his stead as agent is chargeable by such acts as are done under that authority, and so too properly is affected acknowledgment that the money has been paid] But a receipt may operate as a waiver, Kailas Chandra Nath v. Sheikh Chhenu, 42 C, 546 (1915).

---

(1) Roscoe, Cr., Ev., 12th Ed, 47; see R. v. Arnall, 8 Cox, 439, and note in 3 Russ Cr, 489. As to whether the admissions of an accused may be used for purely probative purposes, that is to relieve the prosecutor of the proof of facts essential to his case, see R. v. Flaherty, 2 C. & K, 782, which was a bigamy case; it was held that an admission of the first marriage by the prisoner, made to a constable, was [illegible]me, though not sufficient, evidence of [illegible] marriage and in R. v. Savage, 13 Cox, 44 C[illegible] similar case (overruling R. v. & Mook[illegible] M. & Rob, 503), an admission

(2) In [illegible] The declara[illegible] was tendered to prove the contractors a[illegible] but was rejected, v. ante, ground of join[illegible] to admission for the pur- Taylor, Ev, §§ [illegible] see s 58, post. 17, see post. [illegible] L. R, 1 Ch. (1891),

(3) Taylor, Ev, § [illegible]

(4) Ib, § 787. [illegible] v. Rajoneekant [illegible]

(5) In re Whiteley, [illegible] 26 (1874); 23 W. 55[illegible], per Kekewich, R., 214; 2 I. A., 113; Niamutoollah Khadim v. Himmut Ali, 22 W. R., 519 (1874); Lachman Singh v. Tansukh, 6 A., 325 (1884); Azizullah Khan v. Ahmad Ali, 7 A, 353 (1858); Kali Dutt v. Abdul Ali, 16 C, 627, 635 (1888), Taylor, Ev, § 754; Naraince Dassee v. Nurrohurry Mohunto, Marshall, 70 (1862). See Article in 1 A. L. J., 233*n*.

(4) Azizullah Khan v. Ahmad Ali, supra.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 754, and cases there cited, but as to cross-examination by defendant of co-defendant, see s. 137, post; as to admissions by co-defendants who are joint-tenants or joint contractors, see Chundereshwar Narain v. Chuni Ahir, 9 C. L. R., 359 (1881); Kowsulliah Sundari v. Mukta Sundari, 11 C., 588 (1855), and post.

(6) Robinson v. Robinson, 1 S. & T. 363; see also Hay v. Gordon, 10 B. L. R., [illegible]

by admissions made by the agent in the course of exercising that authority. The question, therefore, turns upon the scope of the authority. This question frequently enough a difficult one, depends upon the doctrine of agency applied to the circumstances of the case and not upon any rule of evidence.(1) The principle upon which admissions of an agent, within the scope of his authority, are permitted to be proved is that such admissions, as well as his acts, are considered as the acts or admissions of the principal What is said or done by an agent is said or done by the principal through him, as his mere instrument (2) A statement, therefore, by an agent, whom the Court regards under the circumstances of the case as expressly or impliedly authorized to make it, is admissible though not on oath.(3)

Before the admissions of an agent can be received, the fact of his agency must be proved This can be done by proving that the agent has acquired credit by acting in that capacity, and that he has been recognised by the principal in other instances of a similar character to that in question (4) A person either may expressly constitute another his agent to make an admission · thus if a person agree to admit a claim, provided J S will make an affidavit in support of it, such affidavit is proof against him(5), or he may authorize another to represent him in a particular business, when admissions made by that other within the scope of his authority, in the ordinary course of, and with reference to, such business, will be evidence against him When the principal constitutes the agent as his representative in the transaction of certain business, whatever the agent does in the lawful prosecution of that business is the act of the principal (6) "Where the acts of the agent will bind the principal, then his representations, declarations and admissions, respecting the subject-matter will also bind him, if made at the same time and constituting part of the res gestæ."(7) The admission must be one having reference to the subject-matter of the agency (8) So whatever is said by an agent, either in the making of a contract for his principal, or at the time and accompanying the performance of any act, within the scope of his authority, having relation to and connected with and in the course of the particular contract or transaction in which he is then engaged, is, in legal effect, said by his principal and admissible in evidence (9) "The representation, declaration, or

(1) Wigmore, Ev, § 1078

(2) Franklin Bank v Pennsylvania, D. & M. S N Co, 11 G & J, 28, 33 (Amer.).

(3) Govindji Jhavar v Chhotalal Velsi, 2 Bom L R, 651 (1900)

(4) Roscoe, N P, Ev, 71; Evan's Principal and Agent, 192, Watkins v Vince, 2 Stark, 368, Courteen v Touse, 1 Camp, 43n, Neal v Erving, 1 Esp, 61. See as to proof of agency, Ram Buks v Kishori Mohun, 3 B. L R, A C J., 273 (1869)

(5) Lloyd v Willan, 1 Esp, 178; Stevens v Thacker, Peake, 187; Roscoe, N. P Ev, 69, see s. 20, ante, and note on "Referees"

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 602, and see generally ib, §§ 602—605; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 161; Steph Dig, Art 17, Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 69—71, Powell, Ev., 290, Pearson's Law of Agency in British India, 426—428; Evan's Principal and Agent, 187—193; Best, Ev, p 487, Norton, Ev., 144; as to the acts, contracts and representations of the agent which are original evidence, and receivable for, as well as against, his principal, v. ante, Introduction

(7) Story on Agency, § 134: "res gestæ" here means "the business" regarding which the law identifies the principal and agent, and must not be taken to import that the declarations must form a part of the res gestæ in the evidentiary sense of that term, it has been said that the declarations of an agent are not receivable as to bygone transactions, see Evans, supra, 189, citing Great Western Railway Company v. Willis, 18 C. & B N., 748, Fairlie v. Hastings, 10 Ves, 128; Kahl v. Jansen, 4 Taunt, 565, see also Pearson, supra, 427; but this is misleading: for so long as the representations are made concerning the principal's business, and in the ordinary course of it, it is immaterial if they relate to past or present events; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 232; citing Prof. Thayer in the Irish Law Times, Feb. 19, 1881.

(8) See Pearson, supra, and cases there cited.

(9) Per Buchanan, C. J., in Franklin Bank v. Pennsylvania D. & M. S. N. Co, 11 G. & J., 28, 33 (Amer), Wigmore, Ev, § 1078.

admission of the agent does not bind the principal, if it is not made at the very time of the contract, but upon another occasion; or if it does not concern the subject-matter of the contract but some other matter, in no degree belonging to the res gestæ"(1) It does not follow that a statement made by an agent is an admission merely because, if made by the principal himself, it would have been one; for the admission of an agent cannot always be assimilated to the admission of the principal.(2) "The party's own admission, whenever made, may be given in evidence against him; but the admission or declaration of his agent binds him only when it is made during the continuance of the agency in regard to a transaction then depending, et dum fervet opus When the agent's right to interfere in the particular matter has ceased, the principal can no longer be affected by his declarations any more than by his acts, but they will be rejected in such case as mere hearsay."(3) Therefore admissions by an agent of his own authority and not accompanying the [illegible] his principal, nor made [illegible] ey refer, are not binding [illegible] d are not admissible in evidence, but come within the rule excluding hearsay, being but an account or statement by an agent of what has passed or been done or omitted to be done —not a part of the transaction, but only statements or admissions respecting it (4) The words of the eighteenth section (ante) "whom the Court regards under the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly authorised by him to make them," leave it open to the Courts to deal with each case that arises upon its own merits(5), having regard to the law of agency applicable and the particular facts of each case But it is apprehended that the Courts will, in the application of this section, be guided by the principles laid down by the English and American cases and text-writers.(6) The admissions are receivable in evidence without calling the agent himself to prove them.(7) As an agent can only act within the scope of his authority, declarations or admissions made by him as to a particular fact are not admissible, unless they fall within the nature of his employment as such agent.(8) Account-books, though proved not to have been regularly kept in the course of business, but proved to have been kept on behalf of a firm of contractors by its servant or agent appointed for that purpose, are relevant as admissions against the firm. The fact, however, that the books had not been regularly kept might be a good reason for

(1) Story on Agency, § 135

(2) Steph Dig., Art. 17, Taylor, Ev., § 602

(3) Taylor, Ev., ib., and cases there cited, the authority to make admissions is at once put an end to by the determination of the agency, whether or no such determination has been properly brought about: Kalee Churn v. Bengal Coal Co., 21 W. R., 405

(4) Franklin Bank v. Pennsylvania, supra; narratives of, explaining or admitting, a past act are not admissible, even though the agency continue unless the agent be empowered to speak for his principal at the time, Wharton, Cr. Ev., p. 594*n* For instance, an agent might be specially sent to make a statement on behalf of his principal as to what had occurred

(5) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 87, 88: "The point to be regarded in this clause is not only the establishment of an agency, as to which the Court must be satisfied, but that there was authority given sufficient to cover the particular statement relied on as admissions" Norton, Ev., 144.

(6) v. post, remarks of Tindal, C. J., in Garth v Howard, 8 Bing., 451

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 602; Evans, supra, 188, 189; if the statements of the agent are admissible, the statements of the agent's interpreter, acting as such in the agent's presence, are admissible without calling the interpreter, and it must be assumed as against the principal that the interpreter interpreted faithfully: Reid v. Hoskins, 26 L J., Q B, 5; 5 E. & B, 729; admissions which consist of hearsay evidence are not receivable against the principal, Kahl v Jansen, 4 Taunt, 565

(8) Garth v. Howard, 8 Bing, 451; see Venkataramanna v. Chavela Atchiyamma, 6 Mad H. C. R., 127 (1871): as illustrations of the admission and rejection of statements upon this principle, see The Kirkstall Brewery Company v. The Furness Railway Company, L. R, 9 Q B, 468; 43 L J, Q. B, 142; Garth v. Howard, supra.

rejecting the account, if offered in evidence against any person other than the contractor or his partners.(1) It is of course open to the contractor or any of his partners to show that the entries have been made after such a fashion that no reliance can be placed upon them, but if made by a clerk of the firm, they are relevant (2) An agent's reports to his principal are not, in general, receivable against the latter in favour of third persons, as admissions.(3) Thus letters of an agent to his principal, in which the former is rendering an account of the transaction he has performed for him, are not admissible against the principal.(4) When, however the principal had replied to the agent, the letters of the latter were held admissible as explanatory of the statements of the former.(5) As the declarations of an agent are admissible on the ground of the legal identity of the agent with the principal, the declarations and acts of an agent cannot bind an infant, because the latter cannot appoint an agent (6) Evidence may be given against companies, of admissions made by their directors or agents relating to matters within the scope of their authority.(7) Thus a letter written by the secretary of a company by order of the acting directors(8), stating the number of shares held by M, was admitted on behalf of his executors, in proceedings against them.(9) But the confidential reports of directors to a meeting of the shareholders(10), admissions at a board meeting of less than the requisite number of members(11), have been held not to be receivable. The manager [illegible] bank as to its practice, [illegible] servant of companies [illegible] pecting a house belonging to the corporatic [illegible] in an action for an injury to the plaintiff's [illegible] ant's premises(14); but the report of a surveyor to the corporation, as to the value of lands about to be purchased by it, is not evidence, either of the truth of the facts or to explain the resolutions or letters of the corporation as to the [illegible]

[illegible] receipt of shop-goods) of a shopman are evidence against his master, but not his admissions as to a transaction outside the usual business.(17) An admission by a person who has generally managed A's landed property, and received

(1) R v Hanmanta, 1 B, 610, 617 (1877) See s 34, post and notes thereto

(2) Ib

(3) Steph Dig, Art 17, Langhorn v Allnutt, 4 Taunt, 511, Re Devala Co, L R, 22 Ch D, 593, Cooper v Metropolitan Board of Works, 25 Ch D, 472; Kahl v Jansen, 4 Taunt, 565; Rayner v. Pearson, ib, 662, Betham v. Benson, Gow, 45, Fairlie v Hastings, 10 Ves., 123; though see contra, Solway, 10 P. D., 137, see Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 233, Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 70, Evans, supra, 190.

(4) Langhorn v Allnutt, supra.

(5) Coates v. Bainbridge, 5 Bing, 58

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 605, and v. ante, Introduction.

(7) Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 70; Lindley, Company Law, 183

(8) But, unless acting under the express order of the directors, the secretary of a company cannot make admissions against the company even as to the receipt of a letter: Bruff v. Great N. Ry. Co, 1 F. & F, 345; see also Burnside v. Dayrell, 3 Exch, 225; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 70, 71.

(9) Meux Executor's case, 2 D. M. & G, 522.

(10) Re Devala Co, 22 Ch D, 593, v. ante

(11) Ridley v Plymouth Baking Co., 2 Exch, 711.

(12) Simmons v London Joint-Stock Bank (1892), A C, 201

(13) Kirkstall Brewery Co v. Furness Ry. Co, L R., 9 Q B, 468; Gt. W. Ry. Co v. Willis, 18 C. B, N. S., 748; Mayhew v. Nelson, 6 C. & P., 58; Stiles v. Cardiff S. Navigation Co, 33 L J., Q B, 310; Agassiz v. London Tram Co, 27 L. T., 492.

(14) Paxton v. St Thomas' Hospital, 3 M & Ry, 625*n*

(15) Cooper v. Met. Board of Works, 25 Ch D, 5, 472, supra; v. ante

(16) Loughboro' Highway Board v Curzon, 55 L. T., 50

(17) Garth v. Howard, 8 Bing, 451; Schumack v. Lock, 10 B., Moo., 39; and see Clifford v. Burton, 1 Bing., 199, Meredith v. Footner, supra; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 70, 72.

his rents, is not evidence against A, as to his employer's title, there being no other proof of his agency ad hoc.(1) As to admissions made by partners and joint-contractors, v. post.

The manager of a joint Hindu family, or karta, is the agent for the other members, and is supposed to have their authority to do all acts for their common necessity or benefit.(2) He fully represents the family, and in the absence of fraud or collusion his acts are binding on the other members of the family.(3) But he can be sued by the other members for an account even if the parties suing were minors during the period for which the accounts are asked.(4) In respect of the admission of debts he may acknowledge, as he may create, debts on behalf of the family, but he has no power to revive a claim barred by limitation unless expressly authorised to do so.(5)

The admissions of a wife merely as such cannot affect her husband. They will only bind him where she had expressed or implied authority from him to make them. Whether she had such authority or not, is a question of fact to be found by the Court, as in the other cases of agency. The cases on this subject are mostly those of implied authority, turning upon the degree in which the husband permitted the wife to participate, either in the transaction of his affairs in general, or in the particular matter in question.(6)

Admissions by agents in criminal cases.

It has been already observed(7) that certain rules of admissibility are applicable in criminal cases only, but this is because the issues arise in criminal cases only, but in general the rules of admissibility are the same for the trial of civil and criminal causes. Conformably to this general doctrine the admissions of an agent may be equally received in a criminal charge against the principal. But it is a totally different question in the consideration of criminal as distinguished from civil justice how the person on trial may be affected by the fact when so established It might involve him civilly and yet be not sufficient to convict him of a crime. Whether the fact thus admitted by the agent would suffice to charge the principal criminally without his personal knowledge or

---

(1) Ley v Peter, 3 H & N, 101; 27 L J, Ex, 239, and generally as to admissions, see Roscoe, N P Ev, 62, et seq.; as to admissions by ships' officers, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 238.

(2) Kota Ramasami v. Bangari Seshama, 3 M, 145, 150 (1881), in which case it is also pointed out that the position of a Polygar differs from that of a manager of a Hindu family; see also as to the karta and his relations to adult and minor members, Chuckun Lall v. Poran Chunder, 9 W. R., 483 (1868); Obhoy Chunder v. Pearee Mohun, 1 W. R, F. B., 75 (1870); Gopalnarain v. Muddomutty, 14 B. L. R., 21, 32 (1874). [Silence, evidence of ratification of acts of karta]; Succaram Morarji v. Kalidas Kalianji, 18 B, 631 (1894), [widow manager]; Venkaji Shridhar v. Vishnu Babaji, ib, 534 (1893). [The manager must be allowed a reasonable latitude in the exercise of his powers].

(3) Jagan Nath v. Mannu Lall, 16 A, 231, 233 (1894).

(4) Obhoy Chunder v. Pearee Mohun, supra.

(5) Chinnaya Nayudu v Gurunagham, 5 M, 169, F. B. (1881) [overruling Kumara Sami v. Pala Nagappa, 1 M, 385 (1878), Kondappa v. Subba, 13 M, 189 (1889); Bhasker Tatya v Vijalal Nathu, 17 B, 512 (1892); Gopalnarain v. Muddomutty, 14 B L R, 21, 49 (1874), followed in Dinkar v Appaji, 20 B., 155 (1894). The manager of a joint Hindu family or the executor of a Hindu will, has no power by acknowledgment to revive a debt barred by law of limitation except as against himself], Shobanadri Appa v. Sriramulu, 17 M., 221 (1893).

(6) See generally, Taylor, Ev., §§ 766—771, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 72; Powell, Ev, 299; see judgment of Alderson, B., in Meredith v Footner, 11 M. & W., 202; as to wife carrying on business, see Taylor, Ev, § 605; and as to admissions in matrimonial causes which differ in some respects from ordinary nisi prius causes, in so far as in the former the interests of public morality are concerned; Plumer v. Plumer, 4 S & T., 263, ib, 768, 769.

(7) And see Wigmore, Ev., § 4, where the learned author observes that this is the more worth emphasizing because the occasional appearance in works on the law of the title "Criminal Evidence," has tendered to foster the fallacy that there are some separate groups of rules or some large number of modifications connivance would depend upon the particular rule of criminal law and not of evidence involved.(1) Thus it has been said that :—" An admission by an agent is never evidence in criminal, as it is sometimes in civil cases, in the sense in which an admission by a party himself is evidence An admission by the party himself is in all cases the best evidence which can be produced, and supersedes the necessity for all further proof; and in civil cases the rule is carried still further, for the admission of an agent made in the course of his employment, and in accordance with his duty, is as binding upon the principal as an admission made by himself. But this has never been extended to criminal cases. Thus, in order to make a client criminally responsible for a letter written by his solicitor, it is not sufficient to show that such letter was written in consequence of an interview, but it must be shown that it was written in pursuance of instructions of the client.(2) Where personal knowledge and authority are shown the admissions will be receivable Hence the declarations of a messenger sent to a third party by the prisoner, if made with reference to the object of the mission, are admissible in evidence against him, where the evidence shows they were made by his authority (3) If in other cases the evidence is not admitted it is because in those cases the criminal law requires evidence of personal knowledge and authority of and in respect of the particular act charged before criminal liability can be established. This, however, is a matter of substantive law which may admit of real or apparent exceptions, as in the case of a newspaper proprietor who is primâ facie criminally responsible for any libel it contains, though inserted by his agent or servant without his knowledge (4) Where a party is charged with the commission of an offence through the instrumentality of an agent, then it becomes necessary to prove the acts of the agent; and in some cases, as where the agent is dead, the agent's admission is the best evidence of those acts which can be produced Thus on the impeachment of Lord Melville by the House of Lords(5), it was decided that a receipt given in the regular and official form by Mr. Douglas who was proved to have been appointed by Lord Melville to be his attorney to transact the business of his office as treasurer of the Navy, and to receive all necessary sums of money, and to give receipts for the same and who was dead, was admis-

A vakil in this country has not ordinarily any greater power to bind his client than that which is possessed by an attorney in England (7) An attorney employed in a matter of business is not an agent to make admissions for his client, except after action commenced, and in matters relating to that action.(8) An admission made before action will, however, of course, affect the client if Pleaders, Solicitors, Counsel

(1) Wigmore, Ev, § 1078

(2) R v Downer, 14 Cox, C C, 486

(3) Browning v. State, 33 Miss, 48 (Amer), Wharton, Cr Ev § 695

(4) Wharton, Cr Ev, p 595 Lord Tenterden, however, considered this case as falling within the general rule, ib It has been argued generally that to impute the agent's act to the principal criminal design must be brought home to the latter, see Cooper v Slade, 6 H L C, 746

(5) 29 How St. Tr, 746, v. ante

(6) Roscoe, Cr Ev, 12th Ed, 46, 47. In which the following criticism on this case is made "Had, however, Mr Douglas been alive at the time, there can be no doubt that he must have been called, and that he might have been called to prove the receipt of the money would probably not have been questioned This case does not, therefore, as sometimes appears to have been thought, in any way, touch upon the rules that the admission of an agent does not bind his principal in criminal cases, but merely shows that where the acts of the agent have to be proved, those acts may be proved in the usual way."

(7) Prem Sookh v Pirthee Ram, 2 Agra Rep, 222 (1867) See Pearson's Law of Agency in British India, pp 16, 153, and as to muktars, pp 17, 114, ib

(8) Wagstaff v Watson, 4 B & Ad., 339, Ley v Peter, 3 H & N., 101, 111, per Watson, B Cordery The Law relating to Solicitors, 2nd Ed. (1888), pp 81—83 proof be given that he authorised the communication.(1) A pleader or solicitor has in civil cases implied authority to make admissions of fact against his client during the actual progress of litigation; and the client is affected by admissions of fact made by them. But a plaintiff is not bound by an admission of a point of law, nor precluded from asserting the contrary in order to obtain the relief to which, upon a true construction of the law, he may appear to be entitled.(2) Nor is an opinion expressed by a vakil in the course of argument adversely to a claim which he undertook to advocate, binding on his client, when it is not in accordance with the law applicable to the case; and it is clearly not binding on the other contending defendant (3) These admissions of fact during litigation may be made either incidentally in reference to matters connected with the action and without any view to obviate necessity of proof: admissions in such cases may be made in Court, or in chambers; or by documents or correspondence connected with the proceedings, and when made amount only to primâ facie evidence(4): thus an undertaking (which is a step in the cause) to appear for A and B: "joint owners of the sloop X," by the solicitor who afterwards appears for them, is primâ facie evidence of the joint ownership of A and B(5); so in an action on a bill, a notice, served by the defendant's solicitor, to produce "all documents relating to the bill which was accepted by the said defendant," is primâ facie evidence of the acceptance.(6) This class of admissions which are made, not indeed with the express intent of dispensing with proof of certain facts, but as it were incidentally, is generally the result of carelessness, and though not regarded as conclusive admissions, is still considered, not unfrequently, as raising an inference respecting the existence of facts, which the adversary would otherwise have been called upon to prove (7) Admissions, however, made by solicitor, during litigation the solicitor's ions made for y be used on a new trial of the same cause, though the solicitor has, between the two trials, died, and the new solicitor has sent notice that he will make no admissions (9) And a statement made in a case by a pleader on behalf of his client is admissible in evidence against that client in another case in which he is a party.(10) Admissions by a clerk or agent having the management of the cause stand on the same footing as admissions by the solicitor.(11) These admissions are receivable

---

(1) See foot note 8, p 237

(2) Jotendra Mohun v Ganendra Mohun, 18 W. R., 359, 367 (1872). Musst Achjoo v Lallah Ramchandra, 23 W. R, 400, 401 (1875). See as to admissions by legal practitioners, cases cited under s 58, post, Field, Ev, 30, 31, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 10, 234, 235; Taylor, Ev, §§ 772—774; Steph Dig, Art 17—"Barristers and solicitors are the agents of their clients for the purpose of making admissions, whilst engaged in the actual management of the cause, either in Court or in correspondence relating thereto; but statements made by a barrister or solicitor on other occasions are not admissions merely because they would be admissions if made by the client himself."

(3) Krishnasami v Rajagopala, 18 M, 73, 83 (1895)

(4) Cordery, 82, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 234, 235; Taylor, Ev, § 773 In criminal cases a solicitor has no implied authority, as in civil cases, to affect his client by admissions of fact incidentally made R. v. Downer, 14 Cox, 486; v, ante, see s 58, post

(5) Marshall v Cliff, 4 Camp, 133.

(6) Holt v Squire, Ry. & M, 282; Taylor, Ev, § 773

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 773.

(8) Petch v Lyon, 9 Q. B, 147; Taylor, Ev, § 774, Cordery, 82, 83, and cases there cited

(9) Doe v Bird, 7 C. & P., 6; but see also Elton v Larkins, 5 C. & P, 385, 386

(10) Omabuttee v. Parushnath, 15 W. R, 135 (1871), but see Blackstone v. Wilson, 26 L J, Ex., 229; and remarks in Pearson's Law of Agency in British India, p 428; and see Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W., 102, 122

(11) Standage v. Creigton, 5 C. & P., 406, Tailor v Williams, 2 B & Ad, 845, 856; Taylor, Ev., § 774.

as those of the solicitor, not only against the client(1), but against the solicitor in favour of the client (2) Admissions by counsel stand upon similar though a narrower footing A solicitor, admitted to prosecute or defend, represents his client throughout the cause, but a counsel represents his client only when speaking for him in Court.(3) Therefore admissions made by counsel out of Court in conversation with the solicitor for the opposite side, are not evidence against his client. Where, therefore, pending a rule nisi the attorney served with the rule inferred, from a conversation, out of Court, with the counsel who had moved the rule, that the latter would forbear to move to make it absolute for a certain time, and the rule was made absolute by that counsel within the time mentioned, the Court refused to re-open the rule (4) But statements made by counsel during the conduct of the case are primâ facie evidence against the client.(5) Besides admissions of fact made incidentally during litigation they may also be expressly made for the purpose of dispensing with proof at the trial, in which case, in civil suits they are generally conclusive whether made by solicitor or counsel (6)

Guardian and Ward

A guardian has, under the Hindu law, a qualified power of dealing with the property of an infant under his charge He can, in case of necessity, sell, charge, or let it for a long term But the infant is not absolutely bound by the act of the guardian, he could, on attaining majority, recover the property if it had been disposed of without legal necessity, and in the case of an uncertificated guardian, the burden of proving legal necessity would, generally speaking, be on the person asserting it (7) But he will be bound by the act of his guardian, in the management of his estate, when bonâ fide and for his interest, and [illegible] ve done for hims [illegible] een validly enter [illegible] it may be speci [illegible] sity by an unau [illegible] (10) Where a minor will be bound by the act of his guardian, there he may be affected by his declarations made at the same time and forming part of the res gestæ, in respect of the particular act which constitutes a proper exercise of the functions of guardianship. But although a guardian may have authority to manage the estate, or possibly even to make a partition, it does not follow that he would have power to make admissions of previous transactions, so as to affect the

(1) Taylor v Willans, supra.

(2) Ashford v Price, 3 Stark, 185, Cordery, 83

(3) Richardson v Peto, 1 M. & G, 896; per Tindal, C. J, Taylor, Ev, § 783; and in one sense counsel is not the representative of the client, for he has the power to act without asking his client what he shall do, R v Registrar of Greenwich County Court, 15 Q B D, 54, 58 Nor is he the agent (in the ordinary sense) of the client, his position is a peculiar one; Colledge v Horn, 3 Bing, 119, 121; Mathews v Munster, L. R., 20 Q. B. D, 141, Swinfen v. Lord Chelmsford, 5 H. & N, 890, see Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 169, and also s 58, post.

(4) Richardson v. Peto, supra, and v. ib, as to the practice of entering warrants of attorney on the record

(5) Van Wart v. Wolley, Ry. & M, 4; Haller v Worman, 2 F. & F., 165; affirmed 3 L. T. N. S. S, 741; Cordery, 83, see also notes to s. 58, post; and Taylor, Ev., § 783.

(6) See s 58, post; and as to power of counsels and pleaders to compromise, v. ib; and admissions in criminal trials, ib.

(7) Jugul Kishori v. Anunda Lal, 22 C, 545, 550 (1895); see Mayne's Hindu Law, 5th Ed, §§ 191—197.

(8) Mayne's Hindu Law, § 196, and cases there cited. As to the onus in a suit by a minor to set aside a compromise made by a guardian, see Lekraj Roy v. Mahtabchund, 10 B. L. R., 35 (1871).

(9) Mir Sarwarjan v Fakharuddin Mahomed Chowdhury (1906), 34 C., 163 (Full Bench).

(10) Thayyammal v Kuppana Koundan, 38 M., 1125 (1915) (Art. 44 of Limitation Act does not apply to alienation by unauthorized guardian.)

estate of his ward (1) It has been held by the Madras(2) and Bombay(3) High Courts, disapproving of a decision to the contrary effect of the Calcutta High Court(4), that a guardian has authority to acknowledge a debt on the part of the minor, provided that the debt is not barred by limitation at the date of the acknowledgment(5), and it be shown in each case that the guardian's act was for the protection or benefit of the ward's property.(6) It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that when a guardian acting within the scope of his authority and for the benefit of a minor, makes an acknowledgment of a debt, such an acknowledgment is by an agent duly authorized and gives a fresh start to the computation of Limitation.(7) And in the Calcutta High Court it was held that where in a suit by reversioners to set aside an alienation by their maternal grandmother as made without legal necessity, an affidavit filed by their parents in another suit was tendered as an admission of such necessity, it was held on appeal that nothing in this act could make the affidavit relevant, for the reversioners had not derived their interest in the estate from their parents and the latter as their natural guardians were in no way authorized by them to make the admission.(8) As to guardians for the suit, and next friends, v. post.

Partners, Joint-contractors: Parties interested in subject-matter

A partner charges the partnership by virtue of an agency to act for it. How far his admissions are receivable depends therefore on the doctrines of agency as applied to partnership.(9) Partners and joint-contractors are each other's agents for the purpose of making admissions against each other, in relation to partnership transactions, or joint-contracts (10) Admissions by partners and joint-contractors are receivable both on the ground of agency and of joint interest.(11) After primâ facie evidence of partnership, the declaration of one partner is evidence against his co-partners as to partnership business(12), though

(1) Suruj Mookhi v. Bhagwati Konwar, 10 C L R (P. C), 377 (1881). But in Brojendra Coomar v The Chairman of the Dacca Municipality, 20 W. R, 223, 224 (1873), it was said that the guardian of an infant has no power to bind him by admissions As to an admission by the Court of Wards, see Ram Autar v. Raja Muhammad, 24 I A, 107 (1897); as to admission made merely for probative purposes, see s 58, post

(2) Sobhanadri Appa v Sriramulu, 17 M, 221 (1893), followed in Kailasa Padiachi v. Ponnukannu Achi, 18 M., 456 (1894)

(3) Annapagaudu v Sangadigyapa, 26 B, 221 (1901), overruling Maharana Ranmalsingji v. Vadilal Vakhatchand, 20 B., 61 (1894).

(4) Wajibun v. Kadir Buksh, 13 C, 292, 295 (1886), followed in Chhato Ram v Bilto Ali, 26 C, 15 (1898); Tilak Singh v. Chok Singh, 1 All. L. J., 302 (1904)

(5) See cases in notes 2—4, ante.

(6) See Annapagauda v Sangadigyapa, supra

(7) Ram Chandra Das v. Gaya Prasad, F. B (1908), 30 A., 238, dissenting from Tilak Singh v. Chhuttu Singh, 26 A., 598; and Mathew v. Brise (1851), 14 Beav, 431, Markwich v Hardingham (1880), 15 Ch. D., 349; Chinnery v. Evans (1864), 11 H L C., 115.

(8) Manokarini Debi v. Haripada Mitter, 18 C W. N., 718 (1914).

(9) Wigmore, Ev, § 1078.

(10) Steph. Dig, Art 17; Lucas v. De la Cour, 1 M. & S., 249; Whitcomb v Whiting, 1 S. L C., 644; 2 Doug, 652; Kali Kissore v. Gopi Mohan, 2 C. W. N, 166, 168 (1897); and see next note

(11) Taylor, Ev, §§ 593, 743, Story on Partnership, §§ 101—125; Re Whiteley (1891), L R, 1 Ch, 558, ante; Steph. Dig, Art 17, Kowsullia Sundari v Mukta Sundari, 11 C, 558, 591 (1885), Chalho Singh v Jharo Singh, 39 C, 995 (1912).

(12) Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 71; Nichols v. Dowdine, 1 Stark, 81; Taylor, Ev., § 743; Lucas v. De la Cour, supra; "What admissions bind in the case of partners? Those only which relate to matters connected with the partnership. For instance, an admission by one partner, that the two had committed a trespass would not bind the other. In this case the declaration related to nothing in which there was that community of interest which makes the declaration of one defendant evidence against the other." Fox v. Waters, 12 A & E., 43, per Williams, J. See Taylor, Ev., § 751; and see generally as to Partnership, ib, §§ 598—601, 743—754, 787; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 71; Steph. Dig, Art 17; Lindley, Partnership, 128, 162—166, Supp, 40; Pearson's Law of Agency, 428, 429; Act IX of 1872 (Indian Contract Act), ss 239—266

the former is no party to the suit.(1) Each member of a firm, being the agent of the others for all purposes within the scope of the partnership business, ke the case, ithout ms by have them-selves, entries in the partnership books(3) made without the knowledge of a partner will, as against him, be inadmissible(4), and a similar rule holds as to directors and other members of a company inter se"(5) Admissions which are made by one partner, in fraud of atter(6), unless made collusively with th ourt has held in several cases (in conflict Courts) that it is not enough to show that an acknowledgment on payment by a partner was an act necessary for, or usual in the course of, the partnership business, but that to bind other partners it must be proved to have been authorized by them.(8) But in a later case in that High Court it was held that where a promissory note which contained no indication that it was executed on behalf of the firm was executed by only two of three partners for money borrowed for the purposes of the partnership business, the promisee could recover also against the partner who did not execute it (9)

"When several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of the suit, the general rule is, that the admissions of any one of these persons are receivable against himself and his fellows, whether they be all jointly suing or sued or whether an action be brought in favour of, or against, one or more of them separately; provided the admission relate to the subject-matter in dispute, and be made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered (10) Thus, as has been already seen, the representation or misrepresentation of any fact made by one partner with respect to some partnership transaction will bind the firm(11), and so also in the case of a joint-contract where A, B, C and D make a joint and several promissory-note, either can make admissions about it as against the rest.(12) In order to render the admission of one person receivable in evidence against another, it must relate to some matter in which either both were jointly interested or one was derivatively interested(13) through the other, and

---

(1) Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt, 104; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 71, Taylor, Ev, § 743

(2) Latch v. Wedlake, 11 A. & E, 959, Taylor Ev, § 598, as to acknowledgments of debt by partner giving new period of limitation, v post

(3) As to the principle on which partnership books are evidence, see Hill v Manchester and Salford Waterworks, Co, 5 B. & Ad, 875

(4) Hutcheson v Smith, 5 Ir Eq, 117; Stewart's case, 1 Ch App, 587, Lindley, Partnership, 536

(5) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 231

(6) Rapp v. Latham, 2 B. & Ald., 795, Moore v. Knight (1891), 1 Ch 547

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 749, and cases there cited

(8) K. R V. Firm v Seetharama, 37 M., 146 (1914), Wallis, J, expressing reluctance to be bound by other rulings as for instance, Valasubramania Pillai v Ramanathan Chettiar, 32 M., 421 (1909); Shaikh Mohideen Sahib v Official, Assignee, 35 M, 143 (1912)

(9) Shanmuganatha Chettiar v Srinivasa Ayyar 40 M, 727 (1917), following Karmali Abdulla v Karimji Jiraji, P C., 39 B, 261 (1915), distinguishing Muthu Sastrigal v Visvanatha Pandhara, 26 M. L J, 19 (1914)

(10) Taylor, Ev., § 743, cited and adopted in Kowsulliah Sundari v Mukta Sundari, 11 C., 588, 590 (1885), s. 18, cl (1), ante, Whitcomb v Whiting, 2 Doug, 652, Wood v Braddick, 1 Taunt., 104, as to acknowledgments of joint-debts for the purpose of the law of limitation v. post, and Taylor, Ev, §§ 600, 601; 724—747

(11) Taylor, Ev, § 743 and v ante.

(12) Whitcomb v. Whiting, 2 Doug., 652, 1 S L. C, 644, Steph. Dig., Art. 17, illust. (f)

(13) See s 18, cl. (2) and post mere community of interest will not be sufficient. Thus, where two persons were in partnership, and an action was brought against them as part-owners of a vessel, an admission made by the one, as to a matter which was not a subject of co-partnership, but only of co-part-ownership, was held inadmissible against the other."(1) Nor will the admissions of one tenant-in-common be receivable against his co-tenant, though both are parties on the same side of the suit.(2) And an admission by a co-tenant as to who is the landlord of a hold- [illegible] s (3) Nor is an admission by one ryot [illegible] against his own interest), evidence to [illegible] holds.(4) And, where a joint-contract is severed by the death of one of the contractors, nothing that is subsequently done or said by the survivor, can bind the personal representative of the deceased(5), nor can the acts or admissions of the executor bind the survivor.(6) The rule that where there are several co-contractors, or persons engaged in one common business or dealing, a statement made by one of them, with reference to any transaction which forms part of their joint business, is admissible as against the others(7), was applied in the case of Kowsulliah Sundari Dasi v. Mukta Sundari Dasi (8) The facts of this case were that, in a suit between a zemindar and his ijaradars for rent, a person who was one of several jotedars in the mehal, was called as a witness for the zemindar, and admitted the fact that an arrangement existed whereby he and his co-jotedars had agreed to pay rent to the zemindar direct: this suit was decided in favour of the zemindar. The ijaradars then brought a suit against the jotedars, amongst whom was the witness abovementioned, to recover the sum which the jotedars ought to have paid to the zemindar direct, and which the ijaradars had been decreed to pay. [illegible] to payment to the ijaradars; in this suit the [illegible] the zemindar's suit was received as evidence [illegible] all the defendants. It was contended that the statement of the jotedar might have been received as an admission against himself only, but not as against the other defendants, but it was held, on the principle above stated, that the evidence was admissible. As to admissions founded on derivative interest (v. post). In an action for negligence or trespass, or in any other action for tort, the admission of one defendant will not be evidence against the others: the same rule prevails in criminal proceedings, as the law cannot recognise any partnership or joint interest in crime.(9)

The joint interest must be proved independently. An apparent joint interest is obviously insufficient to make the admissions of one party receivable against his companions, where the reality of that interest is the point in controversy. A foundation must first be laid by showing primâ facie that a joint interest

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 750, and other cases there and in §§ 751—753, cited, Steph. Dig., Art. 17; Jaggers v Binnings, 1 Stark R, 64; Brodie v. Howard, 17 C. B, 109, as to statements by co-executors and admissions by one of several trustees v. ante, first para of commentary.

(2) Dan v. Brown, 4 Cawen, 483, 492.

(3) Kali Kissen v Gopi Mohan, 2 C. W. N, 166 (1897).

(4) Nurrohurry Mohanto v. Naraince Dassee, W. R., F. B., 23 (1862).

(5) Atkins v Tredgold, 2 B. & C., 23; Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 217; Slaymaker v. Gundackers Ex., 10 Serg. & P., 75.

(6) Slater v. Lawson, 1 B. & Ad., 396; Hathaway v. Haskell, 9 Pick., 24.

(7) Per Garth, C. J., in Kowsulliah Sundari v Mukta Sundari, 11 C., 588, 590 (1888), citing Taylor, Ev, § 743; Kemble v Farren, 3 C. & P, 623; Lucas v. De la Cour, 1 M. & S., 249.

(8) Loc. cit., supra.

(9) Taylor, Ev., § 751; admissions by joint defendants in actions for tort are not generally evidence, except against themselves, unless there be proof of common object or motive: Norton, Ev., 143; see s. 10, ante; and ib. as to conspirators in crime; Taylor, Ev., §§ 597, 590; Daniel v. Potter, 1 M. & M, 503; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 68; and observations in R v. Hardwicke, 11 East, 578, nor in actions ex contractu, unless they relate to a matter in which there is an identity of interest; Fox v. Waters, 12 A. & E, 43.

exists. Where, therefore, it is sought to charge several as partners, an admission of the fact of partnership by one is not receivable in evidence against any of the others, to prove the partnership; but it is only after the partnership is shown to exist by independent proof satisfactory to the judge, that the admissions of one of the parties are received in order to affect the others.(1) In the case of admissions of persons who are not parties to the record, but who are interested in the subject-matter of the suit, the law looks chiefly to the real parties in interest, and gives to their admissions the same weight as though they were parties to the record.(2) Thus, the admissions of the cestui que trust of a bond, so far as his interest and that of the trustee are identical(3), those of the persons interested in a policy effected in another's name for their benefit(4); those of the ship-owners in an action by the master for freight(5), and, in short, those of any persons who are represented in the cause by other parties, are receivable in evidence against their respective representatives.(6) The admis- [illegible] rested (v post); [illegible] or the interests [illegible] nominal party may be affected by the admissions of a real party, who, though not named on the record, has a substantial interest(8) in the result(9); so conversely the admissions of a representative, if made while sustaining that character(10) and touching his principal's interest(11), are in general receivable against the principal, and this is so, although the representative is a mere nominal party, or bare trustee, whose name is used only for purposes of form (12) But the declarations of a guardian for the suit, or next friend of a minor, are not receivable against the latter, because these persons, though their names appear on the record, are not in fact parties to the action, but are considered as officers of the Court specially appointed to look after the interest of the minor (13)

" The admissions of a principal can seldom be received as evidence in an action against the surety upon his collateral undertaking. In these cases the main inquiry is whether the declarations of the principal were made during the transaction of the business for which the surety was bound, so as to become part of the res gestæ If so, they are admissible; otherwise they are not The surety is considered as bound only for the actual conduct of the party, and not for whatever he might say he had done and therefore, he is entitled to proof of the principal's conduct, by original evidence, when it can be had, excluding Principal and surety.

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 753, and cases there cited, and as to admissions as to the nature or extent of the partnership business, see Lindley, Partnership, 166, or as to the extent of partner s authority to bind the firm Ex-parte Agace 2 Cox Eq, 312

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 756, Roscoe, N. P. Ev 67, Phillips & Arn Ev 364

(3) Hanson v. Parker, 1 Wills, 257, as to statements by a cestui que trust, see Roscoe, N P Ev, 67, 68

(4) Bell v. Ansley, 16 East, 143

(5) Smith v Lyon, 3 Camp, 465

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 756

(7) Ib, § 757

(8) The "interest" is so qualified in Steph Dig, Art 16, the words of s 18 are however, "any proprietary pecuniary interest"

(9) v. ante; Taylor, Ev, §§ 756, 757; Roscoe N P Ev 67 Steph Dig, Art 16, Wills Ev 2nd Ed 172

(10) Legge v. Edmonds, 25 L J, Ch., 125, Fenwick v Thornton, 1 M & M, 51 Metters v Brown, 32 L J, Ex, 340

(11) Fox v Waters, 12 A & E, 43, Stanton v Percival 5 H L C, 257

(12) Moriarty v L. C. & D Co, L. R., 5 Q B, 314, "what the plaintiff on the record has said is always evidence against him, its weight being more or less, even if the plaintiff is merely a nominal plaintiff, a bare trustee for another, though slight in such a case, still it would be admissible, ib, per Blackburn, J Steph Dig Art 16, Roscoe, N. P Ev, 67; Bauerman v Radenius, 7 T R, 663, Phillips, Ev 362 though see Taylor, Ev, 741

(13) Taylor, Ev, § 742, and cases there cited, Phillips Ev, 363, Roscoe, Ev., 69, as to the admissions of committees of lunatics, see Stanton v. Percival, 5 H L. C, 257, v. ante, as to admissions by guardians and as to solemn admissions for the purpose of trials, see s 58, post

all his declarations made subsequent to the act to which they relate, and out of the course of his official duty."(1)

Limitation Act. The Limitation Act deals with the subject of the effect of acknowledgment in writing to bar limitation. But one of several joint-contractors, partners, executors, or mortgagees(2) is not chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment signed by, or by the agent of, any other or others of them.(3)

In England it appears now to be settled law that a payment on account of debt or a written acknowledgment made by a partner in the usual course of business is sufficient to take a partnership debt out of the Statute of Limitations as against the other members of the firm, the partner being presumed to have authority to act for the firm in making the payment or giving the acknowledgment (4) After a dissolution, however, the authority of the late partners to bind one another in this respect is determined(5), unless the facts are such as lead to the inference that the p as agent for the other partners.(6) by the executor of a deceased obligo and severally liable with other obligors on a bond is an acknowledgment only of the several liability of the deceased obligor.(7) An agreement by a debtor not to raise the plea of limitation is void under section 23 of the Indian Contract Act as an attempt to defeat the provisions of the Limitation Act.(8)

Persons from whom interest is derived. The subject of the second clause of s. 18 is usually included under the head of "privity," (9) the rule being that the admissions of one person are evidence against another in respect of privity between them.(10) Statements made by persons in possession of property and qualifying or affecting their title thereto are receivable against a party claiming through them by title subsequent to the admission.(11) Thus where A sued B to recover a watch, which B claimed

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 785, and v. ib., § 786; so if a man become surety in a bond conditioned for the faithful conduct of a clerk or collector, confessions of embezzlement, made by the principal after his dismissal, cannot be given in evidence if the surety be sued on the bond, Smith v. Whittingham, 6 C. & P, 78, rough entries made by the principal in the course of his duty, or whereby he has charged himself with the receipt of money, will, at least after his death, be received as proof against the surety; not altogether as declarations made by him against his interest, but because the entries were made by him in those accounts which it was his duty as clerk to keep, and which the defendant had contracted that he should faithfully keep Whitnash v. George, 8 B. & C, 556, Goss v. Watlington, 3 B. & B, 132.

(2) Act IX of 1908, s 19. The liability must appear upon the face of the acknowledgment and such liability cannot be read into it by proof aliunde Ittapan v Nanu, 12 Mad. L. J., 101; s. c, 26 M, 34, and as to the essentials of a valid acknowledgment, see Sriniwas Krishna Shiralkar v. Narhar Khandoo Khanvilkar (1903), 32 B., 296.

(3) Ib., s. 21; see The Indian Limitation Act with notes by H. T. Rivaz, 6th Edn., 98—101, and Field, Ev, 125—127; Steph. Dig, Art 17; as to principal and surety, see Cockrill v. Sparkes, 1 H. & C., 699, Re Powers, 30 Ch. D, 201.

(4) Goodwin v. Parton (1880), 42 L. T., 568; in re Tucker (1894), 3 Ch, 429; and see Taylor, Ev, § 600, and § 598, and Lindley on Partnership, 6th Ed, p 271

(5) Watson v. Woodman (1875), 20 Eq, 730

(6) In re Tucker, supra.

(7) Read v. Price (1909), 1 K. B., 577; Roddam v Morley, 1 De G. & J., 1; In re Lacy (1907), 1 Ch, 330.

(8) Ramamurthy v. Gopayya, 40 M., 701 (1917), see Sitharama v. Krishnaswami, 38 M, 374 (1915).

(9) See Steph. Dig., Art. 16; Taylor, Ev, § 787, and generally as to admissions on the ground of privity, ib, §§ 90, 758, 787—794; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 174.

(10) Taylor, Ev, § 787; the term "privity" denotes mutual or successive relationship to the same rights of property; and privies are distributed in several classes according to the manner of this relationship, viz (1) privies in blood, as heir and ancestor, and co-parceners; (2) privies in law, as executor to testator or administrator to intestate, and the like; (3) privies, in estate or interest, donor and donee, lessor and lessee, joint-tenants and the like, ib., § 787 See Bigelow's Estoppel, p. 597.

(11) Ib.; s. 18, cl. (2), ante; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 224, 225; Clark v. Brindabun Chunder, W. R., F. B., 20 (1862), as to admissions by parties through whom to retain as administrator of C, deceased, a declaration by C that he had given the watch to A was held to be evidence against B.(1) In proceedings for probate of a will, a witness, who attended on the testatrix during her last illness, was asked to depose to a statement made to the witness by the testatrix as to a disposition of her ornaments by will. The question was disallowed, but the Court of Appeal held that the question was improperly disallowed since a statement by the testatrix suggesting any inference as to the execution of a will would be an admission relevant against her representatives and would therefore be admissible as evidence (2) Where execution of a mortgage deed has been who adopts another makes an admission after the adoption, this admission will not bind the person adopted If the making of the admission is before the adoption it has been said to be a nice question upon which there is no authority, as to the effect of admissions made by a person who subsequently adopts in binding the person adopted, namely, whether the person adopted can be said to derive title from the adopter in such a way as to make the admission evidence against him.(5) The case of co-parceners and joint-tenants are assimilated to those of joint-promisors, partners, and others having a joint interest, which have been already considered. In other cases, where the party by his admissions as heir, executor

lified at the time

able in evidence against the representative, in the same manner as they would have been against others claim, see also Forbes v Mir Mahomed, 5 B L R, 529, 540 (1870), s c, 14 W R, P C, 28, 13 M I A, 438, Mohun Shahoo v Chuttoo Mowar, 21 W R, 34 (1874); Khenum Kuree v Gour Chunder, 5 W R, 268 (1866), Nund Pandah v Gyadhur, 10 W R, 89 (1868); Avudh Beharee Singh v Ram Raj, 18 W R., 105 (1872), Situl Pershad v Monohur Das, 23 W R., 325 (1875), Krishnasami Ayyangar v Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M, 73 (1894), Anundmoyee Chowdhrain v Sheeb Chunder, Marshall, 455 (1862); Goreebollah Sircar v Boyd, 2 W R, 190 (1865), Inan Chowdhry v Doolar Choudry, 18 W. R., 347 (1872), Somu Garukhal v Rangammal, 7 Mad H C R, 13 (1871)

---

(1) Smith v. Smith, 3 Bing, N C., 29.

(2) Nana v Shankur, 3 Bom L R., 465 (1901), not, however under s 11 as the head note suggests but this section. But see also Atkinson v Morris, L R, 1897, P D 40 [statements made by a testator are not admissible to prove the execution by him of a will], which was held inapplicable as it was based on the fact that the English Wills Act prescribes a particular form of proof, while to the will in the case cited no such rule applied

(3) Narain Das v Dilawar, 41 A., 250; s c, 521 C, 830

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 787, "It is to be observed that admissions are relevant only so far as the interests of the persons who made them or of those who claim through such persons are concerned. On this principle a distinction must be made between statements made by an occupier of land in disparagement of his own title, and statements which go to abridge or encumber the estate itself. For example, an admission by a patnidar or other holder of a subordinate tenure affects the patni or other tenure as against him and those who derive their title from him, but it will not affect the proprietary interest as against the zemindar or other superior, so as to encumber or diminish his rights." Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 90, 91; see Scolhes v Chadwick, 2 M & Robb, 507; R v. Bliss, 7 A & F, 550, Papendick v. Bridgewater, 5 E & B, 166 Howe v Malkin, 40 L. T., 196, and Taylor, Ev, § 789

(5) Brojendra Coomar v. Chairman of Dacca Municipality 20 W. R., 223, 224 (1873), per Couch, C J.

the party represented.(1) Thus the declarations of the ancestor that he held the land as the tenant of a third person, are admissible to show the seisin of that person in an action brought by him against the heir for the land(2), and the declarations of an intestate are admissible against his administrator or any other claiming in his right."(3) Where tenants sued for a declaration that their holding was mokururee at a given rent and the surbarakar of their zemindar admitted the right on behalf of the zemindar, who himself filed a petition corroborating his surbarakar's statement it was held that these admissions would bind any subsequent zemindar not being an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue.(4) The same principle holds in regard to admissions made by the assignee of a personal contract or chattel previous to the assignment, where the assignee must recover through the title of the assignor and succeeds only to that title as it stood at the time of its transfer.(5) But a distinction must be drawn between the case of an assignee of land or other property and that of an ordinary assignee of a negotiable instrument. For, whereas the former has in general no title unless his assignor had, the latter may have a good title though his assignor had none. Thus the declaration of a former holder of a note, showing that it was given without consideration, though made while he held the note, was held to be not admissible against the indorsee, to whom the instrument had been transferred on good consideration, and before it was overdue.(6) For such an indorsee derives his title from the nature of the instrument itself, and not through the previous holder. Accordingly, unless the plaintiff on a bill or note stands on the title of a former holder (as if he have taken the bill overdue or without consideration), the declarations of such former holder are not evidence against him.(7)

Sales in execution and for arrears of revenue.

The purchaser of an estate sold for arrears of revenue is not privy in estate to the defaulting proprietor. He does not derive his title from him, and is bound neither by his acts nor by his laches(8); nor by his admissions(9); nor by a decree against him(10), and proceedings between the defaulting proprietor and third parties with respect to the title to the land are not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit brought by the auction-purchaser as against him.(11)

---

(1) Coole v Braham, 3 Ex. R., 185, per Parke, B. See Rani Srimati v. Khagendra Narayan, 31 C, 871 (1904).

(2) Doe d. Pettett, 5 B & A, 223. In a suit it was attempted to prove a kabuliat by amongst other evidence, proof of a so-called petition by the defendant's father in which he was represented as having admitted the kabuliat; it appeared that the defendant's father represented to certain persons that this petition was his petition and requested them to verify his signature or to identify him as one of the petitioners. It was held that this request amounted to a statement on the part of the defendant's father to these witnesses of all that was contained in the petition and amounted to a statement to them that he made the statements which appeared in the petition, and that even if the petition had not been filed, it was just as effective against the defendants as if it had been in fact filed. Mohun Sahoo v. Chuttoo Mowar, 21 W. R., 34 (1874)

(3) Smith v. Smith, 3 Bing., N. C., 29 v. ante; Taylor, Ev., § 787.

(4) Watson & Co. v. Nobin Mohun. 10 W. R, 72 (1868).

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 790

(6) Woolway v. Rowe, 1 A. & F, 114, 116, explaining Borough v. White, 4 B. & C, 325, Taylor, Ev, § 791; Byles on Bills, 15th Ed (1891), 433

(7) Byles on Bills, loc. cit, and cases there cited

(8) Moonshee Buzool v. Pran Dhan, 8 W R, 222 (1867) (and v. ib, p 62) followed in Radha Gobind v Rakhal Das, 12 C, 82, 90 (1885); Watson & Co. v Nobin Mohun, 10 W. R., 72 (1868); as to the rights of the auction-purchaser, see Kooldeep Narain v. Government of India, 11 B L R, 71 (1871); Forbes v. Meer Mahomed, 20 W. R (P. C), 44 (1873)

(9) Rungo Monee v. Raj Coomaree, 6 W. R, 197 (1866).

(10) Ib, Radha v. Rakhal, supra, 12 C, 82, 90, but as to purchasers of patni taluqs sold under Reg VIII of 1819, see ib. at p 90; and Taraprasad v. Ram Nrising, 6 B. L. R., App, 5 (1870), 14 W. R., 283

(11) Radha Gobind v. Rakhal Das, supra.

It has in some cases(1) been considered that a similar rule applies to ordinary execution-sales and that a purchaser at such a sale is not in privity with, or the representative in interest of, the judgment-debtor so as to be affected by the admissions or bound by the estoppel of the latter. This view appears to have been based on a misapprehension(2) of certain Privy Council decisions in which it was pointed out there is a great distinction between a private sale in satisfaction of a decree and a sale in execution of a decree.(3) In both cases the purchaser merely acquires the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor(4); and therefore a suit to enforce an interest purchased at an execution-sale was held to be barred as against such purchaser, since if the interest had r[illegible] interest would have b[illegible] between a private s[illegible] decree, that under the former, the purchaser derives title through the vendor and cannot acquire a better title than that of the vendor. Under the latter, the purchaser notwithstanding he acquires merely the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, acquires that title by operation of law adversely to the judgment-debtor, and freed from all alienations or incumbrances effected by him, subsequently to the attachment of the property sold in execution (6) The Privy Council decisions only show that the rights of an execution-purchaser are in some respects different from those at a private sale. They do not afford any basis for the aforementioned broad proposition deduced from them (7) It is true that an execution-purchaser makes his purchase not from the judgment-debtor and

---

(1) Lala Parbhu v Mylne, 14 C., 401, 411—414 (1887), Gour Sundar v. Hem-Chunder, 16 C, 355, 360 (1889), Bashi Chunder v Enayet Ali, 20 C., 236, 239 (1892), for earlier decisions, see Rungo Monee v. Raj Coomaree, 6 W R, 197 (1886), Musst Imrit v Lalla Debee, 18 W. R, 200 (1872)

(2) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C, 75—77 (1896)

(3) Dinendronath Sanial v Ram Kumar Ghose, 7 C, 107, 118, s c, 8 I A, 65; 10 C L R, 281 (1880); Srimati Anandmayi v Dhanendra Chandra, B L R. (P. C), 122, 127 (1871)

(4) Ib. All that is sold and bought, at an execution-sale is the right, title and interest of the judgment debtor with all its defects, Dorab Ally v. Abdool Azeez, 5 I. A, 116, 125 (1878), followed in Sundara Gopalan v Venkatavarada Ayyangar, 17 M, 228 (1893), the creditor takes the property subject to all equities which would affect it in the debtor's hands, Megji Hansraj v Ramji Jotta, 8 Bom H C. R., 169, 174, 175 (1871), Sobhag Chand v. Bhaichand, 6 B, 193, 202 (1882), as to the different means available to purchaser of investigating title in the respective cases of private and execution-sales, see Dorab Ally v Abdool Azeez supra, 125 See also Kishan Lall v Ganga Ram, 13 A, 28 (1890), Bashi Chunder v Enayet Ali 20 C., 236, 239 (1892), Bapuji Balal v Satyabhamabai, 6 B, 490 (1882)

(5) Raja Enayet v. Girdhari Lal, 2 B L. R (P. C), 75, 78 (1869), explained in Sobhag Chand v Bhaichand, 6 B., 193, 205 (1882) and see Kishna Lal v Ganga Ram supra

(6) Dinendronath Sannial v Ramkumar Ghose, supra, see also Srimati Anandamayi v Dhanendra Chandra, 8 B L R (P C), 122, 127 (1871), 14 M I A, 101, explained in Sobhag Chand v. Bhaichand, 6 B, 193, 205 (1882), Musst Imrit v Lalla Debee, 18 W R, 200 (1872), Lalu Mulji v Kashibai, 10 B, 400, 405 (1886), Lala Parbhu v Mylne, 14 C, 401, 413 (1887), Bashi Chunder v. Enayet Ali, 20 C, 236, 239 (1892), in the case of Gour Sundar v Hem Chunder, 16 C., 355 (1889), it was held that a purchaser at a public sale in execution of a decree is not, but a purchaser at a private sale is, the representative of the judgment-debtor, followed in Janki Prasad v Ulfat Ali, 16 A, 284 (1894), but dissented from in Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C, 62 (1896), [as to the meaning of the terms "representative" and "legal representative," see Badri Narain v Joy Kissen, 16 A, 483, 487 (1894), Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C, 62, 71 (1896), and s 21, post] See also Vishwanath Chardu v Subraya Shivapa, 15 B, 290 (1890), referred to in Burjorji Dorabji v Dhunbai, 16 B, 21 (1891)

(7) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C, 76 (1896), the case of Lala Parbhu v Mylne, supra based on an erroneous interpretation of the Privy Council decisions cited, supra, and is followed by Bashi Chunder v Enayet Ali, supra See 24 C., at p 77, approved in Gulzari Mal v. Madho Ram, F B., 1 All. L. J., 65 (1904).

often against his wish, and he is not bound by some of the acts of the judgment-debtor, such as alienations made by the latter to defeat the decree, but that does not show that his rights are not derived from the judgment-debtor, or that he is not the representative in interest of the judgment-debtor in any sense or for any purpose. Even a purchaser at a private sale is not bound by any prior alienation made by the vendor to defraud him, but that does not show that such purchaser is not a representative in interest of the vendor. Because the rights of an execution-purchaser and a purchaser at a private sale are in some respects different, it does not follow that the execution-purchaser is not to be regarded as a representative in interest of the judgment-debtor even in those respects in which, and for those purposes for which, his rights are not higher than those of the judgment-debtor whose right, title and interest he has purchased (1) In a previous edition of this work it was pointed out in respect of admissions made by a judgment-debtor prior to attachment that in so far as the purchaser acquires only the title of the debtor, he should acquire it as qualified by the latter's admissions, though certain decisions of the Calcutta High Court would appear to have held otherwise. The view thus taken received support from some of the earlier cases(2), and has since been confirmed by recent decisions of the Privy Council(3) and the Calcutta High Court.(4) The Judicial Committee have held that the equitable principle of estoppel laid down in the case of Ram Coomar Koondoo v. Macqueen(5), which applies to any person, is equally binding on the purchaser of his right, title and interest at a sale in execution of a decree.(6) If such a purchaser may be estopped, he may à fortiori be affected by the admissions of the judgment-debtor whose interest he has purchased. The result of the cases would therefore appear to be that a purchaser at an ordinary execution-sale is in privity with, and the representative in interest of, the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the twenty-first section, post; so as to be affected by the latter's admissions. Prior to the last-mentioned decision of the Privy Council it had been held that, where the execution-purchaser is himself an actual party to [illegible]

[illegible] previous conduct in respect of the property mortgaged(8); therefore, a purchase by a mortgagee at a sale in execution of a decree upon his mortgage, of the right, title and interest of the mortgagor, who has been estopped from asserting a [illegible]rties, does not place such mortgagee [illegible]

[illegible]

(1) Ib, 75, 76

(2) Unapoorna Dassee v. Nufar Poddar 12 W. R., 148 (1874) [The purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree is the "representative in interest" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), s 21] referred to in Kishan Lal v. Ganga Ram, 13 A, 28, 51 (1890); Musst. Imrit v. Lalla Debee (1872), supra; "at the utmost the statements would be nothing more than evidence, certainly they will not conclude him," per Couch, C. J.

(3) Mahomed Mozuffer v. Kishori Mohun, 22 C., 909 (1895); s. c, 22 I. A., 129; 1 C. W. N., 38

(4) Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C., 62 (1896)

(5) L. R. I. A, Sup Vol., 40, 43; s c. 11 B. L R, 46; 18 W. R, 166

(6) Mahomed Mozuffer v Kishori Mohun, 22 C., 909, 919 (1895), Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C., 62, 77 (1896)

(7) Musst Imrit v. Lalla Debee, 18 W. R, 200 (1872)

(8) Lala Parbhu v. Mylne, supra, at p 413.

(9) Poreshnath Mookerjee v. Anathnath Deb, 9 C, 265 (1882); 9 I. A, 147, reported in lower Court sub nom.; Anathnath Deb v. Bishtu Chunder, 4 C, 783; see also Kishori Mohun v. Mahomed Mozuffer, 18 C., 188, 198 (1890); s c. in appeal to Privy Council, 22 C, 909 (1895)

(10) Krishnabhupati Devu v. Vikrama Devu, 18 M, 13, 18 (1894).

judgment-debtor to the extent of such right, title and interest as he had in the property purchased at the date of the sale and represents the execution-creditor ... in satis- ... decree- ... s his representative or as one claiming under him It has, however, also been held that a Court-sale cannot by it ... of or against a Court-purch ... right, title and interest, the ... Court-purchaser derives his title from proceedings which are entirely invitum as regards the judgment-debtor.(1) And where property purchased in execution of a money-decree was subject to a mortgage, but not a mortgage executed ... l have been estopped from denying ... his conduct in the mortgage-trans- ... ourt that the purchaser was bound equally with the judgment-debtor inasmuch as the right, title and interest of the latter had passed to him and his purchase was therefore subject to the mortgage.(2) Where a purchaser claimed under a title partly created by a mortgagor, it was held that he was estopped from pleading non-transferability of the holding (3) Where a mortgagee was himself the purchaser it was held by the Allahabad High Court that he was estopped from denying the mortgagor's right to execute a prior mortgage of the property.(4)

A man may bind himself by an admission, but he cannot bind by his admission those who do not claim under him, but who before the admission had acquired a right.(5) But part payment of the mortgage-debt by the mortgagor and appearing in his handwriting, will give a fresh start of limitation to the mortgagee, even as against a person who had purchased a portion of such mortgaged property prior to such payment (6)

The admi sions mus he made during th continuan of the interest.

Statements whether made by parties interested(7), or by persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest(8), are admissions only if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statement.(9) It would be manifestly unjust that a person, who has parted with his interest in property, should be empowered to divest the right of another claiming under him, by any statement which he may choose to make.(10) And so admissions made by a debtor (whose property has been sold) subsequently to such sale are not evidence against the purchaser of the property.(11) "A statement relating to property, made by a person when in possession of that property, may be evidence against himself and all persons deriving the property from him after the statement; but a statement made by a former owner that he had conveyed to a particular person, could not possibly be evidence against third persons If it were so, A might sell and convey to B, and afterwards declare that he had sold and conveyed to C, and

(1) Gajanan v Nilo, 6 Bom L R, 864 (1904)

(2) Prayag Rag v Sidhu Prasad Tewari (1908), 35 C, 877, and as to the estoppel see Sarat Chandra Dey v Gopal Chandra Laha (1892), 20 C 296, Porter v Incell (1905), 10 C W N 313, and Ganesh v Purshottam (1908), 38 B, 311

(3) Radha Kanta Chakravarti v Ramananda Shahu (1912), 39 C, 513

(4) Tota Ram v Hargobind, 36 A., 141 (1914), see Bakshi Ram v Liladhar, 35 A, 353 (1913), Bishambhar Dayal v Parshadi Lal, 10 A L J (1910)

(5) Mowatt v Castle Steel and Iron Works Co, 14 Ch D, 58, 63

(6) Domi Lal Sahu v Roshan Dubey, 11 C W N 107 Krishna Chandra Saha v Bhairab Chandra Saha, 9 C W N 868, 32 C 1077

(7) S 18, cl (1), ante

(8) S 18, cl (2), ante

(9) S 18, ante, Taylor, Ev, §§ 794 598 599

(10) Doe v Webber, 1 A & E, 740, Khenum Kuree v Gour Chandra 5 W R, 268 (1886), Taylor, Ev, § 794

(11) Khenum Kuree v Gour Chander, supra

C might use the statement as evidence in a suit brought by him to turn B out of possession. If such evidence were admissible no man's property would be safe."(1) As for partners, by the very act of association each is constituted the agent of the others and of the firm for all purposes within the scope of the partnership concern, and his acts and declarations bind his co-partners and the firm, unless he has in fact no authority to act for the firm in the particular matter, and the person with whom he is dealing either knows that he has no authority or does not know or believe him to be a partner.(2) But an admission made by a partner before the partnership is not evidence against his co-partner (3) After dissolution of a partnership the subsequent acts of the individual members are binding on themselves alone, except so far as they may be acts necessary to wind up the affairs of the partnership or to complete transactions begun, but unfinished at the time of the dissolution.(4) Declarations and admissions made after the dissolution relating to the previous business of the firm are admissible against all the partners interested in the transaction (5) Bankruptcy(6), or death will sever the joint-interest; therefore in the latter case, the admissions of the survivors will not bind the estate of the deceased(7); nor conversely will those of his representatives bind the survivors.(8) So, also, the declaration of a bankrupt, though good evidence to charge his estate with debt, if made before his bankruptcy, is not admissible at all if it were made afterwards.(9) This equitable doctrine applies to the cases of vendor and vendee, grantor and grantee, and generally, to all cases of rights acquired, in good faith, previous to the time of making the admission in question (10)

To be admissible the declarations must qualify or affect the title of the predecessor and not relate to independent matters The statement must be one which directly affects the person's interest in the property itself; a mere statement against his interest in other respects, as for instance, that he is in debt, whence it might be inferred that he would be likely to part with or charge his property, does not come within this rule (11) It may further be added that it is not sufficient that the interest be subsequent in point of time; it must (as the words of the section point out) have been derived from the person who made the statement sought to be used as an admission.(12)

Proof of admissions

These admissions by third persons, as they derive their legal force from the relation of the party making them to the property in question, may be proved by any witness who heard them, without calling the party by whom they were made. The question is, whether he made the admission, and not merely whether the fact is as he admitted it to be. Its truth, where the admission is not conclusive—and it seldom is so—may be controverted by other testimony, and even by calling the party himself; but it is not necessary to produce him, for his declarations, when admissible at all, will be received as original evidence, and not as hearsay.(13)

Admissions by strangers.

Statements by strangers to a proceeding are not generally relevant as against the parties(14), but in some cases, the admissions of third persons

(1) Per curiam in Clarke v. Bindabun Chunder, W. R., F. B, 20 (1862); s. c., Marshall, 75
(2) Taylor, 598.
(3) Tunley v Evans, 2 Dow. & L, 747; Catt v. Howard, 3 Stark., 3.
(4) Taylor, 598.
(5) Pritchard v. Draper (1830); 1 Russ. & My., 91.
(6) In re Wolmershausen, 38 W. R. (Eng), 537.
(7) Atkins v. Tredgold, 2 B. & C., 23.
(8) Slater v Lawson, 1 B & Ad., 396
(9) Bateman v Bailey, 5 T. R, 513.
(10) Taylor, Ev, § 794, and cases there cited.
(11) Beauchamp v. Parry, 1 B & Ad, 89, Wills, Ev., 122; Coole v. Braham, 3 Ex, 183; Taylor, Ev., § 792.
(12) Field, Ev, 6th Ed. 90, 91, s 18, cl (2), ante.
(13) Taylor, Ev., § 793
(14) Steph. Dig., Art. 18; Coole v. Braham, 3 Ex, 183; Taylor, Ev., § 740; Barough v. White, 4 B & C., 328.

strangers to the suit, are receivable (1) "These exceptions to the general rule arise when the issue is substantially upon the mutual rights of such persons at a particular time; in which cases the practice is to let in such evidence, in general, as would be legally admissible in an action between the parties themselves. Thus the admissions of a bankrupt made before the act of bankruptcy, are receivable, in proof of the petitioning-creditor's debt(2); but if made after [illegible] cannot furnish of creditors and are inadmissible [illegible] rties other than against debtors, [illegible] ecution-creditor are relevant as against the sheriff (6) The admissions of a person whose position in relation to property in suit it is necessary for one party to prove against another, are in the nature of original evidence, and not hearsay, though such person is alive and has not been cited as a witness (7) In the case noted plaintiffs who were two out of five brothers sued to establish their right to a two-fifth share in properties which were sold in execution of a money decree against another brother U, and purchased by the defendant on the allegation that the properties when sold were the joint family properties of the five brothers. The defendant whose case was that the brothers were not joint at the date of the sale, and that the properties were exclusively owned by U put in a deposition given by another brother K in the suit in which the money decree against U was passed, in the course of which K stated that the family was not joint and the properties belonged exclusively to U. It was held that the deposition of K in the previous suit was not admissible against the plaintiffs (8)

"The admissions of a third person are also receivable in evidence against the party who has expressly referred another to him for information in regard to an uncertain or disputed matter In such cases the party is bound by the declarations of the party referred to in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if they were made by himself."(9) Thus in an action against executors, the defendants having written to the plaintiff that if she wished for further information as to the assets it could be obtained from a certain merchant—the replies of the merchant were held receivable against the executors (10) In the application of this principle, it matters not whether the question referred to be one of law or of fact; whether the person to whom reference is made, Referees

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 759, see s 19, ante

(2) See Coole v Braham, 3 Ex., 185.

(3) Jarnett v Leonard, 2 M & S, 265, in action by the trustees of bankrupts an admission by the bankrupt of the petitioning-creditor's debt, is deemed to be relevant against the defendants, Steph Dig, Art 18

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 759, and cases there cited, see also Ex parte Edwards, Re Tollemache, 14 Q B D 415, Ex parte Revell, Re Tollemache, 13 Q B D, 720

(5) Re Brunner, 19 Q B D., 572

(6) Steph. Dig, Art. 18; Kempland v Maccauley, Peake, 95 Williams v Bridges 2 Stark, 42, as to admissions of an under-sheriff or bailiff against the sheriff, see Snowball v Goodricke 4 B & Ad 541, Jacobs v Humphrey, 2 C & M, 413 Scott v Marshall 2 C & J 238, North v. Miles, 1 Camp 389 Edwards on Execution p 72

(7) Ali Moidin v Elayachamdathil, 5 M, 239 (1882)

(8) Nagendranath Ghosh v Lawrence Jute Co, 25 C W N, 89 (1921)

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 760, see s. 20; ante; Roscoe, N P Ev., 69, Steph Dig, Art 19, this comes very near to the case of arbitration, ib, note xiii.

(10) Williams v Innes, 1 Camp., 364; see also Daniel v Pitt, 1 Camp, 366n Pea Ad Cas 238, as to the applicability of the rule in criminal cases see R v Mallory 15 Cox, 458 [the accused told a constable that his wife would make out a list of certain property a list afterwards made out by her and handed to the constable in the husband's presence was held evidence against the latter, Coleridge, C J however, expressly refrained from giving an opinion upon the question if the prisoner had been absent]. As to reference by accused to examination of others taken in his presence see Russ Cr, 487, [illegible] (E) have or have not any peculiar knowledge on the subject; or whether the statements of the referee be adduced in evidence in an action on contract, or in an action for tort.(1) Whether the answer of the person referred to is conclusive against the party is, in England, a matter of some doubt.(2) They will not be so conclusive under this Act unless the admission operates as an estoppel.(3) To render the declarations of a person referred to equivalent to a party's own admission, it is not necessary that the reference should have been made by express words; but it will suffice if the party by his conduct has tacitly evinced an intention to rely on the statements as correct. Therefore, where a party on being questioned by means of an interpreter, gave his answers through the same medium, it was held that the language of the interpreter should be considered as that of the party; and that, consequently, it might be proved by any person who heard it, without calling the interpreter himself.(3)

On the same principle(4) (though, as a general rule, the affidavits, depositions or vivâ voce statements of a party's witnesses are not receivable against him in subsequent proceedings)(5), documents or testimony which a party has expressly caused to be made, or knowingly used as true, in a judicial proceeding, for the purpose of proving a particular fact, are evidence against him in subsequent proceedings to prove the same fact, even on behalf of strangers (6)

Proof of admissions against persons making them and by or on their behalf

21. Admissions are relevant, and may be proved as against the person who makes them, or his representative in interest; but they cannot be proved by or on behalf of the person who makes them, or by his representative in interest, except(7) in the following cases:—

(1) An admission may be proved by, or on behalf of, the person making it, when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead, it would be relevant as between third persons under section 32.

(2) An admission may be proved by, or on behalf of, the person making it, when it consists of a statement of the existence of any state of mind or body, relevant or in issue, made at or about the time when such state of mind or body existed, and is accompanied by conduct rendering its falsehood improbable.

(3) An admission may be proved by, or on behalf of, the person making it, if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission.

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 761, and case there cited

(2) v. s 31, post.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 763: Fabrigas v. Mostyn, 20 How. St. Tr, 122, 123.

(4) The following class of cases are explained in Boileau v. Rutlin, 2 Exch, 665, 675, as instances of admissions by conduct; see Richards v. Morgan, 4 B & S, 641, 657, 658, in which the grounds upon which such evidence is admitted are considered

(5) Gardner v. Moult, 10 A. & E., 464; Brickell v. Hulse, 7 A. & E, 454; Richards v. Morgan, supra.

(6) Brickell v. Hulse, supra; Gardner v. Moult, supra; Boileau v. Rutlin, supra; Richards v. Morgan, supra; Prichard v. Bagshawe, 20 L. J, C. P., 161, 11 C. B, 459; White v. Dowling, 8 Ir. L. R., 128; Taylor, Ev., §§ 763, 764.

(7) Miller v. Babu Madho, 19 A., 70 (1896); s. c, 23 I. A., 106.

Illustrations.

(a) The question between A and B is, whether a certain deed is or is not forged. A affirms that it is genuine, B that it is forged

A may prove a statement by B that the deed is genuine, and B may prove a statement by A that the deed is forged but A cannot prove a statement by himself that the deed is genuine, nor can B prove a statement by himself that the deed is forged.

(b) A, the captain of a ship, is tried for casting her away.

Evidence is given to show that the ship was taken out of her proper course.

A produces a book kept by him in the ordinary course of his business, showing observations alleged to have been taken by him from day to day, and indicating that the ship was not taken out of her proper course. A may prove these statements, because they would be admissible between third parties, if he were dead, under section 32, clause 2.

(c) A is accused of a crime committed by him at Calcutta.

He produces a letter written by himself, and dated at Lahore on that day, and bearing the Lahore post-mark of that day.

The statement in the date of the letter is admissible, because, if A were dead, it would be admissible under section 32, clause 2

(d) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen

He offers to prove that he refused to sell them below their value. A may prove these statements, though they are admissions, because they are explanatory of conduct influenced by facts in issue.

(e) A is accused of fraudulently having in his possession counterfeit coin which he knew to be counterfeit.

He offers to prove that he asked a skilful person to examine the coin, as he doubted whether it was counterfeit or not, and that that person did examine it and told him it was genuine.

A may prove these facts for the reasons stated in the last preceding illustration

Principle—This section is an affirmance of the well-known principple [illegible] those claiming [illegible] with regard to [illegible] not in general [illegible]an shall not be allowed to make evidence for himself (1) Not only would it be manifestly unsafe to allow a person to make admissions in his own favour which should affect his adversary(2), but also such evidence has, if any, but a very slight and remote probative force.(3) With regard to the exceptions to this general rule, see the notes to this section and thirty-second section, post

s 17 ("Admission")
s 3 ("Relevant")
s 3 ("Proof") s 32 (Statements by persons who cannot be called as a witness)
s. 14 (States of mind or body)

Steph Dig., Art 15, Best. Ev., §§ 519—520; Norton, Ev., 151

(1) Best, Ev., § 519, Norton, Ev., 151, and p 247, notes (2), (3) & (4), post.

(2) Ib, v. ante, p. 215

(3) "The reason of the rule is obvious If A says 'B owes me money,' the mere fact that he says so, does not even tend to prove the debt If the statement has any value at all, it must be derived from some fact which lies beyond it, for instance, A's recollection of his having lent the money To that fact, of course, A can testify, but his subsequent assertions add nothing to what he has to say If, on the other hand, A had said, 'B does not owe me anything,' this is a fact of which B might make use and which might be decisive of the case." Steph Dig., Introd., 164 165, Norton, Ev., 151 See Best, Ev., § 519 Illust. (a) gives a double example showing how the same statement may be used against but not for the interest of the party making it.

COMMENTARY.

As against the person who makes them.

" As against the person who makes them " means " as against the person by or on whose behalf they are made."(1) Thus if admissions are made by a referee they would not ordinarily be relevant against him as " the person who makes them," but against the referor on whose behalf and as whose agent they are made. The expression " person who makes them " must, therefore, mean, the person who makes them either personally or through others by whose admission he is bound. With the exceptions mentioned in the notes to the preceding sections, the rule is absolute that an admission can only be read against the party making it and that party's representatives in interest.(2) It is a well-established rule of law, that estoppels bind parties and privies, not strangers(3), and the same rule applies to all admissions and not to estoppels only.(4) And therefore evidence of an admission out of Court by an arbitrator that he made his award improperly, as, for example, by collusion or in consequence of a bribe, is not admissible against a party to the proceedings in support of an application to set aside the award.(5) The principle upon which the rule rests that the admissions can only be proved as against the party has been already considered, and in accordance with this rule it has been held that where the accounts of a mortgagee who has been in possession are being taken, his income-tax papers are inadmissible as evidence in his favour, though they may be used against him.(6) Notwithstanding the provisions of this section and the thirty-second section post, road-cess returns cannot, under s. 95 of the Road Cess Act, be used as evidence in favour of the person submitting them.(7) A road-cess return, signed by one of the plaintiff's vendors and the defendant, was filed by the plaintiff's vendors. It consisted of two parts, in one of which the joint properties of the plaintiff's vendors and the defendant were set out, and in the other the properties belonging to the defendant alone were mentioned. In a suit by the plaintiff for some lands as being the joint property of his vendors and the defendant, the latter put in the road-cess return in order to disprove plaintiff's allegation, by showing that the lands were included in the second part. The lower Courts had relied on his return. It was contended in appeal that it was inadmissible under s. 95 of the Road Cess Act, being evidence in favour of the principal defendant. It was, however, held that the road-cess return was evidence against the plaintiff claiming through his vendor, and it was none the less evidence merely because by admitting it as evidence against the plaintiff it became evidence in favour of the defendant.(8) And in a later case it has been held that a road-cess return filed by a temporary lessee is

---

(1) See Steph. Dig., Art. 15 An oral confession is an admission provable under this section; Feroz v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L J. 651

(2) See In re Whiteley, L R, 1 Ch, 558, 564 (1891) In this respect a distinction must be drawn between statements under the preceding sections and under s. 32, post. Under this last section the statements there enumerated are admissible against all the world Norton, Ev., 143. Avudh Beharee v. Ram Raj, 18 W. R., 105 (1872).

(3) Heane v Rogers, 9 B & C, 577, 586

(4) Section, 115, supra; Powell, Ev, 247.

(5) In re Whiteley, supra.

(6) Shah Gholam v Mussummut Emamun, 9 W. R., 275 (1868).

(7) Hem Chunder v. Kali Prosunno, 8 C W N, 1, 7 (1903), in which also the question of the returns being against pecuniary interest was considered.

(8) Beni Madhub v. Dina Bundhu, 3 C. W. N. 343 (1899). See as to the use of these returns under ss. 21, 32, and other sections of this Act; Hem Chunder Chowdry v Kali Prasanna Bhaduri, P. C., 30 C., 1033 (1903)· 30 I. A, 177, where in a suit for enhancement of the rent of talukdari tenure, road-cess returns, though not conclusive, were held to be admissible in evidence as a basis on which to ascertain the assets of the taluk and so fix a fair and equitable limit of enhancement.

admissible in favour of a superior landlord(1) and one filed by certain co-sharers is admissible against others.(2)

"Representative interest." No definition has been given of this somewhat vague expression.(3) Whatever scope may be given to these words, it is apprehended that they will, generally speaking, include most of the privies in blood, law, or estate of which mention has been already made in the notes to sections 17—20, ante.

Though admissions may be proved against the party making them, it is always open to the maker to show that the statements were mistaken or untrue, except in the single case in which they operate as estoppels.(4)

Exceptions. The section proceeds to specify those cases in which an exception is permitted to the general rule, and admissions in a person's own interest are admissible in evidence. The first clause is considered under the thirty-second section, post, which must be read in conjunction with it Illusts. (b) and (c) refer to this clause

"The second clause has received no illustration in the Act; probably because it has already been sufficiently treated of in the fourteenth section (ante) under the head of 'facts,' showing the existence of any state of bodily feeling, and in illusts (k), (l) and (m) thereto, which, together with the notes thereon, should be here consulted The fourteenth section merely declared that such facts are relevant. The present clause shows that such facts or statements may be proved on behalf of the person making them, notwithstanding the general rule that persons cannot make evidence for themselves by what they choose to say."(5)

The third clause provides that a fact which is relevant under the sixth section, ante, or some one of the sections following it, shall not be rejected simply because it assumes the form of an admission (6) Illusts (d) and (e) refer to this clause. "Care must likewise be taken not to confound self-serving evidence with res gestæ. The language of a party accompanying an act which is evidence in itself, may form part of the res gestæ and be receivable as such "(7)

It was held in the undermentioned(8) case, in which the second and the fourth defendants sold a jote to the first defendant and subseqently colluded with the plaintiff and denied a partition which had taken place as well as the sale, that the statements previously made by them which went to show that there had been a partition and they had changed their attitude were admissible under the third clause of this section and the second clause of the eleventh section of this Act.

In a suit against an insolvent and the Official Assignee for sale of mortgaged property, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that title-deeds in his possession after the insolvency were deposited with him as security before the adjudication Evidence of admissions by him at an earlier date than the adjudication to the effect that the deeds were then in his possession are inadmissible in his favour under this section, not being within any of the exceptions to inadmissibility named in this section An erroneous omission to object to such

---

(1) Sewdeo Narain Singh v Ajodhya Prosad Singh, 39 C, 1005 (1912)

(2) Chalho Singh v Jhero Singh, 39 C, 995 (1912), distinguishing Nusseerun v Gource Sunkur, 22 W R, 192, and following Hem Chandra Choudry v Kali Prasanna (supra)

(3) See remarks in Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, 24 C, 62, 72 (1896), Unnopoorna Dassee v Nafur Poddar 21 W R 148 (1874), as to the meaning of the terms "representative" and legal representative," see Baari Narain v Jot Kishen, 16 A, 483, 487 (1894), Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, 674 (1890), Chathakelan v Govinda Karunnar 17 M, 186 (1893), and ante, notes to ss 17—20 Sale in execution"

(4) See ss 31—115, post

(5) Norton, Ev, 152

(6) Ib, Field, Ev 6th Ed, 94 see Fellowes v Williamson, M & M, 306, ante, ss 8 and 14 and notes thereto

(7) Best, Ev, § 520

(8) Bibi Gyarnessa v Mussumut Mobarakunnessa, 2 C. W N, 91 (1897).

evidence does not make it admissible.(1) Any statement, as to rent payable for a holding, made by a person in a sale-certificate, which was obtained by him as purchaser of the holding, at a sale in execution of a decree against the former tenant, being in the nature of an admission, cannot be used as evidence on his behalf, as such a statement does not come within the exceptions to this section.(2)

Confessions

This section is subject to the special provisions relating to confessions enacted in the twenty-fourth, twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sections (3)

When oral admissions as to contents of documents are relevant

22. Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under the rules hereinafter contained, or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question.

Principle.—The general rule is that the contents of a written instrument, which is capable of being produced, must be proved by the instrument itself and not by parol evidence.(4) An exception to this rule prohibiting the substitution of oral testimony for the document itself, exists according to English law in favour of the parol admissions of a party. The admissions being primary evidence against a party, and those claiming under him, are receivable to prove the contents of documents without notice to produce, or accounting for the absence of, the originals.(5) The principle upon which such evidence is receivable has been stated to be that what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, and that therefore such evidence is not open to the same objection which belongs to parol evidence from other sources, when the written evidence might have been produced.(6) But the correctness of this reasoning and of the decisions founded upon it has been questioned and the dangerous consequences which are liable to follow on the reception of such evidence have been pointed out.(7) For though what a party himself admits may fairly be presumed to be true, there is no such presumption in favour of the truthfulness of the evidence by which such admission must be proved (8)

s. 17 ("Admission")
s. 3 ("Document")
s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s 58 (Facts admitted)
s 63 ("Secondary Evidence") ss 65, 66 (Rules as to giving of secondary evidence.), s 65, cl. (b) (Written admissions as to contents of documents)

(1) Miller v. Babu Madho, 19 A., 76 (1896); s c, 23 I A, 106

(2) Ramani Pershad v Mahanth Adaiya, 31 C., 380 (1903).

(3) R. v. Bhairab Chunder, 2 C. W N., 702 (1898).

(4) Taylor, Ev., §·396, ss 59, 64, 91, post.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 410, and cases there cited; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 63; Best, Ev, §§ 525, 526, and see Muttukaruppa Kaundan v. Rama Pillai, 3 Mad. H. C. R, 158, 100 (1866).

(6) Slatterie v. Pooley, 6 M & W., 669, per Parke, B.

(7) See observations of Pennefather, C J, in Lawless v. Queale, 8 Ir Law R., 385, cited ib, § 412, and in Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 95; Cunningham, Ev., 136; the views there expressed, have been adopted in the present section which alters the law laid down in Slatterie v Pooley, supra, Norton, Ev, 152

(8) "According to Slatterie v Pooley, what A states as to what B, a party, has said respecting the contents of a document which B has seen is admissible; whilst what A states, respecting a document which he himself has seen, is not admissible although in the latter case, the chance of error is single; in the former, double," per Reporter in 9 Com. B, 501, n. c, Darby v. Ousley, 1 H. & N., 1: as to oral testimony by the party to the same effect, see Farrow v. Blomfield, 1 F. & F, 653; Henman v Lester, 12 C. B., N. S, 781; as to the application of the rule in criminal cases, see Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed, 7, and as to the case first cited see Chandra Kunwar v. Chanri Narpat Singh, P. C. (1906), 29 A., 184; L. R., 34 I. A., 27; Heane v. Rogers, 9 B. & C., 577.

Taylor, Ev., §§ 410—414 ; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 63 ; Field, Ev., 6th Ed , 95 ; Cunningham, Ev., 135 ; Roscoe, Cr. Ev , 13th Ed , 7 ; Phipson, Ev , 5th Ed , 219, 510 . Powell, Ev , 9th Ed., 444 ; Norton, Ev., 152 , Best, Ev., §§ 525, 526

COMMENTARY.

When the existence, condition, or contents of the original document have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest, such written admission is admissible(1) ; but oral admissions, except in the cases above mentioned are excluded by the present section The circumstances under which a party is entitled to give secondary evidence of a document are laid down in sections 65, 66, post. "Where the question is, not what are the contents of a document, but whether the document itself is genuine, that is, in the handwriting of the party whose writing or signature it is alleged to be, evidence may, of course, be given to prove or disprove the forgery This may be effected in a variety of ways ; by the party, sections, 21, 70 , by an attesting witness, section 68 , by the oath of witnesses acquainted with the handwriting , by experts, section 45 ; or by comparison of handwriting, section 73," "Or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question. "The effect of the last clause of this section seems to be, that if such a document is produced, the admissions of the parties to it that it is or is not genuine [even though such admissions involve a statement of the contents of a document] may be received "(2) This section does not, it is apprehended, exclude admissions which the parties agree to make at the trial, in which case it becomes unnecessary to prove the fact so admitted.(3) Contents of documents

23. In Civil cases(4) no admission is relevant if it is made either on an express condition that evidence of it is not to be given(5), or under circumstances from which the Court can infer that the parties agreed together(6) that evidence of it should not be given.(7) Admissions in civil cases when relevant.

Explanation.—Nothing in this section shall be taken to exempt any barrister, pleader, attorney, or vakil from giving evidence of any matter of which he may be compelled to give evidence under section 126.(8)

Principle.—"Confidential overtures of pacification and any other offers or propositions between litigating parties, expressly or impliedly made without prejudice, (9) are excluded on grounds of public policy. For without this

(1) S 65, cl (b), post

(2) Norton, Ev , 153.

(3) S 58, post, Cunningham, Ev , 136; cf Sheikh Ibrahim v. Parvata, 8 Bom H C R, A C J, 163 (1871)

(4) The protection given by this section does not extend to criminal cases see s 29, post As to arbitration See p 105 ante

(5) Cory v Bretton, 4 C & P, 462

(6) This section, as drafted in the original Bill, contained "infer that it was the intention of the parties that" for "infer that the parties agreed together that"

(7) Paddock v Forrester, 3 M & G, 903 918, Steph Dig, Art 20, adds, "or if it was made under duress" Stockfleth v. De Tastet, 4 Camp, 11, per Lord Ellenborough, see Taylor, Ev , 798, and post

(8) Namely, the matters mentioned in provisos (1) and (2) to s 126, post; see notes to that section

(9) In re River Steamer Co, L R., 6 Ch 822, 827, per James, L J 'does not 'without prejudice' mean, I make you an offer, if you do not accept it, this letter is not to be used against me'" ib, 831, 832 [Cited in Madhavrav v Gulabbai, 23 B , 177, 180 (1898)] "Now if a man says his letter is without prejudice, that is tantamount to saying, 'I make you an offer which you may accept or not, as you like but if you do not accept it, the having made it is to have no effect at all'" per Mellish, L. J , see also Walker v. Wilsher, 23 Q B D., 335, 337, per Lindley L. J.

protective rule it would often be difficult to take any steps towards an amicabl compromise or adjustment; and, as Lord Mansfield has observed, all men mus be permitted to buy their peace without prejudice to them should the offer no succeed; such offers being made to stop litigation, without regard to the ques tion whether anything is due or not."(1) It is most important that the doo should not be shut against compromises (2) When a man offers to compromis a claim, he does not thereby necessarily admit it, but simply agrees to pay s much to be rid of the action.

s. 17 ("Admission.") s. 3 ("Evidence.") s 3 ("Relevant.") s. 126 (Professional Communications.)

Steph. Dig., Art. 20; Taylor, Ev., §§ 774, 795—797, 798, 799; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 62 63; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 421; Phillips, Ev., 326, 328; Cordery's Law relating to Solicitors 2nd Ed., 83.

COMMENTARY.

Admissions "without prejudice"

Admissions either verbal or in writing by way of compromise or during and even previous(5) letters in the same correspondence. Such letters, however, are only protected if bonâ fide written with a view to a compromise.(6) Thus a letter "without prejudice," which contains a threat against the recipient if the offer be not accepted, is admissible to prove such threat.(7) So also if the admission be merely of a collateral or indifferent fact, such as the handwriting of a party, which is capable of easy proof by other means, and is not connected with the substantial merits of the cause, it will be received, even though made [illegible] ithout prejudice if the offer has [illegible] such a letter are accepted, a c [illegible], although written "without prejudice" operates to alter the old state of things and to establish a new one. A contract is constituted in respect of which relief by way of damages or specific performance would be given (10) The mere fact that a document is stated to have been written "without prejudice" will not exclude it. The rule which excludes documents marked "without prejudice" has no application unless some person is in dispute or negotiation with another, and terms are

[illegible]

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 795, and see ib., §§ 774, 796, 797, and cases there cited; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 62, 63; Steph. Dig, Art. 20, Powell, Ev, 300; Phillips, Ev, 326.

(2) Per Bowen, L. J., in Walker v. Wilsher, supra

(3) Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 62; Paddock v. Forrester, 3 M. & G, 903, Hoghton v. Hoghton, 15 Beav., 278, 321; Walker v. Wilsher, supra.

(4) Paddock v. Forrester, supra; Re Harris, 44 L. J., Bkcy, 33. "It is not necessary to go on putting 'without prejudice' at the head of every letter," ib.; Walker v Wilsher; supra, 337.

(5) Peacock v. Harper, 26 W. R. (Eng), 109. In this case a second letter "without prejudice" was held to protect a previous letter not expressed to be "without prejudice" on the ground that the second letter was to be taken as a post-script to the former

(6) Grace v. Baynton, 21 Sol. Jour., 631, cited in Cordery, 83. In the case of Hicks v. Thompson, "Times," 19th Jan, 1857, a lawyer's clerk sued for breach of promise of marriage, sought to exclude his love-letters because he had headed them all "without prejudice."

(7) Kurtz v. Spence, 58 L. T., 438

(8) Waldridge v. Kenneson, 1 Esp., 143, see also per Lord Kenyon, C J, in Turner v Railton, 2 Esp, 474

(9) Walker v. Wilsher, supra, 337; In re River Steamer Co, L. R., 6 Ch., 822.

(10) Per Lindley, L. J., in Walker v. Wilsher, 23 Q. B. D., 335, at p. 337.

accepted without costs, he would give the plaintiff a cheque for it, and the plaintiff thereupon discontinued the action on payment of costs, it was held that the plaintiff was, in a second action on the bill, entitled to use the letter in proof of waiver of notice of dishonour. The first action being discontinued before the second was begun, the conditional waiver became absolute and the letter admissible in evidence.(2) Letters without prejudice cannot, without the consent of both parties, be read on a question of costs to show willingness to settle; although the mere fact and date of such letters or negotiations, as distinguished from their contents, may sometimes be received to explain delay (3) "Perhaps, also, an offer of compromise, the essence of which is that the party making it is willing to submit to a sacrifice, or to make a concession(4), will be rejected, though nothing at the time was expressly said respecting its confidential character, if it clearly appears to have been made under the faith of a pending treaty, into which the party has been led by the [illegible] absence of any [illegible] of compromise [illegible] of liability(6); although it may not be proper to enquire into the terms offered(7) though it must still be borne in mind that such an offer may be made for the sake of purchasing peace and without admitting liability to the extent of the claim (8) Much depends upon the circumstances of the case (9) The rule does not apply to admissions made before an arbitrator; for though in this last case, the proceedings are said to be before a domestic forum, yet the parties are, at the time, contesting their rights as adversely as before any other tribunal (10) It has, however, been held that nothing which passes between the parties to a suit in any attempt at arbitration or compromise should be allowed to effect the slightest prejudice to the merits of their case as it eventually comes to be tried before the Court. No presumption can be raised against a party to a suit from his refusal to withdraw from the determination and submit to arbitration (11) An admission before an arbitrator is admissible in evidence although it is for the Court dealing with the facts to attach whatever weight it thinks proper to such an admission The rule enunciated in this section does not apply to such admissions (12)

(1) Madhavrav v Gulabhai, 23 B, 177, 180 (1898), citing In re Daintrey, Ex parte Holt (1893), 2 Q B, 116

(2) Holdsworth v Dinsdale, 19 W R (Eng), 798

(3) Walker v Wilsher, 23 Q B D., 335, see, however, Williams v Thomas, 31 L J Ch, 674

(4) Thompson v Austen, 2 D & R, 361

(5) Woldridge v Kennison, 1 Esp, 144, Taylor, Ev, § 795

(6) Wallace v. Small, 1 M & M, 446, Watts v Lawson, ib, 447n Nicholson v Smith, 3 Stark, R, 129, Taylor Ev, § 795

(7) Harding v Jones, 1 F & G, 135, see also Thomas v Morgan, 2 C M & R 496

(8) Mearan Matgar v Alimuddi Mia, 44 C, 130 (1917) Letters Patent appeal, per Sanderson, C J and Mookerjee, J

(9) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 95 96, see also observations of Lord St Leonards in Jorden v Money, 5 H L C 245, 'when an attorney goes to an adverse party with a view to a compromise, or to an action, you must always look with very great care at his evidence of what then occurred'

(10) Doe d Lloyd v Evans, 3 C & P, 279, the admissions may be proved by the arbitrator, Gregory v Howard, 3 Esp 113, Taylor, Ev, §§ 798 799; Roscoe N P Ev, 63, as to incriminating answers see s 132, post

(11) Mohabeer Singh v. Dhujjo Singh, 20 W R 172 (1873)

(12) Punchh Singh v Ramautar Singh, 4 Pat L J 676 52 I C. 345

Confession caused by inducement, threat, or promise, when irrelevant in criminal proceeding.

24. A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat, or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority, and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court, to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him.

Principle.—The ground upon which confessions, like other admissions, are received, is the presumption that no person will voluntarily make a statement which is against his interest unless it be true.(1) But the force of the confession depends upon its voluntary character.(2) The object of the rule relating to the exclusion of confessions is to exclude all confessions which may have been procured by the prisoner being led to suppose that it will be better for him to admit himself to be guilty of an offence which he really never committed.(3) There is a danger that the accused may be led to incriminate himself falsely. The principle upon which the confession is excluded, is that, it is under certain conditions testimonially untrustworthy.(4) Moreover, the admission of such evidence would naturally lead the agents of the police while seeking to obtain a character for activity and zeal, to harass and oppress prisoners, in the hope of wringing from them a reluctant confession (5)

ss. 17—22 ("Admission.")
s. 3 ("Relevant")
s. 3 ("Court.")
s. 28 (Confession after removal of impression caused by inducement)
s. 80 (Presumption as to document purporting to be a confession)

Steph. Dig., Arts. 21—23, Taylor, Ev., §§ 862—906, Best, Ev., §§ 551—553; 3 Russ, Cr, 440—499; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 104—116, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 248—259; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 300—307; Norton, Ev., 154—164; Cr. Pr. Code, ss. 163, 343; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed, 35—50 A Treatise on the Admissibility of Confession and Challenge of jurors in criminal cases in England and Ireland by Henry H. Joy, Wigmore, Ev., § 822, et seq.

COMMENTARY.

Appears.

In the first place, an important question arises as to the meaning of these words and as to the person on whom the onus rests of showing that the confession was voluntary or involuntary. The use of the word "appears," it has been said(6), seems to show that this section does not require positive proof (within the definition of the third section) of improper inducement to justify the rejection of the confession: such word indicating a lesser degree of probability than

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 865; Phillips & Arn, Ev., 401; Best, Ev., § 524; v. ante, p 217, note (7); Wills, Ev., 102.

(2) Taylor, Ev., §§ 872, 874; see remarks in R v. Thomson, L. R. (1893), 2 Q B., at p. 15.

(3) 3 Russ. Cr., 442; per Littledale, J., in R. v. Court, 7 C. & P., 486, but in R. v. Baldry, 2 Den, C. C., 430, Lord Campbell, C J., said: "The reason is not that the law supposes that the statement will be false, but that the prisoner has made the confession under a bias, and that, therefore, it would be better not to submit it to the jury." But see also Lord Campbell's dictum in R v. Scott, 1 D. & B, 47, 48; and Taylor, Ev., § 874; R. v. Nabadwip Goswami, 1 B. L. R, O. S., 15, 22, 25 (1868), R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P., 345.

(4) Wigmore, Ev., § 822

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 874.

(6) R. v. Baswanta, 25 B., 168 (1900); s. c, 2 Bom. L. R., 761, 765. On this, and what follows, see the able article by "Lex" in 2 Bom. L. R., 157, as also an article by another contributor at p. 217.

would be necessary if "proof" had been required. A confession may, it has been argued, appear to the Judge to have been the result of inducement on the face of it and apart from direct proof of that fact, or a Court might perhaps in a particular case fairly hesitate to say that, it was proved that the confession had been unlawfully obtained and yet might be in a position to say that such appeared to it to have been the case (1). It is, however, to be observed that if the word "appear" is to be placed in opposition to the term "proof," there may be discrepancy between the terms of this section and the eightieth section in the case of recorded confessions which are presumed to be voluntary until disproved to be so. Perhaps, therefore, it would be more correct to say that as under the third section, prudence is to determine whether a fact exists or not, the use of the word "appear," while requiring proof, indicates that a less degree of such proof is required in this than in other cases. By whom then must the existence or non-existence of the inducement, threat or promise be proved or made to appear? Is the confession to be presumed to be voluntary until the contrary be shown, or must the prosecution in all, or if not in all, in what cases, establish its voluntary character before it can be admitted in evidence? This subject is one of considerable difficulty. In England, the case-law is not uniform. It has been held that a confession is presumed to be voluntary unless the contrary is shown(2) with the result that it is primâ facie admissible, and can only be excluded when it is proved or made to appear that the confession was not voluntary. On the other hand, it has been held that the material question is whether a confession has been obtained by improper inducement, and the evidence to this point being in its nature preliminary, addressed to the Judge, who will require the prosecutor to show affirmatively to his satisfaction, that the statement was not made under the influence of an improper inducement, and who in the event of any doubt subsisting on this head, will reject the confession (3). In the Crown case reserved R. v. Thompson(4), the head-note of the report states the decision to be that in order that evidence of a confession by prisoner may be admissible, it must be affirmatively proved that such confession was free and voluntary, and this view of the decision has been adopted in Roscoe on Criminal Evidence.(5) No doubt the Court stated that the test by which the admissibility of a confession may be decided was—had it been proved affirmatively that the confession was free and voluntary (6). But, the proposition in the head-note appears, when the whole case is considered, to be too broadly laid down. In the case it is stated that there was ground for suspicion(7), and Cave, J., who delivered the judgment of the Court, says later on(8): "I prefer to put my judgment on the ground that it is the duty of the prosecution to prove in case of doubt that the prisoner's statement was free and voluntary." It has been said that this section was intended merely to reproduce the English law, and that the word "appears" occurs in Art. 22 of Sir James Fitzjames Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence as it does in this section (9). However this may be, the law of this country is contained in the present section which must be fairly construed according to its language in order to ascertain what that law is.

Firstly, as regards judicial confessions, the Criminal Procedure Code contains provisions as to the manner in which they should be recorded.

---

(1) R. v. Baswonta, supra.

(2) R. v. Williams, 3 Russ., Cr., 497; see also R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P., 221; R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P., 548; Roscoe, Cr., Ev., 53, 11th Ed.; Field, Ev., 5th Ed., 138.

(3) R. v. Warringham, 2 Den. C. C., 447 n., where Parke, B., said to counsel for the prosecution: "You are bound to satisfy me that the confession which you seek to use against the prisoner was not obtained from him by improper means." Taylor, Ev., § 872.

(4) 1893, 2 Q. B. 12.

(5) 12th Ed., p. 49.

(6) 1893, 2 Q. B., at p. 17.

(7) Ib., at p. 17.

(8) Ib., at p. 18.

(9) 2 Bom. L. R. 234.

Confessions of accused persons recorded by Magistrates are admissible in evidence, subject only to the provisions of sections 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The first of these sections provides that any Magistrate, not under mence- trial. section an the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried.(1) If the confession is made before a competent Magistrate who is making the preliminary enquiry, it is sufficient if the provisions of section 364 are complied with.(2) But a record is unnecessary when a confession is made in Court to the officer trying the case at the time of trial where the accused can be convicted on the plea of guilty (3) It is important that a Magistrate before recording the confession of an accused person then in custody of the police should ascertain how long the accused has been in custody. If there is no record of that fact the Sessions Judge, before holding the confession relevant under the twenty-fourth self on the point (4) The recorded, has been much Criminal Procedure Code. e defective statement he defects nce can be given of a confession under section 164.(6) Section 533 will not render a confession taken under section 164 admissible where no attempt has been made to conform to the provisions of the latter section.(7)

Under section 80 of this Act whenever any document is produced before any Court purporting to be a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person taken in accordance with law and purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate, the Court shall presume that the document is genuine; that any statements as to the circumstances under which it was taken (as that the confession was voluntary) purporting to be made by the person signing it, are true

---

(1) R. v Jetoo, 23 W R, Cr, 16 (1875) In the matter of Behari Hajdi, 5 C. L R, 238 (1879); Krishno Monee v. R, 6 C L. R, 289 (1880), R. v. Anuntram Singh, 5 C, 954, F B, 880, followed in R. v Yakub Khan, 5 A, 253 (1883); the provisions of s 164, however, have no application to statements taken in the course of a police-investigation in the town of Calcutta, R. v. Nilmadhub Mitter, 15 C, 595 (1888), followed in R. v. Visram Babaji, 21 B, 495 (1896). A Deputy Magistrate should not act as Magistrate in a case in which he is himself the prosecutor and take confessions of prisoners before himself, R. v. Boidnath Singh, 3 W. R., Cr, 29 (1865).

(2) Krishno Monee v. R., 6 C. L. R., 239 (1880), R v. Anuntram Singh, supra; Yakub Khan, supra.

(3) In the matter of Chumman Shah, 3 C 736 (1878).

(4) R v. Narayan, 25 B., 543 (1901).

(5) Cr Pr. Code, s 533: this section applies to confessions and statements recorded under both ss 164 and 364; the corresponding section of the old Code (s. 346, Act X of 1872) dealt only with statements and confessions made in the course of a preliminary enquiry and did not apply to confessions recorded under s 122 (164 of present Code). R. v. Rai Ratan, 10 B. H. C R., 166 (1873); consequently when a confession taken under s 122, was inadmissible in evidence oral evidence was excluded by s. 91 post, ib, R v Shivya, 1 B., 219 (1876); R. v. Manu Tamolee, 4 C, 696 (1879); contra R. v. Ramanjiyya, 2 M, 5 (1878); but irregularly recorded confessions and statements under either s. 164 or 426 of the present Act may either be (1) remediable under s. 533 or (not. In the case (1), oral evi admissible; case of (2), it ssible at any in the case of lar record s 164 (v next

(6) R v. V 224 (1885); Narayan v R (1890)

(7) R. v J Jai N Rai v R., supr dissented f. in R. v. Visr B, 495, (1896) and that such evidence, statements or confession was duly taken This formal certificate is all that the law in strictness requires, and is primâ facie evidence of the voluntary character of the confession. It is the duty of the Magistrate to satisfy himself that the confession is not excluded by this section.(1) It is to be feared, however, that such certificates are often not worth much as evidence of the absence of inducement Assuming that a prisoner has been induced to confess, he will not unlikely assure the recording Magistrate that his confession is quite voluntary, knowing that he will leave the Magistrate's presence in the custody of the police and remain in their charge for many days to come.(2) In the case of extra-judicial confessions there is no such primâ facie evidence as that afforded by the certificate. In both cases, however, there is to be considered the effect of the word "appear" in this section This, as already stated, does not connote strict "proof." Still, although very probably a confession may be rejected on well-grounded conjecture, there must (unless the onus lies upon the prosecution) be something before the Court on which such conjecture can rest.(3) In the first place, does the onus lie upon the prosecution in all cases to prove that a confession is voluntary before it can be used in Evidence? If this be the law in England, which is doubtful, it has been held that such a rule does not prevail in this country In the absence of evidence it is not to be presumed that a statement objected to on the ground of its having been induced by illegal pressure is inadmissible (4) To require as the criterion of admissibility affirmative proof that a duly recorded and certified confession was free and voluntary is not consistent with the terms of this Act or with previous decisions or practice (5) Thus a statement in writing by an accused person containing allegations which, whether they are true or not, appear to

---

(1) R v Narayan, 25 B, 543 (1901), R. v. Jadub Das, 27 C, 295, s c, 4 C W. N, 129. R. v. Basuanta, supra See Circular of Bombay High Court (Bombay Government Gazette, 1900, Part I, p 919, 2 Bom. L R, 157), requiring Magistrates before recording confessions to satisfy themselves by all means in their power, including the examination of the bodies of the accused, that the confessions are voluntary See R v. Gunesh Koormee 4 W. R, Cr, 1 (1865), where the prisoner retracted his statement when read over to him and said that he was compelled to make it, and the Sessions Judge without making any inquiry or taking evidence upon the point, submitted the prisoner's statement to the jury as a confession; it was held that the Judge was wrong in so doing and that he should rather have charged the jury not to accept the prisoner's statement as a confession As regards the Sessions Court it has been held that it is not necessary for a Sessions Judge to read out to prisoners confessions made by them before a Magistrate and ask them if they have any objection to the reception of their confession R v Misser Sheikh, 14 W. R, Cr, 9 (1870) But it appears to have been the opinion of Sir Michael Westropp in R v Kashinath Dinkar, 8 Bom H C R 137 138 that not only the committing Magistrate but also the trying Court, ought to make need ful enquiries where allegations are made in a regular and proper manner to the Sessions Court that a confession before a Magistrate was improperly induced, a procedure which was followed in the English Courts so far back as the 12th century (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Book ii, pp 650, 651). See also R v Narayan supra, s c, 3 Bom L R, 122

(2) See remarks of Westropp, C. J, in R v Kassinath Dinkar, 8 Bom H. C. R., 126

(3) R v Baswanta, 2 Bom L R., 761, 765 (1900)

(4) R v Balvant Pendharkar, 11 Bom H C R, 137, 138 (1874), R v Dada Ana, 15 B, 452 480 (1889), R v Bhairam Singh 3 A, 338 339 (1880) A prisoner alleging that a confession was unduly extorted should offer some proof of his statements to the Court. So an accused retracting a confession alleging that it was caused by ill treatment by the [illegible] indicate that the statement was not made voluntarily, is inadmissible.(1) If it, ... xcluded. ... stablish- ... f, if not ... in this connection that the question of the retraction of confessions becomes of the highest importance. If a confession, which has been previously made, whether judicially or extra-judicially, is not retracted at the trial, there appears to be little or no reason why it should not be accepted without any proof being given of its voluntary character. And it has been held that the law does not require that the confession of an accused person should be corroborated before it is acted upon. It is for the Court to say whether the confession is to be believed or not.(2) This is, however, not so where, as is frequently the case, the confession is retracted at the trial. In a very large percentage of Sessions cases the prisoners will be found to have made elaborate confessions, shortly after coming into the hands of the Police; not infrequently these confessions are adhered to in the committing Magistrate's Court, they are almost invariably retracted when the proceedings have reached a final stage and the prisoner is at the Bar of the Sessions Court. "These recurrent phenomena, peculiarly suggestive in themselves, can scarcely fail to attract the anxious notice of Judges who regard the efficient administration of justice as matter in which they are directly and personally implicated, not as a mere routine work mapped out for them in the higher tribunals."(3) The retraction of confessions is, as was said by Straight, J., in R. v. Babu Lal(4), "an endless source of anxiety and difficulty to those who have to see that justice is properly administered."

(5) R v Basuanta, 2 Bom L R, 761, 765 (1900) s c 25 B 168, disapproving of R v Balya Dagdu, Cr R. 3 of 1898 (Bom H C), in which Parsons, J, held that a confession to be admitted at all in evidence must be proved to have been made voluntarily and not to have been caused by improper inducement.

In R. v. Thompson(5) Cave, J., said, "I would add that for my part I always suspect these confessions, which are supposed to be the offspring of penitence and remorse, and which nevertheless are repudiated by the prisoner at the trial. It is remarkable that it is of very rare occurrence for evidence of a confession to be given when the proof of the prisoner's guilt is otherwise clear and satisfactory; but when it is not clear and satisfactory, the prisoner is not infrequently alleged to have been seized with the desire born of penitence and remorse to supplement it with a confession; a desire which vanishes as soon as he appears in a Court of Justice." Were it not for the presumption raised by section 80 of this Act it is submitted that the rule which should be followed in all cases of retracted confessions, is to throw the onus on the prosecution of affirmatively proving the voluntary character of the confession. No doubt, abstractedly considered, the mere fact that a confession is retracted raises no inference of improper inducement.(6) Such retraction may be due to the fear of punishment for an offence, which has been the subject of a true and voluntary confession. Having regard, however, to the notorious fact that confessions are frequently extorted in this country(7), retraction might not improperly be held to cast upon the prosecution the onus of showing that the confession was a voluntary one. When a prisoner has confessed and afterwards pleads not guilty, the truth and voluntariness of the confession is denied by implication. When a prisoner says he has been forced to confess, the Judge is put upon judicial enquiry, and that enquiry, it may well be urged, should precede

(1) R. v. Taranath Roy Chowdry (1910), 37 C, 735.
(2) Emperor v. Dhani, 20 Cr. L. J., 721; See Sheoprasad Kocri v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J, 562.
(3) 2 Bom. L. R., 157.
(4) 6 A, at p. 543 (1884), referred to in R v. Dada Ana, 15 B., 452, 461 (1889).
(5) L. R, 1893, 2 Q. B, 12, 18, cited with approval in the Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, 22 C., at p. 172 (1894).
(6) So in Sheoprasad Kocri v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J, 562; it was held that the fact of retraction would not (necessarily) deprive a confession of its (primâ facie) voluntary character.
(7) See cases cited, post.

the admission of the confession and any examination into its truth (1) As, however, the law now stands, provided it was voluntarily made, the confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is [illegible] soner even though the confession be retract [illegible] mere subsequent retraction of a confession, [illegible] by a Magistrate, is not enough in all cases to make it appear to have been unlawfully induced (3)

According to some rulings of the Madras High Court a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars (4) That Court has, however, more recently held(5) in general conformity with the views expressed by the other High Courts(6), that it cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence The weight to be given to such a confession must depend upon the circumstances under which the confession was originally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted, including the reasons given by the prisoner for his retraction (7) The credibility of such a confession is in each case a matter to be decided by the Court according to the circumstances of each particular case, and if the Court is of opinion that such a confession is true, the Court is bound to act, so far as the person making it is concerned, upon such belief (8) The use to be made of such a confession is a matter of prudence rather than of law (9) It is unsafe for a Court to rely on and act on a confession which has been retracted, unless after consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated in material particulars by credible independent evidence(10) or unless the character of the confession and the circumstances under which it was taken indicate its truth (11)

A retracted confession is almost always open to suspicion, and the Courts will therefore, in conformity with the abovementioned rulings, generally require corroborative evidence of its truth, even though there be no absolute rule

(1) 2 Bom L R, 161, 163

(2) R. v Sreemuty Mongola, 6 W. R, C. R (1866), R. v Mussamut Jema, 8 W R, Cr, 40 (1867), R. v Balvant Pendharkar, 11 Bom H C R, 157 (1874), R. v Petta Gazi, 4 W R, Cr, 16 (1865) [when prisoners confess in the most circumstantial manner to having committed a murder, the finding of the body is not absolutely essential to a conviction R v Budduruddeen, 11 W R, 20 (1869], a Judge held to have exercised a proper discretion in not passing sentence of death in a case in which the dead body was not found R v Bhuttun Rujuan, 12 W R, Cr, 49 (1869), [the properly attested confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is sufficient for his conviction without corroborative evidence, and notwithstanding a subsequent denial before the Sessions Court] but where there was misconduct of the police it was held that the prisoners could not safely be convicted on their own retracted statements without any corroboration Sofiruddeen v R, 2 C L R, 132 (1878) See note 5, also Sheoprasad Koeri v Emperor, 20 Cr L J, 562, supra Emperor v Kabili Katone, 19 Cr L J, 959

(3) R v Basvanta, 25 B, 168 (1900)

(4) R v Rangi, 10 M, 295 (1886), R v Bharmoppa, 12 M, 123 (1888), in R v Rom Vayer, 19 M, 482 (1896), the confessions were corroborated

(5) R v Raman, 21 M, 83, 88 (1897). As to the necessity of corroboration when it is used as against others than the maker, see Yasin v R, 28 C, 683 (1901).

(6) R v Bhuttun Rujuun, 12 W R, Cr, 49 (1869), R v Gharya, 19 B, 728 (1894), R v Ganbia 23 B, 316 (1898); R v Maiku Lal 20 A, 133 (1897), R v. Kelvie (1907), 29 A, 434 post p 186.

(7) R v Raman, 21 M, 83, 88 (1897).

(8) R v Maiku Lal, 20 A, 133 (1897)

(9) R v Gharya, 19 B 728 (1894).

(10) R v Mahabir, 18 A 78 (1895). See R v Jadab Das, 4 C W N, 129; s c 27 C, 295

(11) R v Maiku Lal, 20 A 133 (1897); see also R v Kashinath Dinkar 8 Bom H C R, Cr Ca, 126, 138 (1871), R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B 452, 461 (1889), R v. Babu Lal, 6 A, 509 542 (1884), R v. Jogat Chandra, 22 C., 50, 77 (1894); Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Baistobi, 22 C., 164 (1894)

indicate that the statement was not made voluntarily, is inadmissible.(1) If it, however, "appears" that the confession is not voluntary, it must be excluded. Unless this is disclosed by the evidence for the prosecution the onus of establishing this fact will be upon the accused—a fact which in a large number of, if not in most cases, the accused will not be in a position to establish. It is in this connection that the question of the retraction of confessions becomes of the highest importance. If a confession, which has been previously made, whether judicially or extra-judicially, is not retracted at the trial, there appears to be little or no reason why it should not be accepted without any proof being given of its voluntary character. And it has been held that the law does not require that the confession of an accused person should be corroborated before it is acted upon. It is for the Court to say whether the confession is to be believed or not.(2) This is, however, not so where, as is frequently the case, the confession is retracted at the trial. In a very large percentage of Sessions cases the prisoners will be found to have made elaborate confessions, shortly after coming into the hands of the Police; not infrequently these confessions are adhered to in the committing Magistrate's Court, they are almost invariably retracted when the proceedings have reached a final stage and the prisoner is at the Bar of the Sessions Court. "These recurrent phenomena, peculiarly suggestive in themselves, can scarcely fail to attract the anxious notice of Judges who regard the efficient administration of justice as matter in which they are directly and personally implicated, not as a mere routine work mapped out for them in the higher tribunals."(3) The retraction of confessions is, as was said by Straight, J., in R. v. Babu Lal(4), "an endless source of anxiety and difficulty to those who have to see that justice is properly administered."

In R. v. Thompson(5) Cave, J., said, "I would add that for my part I always suspect these confessions, which are supposed to be the offspring of penitence and remorse, and which nevertheless are repudiated by the prisoner at the trial. It is remarkable that it is of very rare occurrence for evidence of a confession to be given when the proof of the prisoner's guilt is otherwise clear and satisfactory; but when it is not clear and satisfactory, the prisoner is not infrequently alleged to have been seized with the desire born of penitence and [illegible] confession; a desire which vanishes as soon [illegible]" Were it not for the presumption raised by [illegible]itted that the rule which should be followed in all cases of retracted confessions, is to throw the onus on the prosecution of affirmatively proving the voluntary character of the confession. No doubt, abstractedly considered, the mere fact that a confession is retracted raises no inference of improper inducement.(6) Such retraction may be due to the fear of punishment for an offence, which has been the subject of a true and voluntary confession. Having regard, however, to the notorious fact that confessions are frequently extorted in this country(7), retraction might not improperly be held to cast upon the prosecution the onus of showing that the confession was a voluntary one. When a prisoner has confessed and afterwards pleads not guilty, the truth and voluntariness of the confession is denied by implication. When a prisoner says he has been forced to confess, the Judge is put upon judicial enquiry, and that enquiry, it may well be urged, should precede

(1) R. v. Taranath Roy Chowdry (1910), 37 C., 735.

(2) Emperor v. Dhani, 20 Cr. L. J., 721; See Sheoprasad Kocri v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J., 562.

(3) 2 Bom. L. R., 157.

(4) 6 A., at p. 543 (1884), referred to in R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B., 452, 461 (1889).

(5) L. R., 1893, 2 Q. B., 12, 18, cited with approval in the Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, 22 C., at p. 172 (1894).

(6) So in Sheoprasad Kocri v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J., 562; it was held that the fact of retraction would not (necessarily) deprive a confession of its (primâ facie) voluntary character.

(7) See cases cited, post.

the admission of the confession and any examination into its truth.(1) As, however, the law now stands, provided it was voluntarily made, the confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is admissible in evidence against the prisoner even though the confession be retracted before the Sessions Judge.(2) A mere subsequent retraction of a confession, which is duly recorded and certified by a Magistrate, is not enough in all cases to make it appear to have been unlawfully induced.(3)

According to some rulings of the Madras High Court a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars.(4) That Court has, however, more recently held(5) in general conformity with the views expressed by the other High Courts(6), that it cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence The weight to be given to such a confession must depend upon the circumstances under which the confession was originally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted, including the reasons given by the prisoner for his retraction.(7) The credibility of such a confession is in each case a matter to be decided by the Court according to the circumstances of each particular case, and if the Court is of opinion that such a confession is true, the Court is bound to act, so far as the person making it is concerned, upon such belief.(8) The use to be made of such a confession is a matter of prudence rather than of law.(9) It is unsafe for a Court to rely on and act on a confession which has been retracted, unless after consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated in material particulars by credible independent evidence(10) or unless the character of the confession and the circumstances under which it was taken indicate its truth (11)

A retracted confession is almost always open to suspicion, and the Courts will therefore, in conformity with the abovementioned rulings, generally require corroborative evidence of its truth, even though there be no absolute rule

(1) 2 Bom. L R, 161, 163

(2) R. v Sreemuty Mongola, 6 W R, C. R (1866), R v Mussamut Jema, 8 W. R., Cr, 40 (1867), R v Balvant Pendharkar, 11 Bom H C R, 157 (1874), R. v Petta Gazi, 4 W. R, Cr, 16 (1865) [when prisoners confess in the most circumstantial manner to having committed a murder, the finding of the body is not absolutely essential to a conviction R v Budduruddeen, 11 W. R, 20 (1869], a Judge held to have exercised a proper discretion in not passing sentence of death in a case in which the dead body was not found R v Bhuttun Rujuan, 12 W R., Cr, 49 (1869), [the properly attested confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is sufficient for his conviction without corroborative evidence, and notwithstanding a subsequent denial before the Sessions Court] but where there was misconduct of the police, it was held that the prisoners could not safely be convicted on their own retracted statements without any corroboration Sofirudeen v R, 2 C L R, 132 (1878) See note 5, also Sheoprasad Koeri v Emperor, 20 Cr L J, 562, supra Emperor v Kabili Katone, 19 Cr L J, 959

(3) R v Basanta, 25 B, 168 (1900).

(4) R v Rangi, 10 M, 295 (1886); R v Bharmoppa, 12 M, 123 (1888), in R v. Rom Vayer, 19 M, 482 (1896), the confessions were corroborated

(5) R v Raman, 21 M, 83, 88 (1897) As to the necessity of corroboration when it is used as against others than the maker, see Yasin v R, 28 C, 683 (1901).

(6) R v Bhuttun Rujuun, 12 W R., Cr, 49 (1869), R v Gharya, 19 B, 728 (1894), R v Ganbia 23 B, 316 (1898); R v Maiku Lal, 20 A, 133 (1897), R v Kelvie (1907), 29 A 434, post p 186.

(7) R v Raman 21 M, 83, 88 (1897).

(8) R v Maiku Lal 20 A, 133 (1897).

(9) R v Gharya, 19 B 728 (1894).

(10) R v Mahabir, 18 A, 78 (1895) See R v Jadab Das, 4 C W N, 129; s c, 27 C, 295

(11) R v Maiku Lal, 20 A 133 (1897); see also R v. Kashinath Dinkar, 8 Bom. H C R, Cr Ca, 126, 138 (1871); R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B, 452, 461 (1889), R v. Babu Lal, 6 A, 509 542 (1884), R v. Jagat Chandra, 22 C, 50, 77 (1894); Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Baistobi, 22 C, 164 (1894).

of law requiring corroboration of a retracted confession, the matter is one of prudence and it is prudent as a general rule to require corroboration.(1). This procedure will in effect practically achieve the same results as a rule requiring proof of the voluntary character of a retracted confession, inasmuch as though these decisions require evidence of the truth of the confession and not of its voluntary character, the truth of voluntariness may not unreasonably, though not necessarily, be inferred where the truth of the confession is established. In a recent case, where a friend of the accused had made a statement to a Police-officer (which was taken down in writing) but at the trial had denied having made it and the Presiding Judge had admitted the statement in evidence both to discredit its maker and also as evidence against the accused in that it contained statements made to the Police corroborating confessions made by the accused; it was held by the Full Bench of the Bombay High Court that the said document ought not to have been used in evidence against the accused but that his confessions were not made irrelevant under this section by the addition of the statement.(2)

The law, as it at present stands, may thus be summarized: (a) In the case of judicial confessions recorded in the manner prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Code, the confession is to be held primâ facie to be voluntary until the contrary is shown. (b) Both in the case of judicial and extra-judicial confessions the onus is upon the accused of showing that under this section a confession he has made is irrelevant. (c) While the mere fact of retraction is not in itself sufficient to make it appear to have been unlawfully induced, in ordinary cases as a general rule, corroborative evidence of the truth of the confession and, by implication, of its voluntariness is required. Where a Sessions Judge came to the conclusion that the confessions must be taken to be voluntary and true, because there was no evidence of ill-treatment by the Police, and the confessions had been repeated before the committing Magistrate nearly a month after they had been made and recorded, the Court said, "There is undoubtedly a great deal of force in that reasoning, but where a confession is retracted, it is, we think, the duty of a Court that is called to act upon it, especially in a case of murder, to enquire into all the material points and surrounding circumstances and satisfy itself fully that the confession cannot but be true."(3) In other cases the Court is not at liberty to act upon mere conjecture, and its rejection of a confession must be based upon the nature of the confession, the facts disclosed by the evidence f[illegible] ...a of not guilty by the accused. [illegible] appear doubtful whether the cc[illegible] he upon the Crown to affirmatively establish that the confession was voluntary and that it is admissible. If in such case this be not established, or if it appear, upon the evidence adduced by the prosecution or the accused, that the confession was not voluntary, it must be rejected under the terms of this section. S. 27 not only qualifies ss. 25, 26, but also this.(4)

Inducement: threat, promise. This and the succeeding sections, up to and including the thirtieth section, deal only with the specific form of admission known as a confession. But the preceding sections, up to and including the twenty-second section, deal with admissions generally in both criminal as well as civil cases. The twenty-first section therefore makes all confessions admissible except those which are

---

(1) R. v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty, S. B (1911), 38 C., 559. Emperor v. Musst Janai, 19 Cr. L. J., 275 (the confirmation should be not only as to the general story of the crime but as to the accused's connection with it; In Mobarak Ali v. Emperor, 23 C. W. N., 886: the confession was rejected. [illegible]endra Nath Das v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J., 826; Bhadde v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J., 861; 46 I. C., 1005.

(2) R. v. Narayan Raghunath Patki (1907), 32 B., 111 (Full Bench).

(3) R. v. Durgaya, 3 Bom L. R., 441 (1901).

(4) Amiruddin v. Emperor, 45 C., 557.

declared to be irrelevant or which are prohibited by this and the following sections. By sections 24—26 the Legislature intended to throw a safeguard around prisoners.(1)

Confession by an accused person.

It is difficult to lay down any hard-and-fast rule as to what constitutes an inducement, a term which of course includes torture. The question is one for the discretion of the Judge, and its decision will vary in each particular case (v. post). A statement is inadmissible under this section only if the Court considers it to have been made in consequence of "any inducement, threat, or promise"(2) The relevancy of the confession is to be determined by the Court, that is the Judge or the Magistrate, and not the jury.(3) "Section 24, whilst requiring the inducement to be offered by a person in authority, leaves it entirely to the Court to form its own opinion as to whether the inducement, threat, or promise was sufficient to lead the prisoner to suppose that he would derive some benefit or avoid some evil of a temporal nature by confessing."(4) It is immaterial to whom a confession, obtained by undue influence, is made. Thus a confession so tainted is irrelevant whether made to the Sessions Judge(5), or Magistrate(6), or any Police-officer(7), or any other person, e.g., the Traffic Manager of a Railway(8), or the Master of a vessel.(9) It is also immaterial whether the confession be made to the same person who has used undue influence(10), or whether it be made to a person other than the one who has held out the inducement, threat or promise.(11) "Confessions made some days after arrest may also often be true, but such confessions will, I believe, in almost every instance not have been made voluntarily but have been extorted by maltreatment, or induced by promises of pardon on being made a witness for the Crown"(12) Confessions obtained after illegal detention by the Police must be regarded with grave suspicion (13) Confessions in this country are often obtained by undue influence, especially by the Police, and this fact has been the subject of frequent judicial and public comment.(14) "The reports show that many confessions are induced by improper means, and that innocent

---

(1) R v Rama Birapa 3 B, 12, 17 (1878), per West J., as to the construction of ss 24—26, see The Madras Law Journal Jan and Feb, 1895, pp 12—44

(2) R v Balvant Pendharkar, 11 Bom. H C R, 137, 138 (1874)

(3) R v Hannah Moore, 21 L. J Mag. Ca, 199, see R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H C. R, 358, 367 (1872)

(4) R v Navroji Dadabhai, supra, at p 367 per Sargent, C J see also s 28, post

(5) R v Mussamat Luchoo, 5 N W. P, 86 (1873)

(6) Id R v Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12 (1878) R v Asghar Ali 2 A 260 (1879) R v Uzeer, 10 C, 775 (1884)

(7) R v Mussamat Luchoo supra, R v Rama Birapa, supra

(8) R v Navroji Dadabhai, supra.

(9) R v Hicks, 10 B L R App 1 (1872)

(10) R v Hicks, supra R v Mussamat Luchoo supra R v Rama Birapa supra R v Asghar Ali supra R v Uzeer supra

(11) R v Navroji Dadabhai supra R v Mussamat Luchoo supra

(12) R v Gobardhan, 9 A 528 566 (1887), per Brodhurst, J

(13) Id, R v Madar, Weekly Notes (1885), p 59, cited, ib R v Behary Singh, 7 W R, Cr, 3 (1867) [exposition of a Police-officer's powers of arrest and detention with the view to the suppression of torture] R v Sagal Samba, 21 C, 642 660 661 (1893)

(14) See R v Kohdai Kahar 5 W R, Cr 6 (1866), R v Behary Singh, 7 W R Cr 3 (1867) R v Nityo Gopal, 24 W R, Cr 80 (1875) Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, 542, 543 (1884), R v Gobardhun, 9 A 528, 566 (1887) R v Dada Ana, 15 B 452 461 (1889) "It appears to be well known that the Police are in the habit of extorting confessions by illegal and improper means They find that no enquiry is made of them as to the truth of such charges but they are merely told they must obtain convictions" per Petheram C J R v Ramanund All W N (1885) p 221 Stephen Hist of Criminal Law p 442 First Report of Indian Law Commissioners and the Report of the late Police Commission Section 163 Cr Pr Code expressly forbids any such inducement as is mentioned in this section being offered people often accuse themselves falsely is known to the reader of any book on Evidence."(1)

When a confession has been received, and it afterwards appears from other evidence, that an inducement, threat, or promise was held out, the proper course for the Judge is to strike the confession out of the record and to tell the jury to pay no attention to it.(2) A Magistrate acts without due discretion when as a prosecutor, he holds out promises to prisoners as an inducement to confess (3) A Police-officer acts improperly and illegally in offering any inducement to an accused person to make any disclosure or confession.(4) In determining whether a confession is admissible or not under this section it is necessary to consider (a) the character of the person alleged to have exercised undue influence (such person must be a " person in authority "); and (b) the nature of the inducement, threat, or promise [such inducement must (a) have reference to the charge, and (b) be sufficient, etc] The word accused in sections 24 to 26 includes any person who subsequently becomes accused provided that at the time of making the statement criminal proceedings were in prospect.(5)

'Person in authority ' Such a person must be in fact a person in authority. The mere belief of a confessing accused is not enough But what is such a person. (6) No definition or illustration is given of this expression " It is an expression well known to English lawyers on questions of this nature; and although, as all rules of evidence which were in force at the passing of the Act are repealed, the English decisions on the subject can scarcely be regarded as authorities, they may still serve as valuable guides."(7) A too restrictive meaning should not be placed on these words.(8) " The test would seem to be, had the person authority to interfere with the matter, and any concern or interest in it would appear to be held sufficient to give him that authority, as in R. v. Warringham(9), where Parke, B., held that the wife of one of the prosecutors and concerned in the management of their business was a person in authority, and we find the rule so laid down in Archbold's Criminal Practice "(10) Accordingly, it was held that a travelling auditor in the service of the G. I P. Railway Company was a " person in authority " within the meaning of this section.(11) The members of a panchayat which sat to consider whether two persons should be excommunicated from caste for having committed a murder were held not to be ' in authority " within the meaning of this section.(12) In a later case the Court, though not deciding the question, was disposed to think that where a panchayat was assuming an authority and leading the accused to believe that he had that authority, he came within the section.(13) A Police Patel(14), a

(1) R. v Dada Ana, 15 B , 452, 461 (1889), per Jardine, J

(2) R v Garner, 1 Den C C, 329

(3) R v Ramdhon Singh, 1 W. R, Cr, 24 (1864).

(4) R v. Dhurum Dutt, 8 W. R, Cr, 13 (1867); Cr. Pr. Code, s 163

(5) Smith v. Emperor, 19 Cr L. J., 189, s c, 43 I C., 605.

(6) R v Ganesh Chandra, 50 C., 127 (1923).

(7) R v. Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom. H C R, 358, 368 (1872), per Sargent, C. J

(8) Nazir Jhamdar v R, 9 C. W. N., 474 (1905)

(9) 2 Den C C., 447.

(10) R v Navroji Dadabhai, supra, 369, per Sargent, C J "The inducement and authority must all be understood in relation to the prosecution; that is to say, a person is deemed to be a person in authority, within the meaning of this rule, only if he stands in certain relations which are considered to imply some power of control or interference in regard to the prosecution " Wills, Ev, 210. Smith v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J, 189 (the expression has a wider meaning than the actual prosecutor)

(11) R v Navroji Dadabhai, supra.

(12) R. v Mohan Lall, 4 A, 46 (1881). And see also R. v. Fernand, 4 Bom. L. R., 785 (1902), where the member of a Panch was held to be a person in authority.

(13) Nazir Jhamdar v. R, 9 C. W. N., 474 (1905), followed in R. v. Jasha Bewa, 11 C. W. N, 904 (1907).

(14) R. v. Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12 (1878); R. v. Fakira Appaya, 40 B., 220 (1916).

collecting and assistant panchayet(1) a Police Constable(2), Superintendent of Excise(3), Military Officer(4), a Magistrate(5), and a Sessions Judge are "persons in authority": as are also the master of a vessel(6), the prosecutor(7), or his wife(8), or his attorney(9), the master or mistress of the prisoner, if the offence has been committed against the person or property of either, but otherwise not(10), and generally any person engaged in the arrest detention, examination, or prosecution of the accused (11) It has been held in England not to be necessary that the promise or threat should be actually uttered by the person in authority, if it was uttered by some one else in his presence and tacitly acquiesced in by him, so as to appear to have his confirmation and authority(12) A confession made to, but not induced by, a person in authority is admissible(13), while conversely a confession induced by, though not made to, such a person will be rejected.(14) Confessions procured by inducements proceeding from persons having no authority are admissible.(15)

The inducement must (a) have reference to the charge against the accused person, that is the charge of an offence in the Criminal Courts (16) The inducement must have b [illegible] offence, the subject of [illegible] prisoner's position with [illegible] as he does or does not [illegible] charge it will not affect a confession as to a totally different charge (19) An Inducement must have reference to the charge.

(1) R v Ganesh Chandra, 50 C, 127 (1923)

(2) R v Mussumat Luchoo 5 N-W P, 86 (1873), R v Shephard, 7 C & P, 579 R v Pountney, 7 C & P 302 R v Laugher 2 C & K 227 R v Millen, 3 Cox 507, as to private persons arresting, see 3 Russ, Cr, 464 and note Roscoe, Cr Ev, 12th Ed, 40 the wife of a constable is not a person in authority R v Hardwick, 1 C & P, 98, note (b)

(3) Rukmalli v Emperor, 22 C W N, 451, s c, 19 Cr L J, 524

(4) Smith v Emperor, 19 Cr L J, 189

(5) R v Ashgar Ali, 2 A, 260 (1879) R v Uzeer, 10 C., 775 (1884), R v Clewes, 4 C & P, 221, R v. Cooper, 5 C & P, 535, R v Parker, L & C, 42; R. v Ramdhun Sing, 1 W R, Cr, 24 (1864) [Honorary Magistrate acting as prosecutor], also it has been held, in England the Magistrate's Clerk, R v Drew, 8 C & P, 140 But see R v Fakira Appaya, 40 B, 220 (1916) in which it was questioned whether a statement made before a committing Magistrate is governed by this section or by the Criminal Procedure Code section 287

(6) R v Hicks, 10 B L R, App 1 (1872) but see also R v Moore, 2 Den 526 explaining R v Parratt, 4 C & P 570

(7) R v Jenkins, R & R, 429, R v Jones R R 152

(8) R v Warringham, ante R v Upchurch 1 R & M C C, 465 R v Taylor 8 C & P., 733, R v Moore, 2 Den C C, 522, R v Sleeman, Dears C. C 249

(9) R v Croydon, 2 Cox, 67

(10) R v Moore, 2 Den 522

(11) See Taylor Ev §§ 873, 874, Roscoe Cr Ev 13th Ed 40 Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed, 228 ib 5th Ed 250 Wills, Ev 210 R v Moore 2 Den C C 522 526, ib, 2nd Ed 302

(12) R v Laugher, 2 C & K, 225, R v Taylor 8 C & P 733 Quære, whether the section by the use of the words "proceeding from" enacts a different rule It is submitted not but see Field, Ev, 136, ib 6th Ed 96

(13) R v Gibbons 1 C & P 97, R v Tyler 1 C & P 129

(14) R v Boswell 1 Car & M 584. R v Blackburn 6 Cox 333

(15) See Roscoe Cr Ev 44 Field Ev, 136 ib 6th Ed 96

(16) See R v Mohan Lal 4 A, 46 (1881)

(17) In R v Hicks, 10 B L R App 1 a confession under threat made for purpose other than to extort confession was held to be inadmissible but the correctness of this ruling is doubtful

(18) R v Garner 2 C & K 920 Phipson Ev, 3rd Ed 229 ib 5th Ed 251 Taylor Ev §§ 879—881 3 Russ Cr 42 43 Steph Dig Art 22 Wills Ev 210 ib 2nd Ed, 302 "the threat must be a threat to prosecute or take some step adverse to the defendant's interests connected therewith i.e the prosecution and the promise must be a promise to forbear from some such course" ib

(19) R v Warren 3 Russ Cr 452n unless where two crimes being charged both form parts of the same transaction, R v Hearn 1 Car & M 109

inducement relating to some collateral matter unconnected with the charge will not exclude a confession (1) Thus a promise to give the prisoner a glass of spirits(2), or to strike off his handcuffs(3), or let him see his wife(4), will not be a bar to the admissibility of the confession. The inducement need not be expressed, but may be implied from the conduct of the person in authority, the declarations of the prisoner, or the circumstances of the case(5); nor need it be made directly to the prisoner; it is sufficient if it may reasonably be presumed to have come to his knowledge, providing, of course, it appears to have induced the confession (6)

[The ad-]vantage to [b]e gained [o]r the [e]vil to be [a]voided

Secondly —The inducement must (b) in the opinion of the Court be sufficient (see next paragraph): and the advantage to be gained, or the evil to be avoided, must (a) be of a temporal nature; therefore any inducement having reference to a future state of reward or punishment does not affect the admissibility of a confession; thus a confession will not be excluded which has been obtained from the accused by moral or religious exhortation, however urgent whether by a chaplain(7), or others(8); e g., "Be sure to tell the truth"(9), "I hope you will tell because Mrs. G. can ill-afford to lose the money"(10); 'you [illegible] h"(11); "kneel down and tell me the truth [illegible]); "if you have committed a fault, do not [illegible]"(13); "don't run your soul into more sin, [illegible] he advantage or evil must (b) have reference to the proceedings against the accused(15); as, for instance, that by confessing he will not be sent to jail(16); that nothing will happen to him(17), that steps will be taken to get him off(18), that he will be pardoned(19), that he

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 880.

(2) R v Sexton, cited in Joy on Confession, 17—19, is not law, Taylor, Ev, § 880, 3 Russ, Cr, 445, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 42, 12th Ed, 38

(3) R v Green 6 C & P. 655

(4) R v Lloyd, ib, 393

(5) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 251, R v Gillis, 17 Ir, C I, 534, cited

(6) Ib, Taylor, Ev, § 885, but a promise of threat to one prisoner will not exclude a confession made by another who was present and heard the inducement, R v Jacobs, 4 Cox, 54, and see R. v Bate, 11 Cox, 686, where a confession by a prisoner was received although an inducement had been held out to an accomplice which might have been communicated to the prisoner; but see R v. Harding, 1 Arm. M. & O, 340.

(7) R. v. Gilham, 1 Moo. C. C., 186 (in this case the gaol chaplain told a prisoner that, as the minister of God, he ought to warn him not to add sin to sin by attempting to dissemble with God, and that it would be important for him to confess his sins before God and to repair, as far as he could, any injury he had done, the prisoner after this made two confessions to the gaoler and mayor which were held to be admissible

(8) R v Jarvis, L. R., 1 C. C. R., 96; R v Reeve ib., 362.

(9) R. v. Court, 7 C. & P., 486; R. v. Holmes, 1 Cox, 247; "as a universal rule, an exhortation to speak the truth ought not to exclude confession" per Erle, J., in R v Moore, 2 Den, C. C, 522, 523

(10) R v Lloyd, 6 C. & P, 393.

(11) R v Reeve, L R, 1 C. C. R., 362

(12) R v Wild, R. & M, 452.

(13) R v Jarvis, L. R, 1 C C R, 96

(14) R v Sleeman, Dears, 269.

(15) Thus in R. v Mohan Lal, 4 A, 46, supra, the evil threatened (excommunication for life), had no reference to the criminal proceedings against the prisoners The case of R v Hick, 10 B L R, App. 1, supra, is also open to the objection that it is not in accord with this portion of the section.

(16) R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H C. R, 258 (1872).

(17) R v Mussumat Luchoo, 5 N.-W. P, 86 (1873)

(18) R v Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12 (1878); or "that if he confessed to the Magistrate he would get off", R. v. Ramdhan Singh, 1 W R, Cr. (1864).

(19) R v Asghar Ali, 2 A., 260 (1879); R v. Radhanath Dosadh, 8 W. R., Cr, 53 (1867), Bish Manjee v. R, 9 W. R., Cr, 16 (1868) [promises of immunity by the police], R v. Jagat Chandra, 22 C, 50, 73 (1894), see Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 45; Abdul Karim v. R, 1 All. L J, 110 (1904); a confession, however, made under promise of pardon, may be admissible under s 339, Cr. Pr. Code. R v. Asghar Ali, see supra; R. v. Hanmanta, 1 B, 610 (1877).

would be let off if he disclosed everything(1) or the like. A promise or threat as to some purely collateral matter will not exclude the confession (v. ante)

As the admission or rejection of a confession rests wholly in the discretion of the Judge, it is difficult to lay down particular rules, à priori, for the government of that discretion, and the more so, because much must necessarily depend on the age, experience, intelligence, and character of the prisoner, and on the circumstances under which the confession was made Language sufficient to overcome the mind of one, may have no effect upon that of another, a consideration which may serve to reconcile some contradictory decisions where ... rts, but the lesser circumstances, ... enquiries, are omitted.(2) The ... ners have been held inadmissible are very numerous. Various expressions have been held to amount to an "inducement." But the principle has been thus broadly stated: "It does not turn upon what may have been the precise words used; but in each case, whatever the words used may be, it is for the Judge to consider, before he admits or rejects the evidence, whether the words used were such as to convey to the mind of the person addressed an intimation that it will be better for him to confess that he committed the crime, or worse for him if he does not."(3) It is not because the law is afraid of having the truth elicited that these confessions are excluded, but it is because the law is jealous of not having the truth."(4) The following are given as examples of confessions which have been admitted or rejected It has been already mentioned that confessions induced by mere moral or religious exhortation are admissible "At one time almost any invitation to make a disclosure was held to imply some threat or promise, but a sounder practice has since prevailed, and the words used are construed in their natural sense, so that many of the older decisions are no longer safe guides."(5) Such expressions, therefore, as "what you say ... u,' or "for or against you" will not exclude ... imports a mere caution (7) Nor does the ... bout it," amount to a threat (8) There is, however, one form of inducement, namely, "you had better tell the truth" and equivalent expressions which are regarded as having acquired a fixed meaning in this connection, as if a technical term, and are always held to import a threat or promise.(9) Thus, "you had better pay the money, than go to jail" constitute an inducement.(10) The terms of the inducement constantly involve both threat and promise, a threat of prosecution if disclosure is not made, a promise of forgiveness if it is. The following, for instance, have been "Sufficient to give the accused grounds."

---

(1) R v Ganesh Chandra, 50 C, 127 (1923).

(2) Roscoe, Cr Ev, 40, see cases there collected.

(3) R v. Garner, 2 C & K, 920, 925, per Erle, J

(4) R. v Mansfield, 14 Cox, C C, 938, 640, per Williams, J

(5) Wills, Ev, 212; ib, 2nd Ed, 303 See judgment of Parke, B., in R v Baldry, 2 Den at p 445.

(6) R. v. Baldry, 2 Den, 430, overruling several earlier cases

(7) R v Jarvis, L. R, 1 C C R, 96, Wright's case, 1 Law, 48, and see R v Long, 6 C. & P, 179, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 255

(8) R v Reason, 12 Cox, 228

(9) Wills, Ev, 212, ib, 2nd Ed, 303 'The words 'you had better' seem to have acquired a sort of technical meaning," per Kelly, C B, in R v Jarvis, supra, see also per Field, J, in R v Uzeer, 10 C, 775, 776 (1884), and per Sargent, C J, in R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H C. R, 358 (1872), R v Fennell, 7 Q B D, 147, R. v Hatts, 49 L. T, 780, R v Walkley, 6 C & P, 175, but this construction will not prevail if such a statement is accompanied by other words which indicate that it was not intended in this sense, as if "you had better, as good boys, tell the truth' R v Reeve, L R., 1 C. C R, 362, 'I dare say you had a hand in it you may as well tell me all about it," is an inducement, R v Croydon, 2 Cox 67

(10) R v Navroji Dadabhai, 9 Bom H. C R, 358 (1872)

held to be such statements when made by persons in authority; "If you don't tell the truth, I will send for the constable to take you"(1); "if you tell me where my goods are, I will be favourable to you"(2); "if you confess the truth, nothing will happen to you"(3); "if you don't tell me, I will give you in charge of the police till you do tell me"(4); "if you are guilty, do confess; it will perhaps save your neck; you will have to go to prison; pray tell me if you did it"(5), "I only want my money, if you give me that you may go to the devil"(6), "unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a Magistrate"(7); "the watch has been found, and if you do not tell me who your partner was, I will commit you to prison"(8); "if I tell the truth shall I be hung?" "No, nonsense, you will not be hung"(9); "tell me what really happened, and I will take steps to get you off"(10); "if you confess to the Magistrate, you will get off"(11); "it is no use to deny it, for there are the man and boy who will swear they saw you do it"(12); "I shall be obliged if you would tell me what you know about it, if you will not, of course, we can do nothing for you"(13); "I will get you released if you speak the truth"(14), "you had better split and not suffer for all of them."(15) A confession made under a promi[illegible] The threat or promise need not be in express [illegible] ear, as in the case of the following statements: [illegible]) forgive me, I (the prisoner) will tell you the truth." Reply: "Anne, did you do it?"(17) "If you don't tell me, you may get yourself into trouble, and it will be the worse for you."(18) But a promise or threat must be imported. Thus the following statements have been held not to exclude the confession: "I must know more about it"(19); "now is the time for you to take it [the stolen property] back to the prosecutrix."(20)

Confession made to a Police-officer not to be proved 25. No confession made to a Police-officer(21), shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence(22).

Principle.—The powers of the police are often abused for purposes of extortion and oppression(23); and confessions obtained by the police through

(1) R v. Hearn, 1 Car. & M., 109, Wills, Ev., 212, ib, 2nd Ed, 303; R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P., 318

(2) R v. Cass, 1 Lea, 293, note.

(3) R v. Mussamat Luchoo, 5 N.-W. P., 86 (1873)

(4) R v. Luckhurst, Dears, C C., 245.

(5) R v. Upchurch, 1 Moo C. C., 465.

(6) R v. Jones, R. & R, 152.

(7) R v. Thompson, 1 Lea., 291.

(8) R v. Parratt, 4 C. & P., 570

(9) R v. Windsor, 4 F. & F., 366

(10) R. v. Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12 (1878).

(11) R v. Ramdhun Sing, 1 W. R., Cr., 24 (1864).

(12) R. v. Mills, 6 C & P., 146.

(13) R v. Partridge, 7 C. & P., 551.

(14) R. v. Dhurum Dutt, 8 W. R., Cr, 13 (1867); Emperor v. Dinanath Jundarji, 45 B, 1086 (1921), s. c. 23, Bom. L. R., 338, see Zeata v. Emperor, 37, I. C., 814, where the statement was held admissible

(15) R v. Thomas, 6 C. & P., 353.

(16) R v. Asghar Ali, 2 A, 260 (1879); R. v. Radhanath Dosadh, 8 W. R., Cr., 53 (1867), and as to confession induced by knowledge that reward and pardon had been offered, see R. v. Blackburn, 6 Cox, 333; R v. Boswell, 1 Car & M., 584; R. v. Dingley, 1 C. & K., 637; Emperor v. Anant Kumar Banerji, 32 C. L. J., 204

(17) R v Mansfield, 14 Cox, 639; Wills, Ev, 12, ib, 2nd Ed, 303.

(18) R. v. Coley, 10 Cox, 536.

(19) R v Reason, 12 Cox, 228; Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed, 233.

(20) R v Jones, 12 Cox, 241.

(21) In Upper Burma, after the word "Police-officer," the words "who is not a Magistrate" are to be inserted: see Act XIII of 1898.

(22) The above section was taken from s 148, Act XXV of 1861 (Cr. Pr. Code); see R. v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 512 (1884). As to statements made to a Police-officer investigating a case, and as to the use of police reports and diaries and statements made before the police: See Cr. Pr. Code, and v Salt v. R. (1909), 36 C., 560 Sikandar v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L. J., 83.

(23) See Extract from The First Report of the Indian Law Commissioners cited in Field, Ev., 140-142; and remarks of Straight, J., in R. v. Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, 542 (1884); and Mahmood, J., ib., 523; but see also remarks of Duthoit, J., ib., 550.

undue influence have been the subject of frequent judicial comment.(1) "The object of this section is to prevent confessions obtained from accused persons through any undue influence being received as evidence against them."(2) If a confession be "made to a Police-officer, the law says that such a confession shall be absolutely excluded from evidence, because the person to whom it was made is not to be relied on for proving such a confession, and he is moreover suspected of employing coercion to obtain the confession." "The broad ground for not admitting confessions made to a Police-officer is to avoid the danger of admitting false confessions"(3)

s. 26 (Confession while in custody of police) s. 27 (Facts discovered in consequence of information)

COMMENTARY.

Construction of section.

The rule enacted by this section is without limitation or qualification, and a confession made to a Police-officer is inadmissible in evidence, except so far as is provided by the twenty-seventh section, post (4) It is "better in construing a section such as the 25th, which was intended as a wholesome protection to the accused, to construe it in its widest and most popular signification. The enactment in this section is one to which the Court should give the fullest effect"(5) The terms of the section are imperative; and a confession made to a Police-officer under any circumstances is inadmissible in evidence against the accused The next section does not qualify the present one, but means that no confession made by a prisoner in custody to any person other than a Police-officer, shall be admissible, unless made in the presence of a Magistrate (6) The twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sections do not overlap each other On the other hand, the twenty-sixth section cannot be treated as an exception or proviso to the twenty-fifth section. The two sections lay down two clear and definite rules. In this section the criterion for excluding a confession is the answer to the question—to whom was the confession made? If the answer is, that it was made to a Police-officer, it is excluded On the other hand, the criterion adopted in the twenty-sixth section for excluding a confession is the answer to the question—under what circumstances was the confession made? If the answer is, that it was made whilst the accused was in the custody of a Police-officer, the confession is excluded, "unless it was made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate."(7) Therefore a confession to a Police-officer, even though made in the presence of a Magistrate, is inadmissible (8) The provisions

---

(1) v. ante, notes to s 25

(2) Per Garth, C J, in R v Hurribole Chunder, 1 C, 207, 215 (1876), 25 W R, Cr, 36, see also in the matter of Hiran Miya, 1 C L R, 21 (1877), R v Pancham, 4 A, 198, 204 (1882), Sections 25, 26, 27 "differ widely from the law of England and were inserted in the Act of 1861 (from which they have been taken) in order to prevent the practice of torture by the police for the purpose of extracting confessions" Steph Introd 165

(3) R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 532 (1884), per Mahmood, J, and v ib, 544, per Straight, J, ib 513 per Oldfield, J

(4) In the matter of Hiran Miya, 1 C L R, 21 (1877) R v Babu Lal, 6 All., 509 (1884) See Emperor v Hira Gobati, 21 Bom. L R, 724, cited under s 8, ante See as to construction of this section, the Madras Law Journal, Jan and Feb, 1895, pp 31—36.

(5) Per Garth, C. J, in R v Hurribole Chunder, 1 C, 215, 216 (1876), 25 W R, Cr, 36, but see dictum of Stuart C J. in R v Pancham, 4 A, 198 203 (1882) in which, however, Straight, J, seems not to have concurred, and which was dissented from by the Calcutta Court in Adu Shikdar v R, 11 C, 365, 641 (1885) "the prohibition in this section must be strictly applied" R v Pancham, 4 A, 204 per Straight, J

(6) R v Hurribole Chunder, supra, 215, in the matter of Hiran Miya supra, R v Babu Lal, 6 A 509 532 (1884)

(7) R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 59, 532 (1884), per Mahmood J, and v ib., 544, 545 per Straight J

(8) Ib, R v Domun Kahar, 12 W. R., Cr, 82 (1869), R v Mon Mohan 24 W R, Cr, 33 (1875), in this case the confession was made to the Magistrate, but the report shows that had it been made of pa

he

Police-officer in the presence of a Magistrate or not. When a Police-officer has evidence before him sufficient to justify the arrest of an accused, he should not, preliminary to the arrest, examine him and record his statement. The evidence of the Police-officer in regard to such statement cannot be regarded except as a confession to a Police-officer and is inadmissible under this section and is also inadmissible against the co-accused.(1)

"Police-officers"

In construing this section the term "Police-officer" should be read not in any strict technical sense, but according to its more comprehensive and popular meaning (2) A confession, therefore, made to the Deputy Commissioner of Police in Calcutta was held to be inadmissible.(3) The provisions of this section apply to every Police-officer and are not to be restricted to officers of the regular police-force (4) The following persons are "Police-officers" within the meaning of this sub-inspector of a thannah(7), police police head-constable(10), chowkidar Munsiffs in the Presidency of Madras(12) or Excise Inspector.(13) The words "Police-officer" include the Police-officers of Native States as well as those of British India (14) It is immaterial whether such Police-officer be the officer investigating the case; the fact that such person is a Police-officer invalidates a confession.(15) A confession made to a Police-officer in the presence and hearing of a private person is not to be considered as made to the latter, and is therefore excluded by the section.(16) But a policeman who overhears a conversation may be in the position of an ordinary witness and competent to depose to what he heard. It was, therefore, held that the evidence of a policeman who overheard a prisoner's statement made in another room, and in ignorance of the policeman's vicinity and uninfluenced by it, was admissible: the statement not being made to a Police-officer, nor to others whilst in his custody.(17) A confession is not taken without the scope of this section by the fact that it was made to a person, not in his capacity of a Police-officer, but as an Acting Magistrate, and Justice of the Peace.(18) In this last cited case, Pontifex, J., while agreeing that the

---

to the police it would have been held to be inadmissible Muthukumaraswami Pillai v. King-Emperor, 35 M, 397 (1912) (Abdur Rahim and Miller, JJ, dissenting).

(1) R. v. Jadab Das, 4 C. W. N., 129 (1899), as to incriminating statements of one accused against another to Police-officer, see Zeata v. Emperor, 37 I. A, 114, s c 10, Bur L. T., 270

(2) R. v. Hurribole Chunder, 1 C., 207, 215 (1876), per Garth, C J.: In the matter of Hiran Miya, 1 C. L. R., 21 (1877); R v. Bhima, 17 B., 485, 486 (1892), per Jardine, J: R. v Salemuddin Sheikh, 26 C, 570 (1899); R. v Nagla Kala, 22 B, 235 (1896).

(3) R v. Hurribole Chunder, supra

(4) R. v. Salemuddin Sheikh, 26 C., 569 (1899).

(5) R. v. Bhima, supra; R v Kamalia, 10 B, 595 (1886)

(6) R. v Pancham, 4 A, 198 (1882).

(7) In the matter of Hiran Miya, 1 C L. R., 21, supra

(8) R v Pagaree Shaha, 19 W. R, Cr, 51 (1873); Adu Sikdar v. R, 11 C., 635 (1885)

(9) R. v. Macdonald, 10 B. L. R., App., 2 (1872); R. v. Pitambur Jina, 2 B, 61 (1877); R. v Pandharinath, 6 B., 34 (1881), R. v. Babu Lal, 6 A., 509 (1884)

(10) R. v. Mussamat Luchoo, 5 N-W. P, 86 (1873)

(11) R. v. Salemuddin Sheikh, 26 C., 569 (1899). See Nazir Jhamdar v. R, 9 C. W N., 474 (1905).

(12) R v Soma Papi, 7 M., 287 (1883); see R v Bhima, 17 B, 485, 486 (1892)

(13) Emperor v. Wazir Singh, 3 P. R., Cr (1918); s c. 19, Cr, L. J., 364; Ah Foong v Emperor, 22 C. W. N., 834; s c. 28, C. L. J., 105.

(14) R. v. Nagla Kala, 22 B, 235 (1896).

(15) In the matter of Hiran Miya, 1 C. L R, 21, supra

(16) R. v. Pancham, 4 A., 198, 201, supra

(17) R. v. Sageena, 7 W. R, Cr, 56 (1867)

(18) R v. Hurribole Chunder, 1 C., 207, supra

confession there in question was inadmissible, added that he did so "without going so far as to say that this section of the Evidence Act renders inadmissible a confession made to any person connected with the police, for there are cases in which a person holding high judicial office has control over and is the nominal head of the police in his district."(1) If a person while in custody, as an accused, gives information to the police as complainant in another case, his statements as such informant cannot be used as evidence against him on his trial.(2) A statement made to a Police-officer by an accused person while in the custody of the police, if it is an admission of an incriminating circumstance, cannot be used in evidence under this and the following section(3) (v. post).

"Against" This section only provides that "no confession made to a Police-officer shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence." It may, however, be proved for other purposes. It does not preclude one accused person from proving a confession made to a Police-officer by another accused person tried jointly with him But under such circumstances it would be the duty of the Judge to instruct the jury that such confession is not to be received or treated as evidence against the person making it, but simply as evidence to be considered on behalf of the other.(4) So again it has been held that statements

section 523, Act XI of 1882(5) In this c

sion in this section of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) means, as in the twenty-fourth section, a confession made by an accused person, which it is proposed to prove against him to establish an offence. For such a purpose a confession might be inadmissible, which yet for other purposes would be admissible as an admission, under the eighteenth section, against the person who made it (the twenty-first section) in his character of one setting up an interest in property, the object of litigation or judicial enquiry and disposal "(6)

Admission made to Police-officers. An admission made by an accused person to a Police-officer may be proved if it does not amount to a confession(7), that is, if it is not a statement by him that he committed the crime with which he is charged, or a statement suggesting the inference that he did so. So where the prosecutor's watch, chain and a sum of money had been stolen from him as he was travelling by rail to Calcutta, and evidence was tendered of a statement made by the prisoner to the constable who arrested him to the effect that the watch and Rs 1,000 had been given to him by his sister, and that he had bought the chain, Phear, J, admitted this evidence, observing that there is a distinction in the Act between Admissions and Confessions.(8) This statement was clearly not a confession of the theft or dishonestly receiving stolen property with which he was charged, as it was not a statement that he had stolen the goods or come by them dishonestly, nor does the statement suggest any inference that he was guilty of the offences

---

(1) Ib at p 218

(2) Moher Sheikh v R, 21 C, 392 (1893)

(3) R v Javecharan, 19 B, 363 (1894); R v Bushmo Aucnt, 3 W R, Cr, 21 (1865)

(4) R v Pitamber Jina, 2 B, 61 (1876)

(5) R v. Tribhovan Manekchand, 9 B, 131 (1884)

(6) Ib, 134

(7) R v Macdonald, 10 B L R, App., 2 (1872), followed in R v Dabee Pershad, 6 C, 530 (1881), 7 C L R, 541, Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Roy, 49 C, 167 (1922), see also R v Kangal Mali, 41 C, 601 (1905) ref to in Rampit v Emperor, 20 All L. J, 178, R v Nobadwip Goswami, 1 B L R, O S C, 15 (1868), 15 W R, Cr, 71, in which it was held that the answer did not amount to a confession of guilt, but was a statement of facts which, if true, showed that the prisoner was innocent, and v. Barindra Kumar Ghose v R. (1909), 37 C, 91, and Emperor v Kangan Mal, 41 C, 601 (1914); foll in Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray, 49 C, 167 (1922)

(8) R v. Macdonald, supra.

with which he was charged, but, on the contrary, if true, it showed that he was innocent.(1) So where one of the three prisoners tried for murder made two statements, of which the first was—"Sir, I have something to give you. M A gave me this paper yesterday evening to keep for him," and the other was a detailed statement of how the deceased met his death. Wilson, J., admitted the first statement (from which no inference of guilt could be drawn), but rejected the second (which led to the inference that the person making the statement took part in the commission of the offence) (2) For an incriminating statement by an accused person to a Police-officer on which the prosecution relies is inadmissible.(3) A statement made by an accused to the police, which does not amount directly or indirectly to an admission of any incriminating circumstance, is admissible in evidence: hence where the accused was found carrying away a box at night, and when asked by a policeman on duty about the ownership of the box, he stated that the box belonged to him, this statement was held admissible against him, on a trial of theft regarding the box.(4) And it has been held in a recent case that such a statement, even if it tells against the accused, is admissible if it does not amount to a confession, and that it is for the Court to decide, according to the particular circumstances, whether a statement amounts to a confession or not.(5) As was pointed out in the undermentioned case(6) a useful test as to admissibility of statements made to the police is to ascertain the purpose to which they are put by the prosecution If the latter rely on the statements of the accused to the police as being true, then they may, and probably in many cases will be found to, amount to confessions. If on the other hand the statements of the accused are relied on, not because of their truth but because of their falsity, they are admissible. They are in such cases brought forward to show what the defence of the accused is, and that as the defence is untrue, this is a circumstance to prove the guilt of the accused Exculpatory statements may amount to admissions. Statements by the accused to the police, pointing out the place where, according to him, the crime was committed by others or where he concealed himself after it, are admissible as admissions, whether they are regarded as information leading to discovery under section 27 or as statements made as part of defence(7), and in [illegible] nt's sworn statement [illegible] Magistrate as a state- [illegible] was held admissible against him on a charge of perjury, although it amounted to an indirect confession of his guilt of another offence.(8)

---

(1) But a statement, although intended to be made in self-exculpation and not as a confession, may nevertheless be an admission of an incriminating circumstance, and if so, it is excluded by ss. 25 and 26; R v Pandharinath, 6 B, 34 (1881), v. post. R v. Haji 46 B, 961 (1922)

(2) R v. Meher Ali, 15 C., 589 (1888); foll in Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Ray, 49 C., 167 (1922); Muthu Kumaraswami Pillai v. King-Emperor, 35 M., 397 (1912), see also R. v. Jagrup, 7 A, 646 (1885), in which, however, the statement was held not to amount to a confession.

(3) R v. Mathews, 10 C., 1022 (1884); R. v Pandharinath, 6 B, 34, 37 (1881); R. v Nana, 14 B, 260, 263 (1889), R. v. Jareecharam, 19 B., 363 (1894) See R. v Haji Sher Mahomed, 46 B, 961 (1922) here the statement, though self-exculpatory, was inadmissible as it amounted to an admission of an incriminating circumstance

(4) R v Mahomed Ebrahim, 5 Bom. L R, 312 (1903), distinguishing, R v Pandharinath, supra See R. v. Haji Sher Mahomed, 46 B, 961 (1922).

(5) Barindra Kumar Ghose v. R (1909), 37 C., 91.

(6) R v. Kangal Mali, Cr. Ref. 30 of 1905, Cal H. C., 18th Sept., 1905; 41 C., 545, foll in Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Ray, 49 C., 167 (1922); R. v Haji Sher Mahomed, 46 B, 961 (1922).

(7) Emperor v Kangan Mall, 41 C., 545, per Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ.

(8) Maddala Ramanijammas (in re), 39 M, 977 (1916).

26. No confession made by any person whilst he is in the custody of a Police-officer, unless it be made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate, shall be proved as against such person.

Confession by accused while in custody of police not to be proved against him.

Explanation.—In this section 'Magistrate' does not include the head of a village discharging magisterial functions in the Presidency of Fort St. George or in Burma or elsewhere, unless such headman is a Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882.(1)

Principle.—The object of this section (as of the last) is to prevent the abuse of their powers by the police (2) The last section excludes confession to a Police-officer under any circumstances The present section excludes confessions to any one else, while the person making it is in a position to be influenced by a Police-officer, unless the free and voluntary nature of the confession is secured by its being made in the immediate presence of the Magistrate, in which case the confessing person has an opportunity of making a statement uncontrolled by any fear of the police (3) s 25 (Confession to a Police-officer.) s 27 (Facts discovered in consequence of information)

COMMENTARY.

Construction.

The law is imperative in excluding what comes from an accused person in custody of the police if it incriminates him (4) The prohibition in this section must be strictly applied (5) This section does not qualify the preceding one(6) but this section as well as the last, is qualified by the following one (7) The twenty-fifth section applies to all confessions to Police-officers, the present section to all confessions to any person, other than a Police-officer, made by persons whilst in police-custody. These last-mentioned confessions are inadmissible unless made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.(8) But a confession inadmissible under this section against the confessing party, might, however, be admissible in favour of a co-accused (9) The word "Police-officer" in this section includes the Police-officers of Native States as well as those of British India (10) As to the meaning of these words, see Commentary to the preceding section.

Police-custody.

As this section relates to confessions made to persons other than Police-officers, whilst the accused is in the custody of the police, a confession made to such third person by an accused whilst the latter is not in such custody is not excluded by the section Where, therefore, a woman, who was not in the custody of the police at the time, made a confession to a Village Munsif, whom the

---

(1) The above section was taken from s 149, Act XXV of 1861 (Cr Pr Code); see R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 512 (1884) The explanation to this section was added by s 3, Act III of 1891 It alters the law as laid down by the Madras High Court in R v Ramanjiyya, 2 M. 5 (1878) See R v Nagla Kala, 22 B, 237 (1896) See now the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898)

(2) R v Mon Mohun, 24 W R, Cr, 33, 36 (1875), per Birch, J

(3) In the matter of Hiran Miya, 1 C. L R, 21 (1877), per Ainslie, J, R v. Hurribole Chunder, 1 C., 207, 215 (1876).

(4) R v Mathews, 10 C, 1022, 1023 (1884), per Field, J See as to the construction of this section, the Madras Law Journal Jan and Feb, 1895, pp 36—44.

(5) R v Pancham, 4 A., 198, 204 (1882), per Straight, J

(6) R v Domun Kahar, 12 W R., Cr., 82 (1869), R v Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, 532, v ante, p 265

(7) R. v Babu Lal, 6 A., 509 (1884); see note to s 27, post

(8) v. ante

(9) R v Pitamber Jina, 2 B., 61 (1876).

(10) R v Nagla Kala, 22 B., 235 (1896)

Court held not to be a Police-officer within the meaning of the preceding section, it was held that the confession could not be excluded under this section.(1) Some sort of custody appears to be sufficient. So where the prisoners were among certain persons who had been "collected" by a police-patel on suspicion and the police-patel had himself accused them of complicity in the offence, the prisoners were deemed to be in the custody of the police.(2) In the under-mentioned case(3) a person under arrest on a charge of murder was taken in a tonga, from the place where the alleged offence was committed, to Godhra. A friend drove with her in the tonga and a mounted policeman rode in front. In the course of the journey the policeman left the tonga and went to a neighbouring village to procure a fresh horse, the tonga meanwhile proceeding slowly along the road for some miles without any escort. In the absence of the policeman the accused made a communication to her friend with reference to the alleged offence. At the trial it was proposed to ask what the prisoner had said, on the ground that she was not then in custody, and that this section did not [illegible] officer, merely because his subordinates, the warders of the jail, are members of the police-force of that State. In the absence of any suggestion of a close custody inside the jail, such as may possibly occur when an accused person is watched and guarded by a Police-officer investigating an offence, this section does not exclude such a jailor from giving evidence of what the accused told him while in jail. In the case cited(5) an accused, an under-trial prisoner, was sent up by the Magistrate in whose lock-up he was, in the custody of two policemen, to a hospital for treatment. The policemen made him over to the doctor and waited in the verandah to take him back. While with the doctor in his room, the accused made a confession of his guilt. At the trial, the confession was allowed to be proved. A question having arisen whether the confession was properly let in; held that the confession was excluded by this section, because the accused who was in police-custody up to his arrival at the hospital remained in that custody while the policemen were standing outside on the verandah.

In the immediate presence of a Magistrate.

If the confession be made to a third person, the presence of a Magistrate is necessary in order to render the confession admissible under this section. But a confession made to the Magistrate himself conforms to the requirement of the section and is admissible, even though the confessing party be at the time in the custody of the police.(6) In the case decided under section 149 of Act XXV of 1861 (Criminal Procedure Code), from which the present section of this Act has been taken, it was held that, in order to give weight to confessions of prisoners recorded under section 149, there should be a judicial record of the special circumstances under which such confessions were received by the Magistrate, showing in whose custody the prisoners were, and how far they were quite free agents.(7) In another case decided under the same section, it was held that the words "a Magistrate" mean "any Magistrate" and not merely "the Magistrate having jurisdiction."(8) The word "Magistrate" in this section includes Magistrates of Native States as well as those of British India. And so a confession made by a prisoner while in police-custody, to a First-class

(1) R. v. Sama Papi, 7 M., 287 (1886).
(2) R. v. Kamaliar, 10 B., 595, 596 (1886)
(3) R. v. Lester, 20 B., 165 (1894).
(4) R. v. Tateya, 20 B, 795 (1895).
(5) Emperor v Mallangowda, 42 B., 1.
(6) R. v. Man Mohun, 24 W. R., Cr., 33 (1875); R v. Nilmadhab Mitter, 15 C., 595 (1888).
(7) R. v. Kodai Kahar, 5 W. R., Cr., 6 (1886) · see Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 164, 364, 533.
(8) R. v. Vahala Jetha, 7 Bom H. C. R., C. C., 56 (1870).

Magistrate of the Native State of Muli in Kathiawar, and duly recorded by such Magistrate in the manner required by the Code of Criminal Procedure, was held to be admissible in evidence (1)

How much of information received from accused may be proved.

27. Provided that, when any fact is deposed(2) to as discovered(3) in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence(4), in the custody of a Police-officer(5), so much of such information, whether it amounts to a confession or not, as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered, may be proved.(6)

Principle.—The broad ground for not admitting confessions made under inducement, or to a Police-officer, or by persons whilst in custody is the danger of admitting false confessions (7) But the necessity for the exclusion disappears in a case provided for by this section, when the truth of the confession is guaranteed by the discovery of facts in consequence of the information given. It is this guarantee, afforded by the discovery of the property, for the correctness of the accused's statement, which is the ground of the admission of the exception to the general rule The fact discovered shows that so much of confession as immediately relates to it is true.(8) s 24 (Confession caused by inducement) s 26 (Confession by accused while in police-custody)

s 25 (Confession to a Police-officer)

Steph Dig, Art 22, Taylor, Ev, §§ 902, 903, Phipson. Ev, 5th Ed, 254, Wills, Ev, 214, ib, 2nd Ed., 305, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 49, 3 Russ Cr, 482—485 (9)

COMMENTARY.

Construction of section

The submission of a person to the custody of a Police-officer within the terms of section 46(1) of the Criminal Procedure Code is custody within the meaning of this section (10) Though the words "in the custody of a Police-officer" might seem to indicate, that this section was intended to be a proviso to the preceding section only and that it is inapplicable when the information relating to the fact discovered thereby constitutes a confession "made to a Police-officer," it has, however, been held that this section

(1) R v. Nagla Kala, 22 B, 235 (1896)

(2) S 150 of Act XXV of 1861 (Cr Pr Code) ran thus —"Deposed to by a police-officer," etc. [see Bishoo Manjee v. R, 9 W R, Cr., 16, 17 (1868)] The words in italics were omitted in the amended section substituted by Act VIII of 1869, and the omission has been here retained As the section now stands, the fact may be deposed to by any one, Field, Ev, 45 But it must be deposed to Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray, 49 C, 167 (1922)

(3) S 150 of Act XXV of 1861 ran thus — 'Discovered by him" which italicised words were omitted in the amended section substituted by Act VIII of 1869, v post

(4) S 150 of Act XXV of 1861 ran thus —'or in the custody," etc, v post

(5) This word has the same meaning as in ss 25 and 26, ante, see R v Nagla Kala, 22 B, 235, 238 (1896).

(6) This section replaces s 150 of Act XXV of 1861 (Cr Pr Code) as amended by Act VIII of 1869 see R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 512, 516 (1884)

(7) See cases cited in the notes to ss 24, 25, 26, ante

(8) R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 513, 517, 546 (1884), R v Nana, 14 B 260, 264 (1889), 3 Russ, Cr, 483, Taylor, Ev, §§ 902, 903 "But not only are confessions excluded when obtained by means of improper inducements, but also the acts of the prisoner done under the influence of such inducements unless confirmed by the finding of the property, for the same influence which might produce a groundless confession might produce groundless conduct' 3 Russ Cr, 485

(9) As to the English authorities see R v Nana, 14 B, 260, 265 (1889), R v. Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12, 17 (1878), R. v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 517 547 (1884)

(10) Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray, 49 C, 167 (1922).

is a proviso not only to the preceding section but also to the twenty-fifth section; and that, therefore, so much of the information given by an accused to a Police-officer, whether amounting to a confession or not, as distinctly relates to the facts thereby discovered, may be proved.(1). It qualifies also section 24, ante.(2) But the present section only qualifies the twenty-fifth section when the accused person is in the custody of the police; therefore, confessions to Police-officers by persons who are accused, but not in custody, or are in custody, but not accused, or are neither accused nor in custody, do not fall within the present section.(3) This section also qualifies the twenty-fourth section.(4) Therefore, whatever the inducement that may have been applied, or made use of, towards the accused, there is nothing in the law which forbids policemen or others from, at any rate, going so far as to say: " In consequence of what the prisoner told me, I went to such and such a place, and found such and such a thing." Moreover, they may repeat the words in which the information was couched whether they amount to a confession or not, provided they relate distinctly to the fact discovered.(5) Therefore, although a confession may be generally inadmissible, in consequence of an inducement having been offered within the meaning of the twenty-fourth section, yet if any fact is deposed to as discovered in consequence of such confession, so much thereof as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved under this section. But though the present section qualifies the twenty-fourth section, it will not be applicable in every case that falls within the scope of that section, which enacts that confessions unduly obtained are irrelevant whether the confessing party was in custody or not. But the present section refers to confessions made by accused persons in custody. Therefore confessions made by persons when accused but not in custody, or in custody but not accused, or neither accused nor in custody, will not be rendered admissible by the present section even if there is discovery.(6) This section, as a qualification of the imperative rules contained in sections 24—26, should be strictly construed and applied.(7)

---

(1) Field, Ev, 145 ib, 6th Ed, 105, R. v. Pagaree Shaha, 19 W R., Cr, 51 (1873); and see under the old law R. v Petta Gazi, 4 W R, Cr, 19 (1865), R v Jora Hasji, 11 Bom. H C R, 242 (1874), R v Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12 (1878), R. v. Pancham, 4 A, 198 (1882), R v. Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, F B (1884), Adu Shikdar v R, 11 C, 635 (1885), R. v. Kamalia, 10 B, 595 (1886), R v. Nana, 14 B, 260 (1889); Surendranath Mukerjee v. Emperor, 16 A L J, 478; s c, 19 Cr. L. J., 935. See generally as to the construction of this section, the Madras Law Journal, supra, p. 74, et seq, March, 1895, 123, et seq, April, 1895

(2) Amiruddin v. Emperor, 45 C., 557.

(3) R. v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 513, 533, 534, F. B. (1884); per Oldfield and Mahmood, JJ, v post.

(4) R. v Misri (1909), 31 A., 592.

(5) R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 545, per Straight, C J, ib, per Brodhurst, J, citing Taylor, Ev., § 902 [contra, per Mahmood J, ib, 535; and R. v. Kuarpala, Weekly Notes (1882), 225; see also to the same effect, viz, that s 27 does not qualify s 24, R. v Mussumat Luchoo, 5 N.-W. P.; 86 (1873), R. v Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12, 16 (1878), per West, J.—"It is not pretended that any discovery of facts, through information derived from R, occurred after that statement was made' Its defect, as made under undue influence, therefore, was not and could not be counteracted in the only possible way." This qualification of the rule enacted in s 24 by that enacted in the present section is in accordance with the English law upon the subject, see Taylor, Ev, § 902. The question does not appear to have been discussed by the Calcutta and Madras Courts in any reported case. But under the corresponding section of Act XXV of 1861 (s 150), it was held by the former Court, that where a Police-officer had offered an inducement to make a confession no part of his evidence, as to the discovery of facts in consequence of such confession, was admissible R. v. Dhurum Dutt, 8 W. R, Cr., 13 (1867); see also Bishoo Manjee v. R., 9 W R, Cr, 16, 17 (1868).

(6) See R v. Babu Lal, 6 All 509 (1884)

(7) R. v. Pancham, 4 A, 198 (1882). See Adu Shikdar v. R, 11 C, 635, 642 (1885). In R. v. Ram Charan, 24 W. R, Cr, 36 (1875), Jackson, J, commented "upon a prevailing tendency to disregard the provisions of s 26 of the Evidence Act, which has occurred in this case, as well as in others, recourse being had although not

The words "any fact" are qualified by the word "discovered" as used in the section: under the present section, it is not every statement made by a person accused of any offence while in the custody of a Police-officer, connected with the production or finding of property, which is admissible Whatever be the nature of the fact discovered, that fact must, in all cases, be itself relevant to the case, and the connection between it and the statements made must have been such that that statement constituted the information through which the discovery was made, in order to render the statement admissible. Other statements connected with the one thus made evidence, and thus mediately, but not necessarily or directly, connected with the fact discovered, are not admissible.(1) "No judicial officer [dealing with the provisions of this section] should allow one word more to be deposed to by a Police-officer, detailing a statement made to him by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a fact, than is absolutely necessary to show how the fact that was discovered is connected with the accused, so as in itself to be a relevant fact against him The twenty-seventh section was not intended to let in a confession generally, but only such particular part of it as set the person, to whom it was made, in motion, and led to his ascertaining the fact or facts of which he gives evidence."(2) The test of the admissibility under this section of information received from an accused person in the custody of a Police-officer, whether amounting to a confession or not, is —"Was the fact discovered by reason of the information and how much of the information was the immediate cause of the fact discovered, and as such a relevant fact ?"(3)

The discovery referred to in this section is that made to or by a Police-officer and the section applies in such a case though the facts are already known to persons other than Police-officers (4) The word "discovery" may either ... known before ... after hearing ... y some thing, ... unknown till then. It is in the latter sense that the word is used in this section, that is, in the sense of a finding upon a search or inquiry, of articles connected with the crime or other material fact; the reason being that it is only this kind of discovery which proves that the information, in consequence of which the discovery was made, is true and not fabricated. The statements admitted by the section are statements preceding finding upon search or inquiry(5) It is not now necessary that the discovery should be by the deponent(6), if the latter be a Police-officer investigating a case, he will not be allowed to prove an information received from a person accused of an offence in the custody of a police-officer, on the ground that a material fact was thereby discovered justified by facts to the proviso contained in s 27" Tara Singh v Crown, 50 P R, 11, Cr, J, 23 (1915)

Discover-ed "

(1) R v Jora Hasji, 11 Bom H C R, 242 (1874)

(2) R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509 546 (1884), per Straight, C J cited and adopted by Norris, J, in Adu Shikdar v R, 11 C, 635, 641 (1885)

(3) R v Commer Shabib, 12 M, 153 (1888), in which it was also said that 'the reasonable construction of s 27 is that, in addition to the fact discovered, so much of the information as was the immediate cause of the discovery is legal evidence"

(4) Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan Singh Ray, 49 C 167 (1922)

(5) See The Madras Law Journal supra, March 1895, pp 80, 85 R v Jora Hasji, 11 Bom H C R, 242 (1874) R v Rama Birapa 3 B, 12 (1878) R v Nana 14 B 260 (1889) in all the cases under this section where the statements were held to be admissible the 'discovery" was of articles or other material facts The section as thus understood enacts the same rule as is given in Taylor Ev, §§ 902, 903 (R v Rama Birapa, supra, 17 R v Nana supra, 265) for an example of an admission subsequent to discovery see R v Kamal Fukeer, 17 W R Cr 50 (1872)

(6) Under s 150 Act XXV of 1861 the words were discovered by him the italicised words have been omitted in the present section by him when that fact was already known to another Police-officer.(1) When the Police succeed in discovering property in consequence of information received from an accused, it is not competent to the police to replace the property in the place whence it is discovered and to ask the other accused to produce the property because there is no further discovery under this section as against the other accused.(2) While statements preceding finding upon search or inquiry are admissible under this section, on the other hand, mere statements, which lead to no physical discovery after they are made, are inadmissible.(3) In the case of statements made while pointing out the scene of the crime, the general rule is that if a prisoner points out or shows the scene of the offence and objects around as connected therewith, and makes contemporaneous statements in reference thereto, as amounting to "conduct" relevant under accompanying statements are not admissible being no such "discovery" as is required by it, nor do they fall within the first Explanation to the eighth section, and are therefore wholly excluded.(4) So where the prisoner, besides the formal recorded confession, made a confession to the Police-officers before and during his pointing out particular places and particular articles said to have been connected with the murder of which he was charged, West, J., observed: "A confession of murder made to a police constable is not at all confirmed by the prisoner's saying, 'this is the place where I killed the deceased,' and when, starting from the pointing to a ditch or a tree, a long narrative of transactions, some of them altogether remote from any connection with the spot indicated, is allowed to be deposed to as a confession by the prisoner, the intent of the Evidence Act is not fulfilled but defeated."(5) From the statement, "This is the place where I killed the deceased," there is no "discovery" within the meaning of this section, and therefore no guarantee of the truth of the statement; and further, the prosecution had not, in the particular case, shown that any act done by the accused had been so explained by his statements as to make the latter admissible under Similarly, in the case of statement neral rule is that if the prisoner be connected with the offence, and contemporaneously makes declarations as regards them, the act of production or delivery itself may be proved as "conduct" under the eighth section, ante: but as there is no "discovery," the accompanying statements are not admissible under the present section, nor under the first Explanation to the eighth section, ante.(7) So where a Police-officer deposed that the accused told

(1) Adu Shikdar v. R, 11 C, 635, 642 (1885)

(2) R v Beshya, 2 Bom L R, 1089 (1900)

(3) R v Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12 (1878); see the Madras Law Journal, supra, 81

(4) Ib., 82, R. v. Jora Hasji, 11 Bom H C R., 242, 246 (1874), R. v. Rama Birapa, 3 B, 12, 16, 17 (1878), that is, assuming the accompanying statements to amount to confessions; the rule however, as to such statements when more particularly stated, appears to be that if such statements are really explanatory of the acts they accompany they may be proved (R v Jora Hasji, supra, 245, 246; R v. Rama Birapa, supra, 17), subject, however, to the further proviso that s 8, so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct" cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by ss 25, 26 R. v Nana, 14 B., 260, 263 (1889)

(5) R v Rama Birapa, supra, 16, 17.

(6) Tara Singh v. Crown, 50 P. R., 11 Cr. J, 23 (1915)

(7) R v. Jora Hasji, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 242 (1874), in this case the first prisoner produced a bill-hook and knife from the field, and the second prisoner a stick, and each made a certain incriminatory statement which the Court held to be inadmissible both under this section since there was no "discovery," and under s. 8, Explanation (1); it however held that the acts of the prisoners could be proved; R v Pancham, 4 A., 198 (1882); see R. v. Kamalia, 10 B, 595, 597 (1886); Adu Shikdar v R., 11 C., 635, 640, 661 (1885): as to accompanying statement see Taylor, Ev., § 903; 3 Russ, Cr., 484.

him "that he had robbed K R of Rs. 48, whereof he had spent Rs 8, and had Rs. 40," and that he, the accused, made over Rs. 40 to him, the statement was held inadmissible, as no facts were discovered thereby. The High Court disapproved of the opinion of the Sessions Judge who had admitted this statement on the ground that the confession was the necessary preliminary of the surrender of the Rs 40, and that the surrender must necessarily have been accompanied or immediately preceded by some explanatory statement.(1) But where the accused makes a statement, as to the locality of certain property, and after, and upon such statement, the police accompany him to the locality, where upon arrival, accused by his own act produces the property, such statements may be admissible as leading to the discovery of the property(2) (v. post).

"In consequence of information"

In the first place, whatever be the nature of the fact discovered, that fact must, in all cases, be itself relevant to the case, and the connection between it and the statement made must have been such that that statement constituted the information through which the discovery was made, in order to render the statement admissible (3) In the next place, the practical test to determine whether or not there is such a connection between the information and the discovery has been stated to be as follows :—" In regard to the extent of the words 'thereby discovered,' we may derive some assistance from the test applied by the Courts in dealing with proximate and remote causes of damage, namely, whether what followed was the natural and reasonable result of the defendant's act."(4) It was formerly held by the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts(5) that where an article said to be connected with an offence was produced by the party himself after giving information in respect of it, the article could not be said to have been discovered "in consequence of the information" It was said that in such a case the article is discovered by the act of the party and not in consequence of the information. But this view was subsequently dissented from in, and (so far as the Bombay Court is concerned) overruled by, a case(6), in which the facts were as follows: The accused, in the course of the police-investigation, was asked by the police where the property was, and replied that he had kept it and would show. He said that he had buried the property in the fields He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed, and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which it was kept It was held that the statement of the accused that he had buried the property in the fields was admissible under this section, as it set the police in motion and led to the discovery of the property, and that a statement is equally admissible whether it is made in such detail as to enable the police to discover the property themselves, or whether it be of such a nature as to require the assistance of the accused in discovering the exact spot where the property is concealed This view of the section has also been adopted by the Calcutta High Court.(7) And in a case in the Allahabad High Court, where the accused was charged [illegible] re found [illegible] evidence [illegible] whether such conduct was or was not caused by the inducement of the police In this case it was declared that this section qualifies sections 24, 25 and 26 (8)

---

(1) Adu Shikdar v R, supra, 640, 641

(2) R. v Nana, 14 B, 260 (1889), v post

(3) R v Jora Hasji, 11 Bom H C R, 242 244 (1874)

(4) R. v. Nana, 14 B, 260, 267 (1889), per Jardine J

(5) R v. Pancham, 4 A., 198, 204 (1882), R v Babu Lal, 6 A, 509 44 (1884) per Straight J R v Kamalia 10 B 595 597 (1886)

(6) R v Nana 14 B 260 (1889).

(7) Legal Remembrancer v Chema Nashya 25 C 413 (1897) and see also R v Pagaree Shaha 19 W R Cr 57 (1873) in which case the party himself produced the property

(8) R v Misr (1909) 31 A 592

From an accused person in custody

Section 150 of Act XXV of 1861, as amended by Act VIII of 1869, was re-embodied in the twenty-seventh section of the Evidence Act with slight alterations of language. The only alteration on which any stress can be laid is the omission of the word " or."(1) This shows that the operation of the proviso is restricted to information from an accused person in custody of the police, and does not apply to information from accused persons not in custody of the police (2) It would appear, therefore, that in order to bring a case of discovery within the scope of this section, it is necessary that the party making the statement should be both accused and in custody at such time: and that (a) a confession obtained by inducement under the circumstances mentioned in the twenty-fourth section; or (b) a confession made to a Police-officer(3), will not be affected by the operation of the twenty-seventh section when the person confessing is at the time (a) neither accused nor in custody; (b) in custody but not accused; (c) accused but not in custody,—notwithstanding any discovery in consequence thereof; (d) a confession made to any person other than a Police-officer by a person who was at the time in the latter's custody, but not accused, is inadmissible, even though it may lead to discovery, unless indeed it was made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.

Where a fact is discovered in consequence of information received from one of several persons charged with an offence, and when others give like information, the fact should not be treated as discovered from the information of them all It should be deposed that a particular fact has been discovered from the information of AB, and this will let in so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered (4) In the case of R. v. Babu Lal(5) Straight, J, observed as follows: " I have more than once pointed out that it is not a proper course, where two persons are being tried, to allow a witness to state ' they said this,' or ' they said that,' or ' the prisoners then said.' It is certainly not at all likely that both the persons should speak at once, and it is the right of each of them to have the witness required to depose as nearly as possible to the exact words he individually used. And, I may add, where [illegible] n accused, [illegible] he strictest [illegible] room for [illegible] which are [illegible] what each [illegible] ss was not clear upon this point, and the witness refused to be more explicit, the Judge should have paid no attention to it." And in a recent case it was held that where two prisoners gave information which led to the arrest of another person, it was necessary that the information of each should be precisely and separately stated.(6)

How much of such information may be proved

[illegible] the several [illegible] as relates [illegible] onsideration

(1) S 150 ran "accused of any offence or in the custody of a police-officer."

(2) R. v. Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, 513 (1884), per Oldfield, J, see The Madras Law Journal, supra, pp. 128, 129, April, 1895.

(3) R. v. Babu Lal, 6 A, 509, 533 (1884); "A confession made to a Police-officer by a person who is not in the custody of the police, even though such confession led to discovery, would not be admissible in evidence, because it could not fall under the purview of s. 27, which is restricted to persons "in the custody of a Police-officer," per Mahmood J., and see per Oldfield, J. at p. 513, supra.

(4) R. v. Ram Churn, 24 W. R, Cr., 36 (1875).

(5) 6 A., 509 (1884) at pp. 549, 550.

(6) Ram Singh v. Crown, 50 P. R, 7 Cr J, 12 (1915)

(7) Per Sargent, C. J., in R. v. Nana, 14 B, 260, 263 (1889); and see R. v. Commer Sabib, 12 M, 153, 154 (1888).

(8) See Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Ray, 49 C, 167 (1922).

of the principle upon which the enactment contained in this section is founded. Statements admissible under this section are so admissible because the discovery rebuts the presumption of falsity arising from the fact of their being made under inducement or to the police or to others while in police-custody. The discovery proves not that the whole, but that some portion of the information given is true, namely, so much of the information as led directly and immediately to, or was the proximate cause of the discovery; only such portion of the information is guaranteed by the discovery and hence only such portion of the information is admissible. A prisoner's statement as to his knowledge of the place where a particular article is to be found, is confirmed by the discovery of that article and is thus shown to be true. But any explanation as to how he came by the article, or how it came to be where it is found, is not confirmed by the discovery, and as the presumption of falsity as to these other statements is not rebutted, therefore proof of them is prohibited. In the words of West, J.: 'It is not all statements connected with the production or finding of property which are admissible; those only which lead immediately to the discovery of property, and so far as they do lead to such discovery are properly admissible. Other statements connected with the one thus made evidence and so mediately(1), but not necessarily or directly, connected with the fact discovered are not to be admitted, as this would rather be an evasion than a fulfilment of the law, which is designed to guard prisoners accused of offences against unfair practices on the part of the police. For instance, a man says: 'You will find a stick at such and such a place. I killed Rama with it.' A policeman, in such a case, may be allowed to say he went to the place indicated, and found the stick; but any statement as to the confession of murder would be inadmissible. If instead of 'you will find,' the prisoner has said, 'I placed a sword or knife in such a spot,' where it was found, that, too, though it involves an admission of a particular act on the prisoner's part, is admissible, because it is the information which has directly led to the discovery, and is thus distinctly, and independently of any other statement connected with it. But if, besides this, the prisoner has said what induced him to put the knife or sword where it has ' furthered, much less caused, the twenty-seventh section o fession or not' are to be read as qualifying the word 'information' in the immediately preceding context, not the words 'so much'; and the effect is that, although ordinarily a confession of an accused while in custody would where also the narrative of antecedent events was held admissible as admissions not amounting to confessions.

(1) The relevancy of mediate connection appears to be the ratio decidendi of the case of R. v. Pagaree Shaha, 19 W. R., Cr., 71 (1873), in which a wider construction was put on the words "as relates distinctly," so as to admit not only so much of the information as leads directly and immediately to the discovery of the fact, but also the portion which leads mediately by way of explanation. Though Brodhurst, J., in referring to this case in R. v. Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, at p. 518 (1884), says that no difference is noticeable in the rulings of R. v. Pagoree Shaha, supra; R. v. Jora Hasji, post; R. v. Pancham, 4 A., 198 (1882), as to the extent to which statements or confessions of accused persons can be proved by a Police-officer under s. 27; it is, however, submitted that the ruling in R. v. Pagaree Shaha, supra, is not reconcilable with the principle laid down in R. v. Jora Hasji, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 242 (1874); R. v. Rama Birapa, 3 B., 12, 17 (1878); R. v. Babu Lal, 6 A., 509 (1884); Adu Shikdar v. R., 11 C., 635 (1885); R. v. Commer Sabib, 12 M., 153 (1888); R. v. Nana, 14 B., 260 (1887); and is indeed virtually overruled by Adu Shikdar v. R., supra, referred to in Legal Remembrancer v. Chema Nashya, 25 C., 413 (1897), see The Madras Law Journal, supra, April 1895, p. 129, et seq., and Field, Ev., 146. In the last cited case, it was said per Banerjee, J., "The view I take is in no way inconsistent with that taken by the Court in Adu Shikdar v. R., as the part of the information or statement that is here used as evidence against the accused under s. 27, relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered and does not go beyond it," p. 416.

be wholly excluded, yet if, in the course of such a confession, information leading to the discovery of a relevant fact has been given, so much of the information as distinctly led to this result may be deposed to, though, as a whole, the statement would constitute a confession which the preceding sections are intended to exclude"(1) So where two persons B and R, accused of offences under section 414 of the Penal Code, gave information to the police which led to the discovery of the stolen property (this information being to the effect that the accused had stolen a cow and a calf, and sold them to a particular person at a particular place) the Appellate Court observed that, "If he (the Sessions Judge) had applied, as he should have done, the rule thereby (section 27) laid down, he ought to have held that that portion of H's (the police-witness) statement in which he deposed 'they said they got' (I suppose this was intended to mean stole) 'the cow from LT,' 'they said that they had stolen a cow and a calf,' 'they have stolen it from S G, of Jaitpur,' 'they had stolen a goat in Belupur and sold it,' was inadmissible. The only fact about the cow and calf which was admissible as distinctly relating to the discovery of those animals at A R J's was that they sold it at Madanpur to him. As to the goat, there is nothing to show from the constable's deposition, that it was in consequence of what the accused told him that he found the goat in Chelganj."(2) So also where the prisoner told the police that certain cloths had been left by him with some of the prosecution-witnesses, and the Sessions Judge was of opinion that the statement of the prisoner that he had left the property with these persons should not be proved in evidence, but only that he said that certain property would be so found, the Madras High Court held this view to be wrong, observing: "The reasonable construction is that, in addition to the fact discovered, so much of the information as was the immediate cause of its discovery is legal evidence. The statement made by the prisoner in this case, viz., that he had deposited the cloths produced with the witnesses, who delivered them up on demand, was the proximate cause of their discovery and was admissible in evidence. If he had proceeded further and stated that they were cloths which he stole on the day mentioned in the charge from the complainant, that statement would not be evidence, for it would be only introductory to a further act on his part, viz, that of leaving the cloths with the witnesses, and on that ground it would not be the immediate cause of, or the necessary preliminary to, the fact discovered. The test is: 'was the fact discovered by reason of the information,' and how much of the information was the immediate cause of the fact discovered, and as such a relevant fact?"(3) Again, an accused was charged under section 411 of the Penal Code, with dishonestly receiving stolen property. In the course of the police-investigation, the accused was asked by the police where the property was. He replied that he had kept it, and would show. He said he had buried the property in the fiel[illegible] property was concealed, and [illegible] which the property was kept. [illegible] that he had buried the proper[illegible] and led to the discovery of t[illegible] kept" the property was not necessarily connected with the fact discovered and was therefore not admissible.(4) In the case cited(5) it was held legitimate

(1) R. v Jora Hasji, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 242, 244, 245 (1874); and see R. v. Rama Birapa, 3 B., 12, 17 (1878).

(2) R v. Babu Lal, 6 A., 509, 549, 550, per Straight, J (1884), and v. ib., 514, per Oldfield, J., and 518, per Brodhurst, J The explanation of Straight, J., as to the meaning of s 27 (at p. 546) was followed by the Calcutta High Court in Adu Shikdar v R, 11 C., 635, 641 (1885), as to the confessional statements in which case v. ante

(3) R. v. Commer Sabib, 12 M., 153 (1888). The Court added: "This appears to us substantially the principle on which the cases reported in Adu Shikdar v. R., R v Pancham, and R v. Jora Hasji were decided," ib., at p. 154. Sankappa Rai v. R (1908), 31 M., 127.

(4) R. v Nana, 14 B., 260, 265 (1889).

(5) Gurdit Singh v. Emperor, 19 Cr. L. J. 439, s c., 44 I. C., 967.

under this section to record evidence that an accused person said "I will point out certain property," if such statement leads to a discovery; but it was not legitimate to record as evidence that an accused had said "I will point out certain property which I obtained as my share of the booty in the dacoity." In another case(1) the accused made a statement during investigation by the police as to his having thrown a darri and a gandasa into the canal. In consequence of the statement the police recovered the darri and the gandasa from a neighbouring village having discovered from a boy the fact that the darri and gandasa had been found in the place pointed out by the accused. It was held that there was an immediate connection between the statement and the discovery and that the statement was admissible in evidence. When a confession as a whole is excluded whether by reason of sections 26 or 25 or 24 so much of the information given by the person making the confession when the accused was in custody as distinctly relates to the relevant fact thereby discovered is admissible. Under section 27 only so much of the information whether amounting to a confession or not as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved. Even if a single statement contains more information than what is contemplated in section 27, the statement is not to go in as a whole nor is it to go in as a statement at all, but what is admissible is the particular information given by the statement which leads to the discovery (2) 28 If such a confession as is referred to in section 24 is made after the impression caused by any such inducement, threat, or promise, has, in the opinion of the Court, been fully removed, it is relevant.

Confession made after removal of impression caused by inducement, threat, or promise, relevant

Principle.—If a confession has been obtained from the prisoner by undue means, any statement afterwards made by him under the influence of that confession cannot be admitted as evidence (3) But the confession in the case mentioned in this section is deemed to be voluntary and is received as the result of reflection and free determination, unaffected and uninduced by the original threat or promise.(4)

s. 24 (Confession caused by inducement) s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 ("Court")

Steph. Dig, Art. 22, Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 12th Ed, 41–43, ib, 13th Ed, 41–44; Taylor, Ev, 878, 3 Russ Cr, 458–463, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 252, 257; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 305; Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 107

COMMENTARY.

Confession unaffected by original inducement.

This section forms an exception to the law provided by the twenty-fourth section(5), and as a qualification of that section should be read together with it. The impression caused by the inducement may have been removed by mere lapse of time, or by an intervening act, such as a caution given by some persons of superior authority(6), to the person holding out the inducement. An inducement may continue to operate on a man's mind for a considerable time after

---

(1) Kapur Singh v. Emperor, 20 Cr. L J, 305; s c, 50 I C, 481.
(2) Amiruddin Ahmed v. Emperor, 45 C, 557; s c., 22 C W. N, 203
(3) 3 Russ Cr., 458
(4) See notes, post and Introduction, ante, as also s. 24, ante; Steph. Dig, Art 22.
(5) R v. Pancham, 4 A, 198, 201 (1888).
(6) R. v Lingate, 1 Phillips, Ev, 414; Roscoe, 12th Ed., 41 [the prisoner on being taken into custody had been told by a person who came to assist the constable, that it would be better for him to confess; but on his being examined before the committing Magistrate on the following day, he was frequently cautioned by the Magistrate to say nothing against himself; a confession under these circumstances before the Magistrate was held to be clearly admissible]; R v. Bate, 11 Cox, 686;

it was uttered(1); but, on the other hand, it may be altogether removed by subsequent statements which precede the confession, and which clearly inform the defendant that he must expect no temporal advantage from making one.(2) Thus where a Magistrate had told a prisoner that if the latter would confess he would use his influence to obtain a pardon for him, and had afterwards received a letter from the Secretary of State refusing the pardon, which letter the Magistrate communicated to the prisoner, a confession subseq uently made was held to be admissible (3) It is for the Court to decide under all the circumstances of the particular case whether the improper influence was totally done away with before the confession was made In this, as well as other respects, the admissibility of the confession is a question for the Judge (4) Where the latter is satisfied that the influence has really ceased, the confession will be admitted.(5) But there ought to be strong evidence that the influence has ceased In R. v. Sherrington(6), Patteson, J., rejected a second confession saying, " there ought to be strong evidence to show that the impression under which the first confession was made, was afterwards removed, before the second confession can be received. I am of opinion in this case, that the prisoner must be considered to have made the second confession, under the same influence as he made the first; the interval of time being too short to allow of the supposition that it was the result of reflection and voluntary determination."

Confession otherwise relevant not to become irrelevant because of promise of secrecy, etc

29. If such a confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because it was made under a promise of secrecy, or in consequence of a deception practised on the accused person for the purpose of obtaining it, or when he was drunk, or because it was made in answer to questions which he need not have answered, whatever may have been the form of those questions, or because he was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession, and that evidence of it might be given against him.

Principle.—In order that a confession should be invalidated, there must be an inducement operating to influence the mind of the accused either by R v Roster, 1 Phillips, Ev, 414, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 12th Ed, 41, R v. Howes, 6 C. & P, 404, see Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed, 236, ib 5th Ed, 252 Field, Ev, 149; ib. 6th Ed, 107, Norton, Ev., 166, 167, as to the statutory form of warning, see 11 & 12 Vic, c 42, s 18.

(1) Wills, Ev., 213; ib 2nd Ed., 305; R v. Hewitt, 1 C. & M., 534, R. v. Ganesh Chandra, 50 C, 127 (1923).

(2) Ib, R v. Clews, 4 C. & P., 221.

(3) R v Clews, supra; see also R. v. Howes, 6 C. & P., 404

(4) 3 Russ Cr, 458; Field, Ev., 149, ib 6th Ed, 107.

(5) For cases where the inducement has been held to have ceased, see Roscoe, Cr Ev, 12th Ed., 41; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 252 and where held not to have ceased, Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 12th Ed, 42; Phipson, Ev., ib.; and R. v Mussumat Luchoo, 5 N.-W. P., 86, 88 (1873) [where a confession had been made upon the inducement held out by the police that nothing would happen if the prisoner confessed, and the prisoner made two different confessions, the one before the Magistrate and the other before the Sessions Judge, who accepted both confessions but did not record any opinion on the point, the Appeal Court held that it was not prepared to say that the confession made before the Sessions Judge was made after the impression caused by the promise had been fully removed] Reg. v. Navroji Hadabhai, 9 Bom. H. C. R, 358, 370 (1872) [where an inducement was held out to the prisoner in his house and he was immediately after taken to the Traffic Manager of a Railway, in whose presence he signed a receipt for a certain sum of money, Sargent, C J., said it would be impossible to hold that the impression was removed in the short interval which elapsed between the inducement and the signing of the receipt]; R. v. Sherrington, post; R. v. Ganesh Chandra 50 C., 127 (1923).

(6) 2 Lewin, C. C., 123, cited in Roscoe, Cr., Ev., 47, 48; 3 Russ, Cr., 458 hope of escape or through fear of punishment connected with the charge Such inducement must relate to the charge and reasonably imply that the position of the accused with reference to it will be rendered better or worse according as he does or does not confess. If the confession be obtained by any other influence, it will not be invalidated (though its weight may be affected(1), however much it would have been more proper not to have exerted such influence, and however much the statement itself may become liable to suspicion). The present section states certain non-invalidating origins of a confession. In none of the instances given is there any inducement relating to the charge, held out to the accused (2) The circumstances mentioned do not affect the testimonial trustworthiness of the confession.

s 21 (Proof of admissions against persons making them.)
s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 ("Evidence.")
s 123 (Criminating answers)

Steph Dig, Art 24, Taylor, Ev §§ 881, 882; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed, 44; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 251, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 304, Phillips and Arnold, Ev., 420, 421; Norton, Ev, 167, Best, Ev, § 529, Cr Pr. Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 163, 343; Wigmore, Ev., § 823; Joy's Confessions, 50

COMMENTARY.

Non-invalidating origins of a confession

The principle of testimonial untrustworthiness being the foundation of exclusions, the confessions should be taken into account unless their cause was such that the accused was likely to have been induced to untruly confess.(3) The non-invalidating origins of a confession, which are mentioned in this section are —(a) promise of secrecy; (b) deception; (c) drunkenness; (d) interrogation; (e) want of warning But there may be others. So what the accused has been overheard muttering to himself or saying to his wife or to any other person in confidence will be receivable in evidence.(4)

Promise of secrecy

This does not make the confession inadmissible, though a confidence is thus created in the mind of the prisoner and he is thrown off his guard. The true question seems to be—does such confidence render it probable that the prisoner should be thus induced untruly to confess himself guilty of a crime of which he was innocent.(5) Thus A was in custody on a charge of murder, B, a fellow prisoner, said to him, "I wish you would tell me how you murdered the boy—pray split" A replied, "Will you be upon your oath not to mention what I tell you?" B went upon his oath that he would not tell. A then made a statement;—held that this was not such an inducement to confess as would render the statement inadmissible.(6)

Deception

Where a prisoner in jail on a charge of felony, asked the turnkey of the jail to put a letter into the post for him, and after his promising to do so, the [illegible] -nd the turnkey, instead of [illegible] was held that the contents [illegible] prisoner as a confession, [illegible] -ned.(7) In another case,

(1) R. v Spilsbury, 7 C. & P., 187; v. post, Best, Ev., § 529

(2) Norton, Ev, 167; see s 246, ante; Taylor, Ev., § 881; Best, Ev, § 529; see notes to R. v. Gavin, 15 Cox, 656; and R. v. Brackenbury, 17 Cox, 628 (1893).

(3) Wigmore, Ev, § 823, thus a confession is not excluded because of any breach of confidence or deception The question in all cases is, was the inducement such as by possibility to elicit an untrue acknowledgment of guilt? See § 824.

(4) R. v. Simons, 6 C. & P., 540; R v. Sageena, 7 W. R., Cr, 56 (1867); but not what he has been heard to say in his sleep

(5) Joy on Confessions, 50.

(6) R. v. Shaw, 6 C. & P., 373; R. v. Nabadwip Goswami, 1 B. L. R., Cr., 15, 23 (1868); and when a witness promised that what the prisoner said should go no further, the confession was received; R. v Thomas, 7 C & P., 345

(7) R. v. Derrington, 2 C. & P., 418; R. v. Nabadwip Goswami, supra, 23.

artifice was used to induce a prisoner to suppose that some of his accomplices were in custody, under which mistaken supposition he made a confession, and it was admitted in evidence.(1)

Drunkenness

Whether the prisoner be made drunk for the purpose or with the motive of getting a confession, or made the confession while he had made himself drunk, it is equally receivable.(2)

Interrogation.

Much less will a confession be rejected merely because it has been elicited by questions put to the prisoner, whoever (subject to the provisions of the twenty- ... m, of the ... prisoner's ... that the ... t make it irrelevant as a confession, though the fact that it was so elicited might be material to the question whether such statement was voluntary.(5) And a confession ... l.(6) ... by ... ess ... ion 132, post, must be borne in mind.

Want of warning

A voluntary confession, too, is admissible, though it does not appear that the prisoner was warned, and even though it appears on the contrary that he was not so warned.(8) It is no part of the duty of a Magistrate to tell an accused person that anything he may say will go as evidence against him.(9) The Criminal Procedure Code(10) enacts that no Police-officer or other person shall prevent, by any caution or otherwise, any person from making in the course of any investigation under Chapter XIV, any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will.

Consideration of proved confession affecting person making it and others jointly under trial for same offence

30. When more persons than one are being tried jointly for the same offence, and a confession made by one of such persons affecting himself and some other of such persons is proved, the Court may take into consideration such confession as against such other person as well as against the person who makes such confession.

---

(1) R v Burley, 1 Phillips & Arn, 420; see also R v Ram Churn, 20 W. R., Cr., 33 (1873), in which the deception practised consisted of a statement made by the Police-officer to the prisoner that the latter's brother-in-law had given out that he was guilty.

(2) R. v. Spilsbury, 7 C. & P., 167, in which case Coleridge, J., said: "This [the fact that the prisoner was drunk] is matter of observation for me upon the weight that ought to attach to this statement when it is considered by the jury:" See Best, Ev., § 529.

(3) As to the English rule in regard to admissions obtained by questions by the police, see R. v. Brackenbury, 17 Cox, 628; R. v. Best, C. C. A. (1909), 1 K. B., 692; (overruling R. v. Gavin, 15 Cox, 656); Roger v Hawkins (1898), 67 L. J. A. B., 526, R. v Millar (1895), 18 Cox, 54; R. v Goddard (1896): 60 I. P., 491: R. v Histed (1889), 19 Cox, 16; R. v. Male (1893), 17 Cox, 689; Taylor, Ev, § 881; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 44 As to answers given to the police not amounting to a confession of guilt, see R v. Nabadwip Goswami, 1 B L. R, Cr., 15, 20 (1868)

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 881.

(5) Barindra Kumar Ghose v R. (1909), 37 C, 91.

(6) R. v. Rees, 7 C. & P., 569; R v Ellis, 1 Ry. & M, 432; cited in R v. Nabadwip Goswami, supra, 25.

(7) Field, Ev, 150; ib, 6th Ed, 108, Cr. Pr. Code, s. 342.

(8) Taylor, Ev, §§ 881, 882; see Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 108. R. v. Nabadwip Goswami, 1 B L. R, Cr, 15 (1868), the decision in which, on this point has been followed by the present section.

(9) R. v. Uzeer, 10 C, 775, 777 (1884)

(10) S. 163 (Act V of 1898).

Explanation.—"Offence," as used in this section, includes the abetment of, or attempt to commit, the offence.(1)

Illustrations

(a) A and B are jointly tried for the murder of C. It is proved that A said—'B and I murdered C.' The Court may consider the effect of this confession as against B.

(b) A is on his trial for murder of C. There is evidence to show that C was murdered by A and B, and that B said—'A and I murdered C'

This statement may not be taken into consideration by the Court against A, as B is not being jointly tried.

Principle.—When a person makes a confession, which affects both himself and another, the fact of self-implication takes the place, as it were, of the sanction of an oath, or, is rather supposed to serve as some guarantee for the truth of the accusation against the other (2) For when a person admits his guilt and exposes himself to the pains and penalties provided therefor, there is a guarantee for his truth (3) The guarantee, however, is a very weak one, for if the fact of self-inculpation is not in all cases a guarantee of the truth of a statement even as against the person making it, much less is it so as against another. Further, a confession may be true so far as it implicates the maker but may be false and concocted through malice and revenge so far as it affects others. While such a confession deserves ordinarily very little reliance, it is [illegible]

s 3 ("Court") s 3 ("Proved.")

Norton, Ev, 169, Cunningham, Ev, 26, 27, 148; Field, Ev, 156–159; ib, 6th Ed, 113–115.

COMMENTARY.

The general rule of English law(5) and the rule which prevailed in India prior to the passing of this Act(6) is and was, that the confession of an accused person is only evidence against himself and cannot be used against others. This section forms an exception to this rule. The grounds upon which it has been enacted have been adverted to; but the weakness of the guarantee afforded by self-implication and the dangerous and exceptional character of the evi- [illegible] strictly(7); and accord- [illegible] of its terms. Thus it has [illegible]eing "tried jointly"; that Construction.

(1) This explanation was inserted in this section by Act III of 1891, s 4, and alters the law in this respect as laid down in R. v Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R, Cr, 57 (1873); Badi v. R, 7 M, 579 (1884); R. v Alagappa Bali, Weir, 3rd Ed, 499*a* (1886)

(2) R. v Belat Ali, 19 W R, Cr, 67 (1873), per Phear, J.; R. v. Jagrup, 7 A, 646, 648 (1885), per Straight, J.. "The object sought by the rule of law is a safeguard for sincerity and for information"; R v Nur Mahomed, 8 B, 223, 227 (1883), per West, J

(3) R. v. Daji Narsu, 6 B, 288, 291 (1882); per West, J.

(4) See remarks on this section in Cunningham's Ev., 26, 27, 148

(5) Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 49, 50; Taylor, Ev., §§ 104, 871; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 253. Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 113, 521

(6) R v. Kally Churn Lohar, 6 W. R, Cr, 84 (1866); R v. Eusiruddi, 8 W. R., Cr, 35 (1867); R. v. Durbaroo Dass, 13 W. R, Cr, 14 (1870); R v. Sadhu Mundul, 21 W. R., Cr, 69, 71 (1874), per Phear, J. The provision contained in the section is a new one, there being no similar rule either in Act II of 1855, or in the Criminal Procedure Codes of 1861, 1872.

(7) R. v. Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R., Cr, 57, 64 (1873), per Glover, J.; R. v. Molappa Bin, 14 Ind. Jur. N. S., 19 (1890); see R. v. Sadhu Mundul, supra; Field, Ev. 156; ib., 6th Ed., 113; Norton, Ev., 169.

the prisoners must be legally tried jointly, and at the same time; that the words "same offence" excluded abetments and attempts; that the term "proved" is to be interpreted strictly; and that no weight is to be given to the confession as against any person other than the party making it, unless it is corroborated by independent testimony (v. post). This section must be read together with, and subject to, the provisions contained in sections 24-27, ante (v. post).

And it has been held by the Madras High Court that under section 27 and this section a confession made by one accused can only be taken into consideration against another accused when such confession is the immediate cause of the discovery of some fact relevant as against the other accused, and a direction to the jury to take such a confession into consideration when it is not the immediate cause of such a discovery is a misdirection.(1)

"Tried jointly."

It is not sufficient that the co-accused should be tried jointly in fact; they must be legally tried jointly.(2) The section applies only to cases in which the confession is made by a prisoner tried at the same time with the accused person against whom the confession is used.(3) Upon the question whether if one of several prisoners pleads guilty, such person can be held to be "tried jointly" with the rest so as to let in his confession against the others who have claimed a trial: (i) it is clearly established that a prisoner who pleads guilty at the trial and is thereupon convicted and sentenced cannot be said to be jointly tried with the other prisoners committed on the same charge who pleaded not guilty(4); (ii) and, if the prisoner's plea of guilty is not accepted by the Court it is plain that such prisoner is still being jointly tried with the rest (5) For it is not correct to say that a criminal trial ends with a plea of guilty.(6) (iii) When after a co-accused has pleaded guilty and the Court has accepted the plea and directed his removal from the dock the trial proceeds against the remaining prisoners, a confession made by him is not admissible against them under this section (7) The only case in which there may be a doubt is, where none of these courses has been explicitly adopted, but the accused who has pleaded guilty is left in the dock merely to see what the evidence will show as against him, though the Court intends ultimately to convict him on the plea of guilty. In such a case it would not be fair to allow his confession to be considered as ... t to comply with the forms of ... nere fact that a prisoner, who ... and sentenced, but is kept in the dock with the prisoners who are being tried, until the close of their trial, will not render his confession admissible, for immediate conviction and sentence are not necessary to exclude a confession by a co-prisoner who has pleaded guilty.(9) So where the Judge kept the prisoner in the dock, unconvicted and

(1) Sankappa Rai v. R (1908), 31 M., 127.

(2) R. v. Jagat Chandra, 22 C., 50, 72, 73 (1894).

(3) R. v. Sheikh Buxoo, 21 W. R., Cr., 65 (1874)

(4) R. v. Kalu Patil, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 148 (1874); Venkatasami v. R., 7 M., 102 (1883), Weir, 3rd Ed., 491; R. v. Chand Valad, 14 Ind Jur., N. S, 125 (1890); R v. Pirbhu, 17 A, 524 (1895); s. c., W. N (1895), 111; it is not quite clear whether in the three last-mentioned cases the prisoners were immediately convicted and sentenced on pleading guilty, but it seems so, R v Chinna Pavuchi, 23 M, 151, 154 (1899).

(5) Confirmation case, No 22 of 1893, cited in R v Pahuji, supra, 198; R. v. Chinna Pavuchi, 23 M, 151 (1899).

(6) R v. Chinna Pavuchi, 23 M, 151 (1899), dissenting from R. v. Lakshmayya Pandaram, 22 M, 491 (1899)

(7) R v. Keramat Sirdar (1911); 38 C, 446

(8) R. v. Chinna Pavuchi, 23 M, 151, 154 (1899), R v Paltua, 23 A., 53 (1900); R v Khoraj (1908); 30 A, 340; and as to English rule on this point see R. v. Gould (1908); C. C. C. Sess Pa. v. 149, p 366, at p 433

(9) R. v. Pahuji, 19 B, 195, 197 (1894) See Subrahmania Ayyar v. R, 25 M., 69 (1901) [when an accused person pleads guilty nothing remains to be tried as between him and the Crown, but see R. v.

not sentenced, merely because it was possible that the evidence elicited at the trial might enable the Court to determine whether to pass a sentence of death or transportation, it was held that his confession could not be considered as against his co-accused, as there was in fact under such circumstances after the plea of guilty, no joint trial.(1) In a case in the Madras High Court a distinction was drawn between a trial before a Sessions Court, where a prisoner who pleads guilty at the outset and is convicted on his plea cannot be tried jointly with others against whom the trial proceeds, and a trial before a Magistrate. In this case, all the accused were tried jointly and some confessed the crime and implicated their co-accused in statements under section 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) and after their statements had been recorded and the evidence for the prosecution closed pleaded guilty under section 255 (1) of that Code and it was held that these statements were admissible under this section (2) A confession made by a co-accused with B in a dacoity case is not admissible under this section against B in a proceeding under section 110 Criminal Procedure Code though admissible against him as well as against the confessor in the dacoity case (3) A statement by an accused person which suggests an inference of guilt may amount to a confession though the person making the statement may directly repudiate his participation in the crime. Such a statement may be taken into consideration against the person who

, however, accessory against the co-accused if sufficient corroboration is forthcoming.(4)

urt

befor to put h (6),

but it is improper to leave him in the dock unconvicted merely to see what the the dock (whether he be convicted or made previously, or to allow a person had told him(8), or to take a state-

The meaning of this expression is an offence coming under the same legal definition(10), or the same substantive offence(11), or the same specific offence.(12) But when two persons are accused of an offence of the same definition, arising out of a single transaction, the confession of the one may be

"For the same offence."

Kalu Patil, supra, 148; R v Ram Saran, 8 A, 304, 309 (1886)

(1) Ib.

(2) Bati Reddi (in re) 38 M, 302 (1915), per Ayling, J, distinguishing R. v Pahuji, 19 B, 195 (1894), and R. v. Pirbhu, 17 A, 524 (1895), as relating to trials before Sessions Courts, and R. v. Lakshmayya, 22 M, 491 (1899), as based on them

(3) Mafizuddin v. King-Emperor, 33 C. L J., 70 (1921); and see Amirullah Pramanick v Emperor, 22 C. W N, 408.

(4) Jasoda v. Emperor, 53 I C., 691.

(5) R. v. Kalu Patil, supra, 148; R v. Chinna Pavuchi, supra.

(6) Venkatasami v. R., supra, 104; R. v Pahuji, supra, 198; R. v Chinna Pavuchi, supra Quære whether co-accused can be examined as a witness after conviction and before sentence, see R. v. Annya 3 Bom L. R, 437 (1901). Where two prisoners are tried together for different offences committed in the same transaction, it is improper and illegal to examine one prisoner as a witness against the other. In the matter of A David, 5 C. L. R, 574 (1880), referred to in Bishnu Banwar v. R, 1 C. W. N., 35 (1896).

(7) R v. Pahuji, supra, 197; R. v. Chinna Pavuchi, 23 M, 151, 154 (1899); but see R. v. Kalu Patil, R. v. Ram Saran, supra, loc cit

(8) Venkatasami v. R., supra, 103.

(9) R. v. Pirbhu, 17 A., 524 (1895); s c., W. N (1895), 111.

(10) R. v. Malappa Bin, 14 Ind Jur, N S, 19, 20 (1890); R. v. Nur Mahomed, 8 B, 223, 226 (1883).

(11) R. v. Alagappan Bali, Weir, 3rd Ed, 499 (1886); see also Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna Baistobi, 22 C., 164, 173 (1894)

(12) Badi v. R., 7 M., 579 (1884); sub. nom. Mahomed Sahib, Weir, 3rd Ed., 495; R. v. Malappa Bin, supra.

used against the other, though it inculpates himself through acts separable from those ascribed to his accomplice, and capable, therefore, of constituting a separate offence from that of the accomplice.(1) Prior to the insertion of the Explanation to this section, the commission of an offence and the commission of its abetment were held to be different offences. Thus it was held that, upon the trial of A for murder, and B for abetment thereof, a confession by A implicating B could not be taken into consideration against B under this section.(2) Act III of 1891 has, however, by the insertion of the Explanation to this section, altered the law in this respect. But this Explanation applies only to cases where one person is charged with an offence and another is actually charged with, and tried for, abetment of it.(3) Where there is a joint trial of accused persons under entirely different sections of the Penal Code, the confession of a co-accused cannot be taken into consideration against the other.(4) But if a joint trial has commenced in which the prisoners are charged under different sections, and afterwards the charge is altered, so that all the prisoners are then tried under the same section, their confessions may be admissible against each other. Thus where A and B were being jointly tried before a Court of Sessions, the first for murder, and the second for abetment of murder, a confession made by A that he himself had committed the murder, at the instigation of B, was put in as evidence against A. Subsequently the charge against A was altered to one of abetment of murder and the Sessions Judge, under the authority of this section, used the confession against both and convicted them. The High Court held that the original and amended charges were so nearly related that the trial might, without any unfairness, be deemed to have been a trial on the amended charge from the commencement; and that no objection having been taken by B, who was represented by a Vakil, to the admissibility of A's confession against him when the charge against A was altered, the Sessions Judge was justified in using the confession against B also.(5)

"Confession." The word must be construed as meaning the same in this section as in the twenty-fourth, twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sections.(6) The subject of incriminatory statements which fall short of full admissions of guilt has been already dealt with. A mere admission from which no inference of guilt follows, is not within this section, though it implicates others, and is evidence, therefore, only against the maker. Before a statement can be taken into [illegible] on [illegible] ed.(7) [illegible] well

(1) R v. Nur Mahomed, 8 B., 223 (1883).

(2) Badi v. R., 7 M., 579 (1884), and see R v. Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R., Cr., 57 (1873), R. v. Alagappan Bali, Weir, 3rd Ed., 499a (1886); R. v. Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom H. C. R., 497, 499 (1873).

(3) Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Baistobi, 22 C., 164, 173 (1894).

(4) R v. Bala Patel, 5 B., 63 (1880); R v Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom. H. C. R., 497, 499 (1873); Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Karuna Baistobi, supra, loc cit.; R. v Alagappan Bali, Weir, 3rd Ed., 499a (1886), R v Malappa Bin, 14 Ind. Jur., N. S., 19 (1890)

(5) R v. Govind Babh, 11 Bom H. C. R., 278 (1874)

(6) R v. Jagrup, 7 A., 646, 648 (1885)

(7) R v. Mohesh Biswas, 19 W. R., Cr., 16 (1873); R. v. Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R., Cr., 57 (1873); R. v. Belat Ali, 19 W. R., Cr., 67 (1873); R. v. Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom H. C. R., 497, 500, 501 (1873); R. v. Kukree Ooram, 21 W. R., Cr., 48 (1874); R v. Banwaree Lall, 21 W. R., Cr., 53 (1874); R v. Naga, 23 W. R., Cr., 24 (1875); R. v. Keshub Boonia, 25 W. R., Cr., 8 (1876); R. v. Baijoo Choudhry, 25 W. R., Cr., 43 (1876); R. v. Ganraj, 2 A., 444 (1879); R. v. Mulu, 2 A., 646 (1880); R. v. Dasi Narsu, 6 B., 288 (1882); Noor Bux v. R., 6 C., 279 (1880); Bishan Dutt v. R., 2 All. L. J., 53 (1904); Sital Singh v. Emperor, 46 C., 700, cited under s. 10. Quære—As to the correctness of the decision of R. v. Bakur Khan, 5 N.-W. P., 213 (1873), the statement in which case, it is submitted, did not amount to a confession. Shaheber Ma v. Emperor, 18 C. L. J., 590 (1913).

But when the statement is to be used with him, it must be a confession in the quality must be that of a confession." Where the inherent quality of the statement by the prisoner is not a confession, it cannot be used against the other accused.(1) "This Court has already had occasion in more than one case to point out that confessions, which are made use of under the thirtieth section of the Evidence Act, in the first place, can only be used so far as they make the confessing prisoner guilty of the offence for which all are being tried; and secondly, cannot stand higher than the evidence of an accomplice."(2) "The test which section 30 of the Evidence Act intended should be applied to a statement of one prisoner proposed to be used in evidence as against another, is to see whether it is sufficient by itself to justify [illegible] jointly [illegible] In fact [illegible] must t[illegible] same brush "(3)

To render the statement of one person jointly tried with another for the same offence liable to consideration against that other, it is necessary that it should amount to a distinct confession of the offence charged.(4) In one case(5), it appears to have been held that the word 'confession' is limited to confessions of actual guilt, but it would seem that this is not so, and that the term will include statements which amount either to a direct admission of constructive guilt, or statements short of such admission, but from which the inference of Constructive guilt follows.(6)

Affecting himself and some other

From a consideration of the principle upon which this kind of evidence is admitted, it is plain that a statement which entirely exonerates the maker and inculpates his fellow-prisoner is not within the section(7) inasmuch as it does not amount to a confession of the maker's own individual guilt of the offence for which he and the others are jointly tried; nor is such a statement which affects himself and others but the latter only. Such a statement can afford no guarantee whatever of its own truth, being made without either the sanction of an oath, or of that substitute for that sanction which consists in the self-inculpation of the maker, [illegible] any test of truth whatever.(8) The rule [illegible] he confession must affect the maker therec[illegible] namely :—"That before a confession of a person jointly tried with the prisoner can be taken into consideration against him, it must appear that that confession implicates the confessing person substantially to the same extent as it implicates the person against whom it is to be used, in the commission of the offence for which the

(1) R v Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom H C R, 97, 500, 501 (1873) the passage in quotation marks as per West, J.

(2) R v Naga, 24 W R, Cr 24 (1875), per Phear, J

(3) R v Ganraj, 2 A, 444-446 (1879), per Straight, J the same argument was offered, but not accepted in R v Bakur Khan, 5 N-W P, 213 (1873)

(4) R v. Daji Narsu, 6 B, 288 (1882), and see Sankappa Rai v R (1908), 31 M, 127.

(5) R v. Baijoo Choudhry, 25 W. R., Cr, 13 (1876)

(6) See R v. Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom H C. R, 497 (1873); R. v Ganraj, 2 A., 444 (1879); R. v Mohesh Biswas, 19 W. R., Cr, 16 (1873); R v Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R, Cr, 57 (1873); See Indian Penal Code, ss 114, 149.

(7) R v Keshub Boonia, 2[illegible] W. R Cr 8 (1876); R v. Belat Ali, 19 W. R., Cr, 67 (1873); R. v. Banwaree Lal, 2[illegible] W. R., Cr, 53 (1874); R v Ganraj, 2 A., 444 (1879); R. v. Mulu 2 A., [illegible] ([illegible]); R v Daji Narsu, 6 B., 28[illegible] ([illegible]); [illegible] Bux v R., 6 Cr., 279 ([illegible]); [illegible] Datt v R., 2 All. L. J., [illegible] ([illegible]), see also R v. Mohesh Biswas, 19 W. R., Cr., 16 (1873); R v. Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom. H. C. R., Cr., 4[illegible] ([illegible]); R. v Khutree Ooram, 21 W. R., Cr., 4[illegible] ([illegible]); R v. Baijoo Choudhry 2[illegible] W. R., Cr. [illegible] (1876) prisoners are being jointly tried."(1) It is this self-implication which is supposed to afford a guarantee for the truth of the statement. Again, "this section must be interpreted to mean that the statement of fact made by the prisoner, which amounts to a confession of guilt on his part, may be taken into consideration, so far, and so far only, as that particular statement of fact itself extends against the other prisoners, who are being tried, as well as himself, for the offence which is thus confessed I think the two illustrations which are given to this section bear out this view. If this be so, we must be careful not to apply statements made by R. I. D., before the Magistrate, against other prisoners than himself further than those same statements amount in themselves to a confession of guilt on his part."(2) "Neither can the statement of one prisoner be taken as evidence against another prisoner under section 30 of the Evidence Act, unless the parties are admittedly in pari delicto, when, that is, the confessing prisoner implicates himself to the full as much as his co-prisoner whom he is criminating."(3) The ratio decidendi of the above cases is that statements which inculpate the maker more than, or equally with, others, alone can afford any satisfactory guarantee of their truth. Less weight is to be attached to statements which implicate the maker in a lesser degree than others, and unless the maker (though implicating himself to a lesser degree) implicates [illegible] it as the others, the statement will be [illegible] Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts [illegible] ed to statements which lay the principal [illegible] elf-serving according to the ideas of him who makes it, and is entirely excluded by the decisions of the abovementioned High Courts.(4) Lastly, no guarantee whatever is afforded by a statement which entirely exonerates the maker, and such a statement is therefore in all cases inadmissible.

(8) R v. Belat Ali, [illegible] W. R., Cr. [illegible] (1873); per Phear, J.

"Made" The confessions may have been made at any time before or at the trial.(5) This section is not to be read as if the words "at the trial" were inserted after

(1) R v Belat Ali, 19 W R Cr., 67, 10 B L R, 453 (1873), per Phear, J, followed in R v. Ganraj, 2 A, 444 (1879), R v Mulu, 2 A, 646 (1880); R v Babajibin Sathu, 14 Ind Jur., N. S, 175 (1890); see R v Mohesh Biswas, 19 W R, Cr, 16 (1873)

(2) R v. Mohesh Biswas, 19 W R, Cr, 16, 23 per Phear, J., 10 B. L. R., 455*n* But see for statement before Magistrate under section 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code, Bati Reddi (in re) 38 M, 302 (1915)

(3) R. v. Baijoo Choudhry, 25 W. R., Cr, 43 (1876); per Glover, J.: that is only when the confession makes both equally guilty of the offence The rule is laid down more broadly in R. v. Belat Ali, supra, and the cases which follow it A fortiori a statement which implicates the confessing prisoner more than his co-prisoners would appear to come within this section [see R. v. Belat Ali, supra, in which Phear, J., seems to have thought admissible a statement by a prisoner which made certain of his fellows accessories before the fact and not actual actors in the transaction which constituted the foundation of the charge] But the decisions of the Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts will exclude a confession which implicates the maker in a lesser degree than his co-accused, unless the self-implication and the implication of others is substantially the same. See, however, as to this R. v. Nur Mahomed, 8 B, 223, 227 (1883), in which the confession tended to reduce the guilt of the maker to that of a subordinate agent of another as principal; cf also R v. Govind Babli, 11 Bom H C R., 278 (1874).

(4) R v. Taranath Roy Chowdhry (1910), 37 C, 375.

(5) In R. v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 483, 488 (1878) Garth, C. J appears to have been of opinion that a confession under s 30 must not be one made at the trial, for he says (at p. 488) "The word 'proved' in s. 30 must refer to a confession made beforehand." But see R v. Tanya valad, post; and in no reported case has it ever been objected to the admissibility of a confession, that it was made at the trial. In R. v. Chandra Nath, 7 C., 65 (1881); and R. v. Lakshman Bala 6 B., 124 (1882); the objection to the admissibility of the confessions taken and recorded by the Sessions Judge at the trial was not to the fact of their having been made at the trial, but to their not having been "proved," v. post.

the word "made," and the word "recorded" substituted for the word "proved." Therefore, a confession duly made any time by one of several accused persons who are under trial jointly for the same offence can be taken into consideration under section 30 as against the other accused persons (1) It is not necessary that the confession, to be taken into consideration, should have been made in the presence of the co-prisoners against whom it is offered in evidence (2)

"Proved"

But though this section allows a confession to be used against another prisoner although made in his absence, it yet requires that such confession should be "proved" as against the prisoner to whose prejudice it is to be used Therefore, where two accused persons were jointly tried before the Sessions Judge on a charge of murder, and the Judge examined each of the accused in the absence of the other, making the latter withdraw from the Court during the examination of the former, though without objection from the pleaders of the accused persons, it was held that the examination of each accused could be used only against himself and not against his fellow-accused (3) Provided a confession is only proved afterwards, it is immaterial whether or not the co-prisoners were present at the time of making it. When a confession is used for the purposes of this section, the person to be affected by it has a right to demand that it be strictly proved and shown to have been, in all essential respects, taken and recorded as prescribed by law.(4) When a confession of one prisoner is taken in the absence of the other prisoners and the latter have had no opportunity of denying or even of knowing what their fellow-prisoner has said, such a confession cannot be said to have been "proved"; it is only after proper proof is given that it may be taken into consideration (5)

"Court."

The word "Court" in section 30 of the Evidence Act means not only the Judge, in a trial by a Judge with a jury, but includes both Judge and jury.(6)

"May take into consideration."

By this section the Legislature has only bestowed a discretion upon the Court to take into consideration such confession.(7) While under section 21 admissions (which include confessions) are relevant and may be used against the persons making them, the present section merely provides that the Court may take them into consideration against other persons; and this distinction is significant and shows that under this section the Court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co-accused (8) When more persons than one are jointly tried for the same offence, the confession made by one of them, if admissible in evidence at all, should be taken into consideration against all the accused, and not against the person alone who made it (9) The law which prevailed before the passing of this Act required a conviction to be

---

(1) R. v. Tanya valad, 14 Ind Jur, N S, 516 (1890).

(2) H C. Proceedings, 31st July, 1885, Weir, 3rd Ed, 499; R. v. Lakshman Bala, 6 B, 124, 125 (1882); see R. v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C, 970, 974 (1884). In R. v. Bepin Biswas, 10 C, 970, 974 (1884), it was held that, in that particular case, the confessions of two of several accused persons, made in the absence of the others, were of no weight against the latter.

(3) R. v. Lakshman Bala, 6 B, 124 (1882); following R v. Chandra Nath, 7 C, 65 (1878); in these cases the confessions were objected to not merely because they were made during the absence of the co-prisoners, but because they were not afterwards "proved" in any way, nor opportunity given to them to know what had been said against them

(4) R. v Chander Bhattacharjee, 24 W. R, Cr, 42 (1875) [Cr. Pr Code] 1872 s. 122 (s 164 of Act V of 1898), i.e., in the manner provided by ss 345, 346 [illegible] 342, 364 of Act V of 1898).

(5) R. v Lakshman Bala, supra, [illegible] Chandra Nath, supra.

(6) R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 483, F. B (1868)

(7) R v. Sadhu Mundul, 21 W. R, Cr, 69, 71 (1874), per Phear, J

(8) R. v Lalit Mohan [illegible], S B (1911): 38 C, 559

(9) R. v. Ram Birafa [illegible] based on evidence, excluding from that term statements of the character mentioned in this section.(1) And in so far as a statement by a witness only is "evidence" according to the definition given of that term when used in this Act, a confession by an accused person affecting himself and his co-accused is not "evidence" in that special sense (2) These words do not mean that the confession is to have the force of sworn evidence.(3) But such a confession is nevertheless evidence in the sense that it is matter which the Court, before whom it is made, may take into consideration in order to determine whether the issue of guilt is proved or not.(4) The wording, however, of this section (which is an exception) shows that such a confession is merely to be an element in the consideration(5) of all the facts of the case; while allowing it to be so considered, it does not do away with the necessity of other evidence.(6) For ev

a

[illegible]

process of careful examination, and capable of being tested by cross-examination, is yet by its nature such that, as against an accused, it must be received with caution, still more so must be the confession of a fellow-prisoner, which is only the bare statement of an accomplice, limited to just so much as the confessing person chose to say, and guaranteed by nothing except the peril

---

(1) v ante, "construction."

(2) v ante, s 3, and see Proceedings, 24th January, 1873, 7 Mad. H C. R, App, 15 [a conviction founded on such confession alone is a case of "no evidence, and bad in law"]; R. v. Kalivappa Gounden (1883), Weir, 3rd Ed, 494; [although confessional statements may be considered, they cannot be accepted as evidence of any fact necessary to constitute the offence], R. v. Bayaji Kom, 14 Ind. Jur, N S, 384 (1886) [the statement of a co-accused is not technically "evidence" within the definition given in s. 3, v post], R. v Khandia, 15 B, 66 (1890) (referred to in R. v. Nirmal Das, 22 A, 445, 447 (1900) [conviction held to be bad, as, though a confession could be taken into consideration, it was not evidence within the definition given by s 3, and could not, therefore, alone form the basis of a conviction]; R. v. Naga, 23 W. R, 24 (1875); R. v. Chunder Bhuttacharjee, 24 W. R., 42 (1875); R v. Narain Tel, mentioned in R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty (v. post) [the Legislature avoids saying that confessions of this sort are "evidence" and may be used as "evidence," it says merely the Court 'may take into consideration' such confession]. R. v. Dip Narain, 37 A, 247 (1915)

(3) R. v. Nirmal Das, 22 A, 445 (1900).

(4) R v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 483 F. B. (1878); Emperor v. Babar Ali, 42 C., 789 (1915); v. ante, s 3; see next note.

(5) Proceedings, 24th January, 1873, 7 Mad H C. R, App, 15 With respect to the words "taken into consideration," see R v. Chunder Bhuttacharjee, 24 W. R, Cr., 42 (1875); R. v. Nagar, 23 W. R, Cr, 24 (1875) and see note (3), p 181. In R v. Bayaji Kom Andu, 14 Ind. Jur, N. S, 384 (1886); followed in R. v. Khandia, 15 B, 66 (1890), it was held that "the words 'taken into consideration' in s 30 of the Evidence Act mean 'taken into consideration' for the purpose of arriving at a conclusion of fact, and though a co-accused's statement is not technically evidence within the definition given in s. 3, it may still be used quantum valeat for the basis of a reasonable inference, and if a jury think it sufficiently supported by a partial or qualified admission of guilt on the part of the accused himself and by admitted physical facts pointing to his connection with the crime imputed to him, they are not precluded by law any more than by reason from a finding of guilty thus sustained"

(6) Geddigadu v. R. (1909); 33 N., 46

(7) R v. Mohesh Biswas, 19 W. R, Cr, 16, 25 (1873); R. v. Sadhu Mundul, 21 W. R., 69, 71 (1874); R. v. Malappa Bin, 11 Bom H. C R., 196, 198 (1874); R. v. Naga, 23 W. R., Cr, 24 (1875); R v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 483 (1878); Emperor v. Sabit Khan, 43 B, 739; v 21 Bom L. R., 448; 20 Cr. L J., 497; see ss 133, 114, post What corroboration is necessary depends on the facts of each case, ib.

(2) (a) The confession of co-prisoners, to be rendered trustworthy must be corroborated(1), (b) aliunde by independent evidence, and not by the testimony of accomplices or approvers(2), (c) as well in respect of the identity of all the persons affected by it, as of the corpus delicti.(3)

(a) It is clear, for the reasons above mentioned, that though admissible under section 30 and capable of being taken into consideration, no weight can be attached to the confession unless it is in the first place corroborated. The confessions of persons tried jointly for the same offence may be "considered" as against other parties then on their trial with them, but such confessions, when used as evidence against others, stand in need of corroboration.(4) When confessions of one co-prisoner are admissible against another co-prisoner, the utmost value that can be claimed for them is that if there is other untainted evidence against the accused they may be "considered" together with such evidence (5) The corroborative evidence must be more cogent and should be more strictly examined by the Court than when an accomplice gives evidence as a witness, for a confession cannot be treated as of the same value as the evidence of an accomplice (6) Verification proceedings do not add any value to an approver's evidence or to a confession, and cannot be regarded as corroboration (7) (b) In the next place, the corroboration must be by independent evidence, and not by the testimony of accomplices or approvers For, if instead of being the statement of a fellow-prisoner, it had been evidence given [illegible] hing else than the [illegible] oboration derived [illegible] The testimony of one accomplice is not sufficient corroboration of another. And further, in so far as confession does not stand as high as the testimony of an accomplice there is a greater necessity for independent corroboration.(8) (c) Thirdly, not only must there be corroboration as to the corpus delicti, but also as to the identity of all the persons concerned. This is no technical rule but one founded

---

(1) R v Jaffir Ali, 19 W R, Cr, 57 (1873), R v. Koonjo Leth, 20 W R, Cr., 1, 3 (1873), v post, R v Sadhu Mundul, 21 W R, Cr, 69 (1874), R. v. Naga, 23 W. R, Cr, 24 (1885), R v Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C, 483 (1878), R v Dosa Jiva, 10 B, 231 (1885); R. v. Ram Saran, 8 A, 306 (1885); R v Alagappan Bali, Weir, 3rd Ed, 499*a* (1886), R v Ganapabhat, 14 Ind Jur, N S, 20 (1889)

(2) R v Jaffir Ali, supra, R v. Mohesh Biswas, 19 W. R, Cr, 16 (1873), R v. Koonjo Leth, supra, 3. ["The confession of K L of course could not have been legally used against the others at all, excepting to such an extent as it was substantially corroborated by unimpeachable evidence, aliunde," per Phear, J.]; R v. Sadhu Mundul, supra, R. v Malapa bin, 11 Bom. H. C. R, 196; R. v. Baijoo Choudhry, 25 W. R. Cr., 43 (1876); R v. Dosa Jiva, 10 B, 231 (1885); R. v. Ram Saran, 8 A, 306 (1885); R. v. Alagappan Bali, Weir, 3rd Ed., 499a (1886).

(3) R. v. Mohesh Biswas, supra, 21; R. v. Sadhu Mundul, [illegible]; R v. Budhu Nanku, 1 B, 475 (1[illegible], R. v. Kaliappa Gounden, Weir, 3rd [illegible] 4 (1883); R v Dosa Jiva, supra; R. v. Ram Saran, supra

(4) R v Jaffir Ali, supra

(5) R v. Alagappan Bali, supra

(6) R v. Ganapabhat, 14 Ind Jur. N S. 20 (1889).

(7) R. v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty. S B (1911), 38 C, 559

(8) R. v. Mohesh Biswas, 19 W R, Cr. 19, 25 (1873), R v Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R, Cr, 57, 58, ["Tainted evidence is not made better by being double in quantity." as it would be, where the only corroboration is accomplice testimony]; R v. Ram Saran, supra [a second accomplice does not improve the position of the first]. R. v. Koonjo Leth, supra, 3, v. ante; R v. Sadhu Mundul, supra; R. v. Malapa bin Kapana, supra, and cases cited, ante One confession does not corroborate another, Takanah v R., 10 C. W. N. xvi (1905).

be generally stated that where there [illegible] sets of evidence. [illegible] of which [illegible] be [illegible] cannot

"tends" to conviction it would be sufficient.(1) Where, in another prosecution, the circumstantial evidence constituted "a very strong primâ facie case," it was held to be sufficiently corroborative.(2) Again, it has been held that corroboration by circumstantial evidence is not sufficient "unless the circumstances constituting corroboration would, if believed to exist, themselves support a conviction."(3) Lastly, it has been said that "how far any corroborative evidence would be sufficient, coupled with the confession, to convict a prisoner, must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case."(4)

Upon the manner in which the confessions are to be taken into consideration, and upon the relation in which the confessions stand towards the other evidence in the case, the rulings are also not uniform. In some it has been laid down that they cannot be used as the basis of a case, but only as corroborative of other independent evidence, because they are not "evidence"(5), or if they are "evidence," they are "evidence" of a very weak character.(6) In other cases they have been treated as the basis of a case requiring only corroboration. The matter, however, is of no practical importance, as whether they be treated in either of the above modes, the issue of guilt will (if the confessions be sufficiently corroborated) be determined upon a consideration of the whole of the evidence, including therein the confessions and the other independent evidence, both of these are elements in the case which, when combined, offer the material for the Court's decision, whichever of the two be regarded as the prior element or basis.(7)

In the undermentioned case it was held by the Calcutta High Court that a retracted confession should carry practically no weight as against a person other than the maker, because it is not made on oath, it is not tested by cross-examination, and its truth is denied by the maker himself, who has thus lied on one or other of the occasions, and that the very fullest corroboration would be necessary in such a case, far more than would be demanded for the sworn testimony of an accomplice on oath.(8) In another case it has been held by the Allahabad High Court that a retracted confession may be taken into consideration (that is, used as evidence) against not only the person making it but persons tried jointly with the confessing accused for the same offence, and that, as regards the person making it, such a confession may even without any corroborative evidence form the basis of a conviction, and that, as regards other co-accused, although corroborative evidence may be necessary, it is not necessary that such evidence should by itself be sufficient to support a conviction, and semble that a conviction based on the unsupported evidence afforded by the confession of a co-accused would not be unlawful.(9) In another case it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that a retracted confession cannot ordinarily take the place of legal proof, and that under this section only a confession in the true sense of the word may be taken into consideration, and that it would be unsafe to place any reliance on a retracted confession as against a co-accused (10) In a case in the Bombay High Court it was said that

---

(1) R. v. Chunder Bhattacharjee, 24 W. R., Cr., 42 (1875), per Jackson, J. A similar view seems to be indicated in R. v. Bayaji Kom, 14 Ind. Jur., 384 (1886).

(2) R. v. Naga, 23 W. R., Cr., 24, 25 (1875), per Phear, J.

(3) R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 483, per Jackson and MacDonnell, JJ.

(4) Ib., 490, per Garth, C. J.

(5) R. v. Chunder Bhuttacharjee, 24 W. R., Cr., 42 (1875).

(6) R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, 4 C., 483, per Jackson, MacDonnell, and Broughton, JJ.

(7) This seems to be the view of Garth, C. J., in R. v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, supra. As a matter of convenience, however, it may be desirable to make the confession the starting point or basis, and then to consider how far the independent evidence, direct or circumstantial, supports it.

(8) Yasin v. R., 28 C., 689 (1901).

(9) R. v. Kehri (1907), 29 A., 434.

(10) R. v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty, S. B. (1911), 38 C., 559; and R. v. Taranath Roy Chowdhry (1910), 37 C., 375, and Yasin v. R. (1901), 28 C., 689.

constitute only primâ facie and rebuttable evidence against their makers and those claiming under them, as between them and others.(1)

s 17 ("Admission" defined.) s. 115 (Estoppel)
s 4 ("Conclusive proof.")

Taylor, Ev., §§ 817—810, 854—861; Norton, Ev., 151; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 217; Roscoe, N P. Ev, 62, Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 422; Best, Ev., §§ 529, 530

COMMENTARY.

Effect of admissions.

This section deals with the effect, in respect of conclusiveness, of admission, when it is made;
given to ar
because it is legally admissible (2) It is only so in certain cases, for instance, where it has been acted upon by the party to whom it was made.(3) "A statement made by a party is not, ipso facto, conclusive against him, though the party making them, it is always open to the maker to show that the statements were mistaken or untrue, except in the case in which they operate as estoppels.(5) The subject was clearly illustrated in the case of Heane v. Rogers(6), in which Bayley, J., observed: "There is no doubt but that the express admissions of a party to the suit, or admissions implied from his conduct, are evidence, and strong evidence against him: but we think that he is at liberty to prove or conclu his condit

with resp
tion, but as to third persons he is not bound. It is a well-established rule of law, that estoppels bind only parties and privies, and not strangers."(7) The

(1) Powell, Ev, 422 "Thus a receipt endorsed on a bill, and generally, all parol receipts, are only primâ facie evidence of payment, ib, 289, in general, a person's conduct and language have not the effect of operating against him by way of estoppel," per Chambre, J, in Smith v Taylor, 1 N. R, 210

(2) Bulley v. Bulley, L R, 9 Ch App, 739, 747, Ayetun v Ram Sebuk, 12 W. R, 156 (1869)

(3) Janan Chowdhry v Doolar Chowdhry, 18 W. R, 347 (1872); Brojendro Coomar v. The Chairman, Dacca Municipality, 20 W. R, 223 (1873); Yasvant Puttu v. Radhabhai, 14 B, 312 (1889). An admission made by a party in other cases may be taken as evidence against him, but cannot operate against him as an estoppel in a case in which his opponents are persons to whom the admission was not made, and who are not proved to have heard of it, or to have been in any way misled by it, or to have acted in reliance upon it Chunder Kant v. Pearee Mohan, 5 W. R., 209 (1866); see Mussumat Oodey v Mussumat Ladoo, 13 Moo. I. A., 585, 600 (1870).

(4) Ayetun v Ram Sebuk, supra. Though written statements may be accepted from accused as is the practice in Courts under the Calcutta High Court they cannot take the plea of evidence nor of examination contemplated by section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amrita Lal Hazra v. R, 42 C, 957 (1915); dissenting from R v. Ausuya, A W. N, 1 (1903).

(5) See s 115, post, and notes thereto, as to admissions which have been held to operate or not as estoppels.

(6) 9 B. & C, 577, 586, 587

(7) See Janan Chowdhry v. Doolar Chowdhry, 18 W. R, 347 (1872); Ayetun v Ram Sebuk, 12 W. R, 156 (1869), Ram Saran v. Pran Peary, 13 Moo. I A., 551 (1870); Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, 14 B. L. R, App, 3 (1874); Sreenath Roy v. Bindoo Bashinee, 20 W. R., 112 (1873); Brojendra Coomar v. Chairman, Dacca Municipality, 20 W. R, 223 (1873); Sreemutty Debia v. Bimola Soondaree, 21 W. R, 422 (1874); Mussumat Oodey v. Mussumat Ladoo, 13 Moo I A, 585, 599, 600 (1870); Mussumat Luteefoonissa v. Goor Surun, 18 W. R. 485, 493, 494 doctrine propounded in this case, that a party is always at liberty to prove that his admissions were founded on mistake, unless his opponent has been induced by them to alter his condition, is as applicable to mistakes in respect of legal liability, as to those in respect of matters of facts.(1) Where a defendant seeks to make use of statements which have been put in evidence, and to treat them as admissions by the plaintiff who put them in, it is competent for the plaintiff to show the real nature of the transaction to which they relate and to get rid of the effect of the apparent admissions (2) Even if an admission was made with a fraudulent purpose, the party making it may show what was the real state of facts (3) So where a trader, intending to defraud his creditors delivered his goods to a friend, and made out an invoice to him and a receipt for the fictitious price, it was held open to him, when these documents were put in evidence, in an action brought by tended purchaser, to shew that they w under another who has made admissior other was a party, is at liberty to allege and prove that the admissions were made with a fraudulent purpose, and were not true, and to show the real nature of the transaction (5)

But though a mere admission is not legally conclusive, the circumstances under, or the occasion upon which, it was made, or its formal and deliberate character, may entitle it to the greatest weight and may require very strong and clear evidence to rebut the inferences which may be drawn from it (6) Although it may be shown that the facts were different from what on a former occasion they were stated to be, and though it may be shown (if it were so) that a former statement is false, strong evidence may, under the particular circumstances, be required to prove that what the parties had deliberately asserted was altogether untrue (7) Moreover, an admission, if of a sufficiently (1872), [where a defendant seeks to make use of statements which have been put in evidence and to treat them as admissions by the plaintiff who put them in, it is competent for the plaintiff to show the real nature of the transaction to which they relate, and to get rid of the effect of the apparent admissions] See also Mussumat Ushrufoonessa v. Baboo Gridharee, 19 W R, 118 (1873), in which the Privy Council held that the fact of a party having admitted the execution of a deed in a former suit did not prevent her from contesting the validity of the transactions evidenced thereby, and showing that it was colourable and not real; and see generally as to the ordinarily inconclusive character of admissions: Sreenath Nag v. Mon Mohinee, 6 W. R., 35 (1866); Gordon Stuart v. Beejoy Gobind, 8 W. R, 291 (1867), Grish Chunder v. Issur Chander; 12 W R, 226 (1829), Mahomed Haneef v. Mozhur Ali, 15 W. R., 280 (1871), Shaikh Komuroodeen v Shaikh Manye, 16 W R., 220 (1871), Mussumat Ushrufoonessa v. Baboo Gridharee, 19 W. R., 118 (1873); Bodh Singh v Ganeshchander Sen, 19 W R, 356 (1873).

---

(1) Newton v Liddiard, 12 Q B, 925, 927, such a mistaken impression, however, will not exclude his admission, though it will impair its weight as evidence against him: Newton v. Belcher, 1 R. B, 921; Taylor, Ev, § 819, Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 62, 1 Phillips & Arn, 354; see Gopi Lall v Chundraolee Bhuoojee, 19 W. R., 13 (1873), as to admissions involving erroneous conclusions of law.

(2) Mussumat Foolbibi v Goor Surun, 18 W R, 485 (1872)

(3) Ram Surun v. Mussumat Pranpeary, 13 Moo I A, 551 (1870), Sreenath Roy v Bindoo Bashinee, 20 W. R, 112 (1873); Brojendra Coomar v. Chairman, Dacca Municipality, 20 W. R, 223, 224 (1873); Sreemutty Debia v Bimola Soondaree, 21 W. R, 422 (1874)

(4) Bowes v Foster, 27 L J, Ex., 262.

(5) Sreenath Roy v. Bindoo Bashinee, 20 W R, 112 (1873)

(6) Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, 14 B L R., App, 3 (1874); 21 W. R., 414; Hunsa Kooer v. Sheo Gobind, 24 W. R., 431, 432 (1875), Mahomed Haneef v. Mozhur Ali, 15 W. R, 280 (1871); the value of an admission depends upon the circumstances under which it was made; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 62; R. v. Simmonsto, 1 C & K, 164, 166; where it is a mere inference drawn from facts, the admission goes no further than the facts proved Bulley v Bulley, L R, 9 Ch., 739; and generally as to the weight to be attached to admissions v. ante.

(7) Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali supra; see last note; and post.

constitute only primâ facie and rebuttable evidence against their makers and those claiming under them, as between them and others.(1)

s 17 (" Admission " defined.) s 115 (Estoppel.)
s. 4 (" Conclusive proof.")

Taylor, Ev, §§ 817—819, 854—861; Norton, Ev, 151; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 217; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 62, Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 422; Best, Ev., §§ 529, 530.

COMMENTARY.

Effect of admissions. This section deals with the effect, in respect of conclusiveness, of admission, when proved. Every admission is evidence against the person by whom it is made; but it is always for the Court to consider what weight, if any, is to be given to an admission, or any other evidence; it is not conclusive merely because it is legally admissible.(2) It is only so in certain cases, for instance, where it has been acted upon by the party to whom it was made (3) "A statement made by a party is not, ipso facto, conclusive against him, though ments were mistaken or untrue, except in the case in which they operate as estoppels.(5) The subject was clearly illustrated in the case of Heane v. Rogers(6), in which Bayley, J., observed: "There is no doubt but that the express admissions of a party to the suit, or admissions implied from his conduct, are evidence, and strong evidence against him: but we think that he is at liberty to prove or conclu

his condit with resp
tion; but law, that estoppels bind only parties and privies, and not strangers."(7) The

(1) Powell, Ev, 422 "Thus a receipt endorsed on a bill, and generally, all parol receipts, are only primâ facie evidence of payment, ib, 289, in general, a person's conduct and language have not the effect of operating against him by way of estoppel," per Chambre, J, in Smith v. Taylor, 1 N. R, 210

(2) Bulley v. Bulley, L. R, 9 Ch App, 739, 747; Ayetun v. Ram Sebuk, 12 W. R, 156 (1869)

(3) Janan Chowdhry v Doolar Chowdhry, 18 W R, 347 (1872), Brojendro Coomar v. The Chairman, Dacca Municipality, 20 W R, 223 (1873), Yasvant Puttu v Radhabhai, 14 B, 312 (1889) An admission made by a party in other cases may be taken as evidence against him, but cannot operate against him as an estoppel in a case in which his opponents are persons to whom the admission was not made, and who are not proved to have heard of it, or to have been in any way misled by it or to have acted in reliance upon it Chunder Kant v. Pearce Mohan, 5 W. R, 209 (1866); see Mussumat Oodey v Mussumat Ladoo, 13 Moo I. A., 585, 600 (1870).

(4) Ayetun v. Ram Sebuk, supra. Though written statements may be accepted from accused as is the practice in Courts under the Calcutta High Court they cannot take the plea of evidence nor of examination contemplated by section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amrita Lal Hazra v. R, 42 C, 957 (1915), dissenting from R v Ausniya, A W. N, 1 (1903).

(5) See s 115, post, and notes thereto, as to admissions which have been held to operate or not as estoppels

(6) 9 B. & C., 577, 586, 587.

(7) See Janan Chowdhry v. Doolar Chowdhry, 18 W. R, 347 (1872); Ayetun v. Ram Sebuk, 12 W. R., 156 (1869), Ram Saran v. Pran Peary, 13 Moo I A, 551 (1870); Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, 14 B. L. R, App, 3 (1874); Sreenath Roy v Bindoo Bashinee, 20 W. R., 112 (1873), Brojendra Coomar v. Chairman, Dacca Municipality, 20 W. R, 223 (1873); Sreemutty Debia v Bimola Soondaree, 21 W R, 422 (1874); Mussumat Oodey v. Mussumat Ladoo, 13 Moo. I A, 585, 599, 600 (1870); Mussumat Luteefoonissa v. Goor Surun, 18 W. R., 485, 493, 494

STATEMENTS BY PERSONS WHO CANNOT BE CALLED AS WITNESSES

The provisions in the following section constitute further exceptions to the rule which excludes hearsay.(1) As a general rule, oral evidence must be direct.(2) The eight paragraphs of the following section may be regarded as exceptions to that general rule. The purpose and reason of the hearsay rule is the key to the exceptions to it, which are mainly based on two considerations: a necessity for the evidence and a circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness.(3) It may be impossible or it may cause unreasonable expense or delay to procure the attendance of a witness who, if present before the Court, could give direct evidence on the matter in question, and it may also be that this witness has made a statement either written or verbal, with reference to such matter under such circumstances that the truth of this statement may reasonably be presumed. In such a case the law as enacted by section 32 dispenses with direct oral evidence of the fact and with the safeguard for truth provided by cross-examination and the sanction of an oath, the probability of the statement being true depending upon other safeguards which are mentioned in the following paragraphs.(4) The truth of the declarations are deemed to be prima facie guaranteed by the special conditions of admissibility imposed. An important difference between the law in India and in England is that in the latter country this class of evidence can only be received where the author of the statement is dead.(5) The ground for its admissibility being the absence of any better evidence, the other conditions mentioned in the section under which, in India, such evidence is receivable are consonant with reason and general convenience. These conditions of admissibility apply to all the eight classes of evidence which it comprises. It is for the Judge in his discretion to say whether the alleged expense and delay is such as justifies the admission of the evidence, without insisting on the attendance of the author of the statement.(6) The statement referred to in all the eight paragraphs of section 32 are evidence against all the world, unlike statements receivable under the sections relating to admissions, which may only be proved as against the person who makes them or his representative in interest.(7) But an admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead, it would be relevant as between third persons under the thirty-second section.(8) Section 32

The nature of the evidence in the case of depositions in former trials, and the grounds upon which such evidence is receivable is considered in the Notes to section 33, post. Section 33.

The general ground of admissibility of the evidence mentioned in both sections 32 and 33 is that in the cases there in question no better evidence is to be had.(9)

---

(1) See Sturla v Freccia, L. R., 5 App., Cas., 639, per Lord Blackburn

(2) S. 60, post.

(3) Wigmore, Ev., § 1420

(4) Field, Ev., 169, 170; ib., 6th Ed., 123, 124

(5) Steph. Dig., Art. 25

(6) Norton, Ev., 174, 175.

(7) Ib., 143; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 132, 133

(8) S. 21, cl. (1), ante; ib., ills (b), (c); as to cess-returns, see Cess Act, IX (B. C.) of 1880.

(9) Steph. Introd., 165

Statements as to cause of death (s. 32, cl. 1).

The ground of admissibility of "dying declarations," as they are called is said to rest, firstly on necessity(1), the injured person, who is generally the principal witness, being dead; and, secondly, on the presumption that the solemnity of the approach of death impels the party to speak the truth and supplies [illegible] mitur mentiri (2) It has been [illegible] not to be regarded as if they [illegible] that he has in more than one instance known a statement made by a person, who did not expect to live many hours, turn out to be wholly and utterly untrue.(4) According to English law it is the impression of impending death, and not the rapid succession of death in point of fact, which renders the testimony admissible, but it is still doubtful what is meant by "impending." From the English cases the true principle would seem to be that the Judge must be satisfied that the expectation of death is so immediate as to give to the declaration a solemnity sufficient to dispense with those sanctions necessary to ensure the purity of evidence in other cases.(5) But in so far as it is not necessary under this Act that the declaration should have been made under expectation of death(6), the first-named ground appears to be more properly that on which this kind of evidence is receivable. When, however, the statement has been so made, it will further have the sanction which the approach of death affords in the greater number of cases. According to English law evidence of this description is admissible in no civil case, and in criminal cases only in the single instance of homicide, and then only where it is offered in the very words of the deceased, both questions and answers being given where questions have been put (7) But the above-mentioned sanction has nothing to do with the nature of the crime or other act to which the evidence relates, it is just as existent in the case of declarations relating to the commission of one offence as another. Further, if this evidence be admitted on the ground of necessity, that necessity is just as likely to exist where the deceased person has been robbed, or raped, or assaulted, as where he or she has been murdered (8) And therefore under the Act the statement is admissible whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of the death of the person, who made the statement, comes into question (v. post). Three reasons have been given for restricting the application of this evidence to cases of homicide: (a) the danger of perjury in fabricating declarations, the truth or falsehood of which it is impossible to ascertain; (b) the danger of letting in incomplete statements, which, though true as far as they go, do not constitute "the whole truth;" (c) the experienced fact, that, implicit reliance cannot in all cases be placed on the declarations of a dying person; for his body may have survived the powers of his mind; or his recollection, if his senses are not impaired, may not be perfect; or, for the sake of ease, and to be rid of the importunity of those around him, he may say, or seem to say, whatever they choose to suggest.(9) These considerations, though they have not been regarded by the framers of the Act as sufficient to exclude this form of evidence in all cases other than those of homicide, may yet well be borne in mind when estimating the weight to be allowed to dying statements in particular cases (10) This kind

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 716; Norton, Ev., 176; Roscoe, Cr. Ev, ib, 13th Ed, 29, 30. This ground seems not to have been admitted in R. v. Bissorunjun Mookerjee, 6 W. R., Cr, 75 (1866).

(2) Taylor, Ev, §§ 714, 717, 718, R. v. Bissorunjun Mookerjee, supra, In the matter of Sheik Tenoo, 14 W. R, Cr, 11, 13 (1871); see observation of Eyre, L. C. B., in R. v. Woodcock; I Lea, 502, cited in the last-mentioned case at p. 13, and in Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 124; Anderson, B., in Ashton's case, 2 Lew, Cr, 147; Wigmore, Ev. § 1438

(3) Whitley Stokes, ii, 841.

(4) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 127, 128.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 718

(6) v post, s 32, cl. (1), Commentary.

(7) Taylor, § 714; R. v. Mitchell (1892), 17 Cox, 503, R v Smith (1901), 65 J P, 426; but see R. v. Whitmarsh (1898), 62 J. P., 680.

(8) R. v. Bissorunjun Mookerjee, supra, 76

(9) Taylor, Ev., § 716

(10) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 125.

of evidence has been found to be on the whole useful and necessary, but the caution with which it should be received has often been commented upon. It will often happen that the particulars of the violence to which the deceased has spoken were likely to have occurred under circumstances of confusion and surprise calculated to prevent their being accurately observed. The consequences also of the violence may occasion an injury to the mind, and an indistinctness of memory as to the particular transaction. The deceased may have stated his inferences from facts, concerning which he may have drawn a wrong conclusion or he may have omitted important particulars, from not having his attention called to them. Such evidence, therefore, is liable to be very incomplete. He may naturally, also, be disposed to give a partial account of the occurrence although possibly not influenced by animosity or ill-will. But it cannot be concealed that animosity, and resentment are not unlikely to be felt in such a situation.(1) Such considerations show the necessity of caution in receiving impressions from accounts given by persons in a dying state, especially when it is considered that they cannot be subjected to the process of cross-examination, and the security afforded by the terror of punishment and the penalties for perjury cannot exist in this case. Further the remarks before made on verbal statements which have been heard and reported by witnesses apply equally to dying declarations; namely, that they are liable to be misunderstood and misreported, from inattention, from misunderstanding or from infirmity of memory.(2) Where the declaration of a person wounded by the accused in committing dacoity was made on the 13th August, 1899, and he died on the 20th August of the same year, and there was no other evidence to prove that the death was caused or accelerated by the wounds received at the dacoity, or that it was the transaction which resulted in his death, it was held that his declaration ought not to have been admitted in evidence."(3)

The English rule as to the admissibility of these statements is subject to several restrictions which, as such, appear to have no place in the Act (v. post). The considerations which have induced the Courts to recognise this species of evidence have been said to be principally these: that, in the absence of all suspicion of sinister motives, a fair presumption arises that entries made Statements made in the course of business (s. 32, cl. 2).

[illegible]

stances, which mutually corroborate each other; that false entries would be [illegible] that, as most entries [illegible] of several persons, [illegible] s the facts to which [illegible] xation of the strict [illegible] convenient, if not necessary, for the due investigation of truth.(4)

The ground [illegible] a man states ag[illegible] security against [illegible] the part of the d[illegible] is in some measure supplied by the circumstances of the declarant and the Statements against interest (s. 32, cl. 3).

---

(1) Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 13th Ed., 33, 34; Phill & Arn., Ev., 251; see Taylor, Ev., § 722; falsehood and the passion of revenge must also be guarded against, and this more especially in India: see remarks in Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 127, 128; Whitley Stokes, ii, 841, cited ante.

(2) Roscoe, Cr. Ev., ib.; 1 Phill & Arn., ib.

(3) R. v. Rudra Fakerappa, 2 Bom. R., 331 (1900).

(4) Taylor, Ev., § [illegible]: Wills, 2nd Ed., 181; Phip[illegible] 5th Ed., Hope v. Hope (189[illegible] 20, C.

character of his statement. Lastly, the inconveniences that would result from the exclusion of this kind of evidence are considered to be greater, in general than any which are likely to be experienced from its admission.(1) The third clause of section 32 extends the rule as accepted in English Courts. For, while in the latter the interest involved must be pecuniary or proprietary, no other kind being sufficient(2), under the Indian Act the statement is admissible when, if true, it would expose, or would have exposed, the declarant to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages (v. post). It may well be thought that a declaration by which a man makes himself liable to a criminal prosecution or payment of damages, offers as good a guarantee for its truthfulness as one simply against his pecuniary or proprietary interest.(3) Though the ground of admissibility of this kind of evidence is the improbability that a party would falsely make a declaration to fix himself with liability, yet cases may be put where his doing so would be an advantage to him.(4)

Matters of public and general interest (s. 32, cl 4).

The admissibility of hearsay evidence respecting such matters, is said to rest mainly on the following grounds: "That the origin of the rights claimed is usually of so ancient a date, and the rights themselves are of so undefined and general a character, that direct proof of their existence and nature can seldom be obtained, and ought not to be required; that in matters in which the community are interested all persons must be deemed conversant; that, as common rights are naturally talked of in public, and as the nature of such rights excludes the probability of individual bias, what is dropped in conversation respecting them may be presumed to be true; that the general interest which belongs to the subject would lead to immediate contradiction from others, if the statements proved were false; that reputation can hardly exist without the concurrence of many parties unconnected with each other, who are all alike interested in investigating the subject; that such concurrence furnishes strong presumptive evidence of truth; and that it is this prevailing current of assertion which is resorted to as evidence, for to this every member of the community is supposed to be privy and to contribute his share.(5) The term "interest" here does not mean that which is interesting from gratifying curiosity, or a love of information or amusement; but that in which a class of the community have a pecuniary interest, or some interest by which their legal rights or liabilities are affected.(6) But hearsay is not evidence of matters of mere private interest; for respecting these direct proof may be given, and no trustworthy reputation is likely to arise.(7) But although a private interest

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 668; Best, Ev, § 500; Phipson, Ev, ib, 5th Ed, 262, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 184, Wigmore, Ev., § 1457; the attention and care ordinarily given by men to concerns in which their interests are involved are supposed to be a sufficient guarantee against inaccuracy. "It is, however, easy to conceive cases, e g., that of a heedless spendthrift heir, who has just succeeded to an inheritance, in which these guarantees would be of little value. This is, however, a point concerned not with the admissibility, but with the weight of the evidence" Field. Ev., 6th Ed, 13, and see note, post.

(2) Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C. & F., 103-114, explained and acted upon in Davis v. Lloyd, 1 C. & Kir, 276; Illustration (f) is particularly pointed to this case, and indicates the departure in this Act from the English rule.

(3) Norton, Ev., 184.

(4) Best, Ev., § 500; e.g., the accounts of the receiver or steward of an estate have, through neglect or worse, got into a state of derangement which it is desirable to conceal from his employer; and one very obvious way of setting the balance straight is, falsely charging himself with having received money from a particular person Ib.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 608, and cases there cited, R v Bedfordshire, 4 E. & B, 542; Starkie, Ev, 4th Ed, 43-50, 186-190

(6) R. v. Bedfordshire, supra, per Lord Campbell

(7) Ib: and see per Lord Keynyon, in Morewood v Wood, 14 East, 327n., Norton, Ev, 185 In Weeks v Sparke, 1 M & S, 690, Bayley, J., modifies rule thus: "I take it that where the term public right is used, it does not mean public in the literal sense but is synonymous with general, that is what concerns a multitude of persons." Gresley, Ev., 305.

should be involved with a matter of public interest, the reputation respecting rights and liabilities affecting classes of the community cannot be excluded or this relaxation of the rule against the admission of hearsay evidence would often be found unavailing.(1) Evidence of this description is frequently included under the general term "reputation"(2) Strictly speaking, "general reputation" is the general result or conclusion formed by society as to any public fact or u member such ger
have possessed a knowledge on the subject derived either from their own observation or the information of others (3)

Section 32 in its fifth and sixth which are usually treated by Engl matter of pedigree and is in some from, the English rule on the same subject (v. post). The grounds upon which this class of statements is received are—necessity—such inquiries generally involving remote facts of family history known to but few, and incapable of direct proof, and—the special means of knowledge which are possessed by the declarant.(4) etc (S. ... cls 5, 6).

Statements in document relating to transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed and the like.

As to statements in documents relating to a transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed or the like, see post, and the thirteenth section, ante

Statements made by a number of persons, and expressing feelings or impressions

As to statements made by a number of persons, and expressing feelings or impressions (v. post).

Burden of proof, contradiction: corroboration

Before statements or depositions under section 32 or 33 are admissible, it must be shown that the circumstances and conditions mentioned and imposed by those sections exist; as that the person who made the statements sought to be proved is dead, or cannot be found, or the like. The burden of proving this is on the person who wishes to give the evidence.(5) If the terms of a deposition made by a person since deceased are such that it does not come within the provisions of these sections it will not be admissible otherwise, for instance under section 11.(6) Whenever any statement relevant under section 32 or 33 is proved, all matters may be proved either in order to contradict or corroborate it, or in order to impeach or confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved if that person had been called as a witness and had denied upon cross-examination the truth of the matter suggested (7)

---

(1) R v. Bedfordshire supra

(2) Starkie, Ev., 4th Ed., 43, et seq., 186n., see as to the difference between reputation of a fact and evidence of a fact; Mosely v. Davis 11 Price, 167, arguendo

(3) Starkie, Ev., 43, 44

(4) See Taylor, Ev. § 635; Phipson Ev., 5th Ed., 291; Greeley, Ev., 319, and post

(5) S. 104, post

(6) Bela Rani v. Mahabir Singh, A. C (1912); 34 A. 341.

(7) S. 158, post: see further as to proof, the Commentary to ss. 32, 33 post

Cases in which statement of relevant fact by person who is dead, or cannot be found, etc., is relevant.

32. Statements, written or verbal(1), of relevant facts made by a person who is dead, or who cannot be found, or who has become incapable of giving evidence, or whose attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, appears to the Court unreasonable, are themselves relevant facts in the following cases:—

When it relates to cause of death

(1) When the statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death, or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question.

Such statements are relevant whether the person who made them was or was not, at the time when they were made, under expectation of death, and whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of his death comes into question.(2)

Or is made in course of business·

(2) When the statement was made by such person in the ordinary course of business(3), and in particular when it consists of any entry or memorandum made by him in books kept in the ordinary course of business, or in the discharge of professional duty, or of an acknowledgment written or signed by him of the receipt of money, goods, securities or property of any kind, or of a document used in commerce written or signed by him, or of the date of a letter or other document usually dated, written or signed by him.(4)

Or against interest of makers:

(3) When the statement is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, or when, if true, it would expose him or would have exposed him to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages.(5)

Or gives opinion as to public right or custom, or matters of general interest.

(4) When the statement gives the opinion of any such person, as to the existence of any public right or custom or matter of public or general interest, of the existence of which, if it existed, he would have been likely to be aware, and when such statement was made before any controversy as to such right, custom or matter had arisen.(6)

Or relates to existence of relationship.

(5) When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption between persons as to whose relationship by blood, marriage or adoption the person

---

(1) As to the meaning of this expression, see Chandra Nath v. Nilmadhub Bhattacharjee, 26 C., 236; s c, 3 C W. N, 88 (1898), and post. A reply made by signs by a person unable to speak in answer to a question put to him taken together with the question amounts to a verbal statement, Emperor v. Sadhucharan, 49 C, 600, Q. Emp. v. Abdullah, 7 A., 385.

(2) Ill (a).

(3) As to the meaning of ordinary course of business see Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B, 63 (1897).

(4) Illus. (b), (c), (d), (g), (h), (j); s 21, ills, (b), (c).

(5) Ills. (e), (f).

(6) Ill. (i).

(e) The question is, whether rent was paid to A for certain land.

A letter from A's deceased agent to A, saying that he has received the rent on A's account and held it at A's orders, is a relevant fact.(1)

(f) The question is, whether A and B were legally married.

The statement of a deceased clergyman that he married them under such circumstances that the celebration would be a crime, is relevant.(1)

(g) The question is, whether A, a person who cannot be found, wrote a letter on a certain day

The fact that a letter written by him is dated on that day is relevant (2)

(h) The question is, what was the cause of the wreck of a ship

A protest made by the captain, whose attendance cannot be procured, is a relevant fact (2)

(i) The question is, whether a given road is a public way

A statement by A, a deceased headman of the village, that the road was public, is a relevant fact (3)

(j) The question is, what was the price of grain on a certain day in a particular market

A statement of the price, made by a deceased banya in the ordinary course of his business, is a relevant fact

(k) The question is, whether A, who is dead, was the father of B

A statement by A that B was his son, is a relevant fact (4)

(l) The question is, what was the date of the birth of A.

A letter from A's deceased father to a friend, announcing the birth of A on a given day, is a relevant fact (5)

(m) The question is, whether and when, A and B were married

An entry in a memorandum-book by C, the deceased father of B, of his daughter's marriage with A on a given date, is a relevant fact (5)

(n) A sues B for a libel expressed in a printed caricature exposed in a shop window

The question is as to the similarity of the caricature and its libellous character

The remarks of a crowd of spectators on these points may be proved (6)

Principle.—The general ground of admissibility of the evidence mentioned in this section is that in the cases there in question no better evidence is to be had.(7) As to the further and particular grounds on which each of the several classes of evidence mentioned are admitted, see Introduction, ante, and Note, post.

s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 ("Fact")
s. 3 ("Evidence")
s. 3 ("Court.")
s. 3 ("Document")
s. 1[illegible]
s. [illegible] under s. 32.) s 104 (Burden of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible)

s. 38 (Relevancy of depositions)
s. 80 (Presumption as to documents produced as record of evidence) s 114, ill. (f) (Presumption as to course of business.)
s 8, ills. (j), (k) (Examples of dying declarations)

(1) S 32, cl (3)
(2) S. 32, cl. (2).
(3) S. 32, cl. (4).
(4) S 32, cls. (5) & (6).
(5) S. 32, cls. (5) & (6)
(6) S 32, cl. (8).
(7) Steph Introd., 165

s. 21, cl (1), ills (b), (c) (Proof of admission by, or on behalf of, person making it)
s. 90 (Ancient documents) ss 47, 67 (Proof of handwriting)
ss. 13, 48 (Public and general customs or rights)
s 42 (Judgments relating to matters of a public nature) s 65, cl (d) (Secondary evidence) s 50 (Opinion on relationship when relevant)

Dying Declarations —Steph Dig, Art 26, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 1430—1452, Taylor, Ev, §§ 714—722, 3 Russ, Cr., 354—362, Best, Ev, § 505, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 299—304, Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 13th Ed 29—34, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed. 81—88, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed 195—198; Field, Ev, 6th Ed. 124—128, Norton, Ev, 175—177 Declarations in the course of business —Steph. Dig., Art 27, Taylor, Ev, § 697—713, Best, Ev, § 501, Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 60—62, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 1517—1561, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed 316—323, Smith L. C Note to Price v Torrington; Wharton, Ev, §§ 238—257, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed. 271—278, Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed 178—183, Field, Ev, 6th Ed 128—131, Norton, Ev, 177—179. Declarations against interest —Steph Dig, Art 28, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 1455—1477, Taylor, Ev, §§ 668—696, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed 262—270, Best, Ev, § 50, Roscoe, N P. Ev, 53—59, Smith, L. C Note to Higham v Ridgway, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed 306—316, Wharton, Ev, 226—237, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed. 184—194, Act IX of 1908 (Limitation), s 20, Field, Ev, 6th Ed 131—136, Norton, Ev, 179—184 Declarations as to public rights —Steph Dig, Art 30, Taylor, Ev, §§ 607—634, Best, Ev, § 497, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed 279—290; Wigmore, Ev, § 1563, Roscoe, N P Ev, 48—51, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed. 338—349, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed 221—234, Field, Ev, 6th Ed 136—138, Norton, Ev., 184—188 Declarations as to relationship —Steph Dig, Art 31, Wigmore, Ev, §§ 1480—1510, Taylor, Ev. §§ 635—637, Best, Ev, § 498, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed. 291—298, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed. 211—220, Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 44—48; Hubback's Ev of Succession, 648—711; Wharton, Ev, §§ 201—225, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed 349—357, Field, Ev, 6th Ed. 139—143, Norton, Ev, 188—190 Statements in documents relating to transaction mentioned in s. 13:—Field, Ev, 6th Ed 143, Norton, Ev., 190—192 Statements by a number of persons expressing feelings or impressions:—Field, Ev, 6th Ed 144, 145, Norton, Ev 192—193; cases cited

COMMENTARY.

The word "person" must not be read as "persons" If a statement, written or verbal, is made by several persons, and one or some of them is or are dead, and one or others is or are alive, the statement of the deceased person or persons is admissible under this section notwithstanding that the other person or persons who also made the statement is or are alive In such a case the statement is not one statement, but each person making the statement must be taken to have made the statement for himself or herself, and if any one of the makers of the statement is dead, the statement made by that person is admissible under this section if it comes under one or other of its clauses, being thus the statement of a person who is dead It may in such a case however be matter for legitimate comment that the statement of the deceased person must be received with caution, if the party tendering it has not without proper excuse called the author or authors of the statement still living to depose to its accuracy, but the matter cannot be placed higher than that.(1) "Person."

The conditions upon which the statement may be tendered are the same [illegible] h the excep- [illegible] way by the [illegible] iff closed his [illegible] person filed before his death in support of the plaintiff's case were held by the Judicial "Dead or cannot be found"

(1) Chandra Nath v. Nilmadhab Bhattacharjee, 26 C., 236; s. c., 3 C. W. N. 88 (1898)

Committee to be inadmissible in evidence as statements of a deceased person. It was attempted to distinguish the case on the ground that the defendant had himself (after the person whose statements were filed was dead) filed certain other statements of this same man. As to this the Privy Council observed: "But those documents, which were doubtless filed in case the respondent's (plaintiff's) documents should be admitted, are not evidence, and their production by the appellant (defendant) cannot be held to compel the Court to depart from the rules of evidence in the decision of the case."(1) Where the document can be brought under this section by proof of the death of the person who prepared it or other facts contemplated by this section, it can be used not only as corroborative but as independent evidence.(2) This section has no application to the case of a witness who has been fully examined and cross-examined but who happens to die before the termination of the suit. In such admission "Incapable of giving evidence." See Notes to section 33, post

"Delay or expense" See Notes to section 33, post.

FIRST CLAUSE.

Statement as to cause of death. The first clause is widely different from the English law upon the subject of "dying declarations," according to which, (a) this description of evidence is admissible in no civil case; and in criminal cases only in the single instance of ... the deceased is ... the subject of ... the statement is ... the cause of the death of the person who made the statement comes into question.(5) And further, (b) according to English law certain conditions are required to have existed at the time of declaration, viz, it is necessary that the declarant should have been in actual danger of death; that he should have been aware of his danger and have abandoned all hope of recovery, and that death should have ensued.(6) The existence of the last condition is of course as necessary under the Act as under the English rule, inasmuch as the statement is admissible only in cases in which the cause of the death of the person who made it comes in question. But under the Indian Evidence Act the statement is relevant whether the person who made it was or was not at the time when it was made, under expectation of death.(7) Therefore, whether the declarant was or was not in actual danger

(1) Jagatpal Singh v. Jageshar Baksh, 25 A., 143 (1902).

(2) Charitter Rai v. Kailash Behari, 4 Pat. L. W. 213; s. c., 44 I. C., 422.

(3) Sahdeo Narain Deo v Kusum Kumari, 46 I. C., 929.

(4) Taylor, Ev., §§ 714-716; thus in a trial for robbery, the dying declaration of the party robbed has been rejected; and where a *prisoner was indicted for administering drugs to a woman, with intent to procure abortion, her statements in extremis were held to be inadmissible, ib., § 715; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 12th Ed, 28-29; 3 Russ Cr., 354-362

(5) S. 32, cl. (1); Illustration (a) gives an example of a civil, as well as of a criminal case, and as an example of the latter, a charge of rape. Even under the previous law as contained in s 371 of Act XXV of 1861, and s 29, Act II of 1855, it was held that the rule of English law restricting the admission of this evidence to cases of homicide had no application in India; and that the dying declaration of a deceased person was admissible in evidence on a charge of rape; R. v. Bissorunjun, Mookerjee, 6 W. R., Cr., 75 (1866); Field, Ev., 171; Norton, Ev., 175.

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 718; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 12th Ed, 28-31; 3 Russ of death, and knew or did not know himself to be in such danger, are considerations which will no longer affect the admissibility of this kind of evidence in India. But these considerations ought not to be laid aside in estimating the weight to be allowed to the evidence in particular cases (1) Of course before the statement can be admitted under this section the declarant must have died Where a person making a dying declaration chances to live, his statement cannot be admitted in evidence as a dying declaration, though it may be relied on under s 157 to corroborate the testimony of the complainant when examined in the case (2)

(7) S. 32, cl. (1); Thakoor, 19 W. R., Cr., Blechynden, 6 C L.

Subject-matter of the declaration

The statement must be as to the cause of the declarant's death, or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death(3), that is the cause and circumstances of the death, and not previous or subsequent transactions(4), such independent transactions being excluded as not falling within the principle of necessity on which such evidence is received.(5) Nor must they include matter inadmissible from the mouth of a witness—e g., hearsay or opinion(6) ; and whatever the declaration may be it must be complete in itself ; for, if the dying man appears to have intended to qualify it by other statements which he is prevented by any cause from making it will not be received.(7)

Competency and credibility.

The person whose declaration is thus admitted is considered as standing in the same situation as if he were sworn as a witness. It follows, therefore, [illegible] n incompetent to testify by [illegible] ng declarations are inadmis- [illegible] or confirmed in the same manner as that of a witness (9) In a trial for dacoity the statement of a deceased person ought not to be admitted in evidence in the absence of evidence to show that his death was caused or accelerated by the wounds received at the dacoity, or that the dacoity was the transaction which resulted in his death.(10) As to the weight which should be attached to this kind of testimony, and the caution with which it should be received, v. ante, p 308.

Form of statement

The declarations may be oral or written (11) A person was tried for the murder of one D. The deceased had been questioned by a Police-officer, a

(1) Field, Ev., loc. cit.; Norton Ev. 175. Under the law which was in force prior to this Act (s 371, Act XXV of 1861), s 29, Act II of 1855, and which, with one modification relating to the entertainment by the deceased of hopes of recovery was similar in this respect to the English law, it was held that before a dying declaration could be received in evidence, it must be distinctly found that the declarant knew, or believed at the time he made the declaration, that he was dying, or likely to die: In the matter of Sheikh Tenoo, 15 W. R. Cr, 11 (1871); R v. Bissorunjun Mookerjee, 6 W R. Cr. 75 76 (1886); R. v. Symber Singh, 9 W. R. Cr, 2 (1868), as to the English rule, see R. v. Glosler, 16 Cox, 471 (1888), in which the result of the case law is stated, and R v. Mitchell, 17 Cox. 503 (1892), and text-books cited, supra

(2) R. v. Rama Sutu, 4 Bom L. R. 434 (1902)

(3) S 32, cl (1); Steph Dig. Art. 26

(4) R v. Mead, 2 B. & C., 605, R v. Hind, 8 Cox, 300; R v. Murton 3 F. & F., 492, Steph. Dig, Art 26 Khana v. R, 67 P. L. R, 2 Cr. L. J., 237.

(5) Phipson Ev, 5th Ed, 300, 301, so also in America, the declarations are restricted to the res gestæ, ib, and cases there cited

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 720, citing R. v. Sellers, Carr C. L, 233; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 300, 301; citing 1 Greenleaf, s 159, note (a).

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 721

(8) R v. Pike, 3 C. & P, 598; R. v. Drummond, 1 Lea, C. C., 338; R v. Perkins, 9 C. & P., 295; Taylor, Ev., § 717; Field, Ev., loc. cit; Norton, Ev., 175; see s 118, post

(9) S 158, post; Steph Dig Art. 135. This rule is also established in America. Thus previous consistent statements by the deceased not made under the fear of death, were admitted for this purpose (Felder v State, 59 Am. Rep, 777, cited in Phipson, Ev), and dying declarations were allowed to be corroborated by proof of prior consistent statements, though the latter were not admissible themselves as dying declarations (State v. Blackburn, 80 N. C., 474 cited in Best, Ev., p. 457); see also Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 12th Ed, 33; 3 Russ Cr., 361.

(10) R. v. Rudra, 25 Bom., 45 (1900).

(11) S 32.

Magistrate and a Surgeon; the deceased was unable to speak, but was consciou and able to make signs. Evidence was offered and admitted to prove th questions put to D, and the signs, which she had made in answer to suc questions. The evidence was held to have been rightly admitted, as the question and the signs, taken together, might properly be regarded as "verbal state ments," within the meaning of this section (1) But though the gestures ma be admissible it has been held(2) that the opinion of witnesses as to the meanin of the gestures was not. Sometimes declarations by dying persons are mad on oath; in which case, assuming them to be in the presence of the accuse and otherwise formal, and that an opportunity for cross-examination has bee given, they are depositions. The essence of a dying declaration, so-calle is that it is not upon oath The lapse of time between the declarations an death is immaterial, and the presence of the accused at the making of th declaration is unnecessary. But it cannot be used as a deposition unless take in the presence of the accused with all the usual formalities of a deposition and unless admissible within the terms of the following section (v. post)(3 Though the declaration must, in general, narrate facts only, and not mer opinions (v. ante), and must be confined to what is relevant to the issue(4) it is not necessary that the examination of the deceased should have bee conducted after the manner of interrogating a witness in the cause, though any departure from this mode may affect the weight of the declarations (5) Therefore, in general, it is no objection to their admissibility that they were made in answer to leading questions(6), or obtained by earnest solicitation (7) But where a statement, ready written, was brought by the father of the deceased to a Magistrate, who accordingly went to the deceased and interrogated he as to its accuracy, paragraph by paragraph, it was rejected.(8) A declaration is not irrelevant merely because it was intended to be made as a deposition before a Magistrate, but is irregular and inadmissible as such.(9)

Record and proof of declaration

The right to offer [illegible] cutor, but it is equally [illegible] is sitting with a jury, [illegible] a question to be decided by the Jud[illegible] can be admitted, proof must be given that t [illegible] upon the person who wishes to give [illegible] circumstances of the case permit, the statement should be taken in the presence of the accused, and should be written as a formal deposition in accordance with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code.(13) If this be done, and the injured person die or become incapable of giving evidence at the Sessions, the depositions so taken will, subject to the provisions of the following section, be admissible in evidence without further proof.(14) If the statement be not taken

(1) R v. Abdulla, 7 A, 385, F. B. (1885); Bata v R., Punj Rec, 1886, p 2, cited in Henderson's Cr. Pr. Code So also in America it has been held that the declaration may be by signs, or any other method of expressing thought; Com v Casey, II Cush, 417, 421, cited in Best, Ev., p 456.

(2) Chandrika Ram Kohar v. King-Emperor, 1 Pat., 401.

(3) Norton, Ev., 175, 176; Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 12th Ed, 32, if the evidence be inadmissible under s. 33, it may yet be admissible under s 32, cl. (1), R. v. Rochia Mohato, 7 C, 42 (1881).

(4) S. 32.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 720.

(6) R v. Smith, 10 Cox, 82; but see also R v Mitchell, 17 Cox, 503, cited post

(7) R v Fagent, 7 C. & P., 238, R. v Reason, 1 Str, 499; R. v. Whitworth, 1 F & F., 382

(8) R v Fitzgerald, Ir. Cir. Rep. 168, 169, cited in Taylor, Ev., § 720, where see observations of Crampton, J., in the same cause

(9) R. v Woodcock, 1 East., P. C, 556; Steph Dig, Art 26; v post.

(10) R. v. Scaife, 1 M. & Rob, 551

(11) Cr. Pr. Code, s. 298; Taylor, Ev, §§ 23a, 24; Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 35

(12) S. 104, illust. (a), post.

(13) Ch XXV, Act V of 1898, see Field, Ev., loc. cit.

(14) Field, Ev., loc. cit.; ss 33, 80, post down in the presence of the accused, and as a formal deposition, it will none the less be relevant under this section, but, before it can be admitted in evidence, it must be proved to have been made by the deceased: it is not rendered admissible without such proof because it was taken down by a Magistrate. The writing made by such Magistrate cannot be admitted to prove the statement of the deceased without making it evidence in the ordinary way by calling the Magistrate who took down the declaration and heard it made. If the Magistrate be called to prove the dying declaration, he may either speak to the words used by the deceased, refreshing his memory with the writing made by himself at the time when the statement was made; or he may speak to the writing itself as being an accurate reproduction of what the deceased had said in his presence (1). A dying declaration recorded in the absence of the accused and by a Magistrate other than the inquiring Magistrate is not admissible until it is proved by the recording officer (2). In this case what is admissible is the oral statement of the deceased, and not the record of it, and such oral statement must be proved by the person who recorded it and heard it made (3). A dying declaration made to a Police-officer in the course of an investigation, may, if reduced to writing, be signed by the person making it, and may be used as evidence against the accused(4), if such writing be properly proved by the Police-officer in whose presence it was signed, and the declaration, which it embodies, was made. A petition of complaint and examination of complainant on oath admissible as dying declarations under this clause are not matters required to be reduced to the form of a document within the meaning of section 91 so as to exclude oral evidence of their terms (5). The written record of a dying declaration not taken down in the presence of the accused is admissible when it is proved by a witness that the statements contained therein were, in his presence, recorded by a Magistrate and read over to the accused who admitted their correctness (6). And it has been held by the Madras High Court that though the written record of a statement made to a Police-officer in the course of an investigation is inadmissible (under section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code) oral evidence of such statement (whether it had been taken down in writing or not) is admissible.(7) "A declaration should be taken down in the exact words which the person who makes it uses, in order that it may be possible from those words to arrive precisely at what the person making the declaration meant. When a statement is not the ipsissima verba of the person making it, but is composed of a mixture of questions and answers, there are several objections open to its reception in evidence, which it is desirable should not be open in cases in which the person has no opportunity of cross-examination. In the first place, the questions may be leading questions, and in the condition of a person making a dying declaration there is always very great danger of leading questions being answered without their force and effect being freely comprehended. In such circumstances the form of the declaration

(1) R. v. Fata Aduji, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 247 (1874); R. v. Samiruddin, 8 C., 211 (1881); 10 C. L. R., 11, followed in R. v. Daulat Kungra (1902), 6 C. W. N., 921, and see as to proof of dying declaration, R. v. Mathura Thakur (1901), 6 C. W. N., 72.

(2) Panchu Das v. R. (1907), 34 C., 698; 11 C. W. N., 666.

(3) Gouridas Namasudra v. R. (1909), A. C., 36 C., 665.

(4) See Cr. Pr. Code, s. 162; Field, Ev., 4th Ed., 161; such a declaration is admissible not under s. 162 of the Cr. Pr. Code which is a purely negative provision, but under the general law as embodied in s. 32, cl. (1) of the Evidence Act. The Code merely declares that that law shall not be affected by the fact that the declaration was made to a Police-officer in the course of an investigation.

(5) Gouridas Namasudra v. R., A. C. (1909), 36 C., 665, referred to in Emperor v. Balaram Das, 49 C., 358.

(6) Emperor v. Balaram Das, 49 C., 358.

(7) Muthukumaraswami Pillai v. King-Emperor, 35 M., 397 (1912) Letters Patent appeal, reviewing, R. v. Nilkanta, 35 M., 247 (1912) and see Fanindra Nath Banerjee v. R., 36 C., 281 (1908); Emperor v. Hammaradli, 39 B., 58 (1915).

should be such that it would be possible to see what was the question and what was the answer, so as to discover how much was suggested by the examining Magistrate and how much was the production of the person making the statements."(1)

SECOND CLAUSE.

Statements made in the course of business

Statements made in the course of business, whether written or verbal, of relevant facts by a person who is dead, or who cannot be found, or who has become incapable of giving evidence, or whose attendance cannot be procured without an unreasonable amount of delay or expense, are themselves relevant. Though the statement is admissible, whether it be verbal or written(2), the effect of the statement as to weight may be very different in the two cases The words "and in particular" in this clause seem to point to the superior force of written over verbal statements.(3)

Illustrations (b), (c), (d), (g), (h), (j), refer to this Clause as also Illustration (b) and (c) of section 21, the leading case in English law on the subject being that of Price v. Torrington (4) In this case the plaintiff, who was a brewer, brought an action against the Earl of Torrington for beer sold and delivered, and the evidence given to charge the defendant was that the usual way of the plaintiff's dealing was that the draymen came every night to the clerk of the brew-house, and gave him an account of the beer they had delivered out, which he set down in a book kept for that purpose, to which the draymen set their names, and that the drayman was dead, but that this was his hand set to the book; and this was held good evidence of a delivery; otherwise of the shop-book itself singly, without more (5) Thus also where the plaintiff, a Mahommedan lady, sued for her deferred dower, an entry as to the amount of her dower entered in a register of marriages kept by the Mujtahid, since deceased, who celebrated the marriage, was held to be admissible as evidence of the sum fixed, being an entry kept in the discharge of professional duty within the meaning of this section (6) In another case, a deed of conveyance which purported to bear the mark of the defendant as vendor was tendered in evidence. The defendant, however, denied that she had ever put her mark to it. It was proved to be attested by a deed-writer, who was dead, and it was manifestly all in his writing, including the words descriptive of the markswoman. The statement of the deed-writer, tha [illegible] was held to be admissible under this clau [illegible] ad been made by him in the ordinary [illegible] makes particular mention of statements contained in business-books(8), in receipts(9), in documents used in commerce, such as invoices, bills of lading, charter parties, waybills(10), and of statements by a person who cannot be called as a witness,

---

(1) R. v. Mitchell, 17 Cox, C. C, 503, 507, per Cave, J., adding: "It appears to me, therefore, that a statement taken down as this was, giving the substance of questions and answers, cannot be said to be a declaration in such a sense as to make it admissible in evidence, and that this document cannot be admitted upon that ground"

(2) S. 32, cl 2, ante; ill (j): Stapylton v Clough, 2 E. & B, 933; Edie v. Kingsford, 14 C. B, 750, R. v. Buckley, 13 Cox, 293

(3) Norton, Ev., 177.

(4) 1 Smith, L C (9th ed), 352 and notes, Salkeld, 285; as to English rule, see Taylor, Ev, §§ 697-713, Steph. Dig, Art., 27; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 60-62, Best, Ev. § 501; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 271; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 178-183; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 316—323.

(5) See also Doe v. Turford, 3 B & Ad, 898, in which the earlier cases are cited and discussed.

(6) Zakeri Begum v Sakina Begum, 19 C. 689 (1892); 19 I A, 157.

(7) Abdulla Paru v. Gannibai, 11 B, 690 (1887).

(8) Illusts, (b), (c); as to the admissibility and effect of entries in books of account and official records, whether the maker is dead or not, v. post, ss 34, 35.

(9) For some cases relating to dakhilas, see Field, Ev., loc. cit.

(10) As to letters of advice, see R v Tarinicharan Dey, 9 B. L. R, App. 42 made in the ordinary course of business, consisting of the date of a letter or other document usually dated, written, or signed by him (1) In a suit to recover loss sustained on the sale by the plaintiffs of goods consigned to them by the defendants for sale by their London firm, account-sales are good primâ facie evidence to prove the loss unless and until displaced by substantive evidence put forward by the defendants (2) It cannot, however, be said that the execution of a mortgage-deed is an act done in the ordinary course of business.(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 21 and the present section, cess-returns cannot, under section 95 of the Road Cess Act, be used as evidence in favour of the person by whom, or on behalf of whom, they are filed.(4) Entries in accounts relevant only under section 34 are not by themselves alone sufficient to charge any person with liability: corroboration is required. But where accounts are relevant under this clause they are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible only under section 34, require corroboration. Entries in accounts may in the same suit be relevant under both the sections, and in that case the necessity for [illegible] I[illegible] the case cited(6) it was held that a medical [illegible] of mind made twenty-six days after the [illegible] under this clause, and was relevant, but that a letter by the testator speaking of his relations with his wife in whose favour he subsequently made the will was not admissible. Although zemindari papers cannot be admitted under section 34 as corroborative evidence, without independent evidence of the fact of collection at certain rates, they can be used as independent evidence if they are relevant under this clause.(7) The entries in the diary of a deceased chaukidar relating to birth and death are not admissible under this clause, where from the evidence it appears that the entries were not made by the chaukidar at all, as he was an illiterate person, but by other persons who deposed that they made the entries at the request of the chaukidar. It was held that the entries were admissible either under section 157 or section 159 or possibly under both.(8) Under section 34 talab-baki papers are not sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability. Talab-baki papers may be evidence under this clause; but before they can be admitted a landlord must show that the person making the statement is dead and that the entries were made by him in the ordinary course of business.(9)

(1872). In this case the prisoner was charged with forging for the purpose of cheating, and using as genuine a forged railway receipt for the purpose of obtaining from a Railway Company certain goods which had been entrusted to the Company to be carried from Delhi to Calcutta. The Standing Counsel for the prosecution sought to prove the delivery of the goods to the Company by putting in a letter from the consigner at Delhi to his partner in Calcutta, advising the despatch of the goods, submitting that the letter was a "document used in commerce, written or signed" by a person "whose attendance could not be procured, etc" The Court (Macpherson, J) refused to receive the evidence, and intimated a doubt whether such a letter would, under any circumstances, be receivable "since it was beyond the instances specified in the section" As to estimates, see Hari Chintaman v. Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 97 (1886).

(1) Illustration (g).

(2) Barlow v. Chuni Lal, 28 C, 209 (1901)

(3) Ningawa v Bharmappa, 23 B, 63, 65, 70 (1877).

(4) Hem Chandra v. Kali Prasanna, 26 C, 824, 838 (1899). But they are otherwise admissible Chattro Singh v. Jhero Singh, 39 C., 995 (1912); following Hem Chandra Choudry v. Kali Prasonna Bhaduri, P. C, 30 C, 1033; 30 I A, 177, distinguishing Nusseerun v. Gouree Sunkur 22 W. R, 192 (1874), and see Sewdeo Narain Singh v Ajudhya Prosad Singh, 39 C, 1005 (1912).

(5) Rampyarabai v Balaji, 6 Bom L R, 50 (1904); s. c, 28 B., 294.

(6) Woolmer v. Daly, 1 Lahore, 173.

(7) Charitar Rai v. Kailash Behari, 4 Pat. L W, 213; s. c, 44, I. C., 422.

(8) Mussumat Naina Koer v. Gobardhan Singh (1919), Pat., 352.

(9) Umed Ali v. Nawab Khaji Haherulla, 31 C. L. J, 68.

admissibility (1) So it has been held that account-books containing entries not made by, nor at the dictation of, a person who had a personal knowledge of the truth of the fact stated, if regularly kept in course of business, are admissible as evidence under section 34 and semble under the second clause of this section (2)

Contemporaneousness. According to the English rule, the statement must also have been made at the time of, or immediately after, the performance of the transaction.(3) Thus an interval of two days has sufficed to exclude a declaration (4) But contemporaneousness is not required by the section for the admissibility of the evidence, though in determining the weight to be allowed to it in particular cases it will always be important to consider how far the statement or entry was contemporaneous with the fact which it relates.(5)

Collateral matters. Further, entries made in the course of business are, under English law, evidence only of those things whic ... less it was the duty of the person to enter, a ... collateral matters, however intimately any ... corporated in the statements.(6) Thus, where the question was whether A was arrested in a certain parish ;—a certificate annexed to the writ by a deceased sheriff's officer, stating the fact, time, and place of the arrest, returned by him to the sheriff, was held inadmissible on the ground that the duty merely required the fact and time but not the place of the arrest to be returned.(7) But this restriction on inadmissibility is not imposed in terms by the section. "The statement or entry, in order to be admissible under the Act, must relate to a relevant fact(8); and it would appear to make no difference, so far as the question of admissibility is concerned, whether this fact is connected with the performance of a duty or is merely an independent collateral matter Whether this fact naturally finds a place in the narrative, what is the nature of its connection with the fact the statement of which was matter of duty, and whether this connection was such as to ...

Extrinsic proof. The person wishing to give the evidence must give extrinsic proof of the death of the declarant, or of the existence of the other circumstances conditional to the admission of this evidence (10) Similar evidence of the ordinary course of business will also be necessary.(11) Wh ... written one, evidence must be given that it is in the ... to have made it; and this may be done by ca ... it or who is conversant with his handwriting (12)

(1) R v. Hanmanta, supra; Field, Ev, loc cit, Cunningham, Ev, 156.

(2) R. v. Hanmanta, supra.

(3) Doe v Turford, 3 B. & Ad, 890, Sturla v Freccia, 5 App Cas, 623; Smith v Blakey, L R., 2 Q B., 326; The Henry Coxon, 3 P. D., 156; Taylor, Ev, § 704.

(4) The Henry Coxon, supra

(5) Field, Ev., loc. cit, Cunningham, Ev., 157.

(6) Chambers v. Bernasconie, 1 C. M. & R, 347; Taylor, Ev, § 705.

(7) Id., per Lord Denman:—"We are all of opinion that whatever effect may be due to an entry made in the course of any office reporting facts necessary to the performance of a duty the statement of other circumstances, however naturally they may be thought to find a place in the narrative, is no proof of these circumstances"

(8) And must have been made in the ordinary course of business.

(9) Field, Ev., loc cit; cases may perhaps, however, occur in which the matter in question is so collateral and the entry for this and other reasons is of such an unusual character that it can scarcely be said to have been made "in the ordinary course of business."

(10) v. ante, Introd to ss. 32-33, s 104, post, Field, Ev., loc. cit; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 272, and cases there cited

(11) In connection with this, see s 114, illust. (f), post.

(12) Field, Ev., loc. cit; as to ancient documents see s 90, post; Doe v Davies, 10 Q. B, 314; Riggs-Miller v. Wheatley, 28 L. R., Ir., 144; and see ss. 47, 67, post, as to proof of hand-writing

THIRD CLAUSE.

Statements against interest

The leading case on the subject-matter of this clause is that of Higham v. Ridgway.(1) There the question was whether one William Fowden, junior, was born before or after the 16th April, 1768. The plaintiff, in order to prove that his birth was subsequent to that date, tendered in evidence the following entries from the Day Book and Ledger of a man-midwife, who had attended the mother of William Fowden, junior, at his birth and was since deceased :—

DAY BOOK ENTRIES

22nd April 1768.

38* Richard Fallow's wife, Bramhall. Filius circa hor 9, matutin, cum forcipe, etc., paid

[Then followed in the same page the entry in question without any intervening date]

Wm Fowden, Junr 's† wife 79* filius circa hor 3, post merid, nat, etc.

LEDGER ENTRY

Wm Fowden, junr , 1768
Aprilis 22, Filius natus, etc
Wife	.	.	.. 1 6 1
26th Haustus purg	.	..	0 15 0
Pd 25th Oct , 1768		.	. 2 1 1

It was held that all these entries were connected together or one whole and that the entry as to the payment of the man-midwife's charges rendered them all admissible It will be observed that the entry of the date (22nd April, 1768) was in no way against the interest of the person who made it, but was collateral to that portion of the entry, namely—" Pd (paid) 25*th Oct*., 1768," which was against interest, as showing that a certain sum of money was no longer due and owing to such person On this point Lord Ellenborough said : " It is idle to say that the word ' paid ' only shall be admitted in evidence without the context, which explains to what it refers ; we must, therefore, look to the rest of the entry to see what the demand was which he thereby admitted to be discharged " (v. post) The statements, provided they be relevant, may be either written or verbal The form in which such declarations are ordinarily offered is that of written entries ; the inaccuracy with which oral statements are repeated makes them less satisfactory, but such objection lies to the credibility of the statement and not to its reception (2) Such entries are not receivable where better evidence is to be had to prove the same fact, as where the maker [illegible] personally ; but they are not the less re- [illegible] be proved by evidence of another descrip- [illegible] Ridgway, the evidence of the entry of the accouchement would not have been rejected, because the evidence of a midwife,

(1) 2 Smith's L. C. (9th Ed), 348, 10 East, 109 Illustration (b) in this case, with the portion of the entry which was against interest omitted It is intended to illustrate the rule as to statements made in the course of business, not that as to the present class of statements which is exemplified by Illustrations (e) and (f). See Ningava v. Bharmappa, 23 B , 69 (1897) ; see also Doe v Davies, referred to in the last-mentioned case, and in Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 1 B , 97 (1886)

* The figures 38 and 79 referred to the corresponding entries in the Ledger.

† This was the designation at that time of the father of the William Fowden, junr., in question

(2) Cf. Section and Mussammat Zaynub v, Hadjee Baba, 2 Ind Jur. N. S , 54 (1866) ; Best, Ev , § 502.

admissibility (1) So it has been held that account-books containing entries not made by, nor at the dictation of, a person who had a personal knowledge of the truth of the fact stated, if regularly kept in course of business, are admissible as evidence under section 34 : and semble under the second clause of this section.(2)

Contemporaneousness. According to the English rule, the statement must also have been made at the time of, or immediately after, the performance of the transaction.(3) Thus an interval of two days has sufficed to exclude a declaration.(4) But contemporaneousness is not required by the section for the admissibility of the evidence, though in determining the weight to be allowed to it in particular cases it will always be important to consider how far the statement or entry was contemporaneous with the fact which it relates.(5)

Collateral matters. Further, entries made in the course of business are, under English law, evidence only of those things which, according to the course of business it was the duty of the person to enter, and are no evidence of independent collateral matters, however intimately any such collateral matters may be incorporated in the statements (6) Thus, where the question was whether A was arrested in a certain parish ,—a certificate annexed to the writ by a deceased sheriff's officer, stating the fact, time, and place of the arrest, returned by him to the sheriff, was held inadmissible on the ground that the duty merely required the fact and time but not the place of the arrest to be returned.(7) But this restriction on inadmissibility is not imposed in terms by the section. " The statement or entry, in order to be admissible under the Act, must relate to a relevant fact(8); and it would appear to make no difference, so far as the question of admissibility is concerned, whether this fact is connected with the performance of a duty or is merely an independent collateral matter. Whether this fact naturally finds a place in the narrative, what is the nature of its connection with the fact the statement of which was matter of duty ; and whether this connection was such as to raise a presumption of accuracy of information or observation, must h [illegible]
w [illegible]

Extrinsic proof. The person wishing to give the evidence must give extrinsic proof of the death of the declarant, or of the existence of the other circumstances conditional to the admission of this evidence (10) Similar evidence of the ordinary course of business will a' [illegible] written one, evidence must be g [illegible] to have made it ; and tl [illegible] it or who is conversant [illegible]

---

(1) R. v Hanmanta, supra; Field, Ev, loc cit, Cunningham, Ev , 156

(2) R v. Hanmanta, supra.

(3) Doe v Turford, 3 B & Ad , 890, Sturla v. Freccia, 5 App Cas , 623; Smith v Blakey, L R., 2 Q B , 326; The Henry Coxon, 3 P. D , 156; Taylor, Ev , § 704.

(4) The Henry Coxon, supra

(5) Field, Ev., loc. cit., Cunningham, Ev , 157.

(6) Chambers v Bernasconie, 1 C. M & R., 347 , Taylor, Ev., § 705.

(7) Id , per Lord Denman:—" We are all of opinion that whatever effect may be due to an entry made in the course of any office reporting facts necessary to the performance of a duty the statement of other circumstances, however naturally they may be thought to find a place in the narrative, is no proof of these circumstances "

(8) And must have been made in the ordinary course of business.

(9) Field, Ev., loc cit; cases may perhaps, however, occur in which the matter in question is so collateral and the entry for this and other reasons is of such an unusual character that it can scarcely be said to have been made "in the ordinary course of business."

(10) v. ante, Introd. to ss 32–33, s. 104, post; Field, Ev, loc. cit; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed , 272; and cases there cited.

(11) In connection with this, see s. 114, illust. (f), post,

(12) Field, Ev., loc. cit; as to ancient documents see s. 90, post; Doe v. Davies, 10 Q. B , 314; Riggs-Miller v. Wheatley, 28 L. R., Ir , 144; and see ss. 47, 67, post, as to proof of hand-writing

THIRD CLAUSE

The leading case on the subject-matter of this clause is that of Higham v. Ridgway (1) There the question was whether one William Fowden, junior, was born before or after the 16th April, 1768 The plaintiff, in order to prove that his birth was subsequent to that date, tendered in evidence the following entries from the Day Book and Ledger of a man-midwife, who had attended the mother of William Fowden, junior, at his birth and was since deceased :— Statements against interest.

DAY BOOK ENTRIES

22nd April 1768

38* Richard Fallow's wife, Brambhall Filius circa hor 9, matutin, cum forcipe, etc, paid

[Then followed in the same page the entry in question without any intervening date]

Wm. Fowden, Junr 's† wife. 79* filius circa hor 3, post merid, nat, etc

LEDGER ENTRY

Wm Fowden, junr, 1768
Aprilis 22, Filius natus, etc
Wife	. 1 6 1
26th Haustus purg	0 15 0
Pd 25th Oct, 1768	2 1 1

It was held that all these entries were connected together or one whole and that the entry as to the payment of the man-midwife's charges rendered them all admissible It will be observed that the entry of the date (22nd April, 1768) was in no way against the interest of the person who made it, but was collateral to that portion of the entry, namely—" Pd (paid) 25*th Oct.*, 1768," which was against interest, as showing that a certain sum of money was no longer due and owing to such person On this point Lord Ellenborough said : " It is idle to say that the word ' paid ' only shall be admitted in evidence without the context, which explains to what it refers ; we must, therefore, look to the rest of the entry to see what the demand was which he thereby admitted to be discharged " (v. post) The statements, provided they be relevant, may [illegible]

of the statement and not to its reception.(2) Such entries are not receivable where better evidence is to be had to prove the same fact, as where the maker of the entry is himself forthcoming personally; but they are not the less receivable because the same fact may be proved by evidence of another description. " For instance, in Higham v. Ridgway, the evidence of the entry of the accoucheur would not have been rejected, because the evidence of a midwife,

(1) 2 Smith's L C (9th Ed), 348; 10 East, 109. Illustration (b) in this case, with the portion of the entry which was against interest omitted. It is intended to illustrate the rule as to statements made in the course of business, not that as to the present class of statements which is exemplified by Illustrations (e) and (f). See Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B, 69 (1897), see also Doe v Davies, referred to in the last-mentioned case, and in Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 1 B, 97 (1886)

* The figures 38 and 79 referred to the corresponding entries in the Ledger

† This was the designation at that time of the father of the William Fowden, junr, in question.

(2) Cf Section and Mussammat Zoynub v. Hadjee Boba, 2 Ind. Jur N. S, 54 (1866); Best, Ev, § 502 might have been forthcoming; though this may always be given, the rule applies to the quality and not the quantity of evidence; and that a fact may often be proved by independent testimony, notwithstanding there may be two distinct ways of proving it "(1) The distinction should be observed between mere admissions and statements receivable under the present Clause. An admission may or may not be against the interest of the maker at the time when it is made. An admission merely as such is neither receivable in maker's favour nor in favour of his representatives in interest, nor against any person other than the maker or his representative. On the other hand, an admission which amounts to a statement against interest within the meaning of this Clause may not only be received in favour of the maker thereof and his representatives, but is evidence in favour of, or against, strangers. A class of statements which may be admissible under this Clause is that of endorsements or entries in respect of the payment of interest due on bonds and similar instruments.(2) Such endorsements or entries, if made before the claim became barred by the law of Limitation, would be against the interest of the payee, inasmuch as they are admissions of payment; but if they are made after the claim became so barred they would be for and not against the creditors' interest inasmuch as by the admission of a small payment he would be enabled to recover the larger remaining portion of the debt, such payment having the effect of preventing the claim to the capital sum from being barred. Whether then the endorsement or entry is admissible, as an entry against interest, depends upon the question whether it was bonâ fide made before the claim became barred by Limitation, and it ought not to be admitted until it be shown by evidence dehors the instrument that it was made at a time when it was against the interest of the creditor to make it (3) (See next paragraph) Recitals in documents not inter partes are ordinarily irrelevant unless the statements in the documents can be brought within the conditions of this section. Statements in documents not inter partes limiting the interest of the executants by declaring the boundaries of certain land, fall within this clause and are therefore admissible in evidence if the conditions necessary to bring this section into operation are proved (4).

The Interest. The main difference between the rule enacted by this section and the English law(5) upon the same subject consists in the nature of the interest to

(1) Norton, Ev., 181; "Thus, the mere fact that there has been a written receipt given for money will not preclude the proof of payment by the oral evidence of witnesses who saw the payment. Thus in the case of Middleton v. Melton (10 B & C., 317) a private book, kept by a deceased collector of taxes, containing entries by him, acknowledging the receipt of sums in his character of collector, was also held to be admissible evidence in an action against his surety, although the parties who had paid him were alive and might have been called," ib, 182.

(2) See s 20 of Act IX of 1908 (Limitation); and ib., Art. 75, Sched ii, and remarks in Field, Ev., loc cit; Norton Ev, 182, 183.

(3) Taylor, Ev., §§ 690—696, and cases there cited: Rose v. Bryant, 2 Camp, 321, Field, Ev., loc cit; Norton, Ev, 182, 183; Briggs v. Wilson, 5 D M. & G, 12 The express provision of s 20 of the Limitation Act that the payment, whether of interest or principal, must have been made before the right to sue had become barred, appears to require proof of the time of payment

(4) Reajaddi Sardar v Ganga Charan Bhattacharya, 53 I. C., 863.

(5) See Steph. Dig, Art 28; Taylor, Ev., § 668—696; Roscoe, N. P., Ev, 55—59; Best, Ev, § 500; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed., 184—194; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 262—306—316; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 262—270; Smith, L C, Note to Higham v. Ridgway.

which statement must be opposed According to the latter the interest involved must be (a) pecuniary or (b) proprietary. But declarations against interest in any other sense, as for instance an admission of liability to criminal prosecution, do not come within the rule (1) Thus where the question was whether A was lawfully married to B, a statement by a deceased clergyman that he performed the marriage under circumstances which would have rendered him liable to a criminal prosecution was held not to be relevant as a statement against interest (2) But in so far as the present section includes (c) an interest in escaping a criminal prosecution the statement would have been admissible under this Act (3) Further, under the present section, the interest to which the statement may be opposed may be (d) an interest in escaping a suit for damages. The section not only extends the English rule by recognising two additional forms of interest, but also in rendering this class of statements under certain circumstances admissible, even if the persons who made them be still living.

An entry against interest means an entry primâ facie against the interest of the maker . that is to say, the natural meaning of the entry, standing alone, must be against the interest of the man who made it.(4) If the entry is primâ facie against interest, it is admissible for all purposes irrespective of its effect or value when received Thus the following entry in the handwriting of a deceased person —"J W paid me three months' interest," which was followed by other entries pointing to a loan to J. W., was held to be admissible as evidence whether or not the effect of it, when admitted, would be to establish the existence of a debt due to the testator (5) Where the fact that the declaration is against the declarant's interest does not clearly appear from the state- [illegible] sibility of the declaration is concerned.(7) When a declaration is partly against interest, only such part is admissible (8)

The declarations must have been against interest at the time they were made; it is not sufficient that they might possibly turn out to be so afterwards (9) Statements and entries against interest may be received as evidence of independent and collateral matters, which, though forming part of the declaration, were not in themselves against the interest of the declarant A statement, though indifferent in itself, becomes against the proprietary interest of the

---

(1) The Sussex Peerage case, 11 C. & F. 103

(2) Ib

(3) Illustration (f). Norton, Ev, 183, 184. Field, Ev, 184, 185. Cunningham, Ev, 158.

(4) Taylor v. Witham, L R. 3 Ch D. 605, 607, per Jessel, M R. following Parke, B., in R. v Inhabitants of Lower Heyford "Of course if you can prove aliunde that the man had a particular reason for making it and that it was for his interest, you may destroy the value of the evidence altogether, but the question of admissibility is not a question of value. The entry may be utterly worthless when you get it, if you shew any reason to believe that he had a motive for making it and that though apparently against his interest yet really it was for it: but that is a matter for subsequent consideration when you estimate the value of the testimony" Ib, per Jessel, M R

(5) Ib.

(6) Wills, Ev, 134, see Mussammat Zaynub v. Hadjee Baba, 2 Ind. Jur. N. S, 54 (1866).

(7) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed. 252; Field, Ev, loc cit; but upon the amount of interest involved the degree of attention likely to secure accuracy must materially depend, Ib.

(8) Bijay Chand Mahatap v. Kali Pada Chatterjee, 17 C W N, 1013 (1913).

(9) Ex parte Edwards Re Tollemache, 14 Q. B. D. 415, 416; Massey v. Allen, 13 Ch D, 558; Smith v. Blakey, L. R., 2 Q B, 326 [the interest must not be too remote.] Wigmore, Ev, § 1466

declarant when made as a material part of a deed, the object of which is to limit his proprietary interest. It cannot be said not to affect his interest because assuming it to be material, the deed, if it were struck out, would be less effective than it otherwise would be. If, on the other hand, the statements were unconnected with the purpose of the deed and were not in themselves adverse to the declarant's interest, they would doubtless have to be rejected (1) In an early case where the declarations were partially against interest the rule was applied as follows: "We cannot concur in the opinion of the learned Judge that this statement was not admissible in evidence. It is a statement by which the interest in the mehal of the person making it is reduced or affected; it is against his interest and against his proprietary right. The effect of it is to cut down the proprietary right, to subject it to the tenure or incumbrance which is mentioned. It is true that in one part of it there is what may be said to be not against his interest, but in his favour, namely, the amount of the original rent and increased rent payable to him. But when a document of this kind is tendered in evidence, it is not to be divided into parts, and the part which is in favour of the person making it rejected, and that which is against his interest accepted. The question is whether, taking the document as a whole, it is against the interest or the proprietary right of the person making it In estimating the value of any particular part of it, that may be looked at; but the principle upon which the admissibility of it is determined is whether it has been made under such circumstances as make it reasonable to suppose that it was done bonâ fide and the statements are true."(2) So in the undermentioned case(3) the plaintiff sued in 1893 to recover possession of certain land The defendants denied the plaintiff's title. The latter tendered in evidence a registered mortgage-deed of adjacent land executed in 1877, which set forth the boundaries of the land comprised in the mortgage, and as one of such boundaries, referred to the land in question as then belonging to the plaintiff. At the date of the deed there was no litigation existing between the present litigants, and at the date of the present suit the mortgagor was dead. It was held that the statement in the deed was admissible under this clause of this section. The Court, referring to the case cited in the preceding note at the foot of this page, and pointing out that the law under and previous to this Act was the same, observed as follows: "If, then, a statement of a zeminder that there was a certain ghatuali occupant in portion of his mehal was held to be a statement against the interest of the zemindar, in the same way the statement of a registered occupant of a survey-number in the Bombay Presidency that he is indebted in a certain sum of money, which is a charge on his land, must be held to be both against his pecuniary and proprietary interest. If so, then the same case quoted above is also an authority for holding that the whole statement is admissible in evidence, not only to prove so much contained in it as was adverse to the interest of the person making it, but to prove any collateral fact contained in the statement, which fact was not foreign to the part actually against interest and formed a substantial part of it."(4) Thus, accounts are admissible, some items of which charge the declarant, though other connected items discharge him, or even show a balance in his favour; for it is not to be presumed that a man will charge himself falsely for the mere purpose of getting a discharge, and in the latter case, the debit items would still be against interest, since they diminish the balance in his favour.(5) A statement

(1) Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B. 63, 71, 72 (1897), following case next cited

(2) Rajah Leelanund v. Mussamut Lakhputte, 22 W. R. 231, 233 (1874), per Couch, C J., cited and followed in Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B. 63, 67, 91. (1897).

(3) Ningawa v. Bharmappa, 23 B. 63 (1897).

(4) Ib

(5) Taylor, Ev. § 674.

by a deceased Sapinda that he had received a sum of money for consenting to an adoption, thereby invalidating such consent, has been held admissible under this clause (1)

But it is immaterial that the declaration may prove, in the circumstances which have happened at the time when it is sought to be put in evidence, to be for the interest of the declarant, or even that it can be shown by independent evidence to have been in truth for his interest at the time when it was made, provided that, standing by itself it was, at the time when it was made against his interest.(2)

A declaration is against the pecuniary interest of the declarant who makes it, (i) Pecuniary. whenever it has the effect of charging him with a pecuniary liability to another, or of discharging some other person upon whom he would otherwise have a claim.(3) A declaration may be against the pecuniary interest of the person who makes it, if part of it charges him with a liability, though other parts of the book or document in [illegible] in whole or in part(3), an [illegible] ment itself, either of suc[illegible]
For it is not necessary t[illegible] charge of which the entry shows the subsequent(5) liquidation. Notwithstanding the provisions of the twenty-first section and the present section, cess-returns cannot, under section 95 of the Road Cess Act, be used as evidence in favour of the person by whom or on whose behalf they are submitted (6) But they can be used as evidence otherwise (7)

Declarations made by persons in disparagement of their title to land are (ii) Proprietary. admissible, if made while the declarant was in actual possession(8) of the property(9) as statements against their proprietary interest. And as, in the [illegible]

(1) Danakota Ammal v Balasundara Mudalier, 36 M, 19 (1913)

(2) Taylor v Witham, L R, 3 Ch D, 605, Wills, Ev. 130, 131, v ante.

(3) Doe v Robson, 15 East, 32, 35, per Bayley, J, Wills, Ev, 130 Higham v Ridgway affords an example of a statement which discharges another, and Williams v Graves (see next note and illust (e) of a statement charging the maker)

(4) Steph Dig, Art 28, thus where the question was whether A received rent for certain land, a deceased steward's account, charging himself with the receipt of such rent for A, was held to be relevant, although the balance of the whole account was in favour of the steward ib. ill (d); Williams v Graves, 8 C & P, 592, see Raja Leelanund v. Mussamut Lakhputee, 22 W R, 231 (1874).

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 675; Steph. Dig, Art 28, R v Heyford, cited in Note to Higham v. Ridgway in 2 Smith, L C; aliter Doe v Vowles, 1 M. & R, 261, in Taylor v. Witham, L. R, 3 Ch. D 605, Jessel, M R, followed R v. Heyford, and dissented from Doe v. Vowles. There is nothing in the Act to prevent the admission of the statement in the case abovementioned any objection that may be made will go to the weight, and not to the admissibility, of such evidence, Field Ev, 181

(6) Hem Chandra v Kali Prasanna, 26 C, 832, 838 (1899), s c, 8 C W. N, 1, 7, and see Hem Chandra Chowdhry v. Kali Prasanna Bhaduri, P C, 30 C, 1033; 30 I A, 177

(7) Sewdeo Narain v Ajodhya Prosad, 39 C, 1005 (1912); Chalko Singh v. Jhero Singh, 39 C, 995 (1912)

(8) There ought to be some evidence that the declarant was actually in possession since, otherwise his declaration that he has an interest, though limited, may appear to be a statement rather in his favour than otherwise

(9) The English rule adds "and as to matters within his personal knowledge or belief"; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 262—263, Taylor Ev, § 685 Trimbleston v. Kemmis, 9 C & F, 780, aliter under this section, v post

(10) Taylor, Ev., § 685

(11) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 262—263; Wills, Ev. 136; Field, Ev, loc cit, Taylor, Ev §§ 684—686; Norton Ev, 179, 180.

(12) Grey v Redman, 1 Q B. D., 161.

executed, in favour of one B D, a varaspatra or deed of heirship, this deed was, in subsequent suit between the heir of B D, and a mortgagee of certain property covered by it, admitted in evidence as being against the widow's proprietary interest, as by it she divested herself of her widow's estate in the property.(1) Thus also a statement by a deceased occupier of land that he held a life-estate in it under a particular will, of which C and B were executors, was held admissible to prove the existence and executors of the will, being against proprietary interest on account of its two-fold limitation of the declarant's estate to a life-interest, and under a particular document.(2) A statement by a landlord who is dead that there was a tenant on the land is a statement against his proprietary interest (3)

A distinction, however, exists between statements which limit the declarant's own title, and those which go to abridge or encumber the estate itself. According to English law the former are admissible even between strangers, whereas the latter are only so as against the declarant and his privies. Thus admissions by the holder of a subordinate title are not receivable to affect the estate of his superior which he has no right to alienate or encumber—e.g., those of an occupier, his landlord's title, or those of a tenant for life, the title of the remainderman or reversioner The ground for this distinction is said to be that, though it is unlikely (to take a specific instance) that a person possessed of an absolute interest in property will admit that he is only a tenant, many causes might induce a tenant to acknowledge the existence of an easement, or a highway, or the like, which might be either not inconvenient or even absolutely beneficent to him.(1)

(iii) Interest in escaping a criminal prosecution or a suit for damages

It has been already noticed that the section at this point extends the English rule.(5) The words "would [illegible] him at the time that the sta[illegible] a statement made after the [illegible] damages had become barred by Limitation. or after the expiry of the time, if any, within which a prosecution for an offence must be instituted, should be admitted, merely because if made at some earlier period it would have exposed the declarant to a prosecution, or suit for damages (6) This construction is supported by the rule laid down with regard to statements against pecuniary and proprietary

(1) Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 89 (1886)

(2) Sly v Sly, 2 P D, 91, so again where the question was whether A (deceased) gained a settlement in the parish of B by renting a tenement, a statement made by A whilst in possession of a house, that he had paid rent for it, was held relevant, because it reduced the interest which would otherwise be inferred from the fact of A's possession; R. v. Exeter, L R, 4 Q. B, 341, Steph. Dig., Art 28, ill (f).

(3) Abdul Aziz v. Ebrahim, 31 C., 965 (1904), following Burha Mundari v Megh Nath, 2 Cal L. J, 4n (1905).

(4) R v Bliss, 7 A. & E, 550, Scholes v Chadwick, 2 M. & Rob., 507; Howe v Malkin, 40 L T., 196, 27 W. R (Eng), 340, Papendick v. Bridgewater, 5 E & B, 166. [In this case the question was whether there was a right of common way over a certain field A statement by A, a deceased tenant for a term of the land in question, that he had so much right, was held to be relevant as against his successors in the term but not as against the owner of the field] Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed. 262—263; Steph Dig, Art. 28, Powell, Ev, 224; Taylor Ev, § 687. It is difficult to see any objection in principle to treating declarations by an occupier of land which admit the existence of an easement over it as being within the rule, since the admission of its existence might well be considered a statement against interest See remarks in Wills, Ev, 136, 137 Probably here as elsewhere under the Act any objection that may be made will go not to the admissibility, but to the weight of the evidence

(5) v ante, Introd to ss. 32, 33

(6) The construction given in the text and adopted in the first edition from Whitley Stokes, ii, 874; Field Ev, 185, was subsequently approved by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Nicholas v Asphar, the final judgment in which is reported in 24 C., 216 (1896). The decision of the Court, however, upon this point having been given during the course of the examination of the witnesses has not been reported.

interest (1) On the other hand, it may be said that if the fact that the risk had passed away was not known to the declarant, the statement might in the belief of the latter, though not in fact, be against his interest, and thus have the guarantee which is proper to this class of evidence

Collateral facts

The statement against interest is not only evidence of the precise fact which is against interest, but of all connected facts (though not against interest) which are necessary to explain, or are expressly referred to by, the declaration and whether contained in the same or other document(2) (v ante, "Interest"). Thus in an action, by the executor of one T, by which it was sought to establish against the defendant a debt of £ 2,000 as due to the testator's estate for money lent, and where the defence was that the defendant had received it as a gift, the plaintiff tendered in evidence a private account-book of the deceased containing (a) entries of several sums of £ 20 each, purporting to have been received from the defendant as quarterly payments of interest, and (b) an entry stating that the defendant had on a particular date acknowledged that he had borrowed of the testator the sum of £ 2,000. The defendant objected to the admissibility of the book on the ground that the tendency of the entries was to establish the claim for £ 2,000 in favour of the estate But it was held that the entries of the receipt of interest, taken by themselves(3), were, at the time admissible, notwithstanding that the entry by which the testator recorded the defendant's acknowledgment of the loan was in his favour (4) As in the case of a declaration against pecuniary interest, so in the case of a declaration against proprietary interest, so soon as the adverse interest is proved the whole statement becomes admissible (5) So statements by tenants have been admitted to prove not merely the fact that they were tenants, but also both the amount(6) and the payment(7) of the rent, and the nature of the tenure (8) But disconnected facts, though contained in the same document or statement, are inadmissible statements not referred to in, or necessary to explain, declarations against interest and are not relevant merely because they were made at the same time or recorded in the same place (9) Upon the question, in the case of written entries as to what is to be deemed the whole statement within the meaning of the rule, it would seem that the same tests, which exist in regard to admissions must be applicable here, namely, that the statement which is sought to be given in evidence as a part of the main statement must, if antecedent, have been incorporated in it by reference, and, if contemporary, have been virtually parcel of it (10)

Personal knowledge contemporaneousness

The statements are admissible, although the declarant had no personal knowledge of the fact stated, but received them merely on hearsay(11) Nor

(1) See Ex parte Edwards and Massey v Allen (v ante)

(2) Ningawa v Bharmappa 23 B 63 (1897) Phipson, Ev 5th Ed, 263, Steph Dig, Art 28, Powell Ev 9th Ed 307 308 Wills Ev 2nd Ed 386, Taylor Ev, §§ 677 680 Higham v Ridgway, 2 Smith, L C (v ante p 325) Taylor v Witham, 3 Ch D 311

(3) v ante

(4) Taylor v Witham, L R 3 Ch D 605, supra and see ante Higham v Ridgway, and the remarks on debtor and creditor accounts Rajah Leelanund v Mussamut Lakhputtee 22 W R, 231 (1874)

(5) Peacable v Watson 4 Taunt, 16

(6) R v Birmingham 31 L J M C 63

(7) R v Exeter, L R 4 Q B 341

(8) Doe v Jones, 1 Camp, 367

(9) Steph Dig, Art 28, Doe v Beviss, 7 C B, 456, Knight v Waterford 4 Y & Coll, 293, Whaley v Carlisle 15 W R (Eng) 1183, Ningawa v Bharmappa, 23 B 63 (1897), v ante

(10) Wills Ev 132, ib 2nd Ed, 187

(11) Crease v Barrett, 1 C M & R, 919 Percival v Nanson 7 Ex 1 Taylor, Ev § 669 but see Wills Ev 133 134 ib, 2nd Ed 189—191, these were cases of declarations against pecuniary interest [illegible]

The Act, however makes no such distinction As to the decision in Jagatpal Singh v Jageshar Baksh 25 A, 143 (1902) which refers to cl (5) see notes to cl (2) ante is it necessary that such statements should be contemporaneous with the fact recorded; it is sufficient that they are made at any subsequent time.(1) These circumstances affect the weight, not the admissibility, of the declaration.

Extrinsic proof must be given of the declarant's death or of the existence of the other circumstances under which alone this evidence is receivable; and that the statement was either made, written, or signed by him, or if made or written by another on his behalf, that it was authorized or adopted by the declarant (2) Further, if the declarant purports to charge himself as the agent, or receiver of another, it is generally necessary, in addition, to give some proof that he really occupied the alleged position.(3)

FOURTH CLAUSE.

Statements giving opinion as to public right or custom or matter of public or general interest

Illustration (i) exemplifies this clause, the points to be regarded in which are that (a) opinion may be given in evidence as to the existence of (b) any public custom or right, (c) or of any matter of public or general interest (d) provided there was a probability of knowledge on the part of the declarant, and (e) provided the declaration was made ante litem motam. The grounds upon which the evidence in this and the seventh clause mentioned is admitted, are considered in the note to such last clause, and in the Introduction, ante It is not essential to the admissibility, though it is to the weight, of the declarations that they should be corroborated by proof of the exercise of the right within living memory (4) The best way to prove ancient rights is to prove particular acts and usage, as far back as living memory goes, and then adduce evidence of reputation in regard to the preceding time. In a suit in which the question was whether there existed a custom of the Kadwa Kanbi caste to which the parties belonged, prohibiting a widow from adopting a son, the lower Court apparently considering that it would be unreasonable to oblige the plaintiff to incur the expense of procuring the attendance of the witnesses, admitted in evidence under this clause, a statement signed by several witnesses to the effect that a widow of this caste cannot adopt, according to the custom of the caste, without the express authority of her husband. It was Held that the fourth clause of the thirty-second section was not applicable to the case as the evidence was required to prove a fact in issue and not merely a relevant fact The statement was, therefore, inadmissible to prove the alleged custom (5)

Opinion. Particular facts.

The statement declared by the Act to be relevant is a statement which gives the opinion of the person making it, not of facts within his own knowledge, but of reputation which his position has naturally brought within his own knowledge The declarant's statement must embody, not his own individual knowledge or belief alone, but also the concurring opinions of others similarly interested to himself; and those opinions in their turn may be based in part on earlier traditions extending back through any number of generations. This is what is understood in this connection by the term 'reputation' But if the declarant's circumstances were such that he was apparently competent to testify as to what the common report upon the subject was, it will be presumed, till the contrary

(1) Doe v. Turford, 3 B & Ad 890, 897, 898.

(2) Doe v. Hawkins, 2 Q B, 212; Barry v. Bebbington, 4 T R., 514; Lancum v Lovell, 6 C. & P, 437; Exeter v Warren, 15 Q B, 773, Bradley v. James, 13 C. P, 822, quære, whether the Act adopts a different rule by the use of the word "made" in the opening clause of the section; Field, Ev, 180, 181; ib, 6th Ed, 132, 133; as to proof of handwriting see ss 47, 67, and as to documents 30 years old see s. 90, post.

(3) Taylor, Ev, §§ 682, 683; as to independent evidence of the existence of the charge subsequently liquidated, v. ante, pp. 327—328

(4) Crease v Barrett, 1 C. M. & R, 919, 930; and cases cited in Taylor, Ev, § 619.

(5) Patel Vandravan v. Patel Manilal, 15 B., 565 (1890).

is shown, that his utterance was an expression of opinion common both to himself and others. Reputation as to the existence of particular facts is inadmissible. The declaration must relate to the general right, and not to particular facts which support or negative it, or the latter not being equally notorious are liable to be misrepresented or misunderstood and, may have been connected with other facts which, if known, would qualify or explain them.(1) Thus, if the question be whether a road is public or private, declarations by old persons since dead that they have seen repairs done upon it, are inadmissible (2) On the other hand, on the same question, declarations by deceased residents in but which indirectly do so, as by setting up an inconsistent private claim, or by omitting all mention of it, where mention might reasonably have been expected(5)

Matters of public and general interest

The terms "public" and "general" are sometimes used as synonymous (6) But a distinction is drawn in English law between the two terms when dealing with the question of the competent knowledge of the declarant According to it public rights are those common to all members of the State, e g. rights of highway and ferry, while general rights are those affecting any considerable section of the community, e g, questions as to the boundaries of a parish or manor The distinction is of importance in English law. because when the point in issue is of a public character, evidence of any person is either be shown by proof of residence in, or other connection with, the locality, or presumed from the circumstances under which the declaration was made.(7) But as this clause requires a probability of knowledge in all cases, this distinction ceases to be of importance in India In both classes of rights, public and general, the rights must have been one of the existence of which, if it existed, the declarant would have been likely to be aware (8) Instances of matters which have been held to be of public and general interest are, questions of a private right of way over a field, a custom of electing the master of a grammar school, and the like, have been held to be matters of a private nature (9)

---

(1) Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 222—223 and cases there cited, Taylor, Ev, § 617, Steph Dig, Art 30 [Declarations as to particular facts from which the existence of any such public or general right or custom or matter of public or general interest may be inferred are deemed to be irrelevant]

(2) R v. Bliss, 7 A & E, 550

(3) Crease v Barrett, 1 C M & R 925

(4) Drinkwater v Porter, 7 C & P, 181

(5) Drinkwater v Porter, supra, followed in Sivasubramanya v Secretary of State, 9 M, 285, 294 (1884) [No distinction can be drawn between evidence of reputation to establish, and to disparage a public right] Taylor, Ev, § 620 Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 137, 138

(6) As to the meaning of the term "interest" v ante, Introd to ss 32-33, R v Bedfordshire, 4 E & B 535

(7) Taylor, Ev, §§ 609—612 Steph Dig, Art 30, Phipson, Ev 5th Ed, 279 as to the meaning of "general custom or right," see s 48, post, as to whether the rights mentioned in this clause are incorporeal only, see Gujju Lall v Fateh Lall, 6 C, 180 186 187 (1880), and cf Sivasubramanya v The Secretary of State, 9 M 285 (1884)

(8) S 32 cl (4)

(9) See Taylor Ev §§ 613, 614 where a large number of cases are collected

"The Indian decided cases furnish few examples.(1) Illustration (i) is taken from those parts of the country in which the village-system still exists: it has long died out, if it ever perfectly existed, in Lower Bengal. Public rights or customs are little understood, and the order of the Government or of the Executive head of a district is often accepted as conclusive concerning them In large zemindaries, questions, however, occasionally arise somewhat analogous to those which occur in manors in England, such for example as to the zemindar's right to take dues on the sale of trees, or to receive one-fourth of the sale-proceeds in cases of involuntary sale, as in execution, or in case of a house sold privately."(2)

Declarations by deceased persons as to private rights are inadmissible, since these are not likely to be so commonly or correctly known, and are more liable to be misrepresented (3) In the undermentioned case it was held that neither cl 4 nor cl. 5 of this section justifies the admission of hearsay evidence upon the question whether a particular person survived another or upon the question whether a man was, at the time of his death, joint with or separate from other members of his family, nor can the grounds of the opinion of a deceased person as to the existence of a custom, even if stated to a witness, be as such proved under this section (4) The grounds upon which evidence of [illegible] to private titles, either [illegible] is, as it is not generally [illegible] is only private title (5)

Reputation may, however, be given in evidence under this Act in proof of private rights, if it consists of the written statements mentioned in the seventh clause, post.

Form of the declaration

Declarations as to the public and general rights may be made in any form or manner (6) The statements under this clause may have been written or verbal. But reputation as to matters of general interest is not confined to the declarations here mentioned. It may be evidence by recitals in deeds, wills, or other documents under the provisions of the seventh clause. The following are instances of the manner in which declarations as to matters of public and general interest may be made: they may be made by or in statements, verbal or written, giving opinions(7), maps prepared by, or by the direction of, person interested in the matter(8) deeds and leases between private persons (9); orders, judgments, and decrees of Courts, if final.(10)

Lis mota and interest

In order to prevent bias, the declarations, to be admissible, must have been made ante litem motam, or before the commencement of any controversy, legal or otherwise, touching the matter to which they relate. By lis mota is meant the commencement of the controversy and not the commencement of the suit.(11) This qualification is not confined to matters of public and general interest, but equally governs the admissibility of hearsay evidence in matters

(1) See Sivasubramanya v. The Secretary of State, 9 M, 265 (1884), post

(2) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 138—as to Manorial customs, see s 42, post, and as to presentments of Customary Courts, see Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 230—232.

(3) Taylor, Ev, §§ 615, 616; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 279—Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 49, and cases there cited, Heiniger v. Droz, 25 B, 433, 440, 441 (1900); s. c, 3 Bom. L R, 1 [S. 32, cl. (4), is manifestly inapplicable to a document purporting to deal with the right of a private individual as against the public, in which the interests of the individual formed the subject-matter of the statements], as to the evidence of "ancient possession," v post

(4) Mussamat Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chandrapal Kunwar, 8 O C, 94, P C. (1902), 361 I A., 125

(5) Morewood v Wood, 14 East, 329 n

(6) Steph. Dig, Art 30

(7) S 32, cl. (4), v ante.

(8) Hammond v. Bradstreet, 10 Ex, 390, see cl. (7), post

(9) Plaxton v. Dare, 10 B & C, 17.

(10) S 42, post; Steph Dig, Art 30, illust (b).

(11) Barkeley Peerage case, 4 Camp, 417, Monckton v. Atty-Genl, 2 Russ & Myl, 161, Taylor, Ev, § 629.

of pedigree(1) "There must be, not merely facts which may lead to a dispute, but a lis mota or suit, or controversy preparatory to a suit, actually commenced, or dispute arisen, and that upon the very same pedigree or subject-matter which constitutes the question in litigation "(2) Therefore, declarations will not be rejected in consequence of their having been made with the express view of preventing disputes(3); they are admissible if no dispute has arisen, though made in direct support of the title of the declarant(4), and the mere fact of the declarant having stood, or having believed that he stood, in pari jure with the party relying on the declaration, will not render his statement inadmissible (5) The declaration will also be received, although made after a claim had been asserted but finally abandoned(6), or after the existence of non-contentious legal proceedings involving the same right(7) or after the existence of contentious legal proceedings involving the same right only collaterally and not directly(8) for the controversy must have related to the particular subject in issue (9) But declarations made after the controversy has originated are inadmissible, although the existence of the controversy was not known to the declarant, for to enquire into this would be to enter into a collateral issue (10) The admissibility of declarations terminates with the commencement of the controversy, and the termination of this admissibility is not affected by its being shown that proceedings were fraudulently commenced with the view to exclude the possibility of any such declaration(11) and the evidence will be excluded, even though the former controversy were between different parties, or had reference to a different property or claim, if matters to which the statement relates were clearly under discussion in the former dispute (12)

FIFTH & SIXTH CLAUSES

For the purpose of Indian Courts the extent to which hearsay evidence with regard to relationship is admissible may be summarized shortly under three heads—(a) statements made orally or in writing by persons deceased, etc, having special knowledge, ante litem motam (section 32, fifth clause) ,(b) statements in writing as to relationship between persons deceased in wills or deeds relating to the affairs of the family to which they belonged, etc, made ante litem motam (section 32, sixth clause) , (c) opinion shown by conduct as to the existence of a relationship by a person who had special means of knowledge (section 50) (13)

Clauses fifth and sixth, which are exemplified by Illustrations (k), (l) and (m), together with section 50, post, deal with the relevancy of certain facts which are treated by English text-writers under the single head of "matters of pedigree" There are, however, important differences between the English and Indian law on the subject of the statements which are dealt with by the above-mentioned clauses of this section There is further a distinction to be noted between the kinds of evidence to which each clause refers The statement

---

(1) See cls (5) and (6) its operation may therefore be illustrated by indiscriminate reference to both these classes of cases, Taylor, Ev § 628

(2) Davies v Lowndes, 7 Scott N R, 214, per Lord Denman, Taylor, Ev § 630, and cases there cited

(3) Berkeley Peerage case, supra

(4) Doe v Davies, 10 Q B, 314, 325 [although a feeling of interest will often cast suspicion on declarations it will not render them inadmissible, Per cur]

(5) Taylor, Ev, §§ 630, 631

(6) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 251, citing Hubb, Ev, of Suc, 668

(7) Ib, Briscoe v Lomax, 8 A & E, 198 citing Hubb, Gee v Ward, 7 E & B 509

(8) Ib, Freeman v Phillips, 4 M & S, 486

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 632, Wills, Ev 2nd Ed 230—see as to this Field Ev 6th Ed 137

(10) Shedden v Atty-Genl 30 L, J P & M, 217, Berkeley Peerage case, supra

(11) Shedden v Atty-Genl, supra

(12) Taylor Ev § 633

(13) Bejai Bahadur v Bhupindar, 17 A, 465, 459 (1895); see s 50, post

declared relevant by the fifth clause is a statement relating to the existence of any relationship between persons living or dead, as to whose relationship the person making the statement had special means of knowledge, such as the statement of deceased relatives, servants, and dependants of the family.(1) The statement mentioned in the sixth clause is a statement relating to the existence of relationship between deceased persons only This last clause does not embrace the case of a statement of relationship between a deceased person and a living person (2) It does not deal with the question by whom the statement is to be made : nor does it require that it should have been made by a person who had special means of knowledge, possibly on the ground that it is improbable that any person would insert in a solemn deed, will, etc., any matter the truth of which he did not know or had not satisfactorily ascertained(3) : but states that it must be contained in the documents of other material things therein mentioned It has been recently held that a family pedigree kept by the family chronicler prepared by him from time to time from information supplied by members of the family was admissible both under the second clause as also under this clause as having been kept by a person engaged by the members of the family to keep a record of the family events.(4)

Besides the documents and other material things mentioned in the sixth clause family bibles, coffin-plates, mural tablets, hatchments, rings, armorial bearings and the like, amongst Christians, and horoscopes among Hindus, are examples of other documents and things on which such statements are usually made.(5). It has been held that a horoscope is inadmissible unless its correctness is vouched either by its writer or by a person with special means of knowledge (6) As to statements contained in wills(7) and deeds(8) see the cases noted below. Inscriptions on tombstones, mural inscriptions and the like may be proved by any secondary evidence (9) The statement in a

(1) Garurudhwaja Prasad v Saparandhwaja Pershad, 27 I A., 238, 251 (1900); s c, 23 A, 37, 51, Oriental Life Assurance Co v Narasimha Chari, 25 M., 183, 207, 209, in which the statements of the deceased himself, his sister and others were tendered or admitted, as to the report of a punchayet as evidence of pedigree, see Ajabsing v Nanabhau, 26 I A, 48 (1898), 25 B, 1, 3 C W N, 130

(2) Ramnarain Kallia v Monee Bibee, 9 C, 613, 614 (1883)

(3) Field, Ev, 189, 190, ib, 6th Ed, 139—140

(4) Mohansing Umed Ramol v Dalpatsing Kanbaji, 24 Bom. L. R., 289 (1922)

(5) See generally Taylor, Ev, §§ 650—657.

(6) Krishnamacharier v Kishnamacharier, 38 M, 166 (1915). Horoscopes have been held inadmissible in two earlier cases Ramnarain Kallia v Monee Bibee, 9 C, 613 (1883). The chief ground on which the evidence was rejected in this case was that it was not shown that the attendance of the writer was not procurable; Satis Chunder v. Mohendro Lal, 17 C, 849 (1893); [quære as to this case; assuming the horoscope to have been tendered, as stated, under cl (6), that clause does not require that the maker of the statement should have had any special means of knowledge, and if tendered under cl. (5), Ramnarain Kallia v. Monee Bibee which this case purported to follow, does not seem in point Further, upon the question whether the evidence is limited to cases where the question in issue is one of relationship v post, and whether the words "relates to the existence of relationship" cover statement as to the commencement of relationship in point of time, v. post] A distinction is to be observed between horoscopes tendered under s. 32, cl. (6), and under s 32, cl (5) as the statements of persons having special means of knowledge, and as being an admission under ss 17, 18. See as to their use as admissions, Raja Goundan v Raja Goundan, 17 M, 134 (1893). See Rottonbhai v Chabildas, 13 B, 7 (1888).

(7) Nil Monee v. Mussumut Zuheerunnissa, 8 W. R, 371 (1867), [where the incidental mention of a child's age in the recital of a will was held to be no proof of the exact age of such child, the Report does not show whether the child was dead at the time the evidence was offered If dead, the case is no longer law Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 142], Chamanbu v Multanchand, 20 B, 562 (1895).

(8) Tima v. Daramma, 10 M, 362 (1887); [in which it was ruled that a statement as to relationship in a deed held to be invalid was admissible in evidence]

(9) S 65, cl. (d), post; see definition of "document" in s. 3, ante.

genealogical table filed by a member of a family who is dead, regarding the descendants of another member of the family, before any question arose as to the latter as also a record of family events are relevant under this clause (1) Statements, whether they are tendered under the fifth clause or the sixth clause, must, in order to be relevant, have been made ante litem motam(2); and for the admissibility of statements under either of these clauses it must be shown that the attendance of the person who made the statement is not procurable (3) So where a plaintiff tendered in evidence a horoscope under the sixth clause, but was unable to say who wrote it, and therefore unable to say whether the writer was dead, or could not be found, etc., the document was on this, as on other grounds, held to be inadmissible.(4) It will in no way affect the admissibility of this class of evidence that witnesses might have been called to prove the very facts to which it relates.(5) A register of baptism, while evidence of that fact and of the date of it, furnishes, even if it states the date of a person's birth, no proof of the age of that person further than that at the date of such ceremony the person referred to was already born. Evidence regarding the date of a man's birth has been held under certain circumstances to be admissible under the fifth clause; but in the case of an entry in the register in question there is nothing to show by whom the statement entered was made, much less that the person making the statement had any special means of knowledge (6)

According to English law(7), declarations made by deceased relatives are admissible if made ante litem motam to prove matters of pedigree only They are relevant only in cases in which the pedigree to which they relate is in issue but not to cases in which it is only relevant to the issue (8) Thus where the question was whether A, sued for the price of horses, and pleading infancy, was on a given day an infant or not, the fact that his father stated in an affidavit in a Chancery suit to which the plaintiff was not a party that A was born on a certain day, was held to be irrelevant (9) The terms " matters of pedigree " or "genealogical purpose " are confined primarily to issues involving family succession (testate or intestate), relationship and legitimacy , and secondly, to those particular incidents of family history " which are immediately connected with, and required for the proof of, such issues—e g , the birth, marriage, and [illegible] viduals (10) The principle upon which such evidence has been admitted has,

The statements are admissible to prove the facts contained therein on any issue.

(1) Shyamanand Das v Rama Kanta, 32 C 6 (1904), Mohansing v Dalpatsing, 46 B, 753

(2) v post, p 341

(3) Ramnarain Kallia v Monee Bibee, 9 C, 613 (1883), Surjan Singh v Sardar Singh, 27 I A, 183 (1900) s c, 5 C W N, 49, 2 Bom L R, 942

(4) Ib

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 641

(6) Collier v Baron, 2 N L R, 34, as to proof of date of birth after lapse of years, see Nawab Shah Ara Begam v Nanbi Begum, P C (1906), 11 C W N, 130

(7) Taylor, Ev, §§ 635—657, Roscoe, N P Ev, 44—48, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 291—295, Steph Dig, 31, Best, Ev, § 498, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 349—357, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 211—223

(8) Steph Dig, Art 31, Powell, Ev, 202, when they are not required for some genealogical purpose, they will be rejected, see next case

(9) Haines v Guthrie, L R, 13 Q B. D, 818 (1881), this case (in which all the authorities on this point are fully considered) is not law in India, see note 2, p 338

(10) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 291—citing Taylor, Ev, §§ 643-646, Steph Dig, Art. 31; Hubback's Ev of Succession, 204, 468, 648—650, citing Hood v Lady Beauchamp, 8 Sim, 26, Shields v Boucher, 1 D G & S, 40, Rishton v Nesbitt, 2 M & R., 554, Lovat Peerage, 10 Ap Cas, 763, see also Powell, Ev 201, Taylor, Ev, § 642, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 211, it was at one time a moot point in English law whether evidence as to date and place of birth was admissible even in "pedigree cases," but the weight of opinion was in favour of its admissibility (Taylor Ev, § 642) and this view has been adopted

declared relevant by the fifth clause is a statement relating to the existence of any relationship between persons living or dead, as to whose relationship the person making the statement had special means of knowledge, such as the statement of deceased relatives, servants, and dependants of the family.(1) The statement mentioned in the sixth clause is a statement relating to the existence of relationship between deceased persons only. This last clause does not embrace the case of a statement of relationship between a deceased person and a living person (2) It does not deal with the question by whom the statement is to be made: nor does it require that it should have been made by a person who had special means of knowledge, possibly on the ground that it is improbable that any person would insert in a solemn deed, will, etc., any matter the truth of which he did not know or had not satisfactorily ascertained(3): but states that it must be contained in the documents of other material things therein mentioned. It has been recently held that a family pedigree kept by the family chronicler prepared by him from time to time from information supplied by members of the family was admissible both under the second clause as also under this clause as having been kept by a person engaged by the members of the family to keep a record of the family events.(4)

Besides the documents and other material things mentioned in the sixth clause family bibles, coffin-plates, mural tablets, hatchments, rings, armorial bearings and the like, amongst Christians, and horoscopes among Hindus, are examples of other documents and things on which such statements are usually made.(5). It has been held that a horoscope is inadmissible unless its correctness is vouched either by its writer or by a person with special means of knowledge.(6) As to statements contained in wills(7) and deeds(8) see the cases noted below. Inscriptions on tombstones, mural inscriptions and the like may be proved by any secondary evidence.(9) The statement in a

(1) Garurudhwaja Prasad v Saparandhwaja Pershad, 27 I A., 238, 251 (1900), s c, 23 A, 37, 51, Oriental Life Assurance Co. v Narasimha Chari, 25 M., 183, 207, 209, in which the statements of the deceased himself, his sister and others were tendered or admitted, as to the report of a punchayet as evidence of pedigree, see Ajabsing v. Nanabhau, 26 I A, 48 (1898), 25 B, 1; 3 C W N, 130

(2) Ramnarain Kallia v Monee Bibee, 9 C, 613, 614 (1883)

(3) Field, Ev., 189, 190, ib, 6th Ed, 139—140

(4) Mohansing Umed Ramol v Dalpatsing Kanbaji, 24 Bom L. R, 289 (1922)

(5) See generally Taylor, Ev, §§ 650—657

(6) Krishnamacharier v Kishnamacharier, 38 M, 166 (1915) Horoscopes have been held inadmissible in two earlier cases Ramnarain Kallia v Monee Bibee, 9 C., 613 (1883) The chief ground on which the evidence was rejected in this case was that it was not shown that the attendance of the writer was not procurable, Satis Chunder v. Mohendro Lal, 17 C, 849 (1893), [quære as to this case, assuming the horoscope to have been tendered, as stated, under cl (6), that clause does not require that the maker of the statement should have had any special means of knowledge, and if tendered under cl. (5), Ramnarain Kallia v. Monee Bibee which this case purported to follow, does not seem in point Further, upon the question whether the evidence is limited to cases where the question in issue is one of relationship v. post, and whether the words "relates to the existence of relationship" cover statement as to the commencement of relationship in point of time, v. post] A distinction is to be observed between horoscopes tendered under s. 32, cl. (6), and under s. 32, cl (5) as the statements of persons having special means of knowledge, and as being an admission under ss 17, 18. See as to their use as admissions, Raja Goundan v Raja Goundan, 17 M., 134 (1893). See Rottonbhai v Chabildas, 13 B, 7 (1888)

(7) Nil Monee v Mussummt Zuheerunnissa, 8 W. R., 371 (1867): [where the incidental mention of a child's age in the recital of a will was held to be no proof of the exact age of such child, the Report does not show whether the child was dead at the time the evidence was offered. If dead, the case is no longer law. Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 142], Chamanbu v Mullanchand, 20 B, 562 (1895).

(8) Tima v. Daramma, 10 M, 362 (1887), [in which it was ruled that a statement as to relationship in a deed held to be invalid was admissible in evidence]

(9) S 65, cl. (d), post; see definition of "document" in s. 3, ante.

genealogical table filed by a member of a family who is dead, regarding the descendants of another member of the family, before any question arose as to the latter as also a record of family events are relevant under this clause (1) Statements, whether they are tendered under the fifth clause or the sixth clause, must, in order to be relevant, have been made ante litem motam(2); and for the admissibility of statements under either of these clauses it must be shown that the attendance of the person who made the statement is not procurable.(3) So where a plaintiff tendered in evidence a horoscope under the sixth clause, but was unable to say who wrote it, and therefore unable to say whether the writer was dead, or could not be found, etc., the document was on this, as on other grounds, held to be inadmissible.(4) It will in no way affect the admissibility of this class of evidence that witnesses might have been called to prove the very facts to which it relates (5) A register of baptism, while evidence of that fact and of the date of it, furnishes, even if it states the date of a person's birth, no proof of the age of that person further than that at the date of such ceremony the person referred to was already born. Evidence regarding the date of a man's birth has been held under certain circumstances to be admissible under the fifth clause; but in the case of an entry in the register in question there is nothing to show by whom the statement entered was made, much less that the person making the statement had any special means of knowledge (6)

The statements are admissible to prove the facts contained therein on any issue

According to English law(7), declarations made by deceased relatives are admissible if made ante litem motam to prove matters of pedigree only. They are relevant only in cases in which the pedigree to which they relate is in issue but not to cases in which it is only relevant to the issue (8) Thus where the question was whether A, sued for the price of horses, and pleading infancy, was on a given day an infant or not, the fact that his father stated in an affidavit in a Chancery suit to which the plaintiff was not a party that A was born on a certain day, was held to be irrelevant (9) The terms "matters of pedigree" or "genealogical purpose" are confined primarily to issues involving family succession (testate or intestate), relationship and legitimacy, and secondly, to those particular incidents of family history "which are immediately connected with, and required for the proof of, such issues—e g., the birth, marriage, and death of members of the family, with the respective dates and places of those events, age, celibacy, issue or failure of issue, as well, probably, as occupation, residence, and similar incidents of domestic history necessary to identify individuals (10) The principle upon which such evidence has been admitted has,

(1) Shyamanand Das v Rama Kanta, 32 C, 6 (1904), Mohansing v Dalpatsing, 46 B, 753

(2) v. post, p 341

(3) Ramnarain Kallia v Monee Bibee, 9 C, 613 (1883), Surjan Singh v. Sardar Singh, 27 I A, 183 (1900), s c, 5 C W N, 49, 2 Bom L R, 942

(4) Ib

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 641

(6) Collier v Baron, 2 N L R, 34, as to proof of date of birth after lapse of years, see Nawab Shah Ara Begam v Nanbi Begum, P C (1906), 11 C W N, 130

(7) Taylor, Ev, §§ 635—657, Roscoe, N. P Ev, 44—48, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 291—295, Steph Dig, 31, Best, Ev, § 498, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 349—357; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 211—223

(8) Steph Dig, Art 31, Powell, Ev, 202, when they are not required for some genealogical purpose, they will be rejected, see next case

(9) Haines v Guthrie, L R, 13 Q B D, 818 (1881), this case (in which all the authorities on this point are fully considered) is not law in India, see note 2, p 338

(10) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 291—citing Taylor, Ev, §§ 643-646, Steph Dig, Art. 31, Hubback's Ev. of Succession, 204, 468, 648—650, citing Hood v Lady Beauchamp, 8 Sim, 26, Shields v Boucher, 1 D G & S, 40, Rishton v Nesbitt, 2 M. & R, 554, Lovat Peerage, 10 Ap Cas, 763, see also Powell, Ev, 201, Taylor, Ev, § 642, Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 211, it was at one time a moot point in English law whether evidence as to date and place of birth was admissible even in "pedigree cases," but the weight of opinion was in favour of its admissibility (Taylor Ev, § 642), and this view has been adopted

as regards the date of birth, been stated to be that the time of one's birth relates to the commencement of one's relationship by blood, and a statement therefore, of one's age, made by a deceased person having special means of knowledge, relates to the existence of such relationship within the meaning of the fifth clause of this section.(1)

But under the Act the declarations are admissible on any issue provided they relate to a fact relevant to the case.(2) Thus where in a case one of the questions was as to whether the plaintiff was a minor when he signed a certain deed, the plaint in a former suit, verified by a deceased member of the family, was held to be admissible under the fifth clause to prove the order in which certain persons were born and their ages.(3) "It was contended on the part of the plaintiff, on the authority of the English cases, that, as the question at issue in this case did not relate to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage, or adoption, the section did not apply, and the statements were excluded by the ordinary rules of evidence. I think that on this point the law in India under the Evidence Act is different to the law of England, and that the effect of the section is to make a statement made by such a person, relating to the existence of such relationship, admissible to prove the facts contained in the statement on any issue, and that the plaint was admissible here to prove the order in which the sons of S were born and their ages, and when admitted, it to my mind satisfactorily proves that the defendant was the son who was born on the 6th of June, 1868."(4) So also a statement under this clause was admitted to prove the date of the plaintiff's birth for the purpose of the decision of a question of Limitation.(5) Not only are such declarations admissible in proof of relationship upon any issue, whether of pedigree or not, but they are also admissible in cases other than those of pedigree to prove the commencement of the relationship in point of time or the date of the birth of the person in question.(6) It would appear according to English law that hearsay evidence must be confined to such facts as are immediately connected with the question of pedigree, and that incidents which, although inferentially tending to prove are not immediately connected with, the question of pedigree, will be rejected.(7)

Persons from whom declarations are receivable

In England such declarations are only admissible when made by deceased relatives by blood or marriage, and further the declarants must be legitimately related(8) But under the Act the statement may be made by any person, by the framers of the Act [s 32, illusts (1), (m); Bepin Behary v Sreedam Chunder, 13 C., 42 (1886); Ram Chandra v. Jogeswar Narain, 20 C, 758 (1893)]; Oriental Life Assurance Co, Ld v. Narasimha Chari, 25 M, 183, 209, 210 (1901); the words "relates to the existence of relationship" being wide enough to cover statements as to the commencement of relationship in point of time and as to the locality when it commenced or existed. See Field, Ev, 191. As to the admissibility of the evidence in cases other than "pedigree cases," v. post.

---

(1) Oriental Life Assurance Co, Ld. v Narasimha Chari, 25 M., 183, 209, 210 (1901). See also Jagatpal Singh v. Jageshar Baksh, 25 A, 143, 152 (1902), in which the question was whether one P. S. from whom the respondents descended was born before Z. S. from whom the appellants had descended

(2) Dhan Mull v Ram Chunder, 24 C., 265 (1890); s c, 1 C W. N, 270, cited in Ram Chundra v. Jogeswar Narain, 20 C, 758, 760 [overruling Bepin Behary v. Sreedam Chunder, 13 C, 42 (1886)], followed in Ram Chandra v Jogeswar Narain, 20 C, 758 (1893).

(3) Dhan Mull v. Ram Chunder, supra.

(4) Ib; per Petheram, C. J.

(5) Ram Chundra v. Jogeswar Narain, supra

(6) Ib., Dhan Mull v. Ram Chunder, supra

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 644.

(8) Taylor, Ev., §§ 635—638; Doe v. Barton, 2 M. & R., 28; see Doe v. Davies, 10 Q. B, 314. As to declarations by a deceased person as to his own illegitimacy, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 292, and cases there cited, and Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 140, 141, under the Act such a declaration would be relevant as against strangers; ib, s 47 of the repealed Act II of 1855 rescinded the English rule on this subject and admitted the declarations not only of illegitimate members of the family, but also of persons who, though not related by blood or marriage, were yet intimately provided only that such person had special means of knowledge of the relationship to which the statement relates. Proof of this special means of knowledge is a pre-requisite to the admission of the evidence, and this proof must be given by

as to who were her heirs, and made at a time when no controversy on the subject was in contemplation, and letters written by her, in reply to enquiries statements, was held to be of such heirs, and under the

A statement relating to the existence of any relationship contained in a document signed by several persons, some only of whom are dead, is admissible in evidence under the fifth clause of this section (6) In a recent case it was held by the Privy Council that a statement on a point of relationship which was made with special means of knowledge five years ante litem motam in a will executed by a Hindu widow since deceased and was corroborated by other relatives against their interest and was not contradicted by reliable evidence, was conclusive where other evidence conflicted (7) And in another case where a material issue was whether the plaintiffs were sons of a paternal uncle of a deceased lady, it was held by the Allahabad High Court that a plaint in a suit filed by her ante litem motam in which she so described them was admissible (8)

According to English law, it is not necessary that the declarant should have had personal knowledge of the facts stated, it is sufficent if his information purported to have been derived from other relatives, or from general family repute, or even simply from "what he has heard," provided such "hearsay upon hearsay" as it has been called, does not directly appear to have been derived from strangers (9) But if the declarant's information purport to have been derived either wholly or in part from incompetent sources, the declarations so founded will be excluded (10) In other words, this evidence cannot be successfully objected to on the ground that it is "hearsay on hearsay," provided that all the statements come from persons whose declarations on the subject are admissible (11) "If this were not so, the main object of relaxing the Personal Knowledge.

acquainted with the members and state of the family The latter portion of this section would have included servants, friends, and neighbours who are excluded (Johnson v Lawson, 2 Bing, 86) under English law The rule laid down by this Act is still more general in its terms than the Act of 1855, as it renders admissible not merely the statements of persons deceased, but also of persons whose evidence is not procurable for other reasons As to a person claiming as illegitimate son establishing his alleged paternity, see Gopalasami v Arunachellam, 27 M, 32, 34, 35 (1903)

(1) S 104, post, see Taylor, Ev, § 640, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 213—214

(2) Sangram Singh v Rajan Bibi, 12 C, 219, 222 (1885), 12 I A, 183, see also Bejai Bahadur v Bhupindar Bahadur, 17 A, 456 (1895).

(3) Sham Lall v. Radha Bibee, 4 C. L R, 173 (1879).

(4) Sangram Singh v Rajan Bibi, supra

(5) Baquar Ali v Anjuman Ara 25 A, 236 (1903), s c, 7 C W N, 465

(6) Chandra Nath v Nilmadhab Bhuttacharjee, 26 C, 236, s c, 3 C W. N, 88 (1898)

(7) Kedar Nath v Mathu Mal, P C, 40 C, 555 (1913)

(8) Mauladad Khan v Abdul Sathar, 39 A, 426 (1917)

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 639, Shedden v Attorney-General, 30 L J P & M, 217, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 293 Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 218 See Mohansing Umed Ramol v Dalpatsing Kanvaji, 24 Bom L. R, 289 (1922)

(10) Davies v Lowndes, 6 M & G, 525

(11) Thus the declarations of a deceased widow respecting a statement which her husband had made to her as to who his

as regards the date of birth, been stated to be that the time of one's birth relates to the commencement of one's relationship by blood, and a statement therefore, of one's age, made by a deceased person having special means of knowledge, relates to the existence of such relationship within the meaning of the fifth clause of this section.(1)

But under the Act the declarations are admissible on any issue provided they relate to a fact relevant to the case (2) Thus where in a case one of the questions was as to whether the plaintiff was a minor when he signed a certain deed, the plaint in a former suit, verified by a deceased member of the family, was held to be admissible under the fifth clause to prove the order in which certain persons were born and their ages.(3) "It was contended on the part of the plaintiff, on the authority of the English cases, that, as the question at issue in this case did not relate to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage, or adoption, the section did not apply, and the statements were excluded by the ordinary rules of evidence. I think that on this point the law in India under the Evidence Act is different to the law of England, and that the effect of the section is to make a statement made by such a person, relating to the existence of such relationship, admissible to prove the facts contained in the statement on any issue, and that the plaint was admissible here to prove the order in which the sons of S were born and their ages, and when admitted, it to my mind satisfactorily proves that the defendant was the son who was born on the 6th of June, 1868."(4) So also a statement under this clause was admitted to prove the date of the plaintiff's birth for the purpose of the decision of a question of Limitation (5) Not only are such declarations admissible in proof of relationship upon any issue, whether of pedigree or not, but they are also admissible in cases other than those of pedigree to prove the commencement of the relationship in point of time or the date of the birth of the person in question (6) It would appear according to English law that hearsay evidence must be confined to such facts as are immediately connected with the question of pedigree, and that incidents which, although inferentially tending to prove are not immediately connected with, the question of pedigree, will be rejected.(7)

Persons from whom declarations are receivable

In England such declarations are only admissible when made by deceased relatives by blood or marriage, and further the declarants must be legitimately related(8) But under the Act the statement may be made by any person, by the framers of the Act [s 32, illusts (1), (m); Bepin Behary v Sreedam Chunder, 13 C, 42 (1886); Ram Chandra v. Jogeswar Narain, 20 C, 758 (1893)]; Oriental Life Assurance Co, Ld. v Narasimha Chari, 25 M, 183, 209, 210 (1901); the words "relates to the existence of relationship" being wide enough to cover statements as to the commencement of relationship in point of time and as to the locality when it commenced or existed. See Field, Ev, 191. As to the admissibility of the evidence in cases other than "pedigree cases," v post

(1) Oriental Life Assurance Co, Ld v. Narasimha Chari, 25 M., 183, 209, 210 (1901) See also Jagatpal Singh v. Jageshar Baksh, 25 A, 143, 152 (1902), in which the question was whether one P. S. from whom the respondents descended was born before Z. S. from whom the appellants had descended.

(2) Dhan Mull v. Ram Chunder, 24 C., 265 (1890); s. c, 1 C W. N, 270, cited in Ram Chundra v. Jogeswar Narain, 20 C., 758, 760 [overruling Bepin Behary v. Sreedam Chunder, 13 C., 42 (1886)], followed in Ram Chandra v Jogeswar Narain, 20 C., 758 (1893).

(3) Dhan Mull v. Ram Chunder, supra.

(4) Ib; per Petheram, C. J.

(5) Ram Chundra v. Jogeswar Narain, supra

(6) Ib.; Dhan Mull v. Ram Chunder, supra

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 644.

(8) Taylor, Ev, §§ 635—638; Doe v. Barton, 2 M. & R., 28; see Doe v. Davies, 10 Q. B, 314. As to declarations by a deceased person as to his own illegitimacy, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 292, and cases there cited, and Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 140, 141, under the Act such a declaration would be relevant as against strangers; ib., s 47 of the repealed Act II of 1855 rescinded the English rule on this subject and admitted the declarations not only of illegitimate members of the family, but also of persons who, though not related by blood or marriage, were yet intimately provided only that such person had special means of knowledge of the relationship to which the statement relates. Proof of this special means of knowledge is a pre-requisite to the admission of the evidence, and this proof must be given by [illegible]

[illegible]

as to who were her heirs, and made at a time when no controversy on the subject was in contemplation, and letters written by her, in reply to enquiries [illegible] statements, was held to be [illegible] of such heirs, and under the [illegible] A statement relating to the existence of any relationship contained in a document signed by several persons some only of whom are dead, is admissible in evidence under the fifth clause of this section (6) In a recent case it was held by the Privy Council that a statement on a point of relationship which was made with special means of knowledge five years ante litem motam in a will executed by a Hindu widow since deceased and was corroborated by other relatives against their interest and was not contradicted by reliable evidence, was conclusive where other evidence conflicted [illegible] the plaintiffs were [illegible] Allahabad High C[illegible] which she so described them was admissible.(8)

According to English law, it is not necessary that the declarant should have had personal knowledge of the facts stated; it is sufficent if his information purported to have been derived from other relatives, or from general family repute, or even simply from "what he has heard," provided such "hearsay upon hearsay" as it has been called, does not directly appear to have been derived from strangers (9) But if the declarant's information purport to have been derived either wholly or in part from incompetent sources, the declarations so founded will be excluded (10) In other words, this evidence cannot be successfully objected to on the ground that it is "hearsay on hearsay," provided that all the statements come from persons whose declarations on the subject are admissible.(11) "If this were not so, the main object of relaxing the Personal knowledge.

acquainted with the members and state of the family The latter portion of this section would have included servants, friends, and neighbours who are excluded (Johnson v Lawson, 2 Bing, 86) under English law The rule laid down by this Act is still more general in its terms than the Act of 1855, as it renders admissible not merely the statements of persons deceased, but also of persons whose evidence is not procurable for other reasons. As to a person claiming as illegitimate son establishing his alleged paternity, see Gopalasami v Arunachellam, 27 M, 32, 34, 35 (1903)

(1) S 104, post, see Taylor, Ev, § 640, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 213—214

(2) Sangram Singh v Rajan Bibi, 12 C, 219, 222 (1885), 12 I A, 183, see also Bejai Bahadur v. Bhupindar Bahadur, 17 A, 456 (1895)

(3) Sham Lall v Radha Bibee, 4 C. L R, 173 (1879)

(4) Sangram Singh v Rajan Bibi, supra

(5) Baquar Ali v Anjuman Ara 25 A, 236 (1903), s c, 7 C W N, 465

(6) Chandra Nath v Nilmadhab Bhuttacharjee, 26 C, 236, s c, 3 C W. N., 88 (1898)

(7) Kedar Nath v Mathu Mal, P. C, 40 C, 555 (1913)

(8) Mauladad Khan v Abdul Sathar, 39 A, 426 (1917)

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 639; Shedden v. Attorney-General, 30 L. J P. & M, 217; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 293; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 218 See Mohansing Umed Ramol v Dalpatsing Kanvaji, 24 Bom. L. R, 289 (1922).

(10) Davies v Lowndes, 6 M. & G, 525

(11) Thus the declarations of a deceased widow respecting a statement which her husband had made to her as to who his ordinary rules of evidence would be frustrated, since it seldom happens that the declarations of deceased relatives embrace matters within their own personal knowledge."(1) A similar rule will be followed in cases under the Act: provided all the statements come from persons whose declarations on the subject are admissible (that is, persons who are shewn to have had special means of knowledge) the evidence will not be rejected merely on the ground that the declarant had no personal knowledge of the facts stated. But where on a question of relationship the statements of certain witnesses who were supposed to be speaking from information derived from others were sought to be made admissible, but these witnesses did not state the persons from whom they derived that information nor at what period of time they derived it, the evidence was rejected.(2) In other words, where the witness is speaking from hearsay he must show that his knowledge comes from a person whose statements are admissible. The statement, however, which is relied on, must be shown to be the statement of a person whose statement is admissible under this section So in the undermentioned case the alleged author of a document R. G. S. had upon him for the purposes of that suit. The Privy Council held that the document was inadmissible, observing as follows :—" His (G's) relation to the docu-

c

fi t

e and person

table

have been entirely the work of his pleader."(3) But where a kursinama was produced purporting to have been made by an ancestress " by the pen of gomasta " and alleged to have been filed by her in a suit to establish the same fact in 1804, the Privy Council held that it was admissible.(4) According to English law in the case of marriage, repute and conduct need not be confined to the family, general reputation among, and treatment by, friends and neighbours being receivable, except in certain criminal cases when stricter proof is required, as evidence of marriage.(5) But the testimony must be general; if it is based merely on the statements of some particular person, it ceases to be admissible as general reputation, and can only be tendered on a question of pedigree, and in England, as the statement of a deceased relation(6) or in India as the statement of a . motam (7)

The groun eivable are partly the and partly because " favourably situated for knowing, raises a reasonable presumption that the facts concurred cousins were, have been received; see Taylor, Ev., § 639.

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 639, and cases there cited

(2) Musst. Shafiqunnissa v Shaban Ali, 9 C W. N., 105 (1904), s c, 16 A., 581

(3) Jagatpal Singh v. Jageshar Singh, 25 A., 43 (1902); s. c, 7 C. W. N., 209.

(4) Shahzadi Begam v. Secretary of State for India, P. C. (1907), 34 C., 1059, L R., 4 I. A., 194.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 578; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 362, 107, Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 206—209; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 144, as to conduct, see note to s 50, post.

(6) Shedden v. Patrick, 30 L. J. P. M. & A, 217, 231, 232. "There is no doubt that general reputation of a marriage may be given valeat quantum A person living in a particular neighbourhood—say in New York—may be called to say that the reputation in New York was that A and B were man and wife; but you cannot ask what any particular individual, not being a member of the family, said on the subject; that is getting into a different class of evidence," ib, per Sir C Cresswell: see also Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 206—209.

(7) S. 32, cl. (5), ante; as to opinion expressed by conduct, see s. 50, post.

in are true (1) While, however, provision has been made by the Act in s. 50 for the reception in evidence of conduct as proof of relationship, there appears to be none for the admission of the general reputation above-mentioned. But in a later case it has been held by the Privy Council that, in the absence of direct proof, consent to a marriage in Burmah may be inferred from the conduct of the parties as established by general reputation.(2)

Contemporaneousness.

The declarations need not refer to contemporaneous events; thus statements as to matters o for such a restriction " let in, by preventing it whose declaration is to Particular facts.

It has been already observed that in matter of public or general interest declarations as to particular facts are excluded. But the same rule does not apply in cases of pedigree. "In cases of general right which depend upon immemorial usage, living witnesses can only speak of their own knowledge to what passed in their own time; and to supply the deficiency, the law receives the declarations of persons who are dead. There, however, the witness is only allowed to speak to what he has heard the dead man say respecting the reputation of the right of way, or of common, or the like. A declaration, with regard to a particular fact, which would support or negative the right, is inadmissible. In matters of pedigree, it being impossible to prove by living witnesses the relationship of past generations, the declarations of deceased members of the family are admitted; but here, as the reputation must proceed on particular facts such as marriages, births, and the like, from the necessity of the thing, the hearsay of the family as to these particular facts is not excluded. General and the family transactions is thus dropped in conversa-rue "(5)

Lis mota.

be relevant because they were made for t from arising (7) Further, the fifth cla statements made by interested parties ir pedigrees set up by their opponents (8) that a pedigree (not an ancient family record handed down from generation to generation and added to as a member of the family died or was born, but a document drawn up on a particular occasion for a specific purpose by a member of the family) was to be treated as a mere declaration made by the person who made or adopted it. It was also held in the same case that to make a statement inadmissible as post litem motam the same thing must be in controversy before and after such statement is made, and that this pedigree was admissible

(1) Taylor, Ev, §§ 577, 578, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 362

(2) Mi Me v Mi Mshwe Ma, J C (1912), 39 I A, 57, 39 C, 392

(3) Monckton v Attorney-General, 2 R & Myl, 157, Davies v Lowndes, 6 M & G, 525, Phipson Ev (5th Ed, 293) citing Hubb, 659, Taylor, Ev, § 639

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 639, quoting Lord Brougham

(5) Berkeley Peerage Case, 4 Camp, 415 416, per Sir James Mansfield

(6) S 32, cls (5) and (6), v ante, p 337 In Bahadur Singh v Mohar Singh, 24 A, 94, 107 (1901), where it was objected that the statements were inadmissible as having been made post litem, the Privy Council held that the heirship of the then claimant was not really in dispute at that time, and that the construction of the Act contended for would practically exclude any attainable evidence in that case

(7) Steph Dig, Art. 31, Berkeley Peerage Case 4 Camp, 401—417; and see Lovat Peerage Case, L R, 10 Ap Ca., 797 Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 217

(8) Naraini Kuar v Chandi Din, 9 A., 467 (1886)

as a declaration made and adopted by a deceased member of the family, and touching the family reputation, on the subject of its descent, and not shown to be post litem motam.(1) In a recent case where an ancient document purporting to be a family pedigree was produced by a person who stated that he had received it from his grandfather but there was no evidence to show who had prepared it, the document was held admissible under this section and it was said that this section does not make it necessary to show by whom such statements were made(2)

SEVENTH CLAUSE.

Statements in documents relating to transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed and the like

Statements contained in any deed, will, or other document which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in cl. (a) of the thirteenth section, that is, any transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed modified, recognized, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence, may be proved under this clause. The thirteenth section, which should be read together with the present clause, relates to both public and private rights and customs (3) The present clause, therefore, relates to private, as well as public rights and customs.(4) According to English law, declarations, written or verbal, made by deceased [illegible] with verbal and written, and the latter with written, statements relating to public or general rights and customs in general accordance with the English law upon the same subject so far as the latter extends. The first-mentioned clause admits the verbal or written statement giving the opinion of some particular persons to the existence of such rights. But hearsay as to matters of general interest is not confined to such declarations. It may be proved under this clause by recitals and descriptions of the public or general right, in wills deeds, leases, maps, surveys, assessments, and the like(6), however recent such documents may be.(7) In a suit by a zemindar to recover certain forest tracts from Government, the plaintiff relied on certain accounts, called ayakut accounts, as furnishing proof of the inclusion of the said tracts within the limits of his zamindary: Held, that inasmuch as they were from time to time prepared for administrative purposes by village-officers, and were produced from proper custody and otherwise sufficiently proved to be genuine, they were admissible as evidence of reputation.(8)

---

(1) Kalka Prasad v. Mathura Prasad, P C (1908), 30 A, 510

(2) Jehangir v. Sheoraj Singh, 37 A, 600 (1915).

(3) v. ante, s. 13.

(4) See Hurronath Mullick v Nittanund Mullick, 10 B. L. R., 263 (1872), in which the custom was a family custom.

(5) v ante, cl. (4) and post

(6) S. 32, cl. (7); Norton, Ev, 190; see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 279—290; Roscoe, N. P Ev, 48—51; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 237—249; Best, Ev., § 497; Steph. Dig, Art. 30; Taylor, Ev., §§ 607—634, Brett v. Beales, M & M., 416; Curzon v Lomax, 5 Esp., 60; Plaxton v. Dare, 10 B & C., 17; Doe v. Wittcomb, 4 H L. C., 425; Coombs v. Goether, M. & M., 398; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 214; Private Acts —Curzon v Lomax, supra; Carnarvon v Villebois, 13 M. & W., 313; Beaufort v. Smith, 4 Ex., 450; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 188; Manor books and presentments:—Phipson. Ev., 5th Ed., 282—Private Maps —R. v. Milton, 1 C. & K., 58; Hammond v. Bradstreet, 10 Ex, 390; Pipe v Fulcher, 28 L. J., Q. B, 12; Daniel v Wilkin, 7 Ex., 429; Ancient Public Surveys —Freeman v. Reed, 4 B. & S, 174; Smith v. Brownlow, L. R., 9 Eq, 241; Daniel v Wilkin, supra, Modern public surveys.—Bidder v. Bridges, 34 W. R, (Eng), 514, 54 L. T, 529, affirmed, W. N, 1886, p 148 Ancient public assessments —Plaxton v. Dare, supra; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 282, Cooke v. Banks, 2 C & P, 478; Ely v. Caldecott, 7 Bing, 433.

(7) Norton, Ev, 192; the words of the clause are "in any deed, will, etc.;" but v. post, as to judgments, orders and decrees which are admissible in matters of public or general interest only, see s. 42, post

(8) Sivasubramanya v. Secretary of State, 9 M, 285 (1884).

But further, this section deals with rights and customs generally, private cases where a controversy refers to a time so remote that it is unreasonable to expect a higher species of evidence. It is, therefore, a rule that ancient documents (i.e., documents more than 30 years old) purporting to be a part of the transactions to which they relate, and not a mere narrative of them, are receivable in evidence that those transactions actually occurred, provided they be produced from proper custody.(1)

Evidence of ancient possession.

But to prove or disprove a right or custom it is not enough to adduce evidence of a transaction in which, or in the course of which the right or custom was asserted or denied, though the transaction will be relevant under section 13, cl. (a) if it be one by which the right or custom was asserted or denied. When the question was whether a tenant held lands under the nakdi or bhaoli systems of rent, and the Court based its decision on a statement contained in a hebanama executed by the deceased grandfather of the tenant, it was held that the hebanama was not admissible under this clause read with section 13, cl. (a).(2)

The law upon the subject has been thus summarised :—" Ancient documents by which any right of property purports to have been exercised (e.g., leases, licenses, and grants) are admissible, even in favour of the grantor or his successors, in proof of ancient possession. The grounds of admission are two-fold,—necessity, ancient possession being incapable of direct proof by witnesses; and the fact that such documents are themselves acts of ownership, real transactions between man and man, only intelligible upon the footing of title, or at least of a bonâ fide belief in title, since in the ordinary course of things men do not execute such documents without acting upon them.(3) (a) The documents should purport to constitute the transactions which they effect; mere prior directions to do the acts, or subsequent narratives of them, being inadmis-admissions (6) (b) Deeds of this nature must, to ensure genuineness, be, like other ancient documents, produced from proper custody; and should, to be of any weight, be corroborated by proof within living memory of payments made, or enjoyment had, in pursuance of them. The absence of evidence of modern enjoyment, however, goes merely to weight and not to admissibility. (c) Ancient documents, admissible as acts of ownership, may be tendered on questions either of public or private right; and must be distinguished from those ancient documents which are received as evidence of reputation, which latter may consist of bare assertions, or recitals, of the right, but are confined to questions of public and general interest.

"Modern possession being susceptible of proof by witnesses cannot be established by modern leases, etc., even though supported by evidence of payments made thereunder."(7)

---

(1) Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 285—288.

(2) Banshi Singh v. Mir Amir Ali (1907), 11 C. W. N., 703.

(3) Malcolmson v. O'Dea, 10 H. L. C., 593; Bristow v. Cormican, 3 Ap. Cas., 641; see also The Lord Advocate v. Lord Lovat, 5 App., 273, cited, ante. See also s. 13, ante, commentary to same passim, and as to proof of ancient documents, s. 90, post.

(4) Ib.

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 427.

(6) Bristow v. Cormican, supra, 662.

(7) Bristow v. Cormican, supra, 668, per Lord Blackburn; Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 3 Doug., 189; the passage in quotation marks is from Phipson, Ev., 3rd Ed., 91; ib., 5th Ed., 97, citing Taylor, Ev., §§ 658—667; Roscoe, N. P., Ev., 53, 54; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 285—288; Wharton, Ev. §§ 194—199.

In the first place, it is to be observed, with reference to the law prevailing in India that while the fourth clause admits parol evidence of reputation in proof of public or general rights and customs, the present clause does not provide for the admissibility of parol evidence of reputation in the cases to which it applies (1) The Act, therefore (being in this respect in accord with English law), does not admit parol evidence of reputation in proof of private rights and customs. It, however, declares that reputation to be relevant in proof both of public and private rights (in respect of such last-mentioned rights departing from the English rule) which consists of statements contained in any deed, will or other document relating to any transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed, modified, recognized, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence. In this respect it appears to deal with both public and private rights upon the same footing. Further, the present section includes any deed, will or other document, so that the rule as to ancient documents receivable either as evidence of reputation or as acts of ownership is in terms extended and enlarged: for under this clause a statement in any relevant document, though not more than thirty years old, and however recent, is admissible.(2) In practice, however, the rule under the Act in this last-mentioned respect must remain much the same as that under English law since, in the case of modern documents, direct proof by witnesses will in most cases be procurable, and the conditions under which this form of hearsay testimony is alone admissible will not be found to exist. Moreover, even where such conditions exist, recent documents may often, for various causes, be of little weight.(3)

EIGHTH CLAUSE.

Statements made by a number of persons, and expressing feelings or impressions.

Statements made by a number of persons, and expressing feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question are relevant, and may be proved by the testimony of persons, other than those who made them, when such persons are dead, or cannot be found, or have become incapable of giving evidence, or when their attendance cannot be procured, without an amount of delay or expense, which, under the circumstances of the case, appears to the Court unreasonable.(4) Some or all of these conditions will necessarily be found to occur, at any rate in by far the greater number of cases, when relevant evidence of this character is tendered. The meaning of this clause has been said to be "that [illegible] statem[illegible] mind a[illegible] and is [illegible] with b[illegible] feelings or impressions, not of an individual but an aggregate of individuals, as the exclamations of a crowd; and the evidence is receivable on account of the difficulty or impossibility of procuring the attendance of all the individuals who composed such crowd or aggregate of persons.(6) So to prove that a caricature destroyed before the trial was meant to represent two of the relations of the defendant, exclamations of recognition by spectators in a public

(1) The statement made relevant by cl. (7) must be written, and the word 'verbal' at the commencement of this section has no application to this clause.

(2) Norton, Ev., 192; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 143—144; in Hurronath Mullick v. Nittanund Mullick, 10 B L R., 263 (1872), the document in question was executed only 18 months before suit was brought. As to the admissibility of reports accompanying orders as hearsay evidence of reputed possession, see Dinomoni Choudhurani v. Brojo Mohini, 29 C., 198 (1901).

(3) Hurronath Mullick v. Nittanund Mullick, supra.

(4) S 3, cl. (8), illust. (n); Field, Ev., 6th Ed , 144.

(5) R. v. Ram Dutt, 23 W. R , Cr , 35, 38 (1874), per Jackson, J.

(6) Norton, Ev , 193; Field, Ev , 6th Ed., 144; Taylor, Ev., §§ 576, 779

picture-gallery, where the caricature was exhibited, were held to be admissible (1) And to prove that a libel referred to the plaintiff, and the consequences which had necessarily resulted to him from its publication, evidence that he was publicly jeered at in consequence of the libel was held to be admissible (2) And it was held that, on a prosecution for conspiring to procure large meetings to assemble for the purpose of inspiring terror in the community, a witness might be called to prove that several persons, who were not examined at the trial had complained to him that they were alarmed at these meetings and had requested him to send for military assistance.(3) But the section has no application to the case of a Police officer, who goes round and collects a great number of statements from persons in different places, nor can he be permitted to give the result of these statements as evidence.(4)

Relevancy of certain evidence for proving, in subsequent proceeding, the truth of facts therein stated

33. Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding, or before any person authorized by law to take it, is relevant for the purpose of proving, in a subsequent judicial proceeding or in a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, the truth of the facts which it states, when the witness is dead, or cannot be found, or is incapable of giving evidence, or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable: Provided—that the proceeding was between the same parties or their representatives in interest; that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine;

that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding.

Explanation.—A criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused within the meaning of this section.

Principle.—The general rule is that the best evidence must be given;

duced.(5) The present section states the circumstances under which secondary evidence of oral testimony may be given.(6) Under these circumstances, the production of primary evidence is either wholly (as if the witness is dead or can not be found, or is incapable, or is kept away) or partially (as in the case of delay or expense), out of the party's power In the last mentioned case there is the further ground of convenience. But the use of such secondary evidence is limited by certain provisos based on the following principles The first is

(1) Du Bost v. Beresford, 2 Camp., 511; see Norton, Ev, 192, 193; Taylor, Ev, § 579.

(2) Cook v. Ward, 4 M. & P., 99; Phipson, Ev. 3rd Ed. 339

(3) R. v. Vincent, 9 C & P., 275; Redford v Birley, 3 Stark R, 88

(4) R v Ram Dutt, 23 W R, Cr, 35 (1874)

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 391 As to English and Indian Law see Lanka Lakshmanna v. Lanka Vardhanamma, 35 M L J, 657

(6) Cf Taylor, Ev, § 464

In the first place, it is to be observed, with reference to the law prevailing in India that while the fourth clause admits parol evidence of reputation in proof of public or general rights and customs, the present clause does not provide for the admissibility of parol evidence of reputation in the cases to which it applies.(1) The Act, therefore (being in this respect in accord with English law), does not admit parol evidence of reputation in proof of private rights and customs. It, however, declares that reputation to be relevant in proof both of public and private rights (in respect of such last-mentioned rights departing from the English rule) which consists of statements contained in any deed, will or other document relating to any transaction by which any right or custom was created, claimed, modified, recognized, asserted or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence. In this respect it appears to deal with both public and private rights upon the same footing. Further, the present section includes any deed, will or other document, so that the rule as to ancient documents receivable either as evidence of reputation or as acts of ownership is in terms extended and enlarged: for under this clause a statement in any relevant document, though not more than thirty years old, and however recent, is admissible (2) In practice, however, the rule under the Act in this last-mentioned respect must remain much the same as that under English law since, in the case of modern documents, direct proof by witnesses will in most cases be procurable, and the conditions under which this form of hearsay testimony is alone admissible will not be found to exist. Moreover, even where such conditions exist, recent documents may often, for various causes, be of little weight.(3)

EIGHTH CLAUSE.

Statements made by a number of persons, and expressing feelings or impressions.

Statements made by a number of persons, and expressing feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question are relevant, and may be proved by the testimony of persons, other than those who made them, when such persons are dead, or cannot be found, or have become incapable of giving evidence, or when their attendance cannot be procured, without an amount of delay or expense, which, under the circumstances of the case, appears to the Court unreasonable.(4) [illegible]

[illegible] with by sections 14, 45—51. This clause relates to statements expressing feelings or impressions, not of an individual but an aggregate of individuals, as the exclamations of a crowd; and the evidence is receivable on account of the difficulty or impossibility of procuring the attendance of all the individuals who composed such crowd or aggregate of persons.(6) So to prove that a caricature destroyed before the trial was meant to represent two of the relations of the defendant, exclamations of recognition by spectators in a public

(1) The statement made relevant by cl. (7) must be written, and the word 'verbal' at the commencement of this section has no application to this clause.

(2) Norton, Ev., 192; Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 143—144; in Hurronath Mullick v. Nittanund Mullick, 10 B. L. R, 263 (1872), the document in question was executed only 18 months before suit was brought. As to the admissibility of reports accompanying orders as hearsay evidence of reputed possession, see Dinomoni Chowdhurani v Broja Mohini, 29 C, 198 (1901)

(3) Hurronath Mullick v. Nittanund Mullick, supra.

(4) S 3, cl. (8), illust (n); Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 144

(5) R. v. Ram Dutt, 23 W R, Cr., 35, 38 (1874), per Jackson, J.

(6) Norton, Ev., 193; Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 144; Taylor, Ev, §§ 576, 779

picture-gallery, where the caricature was exhibited, were held to be admissible. (1) And to prove that a libel referred to the plaintiff, and the consequences which had necessarily resulted to him from its publication, evidence that he was publicly jeered at in consequence of the libel was held to be admissible (2) And it was held that, on a prosecution for conspiring to procure large meetings to assemble for the purpose of inspiring terror in the community, a witness might be called to prove that several persons, who were not examined at the trial had complained to him that they were alarmed at these meetings and had requested him to send for military assistance (3) cation to the case of a Police officer, who goes ro of statements from persons in different places , the result of these statements as evidence (4)

33. Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding, or before any person authorized by law to take it, is relevant for the purpose of proving, in a subsequent judicial proceeding or in a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, the truth of the facts which it states, when the witness is dead, or cannot be found or is incapable of giving evidence, or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable : Relevancy of certain evidence for proving, in subsequent proceeding, the truth of facts therein stated.

Provided—

that the proceeding was between the same parties or their representatives in interest ;

that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine ;

that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding.

Explanation.—A criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused within the meaning of this section.

Principle.—The general rule is that the best evidence must be given ;

duced (5) The present section states the circumstances under which secondary evidence of oral testimony may be given (6) Under these circumstances, the production of primary evidence is either wholly (as if the witness is dead or can not be found, or is incapable, or is kept away) or partially (as in the case of delay or expense), out of the party's power. In the last mentioned case there is the further ground of convenience. But the use of such secondary evidence is limited by certain provisos based on the following principles. The first is

(1) Du Bost v. Beresford, 2 Camp, 511, see Norton, Ev., 192, 193, Taylor, Ev, § 579

(2) Cook v Ward 4 M & P., 99; Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed 339

(3) R v Vincent, 9 C & P., 275; Redford v Birley, 3 Stark, R, 88

(4) R v. Ram Dutt, 23 W R, Cr, 35 (1874).

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 391. As to English and Indian Law see Lanka Lakshmanna v. Lanka Vardhanamma, 35 M. L J., 657.

(6) Cf Taylor, Ev , § 464.

therefore be admitted. The Court has such a discretion in the case of the circumstances mentioned at the close of the section.(1) When the evidence of an absent witness is admitted under this section, the grounds for its admission should be stated fully and clearly, to enable the High Court to judge of the propriety of its admission.(2) Assuming that there are reasons why the Court thinks fit to dispense with the personal attendance of a witness, and circumstances are disclosed showing that his presence could not be obtained without an unreasonable amount of expense and delay, the evidence to supply such reasons and to prove such circumstances should be formally and regularly taken and recorded (3) It has been held in a recent case in the Madras High Court that unless this Court has satisfied itself that there are such reasons, consent or want of objection on the part of the accused will not (in spite of section 54 of this Act) justify the Court in admitting the evidence of an absent witness under this section (4) And it has also been recently held by the Privy Council that in the absence of proof of such circumstances, the admission in bulk in a Civil suit of the deposition recorded in a Criminal trial was a serious irregularity.(5)

Where everything turns on the evidence of an absent witness and without it the [illegible] ictly appl [illegible] nder sect [illegible] ious criminal trial in suppression of evidence given in the presence of the accused.(7)

The evidence given in the previous proceeding must have been recorded in the manner prescribed by law.(8) Subject to the other provisions of this Act, oral evidence is as receivable under this section as when it has been reduced to a formal deposition (9) When the law requires that the entire statements(10) made by witnesses, or parties called as witnesses, should be reduced into writing, no evidence can be given in proof of such statements except the written depositions made in accordance with that law or secondary evidence in cases in which such evidence is admissible (11) And though the case has not been specially provided for (except in the case mentioned in section 533, Criminal Procedure Code)(12), and it does not appear to have been so actually decided, it is submitted that statements required by law to be recorded, but which are informally recorded, are not admissible under this section. But it has been recently held, in the Madras High Court that where a deposition, though irregularly taken, had been signed by the witness and admitted by him to be correct, it could be used in evidence as against him, though it was open to him to prove that it was in fact incorrect.(13) Failure to comply with the provisions of O. XVIII, rr. 5, 6 (Civil Procedure Code), in a judicial proceeding has been held to be an informality which rendered the deposition of an accused inadmissible in evidence on a charge of giving false evidence on such deposition;

---

(1) In the matter of Pyari Lall, 4 C L R, 500 (1879)

(2) R v. Mowjan, 20 W R, Cr., 69 (1873)

(3) R. v. Mulu, 2 A., 648 (1880)

(4) Annavi Muthiriyan (in re), 39 M, 449 (1916); see R. v. Bertrand, I. P. C, App, 520 (1867); R v. Bholanath Sen, 2 C., 23 (1877); Rangaswami v. R., 18 M. L J, 330 (1908).

(5) Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shriniuas Pandit, P C, 39 B, 441 (1915); 42 I. A, 135, 19 C. W. N., 729

(6) R. v. Mowjan, 20 W. R, Cr, 69 (1873) In the matter of Pyari Lall, 4 C L. R, 504 (1879), at pp 505, 506, 509; R. v. Burke, 6 A, 224 (1884).

(7) R. v. Prosonnochundra, 22 W. R, Cr, 36 (1874).

(8) See Cr. Pr. Code, ss. 353—365, 503, 509, 512, 263, 264; Civ. Pr. Code, O. XVIII, rr 4—17, 2nd Ed, pp. 843—849.

(9) Norton, Ev, 194.

(10) Civ. Pr. Code, O XVI, r. 21, 2nd Ed., p 835, O. XVIII, r 5, 2nd Ed., p. 844, Cr. Pr. Code, ss. 356, 360, 362, 364, 503.

(11) v. s. 91, post, and note to same

(12) See Noshai Mistri v R, 5 C, 958 (1880), and notes to ss. 29, ante, and 91, post, and Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 263

(13) Bogra v R (1910), 34, M., 141; dissenting from Kamatchinathan Chetty v. R. (1905), 28 M, 308.

and under section 91 (post), no other evidence of such deposition was admissible (1) The usual presumptions, however, in favour of the proceedings and depositions having been regular will be made unless the contrary be shown.(2) But where the law either does not require the statements of witnesses to be reduced to writing(3), or merely requires the substance of the evidence of witness has orally testified may be proved, either by any person who will swear from his own memory, or by notes taken at the time by any person who will swear to their accuracy, or possibly, from the necessity of the case, by the Judge's notes How far it may be necessary to prove the precise words does not clearly appear. Perhaps on occasions when nothing of importance turns on the precise expression used, it will be considered sufficient if the witness can speak with certainty to the substance of what was sworn on the former trial (7) When a note of the evidence has been made by a reporter or shorthand writer, he could, of course, use the note to refresh his memory, and from such a source a shorthand writer might be able to swear to the very words (8) Under English law a stricter rule is applied in Criminal than in Civil proceedings (9) But this section, which is generally more extensive than the English law on the same subject(10), applies alike to Civil and Criminal proceedings.

Use of previous statements

The distinction should be carefully preserved between the use of previous statements as evidence-in-chief or substantive evidence under this section, and the use of previous statements (whether on oath or not and whether in a judicial proceeding or not) to discredit or corroborate a witness only, and as admissions when the witness in a former, is party to a subsequent, suit (11) Depositions may also be used as dying declarations under the preceding section or to refresh the memory of witnesses under section 159 if the conditions set forth in that section exist. Depositions, though informally taken, are receivable, like any

---

(1) R v Mayadeb Gossami, 6 C, 762 (1881), and see cases cited in notes to ss 80, 91. Roscoe, Cr Ev, 63, 66; Taylor, Ev, 1756, post See notes to s 91, post.

(2) v. s 114, illust. (e). post

(3) S. 263, Cr Pr Code

(4) Ss 264, 355, ib (Cr Pr Code).

(5) Civ Pr. Code, O XVI, r. 21, 2nd Ed, p. 835, O XVIII, r 13, 2nd Ed, p 847

(6) See notes to s 91, post.

(7) Taylor, Ev, §§ 546, 547, and v Mylapore Krishnasami v R (1909), 32 M, 384

(8) Norton, Ev, 194, 195

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 479*a* for rule in civil case, see R S C, 1883, O XXXVII, r. 27, and as to notice required in Chancery, see re Chanuell (1877), 8 Ch D, 492, and for use of deposition when inquiry was recommended before a second Magistrate owing to the illness of the first, see Ex parte Bottomley (1909), 2 K B, 14

(10) See Taylor, Ev, § 464, et seq, Roscoe, N. P. Ev. 185—189; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed 326—337; Steph Dig, Arts. 125, 140—142; Roscoe, Cr. Ev. 61, et seq; Norton, Ev, 195; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 416—421; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 248—263

(11) See ss. 21, ante, and 145, 155, 157, post, Roscoe, Cr. Ev, 61, 62;—Soojan Bibi v Ashmut Ali, 14 B. L. R., App. 3, post

(12) Taylor, Ev., § 1754.

therefore be admitted. The Court has such a discretion in the case of the circumstances mentioned at the close of the section.(1) When the evidence of an absent witness is admitted under this section, the grounds for its admission should be stated fully and clearly, to enable the High Court to judge of the propriety of its admission.(2) Assuming that there are reasons why the Court thinks fit to dispense with the personal attendance of a witness, and circumstances are disclosed showing that his presence could not be obtained without an unreasonable amount of expense and delay, the evidence to supply such reasons and to prove such circumstances should be formally and regularly taken and recorded.(3) It has been held in a recent case in the Madras High Court that unless this Court has satisfied itself that there are such reasons, consent or want of objection on the part of the accused will not (in spite of section 54 of this Act) justify the Court in admitting the evidence of an absent witness under this section.(4) And it has also been recently held by the Privy Council that in the absence of proof of such circumstances, the admission in bulk in a Civil suit of the deposition recorded in a Criminal trial was a serious irregularity.(5)

[illegible]

the [illegible]

appl [illegible]

secti [illegible]

criminal trial in suppression of evidence given in the presence of the accused.(7)

The evidence given in the previous proceeding must have been recorded in the manner prescribed by law.(8) Subject to the other provisions of this Act, oral evidence is as receivable under this section as when it has been reduced to a formal deposition (9) When the law requires that the entire statements(10) made by witnesses, or parties called as witnesses, should be reduced into [illegible] the written [illegible] nce in cases [illegible] ıas not been specially provided for (except in the case mentioned in section 533, Criminal Procedure Code)(12), and it does not appear to have been so actually decided, it is submitted that statements required by law to be recorded, but which are informally recorded, are not admissible under this section. But it has been recently held, in the Madras High Court that where a deposition, though irregularly taken, had been signed by the witness and admitted by him to be correct, it could be used in evidence as aga[illegible] to him to prove that it was in fact incorrect (13) [illegible] of O. XVIII, rr. 5, 6 (Civil Procedure Code [illegible] held to be an informality which rendered the deposition of an accused inadmissible in evidence on a charge of giving false evidence on such deposition;

(1) In the matter of Pyari Lall, 4 C. L R, 500 (1879)

(2) R v. Mowjan, 20 W. R, Cr, 69 (1873)

(3) R v Mulu, 2 A, 648 (1880)

(4) Annavi Muthiriyan (in re), 39 M, 449 (1916); see R v Bertrand, 1 P. C, App, 520 (1867); R v. Bholanath Sen, 2 C, 23 (1877); Rangaswami v R., 18 M L. J., 330 (1908).

(5) Bal Gangadhar Tilak v Shriniwas Pandit, P C, 39 B, 441 (1915), 42 I A, 135; 19 C W. N., 729.

(6) R v. Mowjan, 20 W. R, Cr., 69 (1873). In the matter of Pyari Lall, 4 C L R., 504 (1879), at pp. 505, 506, 509; R v. Burke, 6 A, 224 (1884).

(7) R. v Prosonnochundra, 22 W. R, Cr, 36 (1874).

(8) See Cr. Pr Code, ss 353—365, 503, 509, 512, 263, 264; Civ. Pr Code, O XVIII, rr. 4—17, 2nd Ed, pp. 843—849.

(9) Norton, Ev, 194

(10) Civ. Pr. Code, O. XVI, r 21, 2nd Ed., p. 835, O XVIII, r 5, 2nd Ed., p 844; Cr. Pr. Code, ss. 356, 360, 362, 364, 503

(11) v s. 91, post, and note to same.

(12) See Noshai Mistri v. R, 5 C, 958 (1880), and notes to ss. 29, ante, and 91, post, and Field, Ev., 6th Ed. 263

(13) Bogra v R. (1910), 34, M, 141; dissenting from Kamatchinathan Chetty v R. (1905), 28 M, 308.

and under section 91 (post), no other evidence of such deposition was admissible.(1) The usual presumptions, however, in favour of the proceedings and depositions having been regular will be made unless the contrary be shown (2). But where the law either does not require the statements of witnesses to be reduced to writing(3), or merely requires the substance of the evidence of witnesses(4), or of [illegible] in the first of these [illegible] it has not, it is bel[illegible] had not been reco[illegible]
witness has orally testified may be proved, either by any person who will swear from his own memory, or by notes taken at the time by any person who will swear to their accuracy, or possibly, from the necessity of the case, by the Judge's notes. How far it may be necessary to prove the precise words does not clearly appear Perhaps on occasions when nothing of importance turns on the precise expression used, it will be considered sufficient if the witness can speak with certainty to the substance of what was sworn on the former trial.(7) When a note of the evidence has been made by a reporter or shorthand writer, he could, [illegible] section, which is generally more extensive than the English law on the same subject(10), applies alike to Civil and Criminal proceedings

Use of previous statements

The distinction should be carefully preserved between the use of previous statements as evidence-in-chief or substantive evidence under this section, and the use of previous statements (whether on oath or not and whether in a judicial proceeding or not) to discredit or corroborate a witness only, and as admissions when the witness in a former, is party to a subsequent, suit.(11) Depositions may also be used as dying declarations under the preceding section or to refresh the memory of witnesses under section 159 if the conditions set forth in that section exist Depositions, though informally taken, are receivable, like any [illegible]

---

(1) R v. Mayadeb Gossami, 6 C, 762 (1881), and see cases cited in notes to ss 80, 91, Roscoe, Cr Ev. 63, 66; Taylor, Ev, 1756, post. See notes to s 91, post

(2) v s 114, illust. (e), post.

(3) S 263, Cr. Pr Code

(4) Ss. 264, 355, ib (Cr Pr Code)

(5) Civ. Pr. Code, O XVI, r. 21, 2nd Ed, p 835; O XVIII, r 13, 2nd Ed, p 847

(6) See notes to s 91, post.

(7) Taylor, Ev, §§ 546, 547, and v Mylapore Krishnasami v R. (1909), 32 M, 384

(8) Norton, Ev, 194, 195.

(9) Taylor, Ev, § 479*a* for rule in civil case, see R S C, 1883, O. XXXVII, r. 27, and as to notice required in Chancery, see re Chanuell (1877), 8 Ch D, 492, and for use of deposition when inquiry was recommended before a second Magistrate owing to the illness of the first, see Ex parte Bottomley (1909), 2 K B, 14

(10) See Taylor, Ev., § 464, et seq; Roscoe, N. P. Ev. 185—189; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed. 326—337, Steph Dig, Arts. 125, 140—142; Roscoe, Cr. Ev. 61, et seq; Norton, Ev, 195, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 416—421; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 248—263.

(11) See ss 21, ante, and 145, 155, 157, post; Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 61, 62,—Soojan Bibi v. Ashmut Ali, 14 B. L. R., App 3, post

(12) Taylor, Ev., § 1754.

admissible.(1) When depositions are tendered in evidence as secondary proof of oral testimony, they are, of course, open to all the objections which might have been raised had the witness himself been personally present at the trial. Leading and other illegal questions are, therefore, constantly suppressed together with the answers to them; and this, too, whether the testimony has been taken viva voce or by written interrogatories.(2) But a party cannot repudiate an answer which has been given to an illegal question put on his own side.(3) And if secondary evidence of documents is improperly given on commission and is accepted without objection made, it will be too late for the party against whom the evidence is given to take subsequently the objection which he might have urged at the time.(4)

Contradiction: Corroboration. As to what matters may be proved in connection with statements under this section by way of contradiction, corroboration, or otherwise, see section 158, post (5)

"Death" Some proof of death must be offered and proper enquiries be shown to have been made (6) In proof of this fact reference should be made to the provisions of sections 107, 108, post As to the discretion of the Court and proceedings coram non judice v. ante (7)

"Cannot be found" It must be shown that reasonable exertion has been made to find the witness (8) A deposition was rejected because there was nothing on the record to show that by ordinary care, and the use of ordinary means, the witness could not have been produced (9) When a summons was properly taken out to be served on one JA at the Cutcherry-house in which he lived, but the peon in his return stated that, as he was unable to find JA and serve him personally, he hung up the summons on the Cutcherry-house, and there was evidence to show that JA suddenly disappeared from the Cutcherry-house, and it was further shown that enquiry was made in his native village whether he had returned there, but the result of the enquiry was that nothing had been heard of him and it was, therefore, impossible to say where JA was, or to serve him with a summons, it was held that JA's deposition was properly admitted.(10) How far answers to enquiries respecting the witness are admissible to prove that he cannot be found is not very clearly defined by the decisions. That such answers will be rejected as hearsay, if tendered in proof of the fact that the witness is abroad, is beyond all doubt(11); but where the question is simply whether a diligent and unsuccessful search has been made for the witness, it would seem both on principle and authority, [illegible] a prominent part of the very poin [illegible] enquiries have been duly made a [illegible] to where he lived cannot be received(13); neither will his statement in the deposition, itself, that he is about to go abroad, render it unnecessary to prove that he has put his purpose into execution.(14) Where a warrant is not

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1754.

(2) Taylor, Ev, 548; Hutchinson v. Barnard, 2 M. & Rob, 1, Norton, Ev., 198, R v. Ramchandra Govind, 19 B, 749, 760, 761 (1895).

(3) Small v. Nairne, 13 Q. B, 840

(4) Robinson v. Davies, 1879, 5 Q B. D, 26; Taylor, § 548

(5) See Foolkissory Dosse v. Nobin Chunder, 23 C., 441 (1895)

(6) Benson v. Olive, 2 Str, 920.

(7) In the matter of Pyari Lall; R. v. Rami Reddi, supra; Taylor, Ev, 472.

(8) R. v. Luckey Narain, 24 W. R., Cr., 19 (1875); R v. Mulu, 2 A., 646 (1880); Noohai Mistri v. R., 5 C, 958 (1880); Rami Reddi (in re), 3 M., 48 (1881); R. v. Lukhun Santhal, 21 W. R, 56 (1874).

(9) R. v. Mowjan, 29 W. R, Cr, 69 (1873).

(10) R v. Rochia Mohato, 7 C, 42 (1881).

(11) Taylor, Ev, § 475; Robinson v Markis, 2 M. & Rob, 375; Doe v. Powell 7 C & P, 617.

(12) Ib, Wyatt v. Bateman, 7 C. & P, 586; Burt v. Walker, 4 B & A, 697; Austin v Rumsey, 2 C. & Kir., 736; R. v. Rochia Mohato, supra.

(13) Doe v Powell, 7 C & P., 617.

(14) Proctor v. Lawson, 7 C. & P., 631 produced and there is no proof of an endeavour to serve it, a statement by the Police that one has been issued is not sufficient proof that a person cannot be found.(1) Neither is a statement to that effect by a Public Prosecutor.(2) Evidence purporting to have been recorded under section 512 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be used unless there is proof that the Court before recording it had received satisfactory evidence that the person had absconded and that there was no immediate prospect of arresting him.(3) As to the Court's discretion, v. supra

The words "incapable of giving evidence," it has been held, denote an incapacity of a permanent, and not of a temporary kind; and where a witness is proved to be incapable of giving evidence, the Court has no discretion as to admitting his deposition But where the absence of a witness is casual or due to a temporary cause, the Court has such a discretion, "if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense, which under the circumstances the Court considers unreasonable."(4) In a subsequent case(5), however, the Court was of opinion that the incapacity to give evidence contemplated by this section is not necessarily a permanent incapacity.(6) To bring a case within the section, in order to admit the deposition of a witness alleged to be unable to attend by reason of illness, it is not sufficient that such witness should be stated to be ill and confined to the house; but precise evidence should be required by the Court as to the nature of the illness and the incapacity to attend.(7) If the witness be proved at the trial to be insane, his deposition will be admissible (8) If from the nature of the illness or other infirmity no reasonable hope remains that the witness will be able to appear in Court on any future occasion, his deposition is certainly admissible.(9) Of course a doctor's certificate, however authentic in itself, is no legal evidence of the state of the witness His condition must be proved on oath to the satisfaction of the Judge who tries the case It appears to be established practice that in the case of a witness being alleged to be ill, the doctor, if he be attended by one, must be called to prove his condition.(10) Where the attorney for the prosecution was put into the box to prove that the witness was unable to attend, and stated that the witness's residence was 23 miles off, and that he had seen him that morning in bed with his head shaved; Earle, J., said: "The evidence, no doubt, is as strong as it can be, short of that of a medical man, but the case may be easily imagined of a person extremely unwilling to appear as a witness, and so well feigning himself to be ill as to deceive any one but a medical man;" and the evidence was rejected.(11) And Lord Coleridge, C J, in giving judgment in R. v. Farrell(12), said "it would be dangerous to admit any such latitude of construction as would bring this case within the words of the Statute."

"Incapacity."

The proposition that if a witness be kept out of the way by the adversary, his former statements will be admissible, rests chiefly on the broad principle of

"Kept out of the way"

(1) R v Kangam Mall, 41 C, 601 (1914)
(2) Annavi Muthiriyam (in re), 39 M, 449 (1916)
(3) R v Rustem, 38 A, 29 (1916).
(4) In the matter of Pyari Lall, 4 C. L. R, 504
(5) In the matter of Asgar Hoossein, 8 C L R, 124 (1881); s c, 6 C, 774.
(6) Per Pontifex and Field, JJ. The dictum is obiter, as it was not necessary to decide that question in the case; v. Roscoe Cr Ev, 65, 66; Taylor, Ev., § 472, 478
(7) In the matter of Asgar Hoossein, supra
(8) Taylor, Ev., § 472—478; Roscoe, Cr Ev., 65, Doe v. Powell, 7 C. & P., 617; Norton, Ev, 196
(9) Taylor, Ev, § 472—478 and cases there cited; as to blindness v s 47, note
(10) Roscoe, Cr. Ev., 66:—"as a general rule it will be prudent, though it is not absolutely necessary to have the testimony of a medical man;" Taylor, Ev, § 488.
(11) R v. Phillips, 1 F. & F, 105; and see R. v. Williams, 4 F. & F, 515.
(12) L R., 2 C. C. R, 116; see also R v Wilton, 9 Cox, 281; R. v Bull, 12 Cox, C. C, 31.

justice, which will not permit a party to take advantage of his own wrong(1) In a case where three prisoners were indicted for felony, and a witness for the prosecution was proved to be absent through the procurement of one of them, the Court held that his deposition might be read in evidence as against the man who had kept him out of the way, but that it could not be received against the other two men.(2)

Delay or expense

The last ground for admitting the deposition of an absent witness is governed by three considerations,—the delay, the expense, and the circumstances of the case.(3) Of the last " one of the chief which the Judge has and ought to weigh, is the nature and importance of the statements contained in the deposition It would be unreasonable to incur much delay and expense when the facts spoken to in the deposition are of the nature of formal evidence for the prosecution, or supply some link in the case for the prosecution as to which little or no dispute exists, or are facts to which other witnesses speak besides the deponent, and which witnesses are produced at the trial. On the other hand, it might be very reasonable to submit to much delay and considerable expense, when the evidence of the deponent is vital to the success of the prosecution, or has a very important bearing upon the guilt of the accused."(4) Where the delay likely to have been occasioned was about a fortnight, and the witness lived or was staying within a short distance of the Court, the witness's deposition was rejected (5) When the witnesses were at a considerable distance from the place of trial, and their attendance was not easily procurable, their depositions were admitted.(6) Where the witness changed his lodging after the order was given for his appearance in t' [illegible] his deposition " as much de own house or elsewhere," it that this witness could not made to find him (7) It is only in extreme cases of expense or delay that the personal attendance of a witness should be dispensed with (8) " In my opinion it was intended that the provisions of the section as to emergency (delay or expense) were only to be sparingly applied, and certainly not in a case like this where the witness was alive and his evidence reasonably procurable."(9) Quære—Whether the expense contemplated by this section is confined to the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness, or whether it also includes [illegible] e Sessions Judge witnesses could ch he considered unreasonable, that the witnesses would be inconvenienced, and that their evidence did not concern the accused personally, having reference only to the identification of the property in respect of which the accused was charged —Held that the Sessions Judge had improperly admitted such evidence Inconvenience to witnesses is no ground allowed under this section, and the question of identification was a most material one, and the evidence of the witnesses in question was of the utmost moment, the whole case resting on it; and, as unrea-nesses, d been

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 478.
(2) R. v. Scaife, 17 Q. B., 238; s. c., 5 Cox, 243.
(3) Asiatic Steam Navigation Co v. Bengal Coal Co, 35 Cal, 751.
(4) In the matter of Pyari Lall, supra, per White, J, at pp 509, 510
(5) Ib.
(6) R. v. Rami Reddi, 3 M., 48 (1881).
(7) R v. Lukhy Narain, . R, Cr, 18 (1875)
(8) R. Mulu, 2).
(9) I Straight, 648
(10) tter of supra.
at p 5 Lukhun
R., Cr,).
(11) , 6 A.

taken by commission, nor, looking at his position, could he arrange for their cross-examination Held also that on similar grounds the Sessions Judge was [illegible] witnesses.(2) Where a Sessions Judge, finding that the witnesses who had been summoned to give evidence for the prosecution did not appear upon the date fixed, adjourned the case, and odered fresh summons to be issued, and on the witnesses failing to appear on the adjourned date, made use of the evidence which they had given before the Magistrate, stating that he did so under this section, it was held that the evidence could not be so used, for he ought to have compelled the witnesses to attend (3) But where on remand by the Bombay High Court for the determination of certain issues, the District Court sent down the case to the first Court in order that the evidence might be taken there, and the evidence of the plaintiff was taken on commission, it was held that the defendant was not aggrieved by that procedure.(4)

The "proceeding" referred to is the former proceeding : the language would have been more accurate if it had been :—"those whom they represent in interest" (5) It makes no difference that the parties are differently marshalled in the two proceedings, the plaintiffs in the first proceeding, being defendant in the second, or vice versâ, nor if there have been plurality of parties in the one case and not in the other Therefore, where a witness testified in a suit in which A and several others were plaintiffs and B defendant, his testimony [illegible] Same parties admissible in the second The two suits must be brought by or against the same parties or their representatives in interest at the time when the suits are proceeding and the evidence is given.(9) This section does not apply to the deposition of a witness in a former suit, when the witness is himself a defendant in the subsequent suit, and the deposition is sought to be used against him, not as evidence given between the parties, one of whom called him as a witness, but as a statement made by him, which would be evidence against him whether he made it as a witness or on any other occasion : such a deposition is admissible under the sections relating to admissions, although it might be shown that the facts were different from what on the former occasion they were stated to be(10) (v. post, Note to Explanation) Statements of Insolvents under sect [illegible] Towns Insolvency Act cannot be receive[illegible] rought against them by their creditors, [illegible] in such case of avail (11)

(1) Ib, see also R v Jacob, 19 C. (1891), at p. 120

(2) R. v. Lukhun Sonthal, supra

(3) R. v. Nande Khan, A W. N., 202 (1905), 2 A L J, 599.

(4) Kashaba v Chandrabhagabai (1908), 32 B, 441

(5) Norton, Ev, 169

(6) Wright v. Doe d. Tatham, 1 A. & E, 3

(7) R v Ishri Singh, 8 A, 672 (1886); R v Rami Reddi, 3 M, 45 (1881); R v. Vaman, 5 Bom. L. R., 599, 601 (1903), Cf Mahomed Khan v Mussamat Fattan, 12 P L R, 1919; Deb. Singh v. Emperor, 20 Cr L J, 625.

(8) See Mrinmoyee Dabea v. Bhoobunmoyee Dabea, 15 B. L R, 5 (1874); s c., 23 W R, 42, and notes to ss. 21, ante and 40 post As to judgments for or against a remainderman where there are several remainders limited by one deed, see remarks of Couch, C. J, 15 B. L. R., 6 supra, and Pyke v. Crouch, 1 Ld. Raym., 730, Doe d Lloyd v Passingham, 2 C. & P, 446

(9) Sitanath Dass v Mohesh Chunder, 12 C, 727 (1886,

(10) Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, 14 B. L R, App. 3 (1874); s. c. 21 W. R 414.

(11) Luchiram Moulal Boid v. Radha Charan Poddar, 49 C., 93 (1922).

Cross-examination

Under the old law, as well as under the present section, there must have been the right and opportunity to cross examine(1); and therefore if a commission be executed without any notice, or without a sufficient notice(2) being given to the opposite party, to enable him, if he pleases, to put cross-interrogatories, the depositions will be rejected(3); yet it is by no means requisite that he should exercise that power: and if notice has been given to him of the time

[illegible] oss-examine be presumed

So, where to examine witnesses upon interrogatories, gave notice that he declined to proceed with the examination, whereupon the plaintiff sent him word that he should apply for a commission ex-parte, which he accordingly did: the Court held that the examinations taken under this order were admissible in evidence, although the defendant had received no notice of the time and place of taking them (5) The deposition of a witness who was not cross-examined before the committing Magistrate and who died before the trial, has been held to be admissible in evidence inasmuch as the accused persons had the right and opportunity of cross-examining him notwithstanding the omission of their pleader to avail himself of that right.(6) But in a later case it was held that the admissibility of such a deposition was doubtful and that in any case its evidentiary value was small and it was said that the practice of postponing cross-examination at this stage in certain cases should be considered in deciding whether there had been an opportunity to cross-examine (7) The words "opportunity to cross-examine" do not imply that the actual presence of the cross-examining party

In England

nption (which

tion.(9) But,

in R. v. Mowjan(10), the Court remarked as follows: "We observe further that there is nothing on the face of the Extra Assistant Commissioner's record to show that an opportunity was presented to the prisoner of cross-examining the witness, Ratoo Ray. It may be gathered from the context that the prisoner was present during the examination of this witness. But it is not stated by the Extra Assistant Commissioner that the prisoner had an opportunity of cross-examining and declined to avail himself of it. We think that, in order to make a deposition admissible under section 33, there must be evidence that the accused person did, in fact, have an opportunity of cross-examining."(11) So also it has been held in the Bombay High Court that to make evidence admissible against an accused person, the fact that he had full opportunity of cross-examination, if not admitted, must be proved (12) Quære—whether the

(1) R. v. Etwaree Dharee, 21 W. R., Cr, 12 (1874); and see R. v. Luckhy Narain, 24 W R, Cr, 18 (1875); Atty-Genl v. Davison, M'Clel. & G, 160; Taylor, Ev, § 466; R v. Ishri Singh, 8 A., 672 (1886); R. v. Ramchandra Govind, 19 B, 749, 757 (1895). ["There may be circumstances where, although a prisoner has the right he has not the opportunity, e g, where the witness is at a great distance and the prisoner cannot go to the place and is too poor to employ a pleader or too unfamiliar with the ways of the place to get legal help there." Per Jardine, J.

(2) Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 3 Sw. & Tr, 397; Tarucknath Mookerjee v. Gouree Churn, 3 W. R, 47 (1865).

(3) Steinkeller v. Newton, 9 C. & P., 313, see Gregory v. Dooley Chand, 14 W. R, 17 (1870).

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 466; Cazenove v. Vaughan, 1 M. & Sel, 4; R. v. Mowjan, 20 W R, 69 (1873); Norton, Ev, 196, 197

(5) M'Combie v. Anton, 6 M. & Gr., 27.

(6) R. v. Basvanta, 2 Bom L R, 761 (1900); 25 B, 168.

(7) Ibrahim v. King-Emperor, 17 C W. N, 230 (1912).

(8) R. v. Ram Chandra Govind, 10 B, 749 (1895)

(9) R. v. Peacock, 12 Cox, C. C, 21

(10) 20 W. R, Cr, 69 (1873)

(11) Ib, at p. 70, per Macpherson, J

(12) R v. Ramchandra Govind, supra.

opportunity to administer cross-interrogatories under a commission is "an opportunity to cross-examine," within the meaning of the proviso, so as to render the evidence taken on interrogatories admissible.(1) The section requires an effectual cross-examination, complete and not partial. Therefore where a commission was returned when the witness had been in part, but before he had been fully, cross-examined, it was held to be inadmissible.(2) Platt, B., in R. v. Johnson(3), reprobated the practice of taking depositions in the absence of the prisoner and then supplying the omission by reading them over to the prisoner and asking him if he would like to put any question to the witnesses. The Magistrate should when the prisoner is undefended, invite him to cross-examine the witnesses at the end of each examination, and not merely at the end of all the examinations, and should allow him sufficient time to consider his questions (4) The fact that deceased attesting witnesses to a mortgage were cross-examined by the Special Registrar is enough to make the evidence admissible under this section (5) A deposition of a prosecution witness is admissible in evidence if the accused had an opportunity of cross-examining him before the charge and there was no opportunity for further cross-examination after charge (6)

Question in issue

The question in issue must have been substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding And so, if in a dispute respecting lands any fact comes directly in issue, the testimony given to that fact is admissible to prove the same point in another action between the same parties or their privies, though the last suit relates to other lands.(7) So also in the proceedings before a Magistrate on a charge of causing grievous hurt, two (among other) witnesses, one of whom was the person assaulted, were examined on behalf of the prosecution The prisoners were committed for trial. Subsequently the person assaulted died in consequence of the injuries inflicted on him. At the trial, before the Sessions Judge, charges of murder and of culpable homicide, not amounting to murder, were added to the charge of grievous hurt. The deposition of the deceased witness was put in and read at the Sessions trial:—Held that the evidence was admissible, either under the first clause of section 32, or this section, notwithstanding [illegible] The question whether the pr[illegible] at issue are substantially t[illegible] is applicable, although different consequences may follow from the same act (8) "Now here the act was the stroke of a sword which, though it did not immediately cause the death of the deceased, yet conduced to bring about that result subsequently. In consequence of the person having died, the gravity of the offence became presumptively increased; but the evidence to prove the act with which the accused was charged remained precisely the same. We therefore think that this evidence was properly admitted under the thirty-third section." (9) A statement made by a witness in a civil suit concerning the authenticity of a document before the Court may be admissible in evidence on the prosecution of a party to the suit for an offence relating to the document the witness having

---

(1) R v Ramchandra Govind, supra.

(2) Boisogomoff v Nahapiet Jute Co, 5 C W N, ccxxx (1901)

(3) 2 C. & K., 394; and see ss 353, 537, Cr Pr. Code, and notes to ss. 135, 167, post, and R. v. Bishonath Pal, 12 W. R, Cr., 3 (1869); R. v. Mohun Banfor, 22 W. R, Cr, 38 (1874); Ali Meah, In re, 25 W. R., Cr, 14 (1876); R. v. Nandram, 9 A, 609 (1887); Norton, Ev, 197

(4) R. v. Dey, 6 Cox, 55; R v. Watts, 9 Cox, 95.

(5) Jeheto Sheikh v. Jaibanessa Bibi, 18 C W. N, 605 (1913).

(6) Lockley v. King-Emperor, 43 M, 411

(7) Doe d. Derby v. Foster, 1 A. & E., 791 cited in R v. Rami Reddi, 3 M, 48 (1881); see also Lawrence v. French, 4 Drew, 472; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 418.

(8) R. v. Rochia Mohato, 7 C, 42 (1881); s c, 8 C. L R, 273

(9) Ib., per Pontifex, J, see Taylor, Ev, §§ 467, 468; Norton, Ev, 195.

since died; but such a statemen [illegible] witness in the same civil suit acc [illegible] the party and of perjury.(1) " [illegible] in the plural seems to imply th. [illegible] the same in both proceedings to render the evidence admissible, that is not the intention of the law. And though separate proceedings may involve issues, of which some only are common to both, the evidence to those common issues given in the former proceedings may (on the conditions mentioned in section 33 arising) be given in the subsequent proceedings."(2) The evidence of witnesses examined in an enquiry held by a Sub-Registrar under section 41 (2) of the Registration Act as to the genuineness of a will is admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit between the same parties raising an issue as to the genuineness of the will if it is proved that the witnesses are dead at the time of the suit and that the adverse party at the enquiry before the Sub-Registrar had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses (3) In deciding whether the questions in issue are substantially the same, it is always a useful test to see whether the same evidence will prove the affirmative of the issue in both (4)

[E]xplanation [t]o section — The Explanation to the section is inserted for the purpose of excluding the objection which may arise, when the depositions are taken in criminal cases, that they cannot be used in a subsequent proceeding for want of mutuality, because the King is the prosecutor in all criminal proceedings.(5) As so explained, the section admits of the use, in a civil suit, of a deposition taken in a criminal trial or the reverse, provided the conditions of the section are fulfilled Thus a prosecution was instituted by S against N C B at the instance, and on behalf, of F, for criminal trespass into a house belonging to F (Penal Code, section 448), and on his own behalf for assault and insult (id, sections 352, 504), and S at the trial gave evidence on these charges. A civil suit was subsequently brought by F against N C B for possession of the house under the ninth section of the Specific Relief Act. Between the date of the prosecution and civil suit S died. At th [illegible] Court was tendered on [illegible] nce, the charge c [illegible] efore the charge of F as the real prosecutor; that therefore the parties in both the prosecution for trespass and the civil suit were the same: that N C B had had the right and opportunity to cross-examine and had, in fact, exercised that right, that the issues in the civil suit were whether F was in possession and whether N C B's entry was unlawful; and that in order to establish the charge of criminal trespass, it had had to be shown that F was in possession, that N C B had unlawfully ousted her and that such ouster was with a criminal intent; that two of the issues in the suit were the same as those in the criminal trial; that the fact that there was an additional issue in the criminal trial made no difference(6), and that under the above circumstances the deposition of S in the criminal trial was admissible in the civil suit, in proof of the issue therein of possession A certified copy of the deposition was therefore tendered, and on objection that such copy was inadmissible and that the original record should be produced, the objection was overruled and the certified copy admitted in evidence. A witness under examination was then asked what information S had given him on the morning following the date of dispossession. On

(1) Emperor v Kadhe Mal, 42 A, 24

(2) R. v Rami Reddi, 3 M, 48 (1881), at p 52.

(3) Lanka Lakshmanna v. Lanka Vardhanamma, 35 M L J., 657; s c., 42 M., 103.

(4) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 149; see R. v. Rochia Mohata, supra.

(5) Norton, v. 197, 198. for the question "who is prosecutor," see Gaya Prasad v. Bhagat Singh, 30 A., 525; and Pandit Gaya Parshad Tewari v. Sardar Bhagat Singh, P C. (1908). Times L R, v. 24, at p. 46 objection being again taken, the question was held admissible under section 158 in corroboration of the deposition of S in the criminal trial.(1)

(6) See R. v. Rami Reddi, supra.

Notwithstanding anything contained in this section Act XIV of 1908, s. 13, provides for a special rule of evidence in the case of the trial of offences under that Act. Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act

(1) Foolkissory Dossee v. Nobin Chunder, 23 C., 441 (1895)

STATEMENTS MADE UNDER SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES

Two general classes of statements are dealt with in this portion of the chapter,—(a) Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, (b) entries in public documents, or in documents of a public character Both classes of statements are relevant, whether the person who made them is, or is not, called as a witness, and whether he is, or is not, a party to the suit, and are admissible owing to their special character and the circumstances under which they are made, which in themselves afford a guarantee for their truth The first class of statements were not generally admissible according to the principles of the English Common Law, except in the case of entries against interest, or made in the [illegible] Equity have for some [illegible] books in evidence in ca[illegible] principle has now been adopted in certain cases, by the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883(3) ; and the powers of the Court with reference to the production of documents and of entries in books or of copies of either have been also considerably enlarged by the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1897, as amended by the Rule of July 1902. O. XXX, r. 7 now runs as follows " on the hearing of a summons the Court or a Judge may order that evidence of any particular fact, to be specified in the order, shall be given by statement on oath of information and belief or by production of documents, or entries in books, or by copies of documents or entries, or otherwise as the Court or Judge may direct."(4) The object of this rule is to dispense, under the powers of the Judicature Act and to a certain limited extent, with the technical rules of evidence (5) As a general rule, a man's own statement is not evidence for him, though in certain cases it may be used as corroborative evidence.(6) The entries alluded to in section 34, being the acts of the party himself, must be received with caution.(7) But these statements are in principle admissible upon considerations similar to those which have induced the Courts to admit them in evidence when made by persons who are dead and cannot be thus called as witnesses. Moreover, in the words of the Judicial Committee, " accounts may be so kept, and so tally with external

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 709; Steph Dig, Arts 25—31; Best, Ev, §§ 501, 503; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 60—62; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 316—323; Starkie, Ev., 65. Thus A sues B for the price of goods sold; an entry in A's shop-books, debiting B with the goods, is not evidence for A to prove the debt; Smith v. Anderson, 7 C. B., 21; but an entry debiting C and not B with the goods is evidence against A to disprove the debt; Storr v. Scott, 6 C. & P., 241.

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 711; and see 15 & 16 Vic., c. 86, s 4.

(3) Ord XXXIII, rr. 2, 3.

(4) Taylor, § 711.

(5) Baerlein v. The Chartered Mercantile Bank (1895), 2 Ch., 488.

(6) Ishan Chunder v Haran Sirdar, 11 W R., 526 (1869) See Introduction to the Sections on Admissions (s 17 et seq.), ante.

(7) Kheero Monee v. Bejoy Gobind, 7 W R, 533 (1867); Taylor, Ev, § 709; but proper weight must be given to them where it was said that "an account-book is nothing: it is one's private affair and he may prepare it as he likes;" the Privy Council remarked,—"It is true that there may be accounts to which that description would apply. Other accounts may be so kept, and may so tally with external circumstances, as to carry conviction that they are true. And the Evidence Act, s 34, therefore enacts, etc": Jaswant Sing v. Sheo Narain, 16 A, 157, 161 (1894) circumstances as to carry conviction that they are true "(1) They are, moreover, subject to the restrictions that they shall not be alone sufficient evidence to charge any one with liability without some independent evidence of the facts stated in them (2) The second class of statements are contained either in public documents such as official books, registers, or records, or in documents of at least a public character, such as maps offered for public sale The grounds upon which these statements are admissible have been given in the Notes to the following sections. Public documents are entitled to an extraordinary degree of confidence on the ground of the credit due to the agents who have made them and of the public nature of the facts contained in them. Where particular facts are enquired into and recorded for the benefit of the public, those who are empowered to act in making such investigations and memorials, are in fact the agents of all the individuals who compose the public: and every member of the community may be supposed to be privy to the investigation (3) The other documents mentioned in the following sections, such as maps offered for public sale, deal with matters of public interest, are accessible to the entire community, and being open to its criticism, are unlikely to be inaccurate: and if inaccurate, are liable to detection and to consequent correction (4)

Entries in books of account when relevant

34. Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant(5) whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to inquire, but such statements shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability.

Illustration

A sues B for Rs 1,000, and shows entries in his account books showing B to be indebted to him to this amount The entries are relevant, but are not sufficient, without other evidence, to prove the debt

Principle.—The presumption of truth which arises from the character and nature of this evidence and its constant liability, if false, to be detected (v Introduction, supra, and the second clause of section 32).

s 32, cl (2). (Statement made in course of business by person who cannot be called)

s 65 (g), (Numerous accounts: secondary evidence) s 32, cl (3)· (Statement against interest by same person.)

s. 39 (How much of a statement is to be proved)

s 3 ("Relevant.")

Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civil Procedure Code, O XIII, r. 5, 2nd Ed., p. 807 (Production of Account-Books in Evidence), O XXVI, rr. 11, 12, 2nd Ed, pp. 1097, 1098 (Commissions to examine Accounts); Act VII of 1913, (as amended by Acts X and XI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920) (Indian Companies), s 240; Acts XVIII of 1891 and I of 1893 (Bankers' Books and Books of Post Office Savings Bank and Money Order Offices). Taylor, Ev, § 709; Best, Ev, §§ 501, 503, Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 153; Id, Appendix, 4th Ed.; Wigmore, Ev., § 1538

(1) v. s. 32, cl. (2), supra; Taylor, Ev. § 709, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 316; Starkie, Ev, 65; Steph. Introd, 164, 165 Jaswant Singh v Sheo Narain, supra, 161, 162; one test of genuineness is correspondence of books with themselves, but a better is correspondence with other evidence, ib

(2) S 34, post, and Commentary.

(3) Starkie, Ev., 272, 273 See Samar Dosadh v Juggul Kishore, 23 C., 366, 370 (1895).

(4) v ss 36, 38, post.

(5) "Relevant" means admissible: Lala Lakmi v. Saiyed Halder, 3 C. W. N., cclxviii (1889).

COMMENTARY.

Books of account

A question sometimes arises whether a particular account should be considered, and can be referred to, as the original account. If accounts be merely memoranda and rough books from which the regular accounts are prepared, the former, it has been said, can hardly be considered the original account.(1) Where account-books, though dealing with the same subject-matter, deal with it in different ways, as in the case of a day-book, cash-book, ledger or the like, each of such books is an original account-book.(2)

This section takes the place of section 43 of the repealed Act II of 1855, which was as follows: "Books proved to have been regularly kept in the course of business shall be admissible as corroborat[illegible] the facts stated therein" Under that Act, [illegible] have been admissible to prove a fact unles[illegible] establish the same fact had also been given. "But the language" of that Act "differs very materially from that of the present Act. That language has not been adopted in the present Act. The only limitation in section 34 is that statements contained in documents of this kind shall not alone be sufficient to charge any one with liability. It appears to me that this change of expression has made substantial alteration in the law."(3) Therefore documents (jama-wasil-baki papers) admissible under this section, though not alone sufficient to charge any one with liability, were held to be sufficient to answer a claim set up to exemption from what would be the ordinary liability of a tenant: e g, in a suit for enhance-[illegible]ars.(4) [illegible] with [illegible]ent of the land he occupied by reason of its occupation by him, that rent being considered a fair and equitable rent for the land occupied; and what these documents were used for was not to charge him with the liability, but to answer the claim which he set up to exemption from what would be the ordinary liability of a tenant.(5) Therefore, books of account when not used to charge a person with liability (civil or criminal)(6) may be used as independent evidence requiring no corroboration, but when sought to be so used they must be corroborated by other substantive evidence independent of them.(7) And in this sense books of accounts remain under the present, as under the repealed, Act, corroborative evidence only, and cannot be used as independent primary evidence of the payment or other items to which the entry refers: nor when payments entered in many of the items of a book of account are corroborated by other evidence can the inference be raised thereon that even the entries which are not so corroborated are accurate, or in other words, afford good substantive evidence of the

---

(1) Raja Peary v Narendra Nath, 9 C. W. N, 421, 431 (1905). See Wigmore, Ev, § 1558.

(2) Megraj v. Sewnarain, 5 C. W. N, cclxxviii (1901), see s. 63, post.

(3) Belaet Khan v. Rash Beharee, 22 W. R, 549 (1874), per Markby, J.: (v. post) the present section substitutes "regularly kept" for "proved to have been regularly kept", but of course proof is still required except in those cases in which it is rendered unnecessary by the admissions of the parties. As to account-books as corroborative evidence of separation in estate, see Jagun Kooer v. Raghoonundun Lall, 10 W. R. (1868). As to Act II of 1855, see Ramkristo Pal v. Hurydos Koondoo, Marshall, 219 (1862).

(4) Ib.

(5) Ib: this decision, in so far as it held jama-wasil-baki papers might in certain cases be other than corroborative evidence only, appears to be dissented from by Prinsep and Bose, JJ, in Surnomoyi v. Johur Mahomed, 10 C. L. R, 546 (1882); v. post; but it does not appear in the latter case what use was sought to be made therein of these papers; see also Gopal Mondul v Nobo Kishen, 5 W. R. (Act X), 83 (1866); Shib Pershad v. Promothonath Ghose, 10 W. R., 193 (1868) and post

(6) R v Hurdeep Sahoy, 23 W. R, Cr, 27 (1875).

(7) Ib, Dwarka Doss v. Sant Buksh, 18 A, 92 (1895)

payments to which they refer.(1) This section only lays down that a plaintiff cannot obtain a decree by merely proving the existence of certain entries in his books of account, even though those books are shown to be kept in the regular course of the business. He will have to show further by some independent evidence that the entries represent real and honest transactions and that the monies were paid in accordance with those entries. No particular form or kind of evidence in addition to the entries is required. Any relevant facts which can be treated as evidence within the meaning of the Evidence Act would be sufficient corroboration of the evidence furnished in the books of account, if true (2) Entries in accounts relevant only under this section are not by themselves alone sufficient to charge any person with liability : corroboration is required (3) But where accounts are relevant also under the second clause of section 32, they are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible under only this section, require corroboration Entries in accounts may in the same suit be relevant under both the sections, and in that case the necessity for corroboration does not apply (4) In a suit to recover money due upon a running account the plaintiff produced his account-books, which were found to be books regularly kept in the course of business, in support of his claim. One of the plaintiffs gave evidence as to the entries in the account-books, but in such a manner that it was not clear whether he spoke from his personal knowledge of the transactions entered in the books, the entries in which were largely in his own handwriting or simply as one describing the state of affairs that was shown by the books He was cross-examined, but no questions were asked him to show that he was not speaking as to his personal knowledge. Held, that the evidence given as above should be interpreted in the manner most favourable to the plaintiff and might be accepted in support of the entries in the plaintiff's account-books which by themselves would not have been sufficient to charge the defendants with liability (5) The mere production of the books without further proof is not enough(6) ; and such further proof must be afforded by substantive evidence independent of them, as by that of witnesses who speak to the payment of money or delivery of goods, or of evidence of receipt of, or given for, the same (7) In a case decided under the repealed Act the Privy Council observed as follows :— " The evidence which the Subordinate Judge seems to have considered sufficient to prove the payments which the defendants were bound to prove consisted of the mercantile books of the banking firm and of a general statement by the defendant G P. that the items in those books were correct. Their Lordships are of opinion [illegible] ere

[illegible] tly

[illegible] to satisfy the burden of proof that lay upon him, particularly as with respect to many of the disputed items he had the means of producing much better evidence. (8) It has been held that, though the actual entries in books of account are relevant to the extent provided by the section, such a book is not by itself relevant to raise an inference from the absence of any entry relating to a particular matter (9) The decision cited, if it is to be taken to have ruled that the fact

(1) R v Hurdeep Sahoy, 23 W. R., Cr. 27 (1875)

(2) Yesuradiyan v Subba Naicker, 52 I C, 704

(3) Abdul Ali v Puran Mal, 49 P. R., C J No 82, p 289 (1914)

(4) Rampyarabai v Balaji Shridhar, 6 Bom L R, 50 (1904), s c, 28 B, 294

(5) Dwarka Doss v Sant Buksh, 18 A, 92 (1895)

(6) Sri Kishen v Huri Kishen, 5 M. I A., 432; Sorabjee Vacha v. Koovurjee Manikjee, 1 M. I A, 47; s. c, 5 W. R. (P. C), 29 (1866); Roushan Bibee v Hurray Kristo, 8 C., 931.

(7) R. v Hurdeep Sahoy, 23 W. R., Cr, 27 (1875); and v. post.

(8) Gunga Pershad v. Inderjit Singh, 23 W R. (P. C.), 390 (1878).

(9) R. v Grees Chunder, 10 C, 1024 (1884) and see In the matter of Juggun Lall, 7 C. L. R., 356.

COMMENTARY.

A question sometimes arises whether a particular account should be considered, and can be referred to, as the original account. If accounts be merely memoranda and rough books from which the regular accounts are prepared, the former, it has been said, can hardly be considered the original account (1) Where account-books, though dealing with the same subject-matter, deal with it in different ways, as in the case of a day-book, cash-book, ledger or the like, each of such books is an original account-book.(2)

This section takes the place of section 43 of the repealed Act II of 1855, which was as follows: " Books proved to have been regularly kept in the course of business shall be admissible as corroborat [illegible] of the facts stated therein." Under that Act, [illegible] have been admissible to prove a fact unles [illegible] establish the same fact had also been given. But the language of that Act " differs very materially from that of the present Act. That language has not been adopted in the present Act. The only limitation in section 31 is that statements contained in documents of this kind shall not alone be sufficient to charge any one with liability. It appears to me that this change of expression has made substantial alteration in the law "(3) Therefore documents (jama-wasil-baki papers) admissible under this section, though not alone sufficient to charge any one with liability, were held to be sufficient to answer a claim set up to exemption from what would be the ordinary liability of a tenant: e.g., in a suit for enhance- [illegible] years (4) [illegible] lant with [illegible] the rent of the land he occupied by reason of its occupation by him, that rent being considered a fair and equitable rent for the land occupied; and what these documents were used for was not to charge him with the liability, but to answer the claim which he set up to exemption from what would be the ordinary liability of a tenant (5) Therefore, books of account when not used to charge a person with liability (civil or criminal)(6) may be used as independent evidence requiring no corroboration, but when sought to be so used they must be corroborated by other substantive evidence independent of them.(7) And in this sense books of accounts remain under the present, as under the repealed, Act, corroborative evidence only, and cannot be used as independent primary evidence of the payment or other items to which the entry refers: nor when payments entered in many of the items of a book of account are corroborated by other evidence can the inference be raised thereon that even the entries which are not so corroborated are accurate, or in other words, afford good substantive evidence of the

---

(1) Raja Peary v. Narendra Nath, 9 C. W N., 421, 431 (1905) See Wigmore, Ev, § 1558

(2) Megraj v. Sewnarain, 5 C. W. N, cclxxviii (1901), see s 63, post.

(3) Belaet Khan v. Rash Beharee, 22 W. R, 549 (1874), per Markby, J.: (v. post) the present section substitutes "regularly kept" for "proved to have been regularly kept", but of course proof is still required except in those cases in which it is rendered unnecessary by the admissions of the parties. As to account-books as corroborative evidence of separation in estate, see Jagun Koorr v. Raghoonundun Lall, 10 W. R (1868). As to Act II of 1855, see Ramkristo Pal v. Hurydos Koondoo, Marshall, 219 (1862).

(4) Ib.

(5) Ib: this decision, in so far as it held jama-wasil-baki papers might in certain cases be other than corroborative evidence only, appears to be dissented from by Prinsep and Bose, JJ, in Surnomoyi v. Johur Mahomed, 10 C. L. R, 546 (1882); v post; but it does not appear in the latter case what use was sought to be made therein of these papers; see also Gopal Mondul v. Nobo Kishen, 5 W. R (Act X), 83 (1866); Shib Pershad v. Promothonath Ghose, 10 W. R, 193 (1868) and post.

(6) R. v. Hurdeep Sahoy, 23 W. R, Cr, 27 (1875).

(7) Ib, Dwarka Doss v Sant Buksh, 18 A, 92 (1895).

payments to which they refer (1) This section only lays down that a plaintiff cannot obtain a decree by merely proving the existence of certain entries in his books of account, even though those books are shown to be kept in the regular course of the business He will have to show further by some independent evidence that the entries represent real and honest transactions and that the monies were paid in accordance with those entries No particular form or kind of evidence in addition to the entries is required Any relevant facts which can be treated as evidence within the meaning of the Evidence Act would be sufficient corroboration of the evidence furnished in the books of account, if true (2) Entries in accounts relevant only under this section are not by themselves alone sufficient to charge any person with liability : corroboration is required (3) But where accounts are relevant also under the second clause of section 32, they are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible under only this section, require corroboration Entries in accounts may in the same suit be relevant under both the sections , and in that case the necessity for corroboration does not apply (4) In a suit to recover money due upon a running account the plaintiff produced his account-books, which were found to be books regularly kept in the course of business, in support of his claim One of the plaintiffs gave evidence as to the entries in the account-books, but in such a manner that it was not clear whether he spoke from his personal knowledge of the transactions entered in the books, the entries in which were largely in his own handwriting or simply as one describing the state of affairs that was shown by the books. He was cross-examined, but no questions were asked him to show that he was not speaking as to his personal knowledge Held, that the evidence given as above should be interpreted in the manner most favourable to the plaintiff and might be accepted in support of the entries in the plaintiff's account-books which by themselves would not have been sufficient to charge the defendants with liability.(5) The mere production of the books without further proof is not enough(6) ; and such further proof must be afforded by substantive evidence independent of them, as by that of witnesses who speak to the payment of money or delivery of goods, or of evidence of receipt of, or given for, the same.(7) In a case decided under the repealed Act the Privy Council observed as follows :— " The evidence which the Subordinate Judge seems to have considered sufficient to prove the payments which the defendants were bound to prove consisted of the mercantile books of the banking firm and of a general statement by the defendant G. P. that the items in those books were correct. Their Lordships are of opinion ere

tly

to satisfy the burden of proof that lay upon him, particularly as with respect to ch better evidence.

ks of account are ok is not by itself relevant to raise an inference from the absence of any entry relating to a particular matter (9) The decision cited, if it is to be taken to have ruled that the fact

(1) R v. Hurdeep Sahoy, 23 W. R., Cr, 27 (1875).

(2) Yesuvadiyan v Subba Naicker, 52 I C, 704

(3) Abdul Ali v. Puran Mal, 49 P. R., C J No 82, p 289 (1914)

(4) Rampyarabai v. Balaji Shridhar, 6 Bom L R, 50 (1904); s c, 28 B, 294

(5) Dwarka Doss v. Sant Buksh, 18 A, 92 (1895).

(6) Sri Kishen v Hari Kishen 5 M. I A., 432; Sorabjee Vacha v. Koovurjee Manikjee, 1 M I A, 47; s c, 5 W. R. (P. C.), 29 (1866); Roushan Bibee v. Hurray Kristo, 8 C, 931.

(7) R v Hurdeep Sahoy, 23 W. R, Cr, 27 (1875); and v post

(8) Gunga Pershad v. Inderjit Singh, 23 W. R. (P. C.), 390 (1878).

(9) R v. Grees Chunder, 10 C, 1024 (1884) and see In the matter of Juggun Lall, 7 C. L. R., 356 of the absence of an entry is not evidence at all under any section of the act, is, it is submitted, erroneous, and has not in such sense been followed.(1) This section, which presupposes the existence of an entry and deals with the question how far existent entries tendered in evidence may fix parties with liability, does not obviously apply where there is no entry. Evidence that there is no entry is not admissible under this section, but may be so under other sections of the Act as for instance, the ninth and eleventh sections. Thus evidence having been given of the visit of M to Calcutta, which he denied, the latter's son was called by the other party to corroborate M's statement. He deposed that it was usual when a partner of his firm (to which both he and M belonged) made a journey on the firm's business to enter in the account-book the expenses of such journey, and he was allowed to produce the account-books of his firm and to state that there was no entry of expenses relative to such alleged visit.(2) If one party uses the statement of another against him, the whole of the statement must be put in evidence, but the Judge is not bound to believe the whole of it. If, for instance, the Judge upon the evidence really believes that the payments credited in a plaintiff's account-books were made, although he disbelieves the entry as to the amount of the debits, there is nothing inequitable in his giving the defendant the benefit of the payments. The Judge is bound to look at the whole of the entries, giving credit to such as he believes to be true, and discrediting those which he believes to be false.(3) Books of account regularly kept may be appealed to not only for the purpose of refreshing the memory of a witness but also as corroborative evidence of the story which he tells. Books of account containing entries referring to a particular transaction are not entitled to the same credit that is given to the books that record that transaction in common with other transactions in the ordinary course of business.(4) Where any company is being wound up, all books, accounts, and documents of the Company and of the liquidators are, as between the contributories of the Company, primâ facie evidence of the truth of all matters purporting to be therein recorded (5) As to a hathchitta book being, in the absence of fraud, binding upon the vendor for whose security it is kept, see the undermentioned case (6) Besides their use as corroborative evidence under this section, entries in books of account may, under the conditions mentioned in section 159, be used to refresh the memory, or as admissions (v. ante), and also under other sections of the Act. Further, statements made in books kept in the ordinary course of business by persons who cannot be called as witnesses, may be proved under the provisions of the second clause of the thirty-second section.(7)

Kept in the "regular course of business"

The book must have been kept in the regular course of business. A too limited meaning must not be given to this part of the section. Where one of the plaintiff's witnesses, named K T. stated in cross-examination that he had formerly been employed by C D, at intervals of a week or fortnight, to make entries in his (C D's) cash-book relating to private transactions which he (the witness) did from C's loose memoranda or from oral instructions given by C; and this cash-book was tendered in evidence; West, J., refused to receive it and said —"Under section 34 of the Evidence Act I do not think this book comes within

(1) Sagurmull v. Manraj, 4 C. W N., ccvii (1900). In Ram Pershad v. Lakpati Koer, 30 C., at p. 247, Lord Davey referred to R. v. Grees Chunder, 10 C, 1024, supra, and Lord Robertson said: "The Act applies to entries in books of account, but no inference can be drawn from the absence of an entry relating to any particular matter," but this remark must be taken to have been made with reference to the preceding statement of Counsel which referred to this section.

(2) Sagurmull v. Manraj, 4 C. W. N., ccvii (1900)

(3) Ishan Chunder v. Haran Sirdar, 11 W. R., 525 (1869), per Peacock, C. J.

(4) Bhog Hong-Kong v. Ramanathen Chetty, 29 C., 334 (1902); s. c., 4 Bom. L. R., 378

(5) Act VII of 1913 (Indian Companies), s. 240

(6) Gopee Mohun v. Abdool Rajah, 1 Jur N S., 358 (1866)

(7) v. s. 32, ante.

the designation of books of account regularly kept in the course of business It is C's private account-book, entered up casually once a week or fortnight, and with none of the claims to confidence that attach to books entered up from day to day or (as in banks) from hour to hour as transactions take place. These only are, I think, 'regularly kept in the course of business.' "(1) But in a later day to day or from hour to hour, make them entirely irrelevant It is thus not necessary that the entry should have been made at the time of the transaction, provided that the book has been kept in the regular course of business. In the case cited, the course of business in keeping the accounts in the office of a talukdari estate was that monthly accounts were submitted by karindars at the head office where they were abstracted and entered in an account-book, under the date of entry, that being in some cases many days after the transaction of payment or receipt, but the entries were made in their proper order, on the authority of the officer whose duty it was to receive or pay the money It was held, that the entry in the account-book was admissible as corroborative evidence of oral testimony as to the fact of a payment for what it was worth, objection

'his section (3)
, in the course ontractors by its servant or agent appointed for that purpose, are relevant as admissions against the firm (4)

The regular proof of books and accounts required that the clerks who have kept those accounts, or some person competent to speak to the facts should be called to prove that they have been regularly kept, and to prove their general accuracy (5) Yet the necessity of strict proof may be removed by the admission of the defendant, and the fact of the absence by him of any evidence to impeach the accuracy of the accounts, the disputed items being satisfactorily accounted for (6) The section simply requires that entries in accounts should, Proof of accounts.

Jama-wasil-baki papers are accounts made up at the end of the year show- Jama-wasil-baki papers balance e at the They been kept ot admis-
but it is

(1) Munchershaw Bejonji v New Dhurumsey Spinning Company, 4 B 576 (1880), at p 583, referred to in Ningawa v Bharmappa, 23 B, 66 (1898)

(2) Deputy Commissioner of Bara Banki v Ram Pershad, 27 C, 118 (1899); s c 4 C W N., 147

(3) Deputy Commissioner, Bara Banki v Ram Pershad, 27 C, 118 (1899) s c 4 C W N, 147

(4) Munchershaw Bejonji v. New Dhurumsey Spinning Co, 4 B 576 (1880)

(5) Dwarka Dass v Jankee Doss, 6 M I A, 88 (1855) at p 98

(6) As to Bankers' Books and the book of Post Office Saving Banks and Money Order Offices s Acts XVIII of 1891 and I of 1893

(7) R v Hanmanta 1 B 610 (1877), at p 616

(8) Field, Ev, 4th Ed, Appendix

(9) Ram Lall v Tara Soondari, 7 W R 280 (1867) · Kheero Monee v Bejoy Govind 7 W R 533 (1867) Bejoy Govind v Bheekoo Roy 10 W R 291 (1868) Jackson J, doubting perfectly right that a person who has prepared such papers on receiving payments of the rents, should refresh his memory from such papers when giving evidence as to the amount of rent payable ; when so used, they are not used as "independent evidence"(1) In a suit where the Lower Court found upon the evidence of (inter alia) certain jama-wasil-baki papers that the defendant had been the plaintiff's tenant at a certain rate of rent and gave the plaintiff a decree for that rent, it was observed as follows :—"Then it is said that, in the first Court, the Munsiff relied improperly on certain jama-wasil-baki papers. These jama-wasil-baki papers, we all know, are not evidence by themselves The mere production of such papers is not enough. But, coupled with other evidence, these papers often afford a very useful guide to the truth in cases of this kind ; and it is only right that those who have been collecting rent with the assistance of such papers should produce them in Court."(2) And in a suit(3) for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate it was said :—"The appellant's pleader contends that the jama-wasil-baki papers under the Evidence Act of [illegible] id that, therefore, the [illegible] be attached to them. [illegible] case, Belaet Khan v. Rash Beharee(4) we are not aware of any case in which this Court has regarded jama-wasil-baki papers in a different light In fact, so far as my own individual experience goes as a Judge of this Court, I have never known them to be looked upon as anything else. It seems to us, moreover, that the terms of section 34 of the Evidence Act do not give such papers any weight beyond that of corroborative evidence"(5)

Value of these papers

With regard to the value to be attached to these papers, there have been varying decisions In a suit for possession on the allegation of wrongful dispossession, it was said :—"Jama-wasil-baki papers in a case of this kind are really of very little consequence or value, as it is a matter of perfect ease for either party in the suit to produce any number of such papers : the absence of particular papers of this kind does not appear to be a very material omission"(6) In the case of Allyat Chinaman v. Juggut Chunder(7) the Court(8) remarked as follows : "But it is contended their allegations are corroborated by the jama-wasil-baki papers filed by the respondent, in which the names of these rayats are entered. Now, we observe that such a document—a private memorandum made for the zemindar's own use and by his own servants—must be looked upon [illegible] ier in a case like the present than [illegible] production of a document which [illegible] required pattern. Has then this [illegible] oubtless a person calling himself a kurkun's muharrir has been produced to depose to I C's.(the tehsildar's) signature to this particular paper ; but the tehsildar himself has not been examined, and it is not pretended that the man is either dead or unable to depose The best evidence was required to prove a document so naturally open to suspicion, and that evidence has not been given." In a subsequent case(9), Norman, J, referring to this case, said : "As to the value of jama-wasil-baki papers as evidence in rent-suits for the zemindar, the Deputy Collector quotes a passage from the 5th Volume of the Weekly Reporter, p 243, and treats it as if the language applied to all jama-wasil-bakis. But there is a wide distinction between the

(1) Akhill Chandra v. Nayu, 10 C., 248 (1883) and see Mahomed Mahmood v. Safar Ali, 11 C. 409 (1885)
(2) Roushan Bibee v. Hurray Kristo, 8 C. 931 (1882), per Garth, C. J.
(3) Surnomoyi v. Johur Mahomed, 10 C L. R, 545 (1882)
(4) 22 W. R, 549, v ante, p 360
(5) Ib. at p. 546, per Prinsep & Bose JJ
(6) Sheo Suhaye v. Goodur Roy, 8 W. R, 328 (1867), per Jackson, J.; but see Roushan Bibee v. Hurray Kristo, 8 C, 926 supra.
(7) 5 W. R, 242 (1866)
(8) Phear and Glover, JJ.
(9) Kheero Monee v. Bejoy Gobind, 7 W. R, 533 (1867) case with which the learned Judges were then dealing, and to which they applied their remarks, and the present. Here we have a series of jama-wasil-bakis apparently regularly kept for ten years, with one gap, from 1249 to 1258. There is a single paper unattested, the writer of which was not called and his absence not accounted for. Of course, all books of account and entries made by or on behalf of a party when produced as evidence in his favour must be received with caution; but there seems to be no reason why a series of collection-accounts, or jama-wasil-baki papers, appearing to be regularly kept, should not be entitled to credit on the same principle as other contemporary records made and kept by the party producing them in the ordinary course of his business" In a case(1), where, in order to rebut the presumption in favour of a permanent tenure created by the fourth section, Act X of 1859, the fact of the rate at which rent was paid having varied, was the fact sought to be proved by jama-wasil-baki and similar papers, it was observed :—" The Judge(of the Lower Court) alludes to the evidence of the gomastahs who filed or attested certain papers of the zemindar Such papers, we need hardly observe, cannot incontestably prove variations in a raiyat's jama, unless it can be shown not merely that the jama-wasil-baki and similar papers show a varying rate, but that the raiyat has paid ... it would be at the mercy of a zemindar ... witnesses attest these papers, but he ... is bound by them (2)

Jamabandi and other papers

The jamabandi shows the quantity of land held by each cultivator, its different qualities (i e, what is grown upon it), the rate of rent for each kind of land, the total rent for all the land of that particular kind in each cultivator's possession, and, lastly, the grand total for all the lands of every kind held by him (3) Many of the following cases were decided under the law as it stood prior to the passing of this Act In Gujjo Koer v Aalay Ahmed(4), D N Mitter, J, said "The jamabandi paper may be only used as corroborative evidence, viz, of the same value as that which is attached to books of account under Act II of 1855. These papers were admittedly prepared by the zemin-

...

years, Phear, J, said: "Had the former patwari come forward as a witness and sworn that he had collected rent from the defendant at the rate shown in the jamabandi and that the jamabandi was his own record of the fact, then this would have afforded very material evidence in support of the plaintiff's claim, but this man is not called and his jamabandi papers without him are valueless" (5) Jamabandi papers for the year in respect of which rent is claimed, made out by the c ... e evidence of his right to that ... patwari (as being the officer u ... t) as to the amounts collected in previous years, corroborated by the jamabandis of those years, would be about as conclusive in respect of the claim as it well could be.(6) But where the raiyats signed a jamabandi they were held to be bound by it (7) A tenant cannot be sued for enhanced rent upon a jamabandi to the terms of

(1) Gopal Mundul v. Nobo Kissen, 5 W R (Act X), 83 (1866)
(2) Ib, at p 84; but see Shib Pershad v Promotho Nath, 10 W R, 193 (1868), and Belact Khan v Rash Behary supra
(3) Field, Ev, 4th Ed, Appendix, 739
(4) 14 W R, 474 (1871), s c, 6 B L. R, App, 62, and see Chamarnee Bibee v Asenoolah Sirdar 9 W R, 451 (1868)
(5) Bhugwan Dutt v Sheo Mungal, 22 W R 256 (1874)
(6) Dhanookdharee Sahee v Toomey, 20 W R, 142 (1873), and see Kishore Dass v Pursun Mahtoon 20 W R 171 (1873)
(7) Watson & Co v Mahendra Nath, 23 W R, 436 (1875) which he has not consented (1) As to Jaibaki(2), Ism-navisi(3), Settlement Behari and Awargha(4), Hastabad(5), and Kanungo(6) papers, see cases cited below.(7) Although zemindari papers cannot be admitted under this section as corroborative evidence without independent evidence of the fact of collection at certain rates, they can be used as independent evidence if they are relevant under section 32 clause 2 ante.(8)

Relevancy of entry in public record made in performance of duty

35. An entry in any public or other official book, register, or record, stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or by any other person in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which such book, register, or record is kept, is itself a relevant fact.

Principle.—The principle upon which the entries mentioned in this section are received in ev [illegible] keeps the book, register c [illegible] their truth. It is not tha [illegible] own knowledge(9), for no person in a private capacity can make such entries.(10) They are admissible, though not confirmed by oath or cross-examination, partly because in some cases they are required by law to be kept and in all are [illegible] under [illegible] t- [illegible] ts [illegible] ve them by means of sworn witnesses (11) ss 65 (e), (f), 77 (Proof of public documents)

s. 74 (Definition of "public documents") ss 76, 77 (Certified copies of public documents)
s 78 (Proof of certain official documents)
s. 79 (Genuineness of certified copies) s 81 (Genuineness of documents directed to be kept by law)

---

(1) Enayetoolah Meah v Nobo Coomar, 20 W R, 207 (1873); Reazooddeen Mahommed v McAlpine, 22 W R., 540 (1874), both followed in Akshaya Kumar v Shama Churn, 16 C, 556 (1889)

(2) Boidonath Parooye v. Russick Lall, 9 W R, 274 (1868)

(3) Fergusson v. Government, 9 W. R., 158 (1868), Farquharson v. Dwarkanath Singh, 8 B L. R., 504 (1871), s. c., 14 M I A, 259; Erskins v. Government, 8 W R, 232 (1867)

(4) Bunwarry Lall v. Forlong, 9 W. R, 239 (1868)

(5) Ram Narsing v Tripoora Sundaree, 9 W R, 105 (1868).

(6) Kheero Monee v. Beejoy Gobind, 7 W R, 533 (1867); Nund Duntpat v. Taro Chand, 2 W R. (Act X), 13 (1865); Dwarkanath Chuckerbutty v Tara Soonduri, 8 W R, 517 (1867)

(7) And v Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 159.

(8) Charitar Rai v. Kailash Behari, 4 Pat L W., 213, s c, 44 I C., 422

(9) The dictum of Garth, C. J., which appears to be to the contrary in Saraswati Dasi v Dhanpat Singh, 9 C, 434 (1882), was dissented from in Shoshi Bhoosun v Girish Chunder, 20 C, 940 (1893), and is, it is submitted, opposed to the decision of the Privy Council in Lekraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, 5 C., 744, 751, 753 (1879); cf. also acceptance of this principle in ss 19A, 20, 21 of Act VI of 1886 (Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages), post; Graham v Phanindra Nath Mitra, 19 C. W N, 1038 (1915) (admissible irrespective of knowledge as when copy of another entry)

(10) Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 320; Deo v. Andrews, 15 Q B, 756, per Erle, J.; Sturla v Freccia, 5 App Cas, 624—644; Lyall v. Kennedy, 56 L. T, 647; Lekraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, ante. Where it is not shown that it is so made the entry is inadmissible: Sheo Balak v. Gaya Prasad, 20 A. L J, 601.

(11) Starkie, Ev., 272, 273; Taylor, Ev., § 1591; see remarks of Privy Council in Raja Bommarauze v. Rangasamy Mudaly, 6 M I. A., at p. 249 (1885); Samar Dosadh v Juggul Kishore, 23 C, 370, 371.

Public and Official books, registers, and records.—Marriage Register(1)—Acts XV of 1865 (as amended by Act XXXVIII of 1920, XX of 1922,) (Parsi Marriage and Divorce), ss. 6, 8, and Schedule, III of 1872 (Non Christian Marriage), ss 13, 13A, 14, and Schedule III (See Act XXX of 1923), XV of 1872, (Christian Marriage), ss. 28, 30, 31, 32—37, 54, 62, 79, 80, and Schedules III, IV (See Acts II of 1891; I of 1903; XIII of 1911, X of 1914), 14 & 15 Vic, Cap 40; Acts VI of 1886 (as amended by Act XXXVII of 1920) (Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages), ss 7, 9, 32—35A; I of 1876 (B C) (Mahommedan Marriages) amended by Act I of 1903,) (2) Birth and Death Registers:—Act VI of 1889 (Registration of Births, Deaths and Marriages), ss 7, 9, 18, 22, 25, 28, 32—35A. Registers or Records of Baptism, Naming, Dedication, Burial:—Act VI of 1886 as amended by Act XXXVII of 1920 (supra), ss 32—35A. Registers directed to be kept by the Indian Registration Act —Act XVI of 1908 (Indian Registration), Part XI (3) Log-books:—Act I of 1859 (Merchant Seamen), ss 103—108, 17 & 18 Vic, Cap 104 (Merchant Shipping Act), ss. 280, 285. Registers of Printing Presses, Newspapers and books published in India:—Act XXV of 1867 Printing Presses and Newspapers), ss. 6—8, and Part V, Registers of Inventions and Designs(4):—Act II of 1911 as amended by Act XVII of 1914 Sch., 1, and Acts XXVIII and XXIX of 1920 (Inventions and Designs), ss 20, 46, 71. Registers of Literary, Scientific and Charitable Societies.—Act XXI of 1860 (Registration of Societies) Registers of Companies.—Act VII of 1913 as amended by Acts X and XI of 1914 and Act XLII of 1920 (Indian Companies), ss 31, 40, 87, 120, 123—125, Part VI and passim (5) Register of British Ships.—Act X of 1841 (Ship Registry), s 4; 17 & 18 Vic, Cap 104 (Merchant Shipping Act), Records of Rights —Act XVII of 1887 (Punjab Land Revenue), N.-W P Act III of 1901 (N.-W. P. Land Revenue). Settlement Record —Beng Reg VII of 1822, cl. 9 s 9 Register of Tenures:—Act II of 1869 (B C) (Chota Nagpur Tenure) (6) Registers —Act VII (B C.) of 1876 ("Bengal Land Registration") (7) Registers of Common and Special Registry:—Act XI of 1859 (Sales for Arrears of Revenue, Lower Provinces), Thirty-ninth section (8)

Taylor, Ev, §§ 1591—1595, 1774—1780; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 271—273; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 24—129, 209—216, Steph Dig, Art, 34; Phipson, Ev., 5th, Ed, 320

COMMENTARY.

The Act does not contain any definition of either of the terms "public" or "official" or of a "public servant"; but for the purposes of interpretation reference may be made to the seventy-fourth(9) and seventy-eighth sections, post, and to section 21 of the Penal Code in which the term "public servant" is defined. Certain Acts declare that the officers appointed under them are to be deemed "public servants." Thus, every Registrar of Births and Deaths appointed under Act VI of 1886 is deemed to be a "public servant" within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code (10) So also are census officers(11), and "Public." "Official." "Duty."

(1) See also following repealed Acts: V of 1852 (Marriage by Registrars), ss 41, 42, 49, XXV of 1864 (Marriage of Christians), V of 1865, s 44 (Marriage of Christians); XV of 1872 (Indian Christian marriage)

(2) v Khadem Ali v. Tajimunissa, 10 C, 607 (1884)

(3) Act XVI of 1908 (Indian Registration) has been amended by Act IV of 1914 and Acts V and XV of 1917, which see See also repealed Acts: VIII of 1871; XX of 1866; XVI of 1864; XI of 1851, XVIII of 1847, IV of 1845; XIX of 1843; I of 1843, and XXX of 1838

(4) See also repealed Acts XV of 1859 (Patents), XIII of 1872 (Patterns and Designs) and V of 1888

(5) v. Ram Dass v Official Liquidator, 9 A, 366 (1887).

(6) v. Kirpal Narain v. Sukurmoni, 19 C, 99; Pertab Udai v Mast Das, 22 C., 112 (1894).

(7) v. post, cases under this Act.

(8) Lukhynarain Chattopadhya v. Gorachand Goosamy, 9 C, 116 (1882).

(9) See Somar Dosadh v. Juggul Kishore, 33 C, 366, 369 (1895).

(10) Act VI of 1886, s 14. A manager of an estate employed under the Court of Wards has been held to be a public servant under the Penal Code, R. v. Mathura Prasad, 21 A, 127 (1898); R. v. Sidhu, 26 A., 542 (1904), [Gorait].

(11) Act XVII of 1890 (Census), s. 3 Notwithstanding anything to the contrary registering officers appointed under Act XVI of 1908.(1) It has been queried whether the section applies to an entry in a public register or record kept outside British India (2)

This section in the main follows, but somewhat extends the English law on the same subject.(3) The book, register or record must either be a public or an official one, it must be one which the law requires to be kept for the benefit or information of the public(4): where so kept for information, the public having access thereto are not necessarily all the world, but may be limited (5) A "public document" has been defined to be a document that is made for the purpose of the public making use of it—especially where there is a judicial or quasi-judicial duty to inquire. Its very object must be that the public, all persons concerned in it, may have access to it.(6) Registers kept under private authority for the benefit or information of private individuals are inadmissible (7) Two classes of entries are contemplated by this section :(a) by the public servants, (b) by persons other than public servants In the case of the latter the duty to make the entry must be specially enjoined by the law of the country in which the book, register, or record is kept (the section thus includes British, foreign or colonial registers)(8) ; in the case of entries by the former it is sufficient for their admissibility that they have been made in discharge of official duty. But in either case, as well in India as in England, the entry must have been made by a person whose duty it was to make it Provision, however, is made by Act VI of 1886 for the admission in evidence under certain conditions of certain records and registers made [illegible] enjoined(9) (v post) In [illegible] made promptly or at least [illegible]
Thus an entry made more than a year after the event has been rejected (10) In India such delays will go to the weight of evidence only. Errors, erasures, alterations and m[illegible] of the entries.(11) [illegible] body keeping the [illegible] evidence of certain village-papers directed to be made by Reg VII of 1822, on the ground that they were not prepared or attested by the Settlement Officer in person as required by law, the Privy Council said: "When documents are found to be recorded as being properly made up and when they are found to be acted upon as authentic records, the rule of law is to presume that everything had been rightly done in their preparation unless the contrary appears."(13)

Documents held admissible or not. In the last case it was also held on the question whether there did or did not exist a custom in the Bahiulia clan in Oudh excluding daughters from inheriting, that entries in a wajib-ul-arz were properly admitted to prove this custom, in the Evidence Act, Records of Census are not admissible in evidence in any civil proceeding or any proceeding under Chapters 12 or 36 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act XVII of 1890, s. 12)

---

(1) Act XVI of 1908, s 84 (Indian Registration)

(2) Ponnammal v Sundaram Pillai, 23 M, 499 (1900).

(3) v. Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 162.

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 1592*n*, and cases there cited

(5) Sturla v Freccia, 5 App. Cas, 643.

(6) Ib

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 1592*n*, and cases there cited See Baij Nath v Sukhu Mahton, 18 C, 534 (1891).

(8) With regard to the books recognised as official registers and public documents in England, see Taylor, Ev, § 1596*n* Roscoe, N P. Ev, 124—129, 209—216 in particular as to births, deaths and marriages in India, pp. 127, 128; Ratcliff v Ratcliff, 1 Sw. & Tr, 467; Queen's Proctor v Fry, 4 P. D, 230; 14 & 15 Vic, Cap 40, s 11; 42 & 43 Vic, Cap. 8

(9) Act VI of 1886 (Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages), s. 35.

(10) Doe v. Bray, 8 B. & C., 813

(11) Lyell v Kennedy, 14 App Cas, 437 As to the correction of errors in registers under Act VI of 1886, v s 28 of that Act.

(12) Sturla v. Freccia, 5 App Cas, 643; Irish Society v Derry, 12 C. & E, 641

(13) Lekraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh, 5 C, 752

this custom being a usage of the kind which Settlement Officers were required by Reg VII of 1822 to ascertain and record.(1) And in another case it was held by the Privy Council that entries in village-records by the officer charged by Government with the duty of making them (as under the Oudh Land Revenue Ac

m

be

we

a

to the ordinary Mitakshara Law of Inheritance was forthcoming, the Court was right to disregard entries in a wajib-ul-arz which seemed rather to show the wishes of the persons consulted than to prove the custom (4) A wajib-ul-arz prepared and attested according to law is primâ facie evidence of the existence of any custom of pre-emption which it records It is a document of a public character which is prepared with all publicity, and accepted by the Courts as sufficiently strong evidence of the existence of any custom recorded in it so as to cast upon parties denying the custom the burden of proof.(5) In the undermentioned case it was held that upon a question of custom a wajib-ul-arz is generally more valuable as a record of opinion of persons presumably acquainted with the custom, than as an official record of the custom; but if duly attested by Settlement officials and signed by zemindars of the village to which it relates it may be admitted in evidence under this section (6) It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that an entry in a wajib-ul-arz is primâ facie a record of a custom rather than of a contract and that the fact that such a word as ikrarnama is used at the beginning or end of it is not enough to make the entry one of contract and not of custom.(7) The same High Court has held in a more recent case that where there is an entry as to pre-emption and no contrary evidence, the Court, having regard to the prevailing practice, can take the custom of pre-emption as proved (8) The Privy Council has recently held that a Riwaj-i-jam is a public record prepared by a public officer in discharge of his duties and under Government rules, and is clearly admissible, for instance, as rebuttable evidence of a custom of inheritance among Mahomedan Jats settled in the Jhang district of the Punjab (9) And in another later case the Privy Council has held that 'conclusive evidence' in section 10 of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869) means not only evidence of being taluqdars but also of having that status on the lists, and that a wajib-ul-arz which merely related traditions and purported to give the history of devolution in families (not the

---

(1) Ib A wajib-ul-arz is primâ facie evidence of custom: its object is to supply a record of existing local custom: see the following cases —Isri Singh v Gunga, 2 A, 876 (1880), Muhammad Hassan v Munna Lal, 8 A, 434 (1886); Deokinandan v Sri Ram, 12 A, 257 (1889), Superundhwaja Prasad v Garurudhwaja Prasad, 15 A, 147 (1893); Uma Parsad v Gandharp Singh, 15 C, 20 (1887); Sadhu Sahu v. Raja Ram, 16 A, 40 (1894); Garurudhwaja Prasad v Superundhwaja Prasad, 5 C W N, 33 (1900); s c, 23 A, 37, Ali Nasir v Manik Chand, 25 A, 90 (1902), Ram Sarup v. Sital Prasad, 1 All L J, 278 (1904); s. c, 26 A, 549 [Entries in wajib-ul-arz Entry is primâ facie evidence under this section of existence of custom; Gokul Dichit v. Maharaj Dichit, 2 All L. J, 790 (1905); Mussamat Lall v Murli Dhar, 10 C W. N, 730, P C, 8 B, 402

(2) Musst Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chanderpal Kunwar, P. C. (1909), 36 I A, 125.

(3) Mahomed Imam v Surdar Hussain, 2 C W. N, 737 (1898)

(4) Anant Singh v Durga Singh, P. C. (1910), 37 I A, 191; Mawasi v. Mulchand (1912), 34 A, 434

(5) Ali Nasir v. Manik Chand, 25 A, 90, 96 (1902).

(6) Musamat Parbati Kunwar v Rani Chanderpal Kunwar, 8 O C, 94, P. C. (1909), 36 I A., 125.

(7) Returaji Dubain v Pahlwan Bagal, F. B, 33 A, 196 (1911)

(8) Fazal Husain v. Muhammad Sharif, 36 A, 471 (1914).

(9) Beg v Allah Ditto, P C, 44 C, 749 (1917).

narrator's) was insufficient to rebut the presumption of a pre-existing custom (1) In a suit for possession of a fishery, an admission made by the defendant's predecessor in title in a written statement filed in a previous suit was allowed to be proved under this section by the production of the decree in such previous suit, it being the duty of the Court under the old practice of Mofussil Courts to enter in the decree an abstract of the pleadings in each case.(2) Quinquennial papers were rejected by the Lower Court: the latter was ordered to take these into consideration on the remand of the case (3) Revenue registers in the Madras Presidency, judgments, and other public records were admitted in Byathamma v. Avulla (4) The measurement papers prepared by Butwara Ameen do not(5), but chittas of the revenue-survey do(6), come within the description given in this section. The Batwara Khasra is generally prepared by the Amin on the admission of both the landlord and tenants regarding the latter's holdings and in cases of difference on the basis of summary decisions by the Batwara Deputy Collector and as such is very valuable evidence in subsequent disputes But a Khasra prepared not on the basis of admissions of all parties but on information supplied by one of them and without enquiry as to whether the rent resulting therefrom is that which is at the time payable, is absolutely valueless in evidence (7) Certified copy of papers in the Collectorate which of guardianship is a document which is issued to a person appointing him the guardian of a certain person on the ground that that person is a minor. This certificate is neither a book nor a register, nor a record kept by any officer in accordance with any law, but is a certificate, as it professes to be, of which there is only this one, and which is not a public record or register of any kind, but is a document issued to a particular person giving to that particular person, and only to him, a particular kind of authority. It is no evidence of minority under this section (9) A teis khana register (so called from the number of columns in the statement or register) prepared by a patwari under rules framed by the Board of Revenue under section 166 of Regulation XII of 1817, is not a public document nor is the patwari preparing the same a public servant It is a document prepared in the zemindar's sherista by the patwari who is paid by the zemindar but approved by the Collector. These registers are no doubt kept for the information of the

as official records of the facts prove an omission

nt and the General and Mauzawar Registers being intended to facilitate the collection of the Government Dues, there was no authority to enter therein lakherajes of less than

---

(1) Murtaza Husain Khan v. Muhammad Yasin Ali, P C., 38 A, 552 (1916)

(2) Parbuty Dassi v. Purno Chunder, 9 C, 586 (1883); followed in Byathamma v Avulla, 15 M, 23 (1891); and Thama v Kondan, 15 M, 378, cf. Subramanya v. Parauasmaran, 11 M, 12 (1887).

(3) Shoshi Bhusun v. Grish Chunder, 20 C, 942 (1893).

(4) 15 M, 24, 25, supra; Krishnamachariar v Krishnamachariar, 38 M, 166 (1915).

(5) Mohi Chowdhury v. Dhiro Missrain, 6 C. L R, 139 (1880).

(6) Girindra Chandra v. Rajendra Nath, 1 C W. N, 530, 533 (1897).

(7) Rai Babu Golab Chand v. Syed Salka Hussain, 5 Pat. L. W., 6, s. c, 36 I. C, 513.

(8) Khetra Nath Mandal v. Mahomed Alla Buksh, 23 C. W. N., 48, s c, 45 I C, 921

(9) Satis Chunder v. Mahendra Lal, 17 C, 849 (1890); followed in Gunjra Kuar v Ablakh Pande, 18 A, 478 (1896).

(10) Baiji Nath v Sukhu Mahton, 18 C, 534 (1891), followed in Samar Dosadh v. Jugolkishore Singh, 23 C, 366 (1895); Chalho Singh v Jharo Singh, 39 C, 995 (1912)

(11) Rai Bhaiya Diraj v. Beni Mahto, 22 C. W. N, 439.

100 bighas in area of lakherajes not the subject-matter of resumption proceedings. The Thak Officers not being empowered to measure and record lakherajes of less than 50 bighas in area, the omission of lakheraj as in the Thak statement was not of any probative value (1) The map and chitta prepared by the Partition Amin under the provisions of section 54 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act, proved to have been accurately prepared or to have been accepted and acted upon by the landlord, are, independently of this section, admissible in evidence against the landlord for the purpose of proving what lands were held and by what tenants.(2) Copies of judgments have been admitted under this section.(3) Statements of facts made by a Settlement Officer in the column [illegible] and the place assigned to the defendant's ancestor in it, the survey-officer not being at that time invested with authority to decide questions of tenure between the khot and his tenants is not even if regularly recorded, admissible.(4) A report on a temple by a khotwal made in 1840 at the instance of a Political Agent has been held relevant to the question of the ownership of the temple.(5) A statement of a witness to a police-officer under the provisions of section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, reduced to writing, is not a record within the meaning of this section (6) Neither is a butwara khasra prepared under the Estates Partition Act (V of 1897) (7) A recital in a judgment not inter partes of a relevant fact is not admissible in evidence under this section (8)

In a case in which the question was as to the existence of a customary right and certain reports of former Collectors on the subject of this right, made under sections 10 and 11 of Mad Reg VII of 1817, were used in evidence, the Privy Council said — Their Lordships think it must be conceded that when these reports express opinions on the private rights of parties, such opinions are not to be regarded as having judicial authority or force. But being the reports of public [illegible] entitle[illegible] ceeding [illegible]
the conduct and acts of parties in relation to them and the proceedings of the Government founded upon them "(9) A single document may be a public record within the meaning of this section, and a report made by a District Officer in the discharge of his duty as such officer has been held admissible in evidence (10) But the question whether such a document is an entry in an official book, register or record, will depend on the circumstances of each case. [illegible] certain charities had not been begun, it was held that this was not admissible under the first part of this section to prove that the charities were not performed

(1) Bipradas Pal Chowdhury v. Monorama Devi, 45 C, 574, s c, 22 C W. N, 396

(2) Dinanath Chandra v Nawab Ali, 49 I C, 984

(3) Krishnasami Ayyangar v Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M, 73, 78 (1895)

(4) Madhavrao Appaji v Deonak, 21 B, 695 (1896).

(5) Baldeo Das v. Gobind Das, 36 A., 161 (1914)

(6) Isab Mandal v R, 5 C W N, 65 (1900), s c, 28 C, 348

(7) Nandlal Pathak v Mohanth Chanurpat Das, 17 C. L J., 462 (1913); s. c., 17 C W. N, 779 (1913).

(8) Seethapati Rao Dora v. Venkanna Dora, 45 M, 332 (1922).

(9) Muttu Ramlinga v. Perianayagum Pillai, 1 I A, 209, 238, 239; Leelanund Singh v Mussamat Lakhputtee, 22 W. R., 231 (1874), in which a report was rejected.

(10) Raman v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad L J, 315.

(11) Mussamat Parbati Kunwar v. Rani Chanderpal Kunwar, P C. (1909), 36 I. A, 125 and v. Jigoyamba Bai Sahiba v. Venkatasami Ammal, 7 M. L. J., 117.

narrator's) was insufficient to rebut the presumption of a pre-existing custom.(1) In a suit for possession of a fishery, an admission made by the defendant's predecessor in title in a written statement filed in a previous suit was allowed to be proved under this section by the production of the decree in such previous suit, it being the duty of the Court under the old practice of Mofussil Courts to enter in the decree an abstract of the pleadings in each case.(2) Quinquennial papers were rejected by the Lower Court: the latter was ordered to take these into consideration on the remand of the case.(3) Revenue registers in the Madras Presidency, judgments, and other public records were admitted in Byathamma v. Avulla (4) The measurement papers prepared by Butwara Ameen do not(5), but chittas of the revenue-survey do(6), come within the description given in this section The Batwara Khasra is generally prepared by the Amin on the admission of both the landlord and tenants regarding the latter's holdings and in cases of difference on the basis of summary decisions by the Batwara Deputy Collector and as such is very valuable evidence in subsequent disputes But a Khasra prepared not on the basis of admissions of all parties but on information supplied by one of them and without enquiry as to whether the rent resulting therefrom is that which is at the time payable, is absolutely valueless in evidence.(7) Certified copies of papers in the Collectorate which primâ facie appear to be the record of a partition made in a proceeding under accordance with any law, but is a certificate, as it professes to be, of which there is only this one, and which is not a public record or register of any kind, but is a document issued to a partic and only to him, a particular kind under this section.(9) A teis khar columns in the statement or register) preparec by the Board of Revenue under section 166 c a public document nor is the patwari preparir is a document prepared in the zemindar's sherista by the patwari who is paid by the zemindar but approved by the Collector. These registers are no doubt kept for the information of the Collector, but that does not make them binding as official records of the facts contained in them.(10) A register of Minhai-dari villages is an official document (11) The Perganah and Kanango Registers are not kept punctiliously and are not admissible in evidence to prove an omission of an entry therein as to lakherajes. The Kanango account and the General and Mauzawar Registers being intended to facilitate the collection of the Government Dues, there was no authority to enter therein lakherajes of less than

(1) Murtaza Husain Khan v. Muhammad Yasin Ali, P. C, 38 A., 552 (1916).

(2) Parbuty Dassi v. Purno Chunder, 9 C, 586 (1883); followed in Byathamma v Avulla, 15 M., 23 (1891); and Thama v Kondan, 15 M, 378; cf. Subramanya v. Parawasmaran, 11 M, 12 (1887).

(3) Shoshi Bhusun v. Grish Chunder, 20 C, 942 (1893).

(4) 15 M, 24, 25, supra; Krishnamachariar v Krishnamachariar, 38 M, 166 (1915).

(5) Mohi Chowdhury v. Dhiro Missrain, 6 C. L R, 139 (1880).

(6) Girindra Chandra v. Rajendra Nath, 1 C. W. N, 530, 533 (1897).

(7) Rai Babu Golab Chand v. Syed Salka Hussain, 5 Pat L W., 6; s c, 36 I C, 513

(8) Khetra Nath Mandal v. Mahomed Alla Buksh, 23 C. W. N, 48; s c, 45 I C, 921

(9) Satis Chunder v. Mahendra Lal, 17 C, 849 (1890), followed in Gunjra Kuar v. Ablakh Pande, 18 A, 478 (1896).

(10) Baiji Nath v. Sukhu Mahton, 18 C. 534 (1891); followed in Samar Dosadh v. Jugolkishore Singh, 23 C, 366 (1895); Chalho Singh v. Jharo Singh, 39 C, 995 (1912)

(11) Rai Bhaiya Diraj v. Beni Mahto, 22 C W. N, 439.

100 bighas in area of lakherajes not the subject-matter of resumption proceedings. The Thak Officers not being empowered to measure and record lakherajes of less than 50 bighas in area, the omission of lakheraj as in the Thak statement was not of any probative value.(1) The map and chitta prepared by the Partition Amin under the provisions of section 51 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act, proved to have been accurately prepared or to have been accepted and acted upon by the landlord, are, independently of this section, admissible in evidence against the landlord for the purpose of proving what lands were held and by what tenants.(2) Copies of judgments have been admitted under this section.(3) Statements of facts made by a Settlement Officer in the column of remarks in the dharepatrak are admissible as being entries in a public record stating facts, and made by but the opinion of the surv

and the place assigned to being at that time invested with authority to decide questions of tenure between the khot and his tenants is not, even if regularly recorded, admissible (4) A report on a temple by a khotical made in 1840 at the instance of a Political Agent has been held relevant to the question of the ownership of the temple.(5) A statement of a witness to a police-officer under the provisions of section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, reduced to writing, is not a record within the meaning of this section (6) Neither is a butuara khasra prepared under the Estates Partition Act (V of 1897) (7) A recital in a judgment not inter partes of a relevant fact is not admissible in evidence under this section (8)

and secti

Cour

reports express opinions on the private rights of parties, such opinions are not to be regarded as having judicial authority or force. But being the reports of public officers made in the course of duty and under statutable authority, they are ey supply information of official pro-far as they are relevant to explain to them and the proceedings of the Government founded upon them."(9) A single document may be a public record within the meaning of this section, and a report made by a District Officer in the discharge of his duty as such officer has been held admissible in evidence.(10) But the question whether such a document is an entry in an official book, register or record, will depend on the circumstances of each case. Thus it has been held that answers to official enquiries made under the direction of Government are primâ facie admissible(11) and in another case where a Tahsildar reported in response to a Collector's requisition that according to a village-munsif certain charities had not been begun, it was held that this was not admissible under the first part of this section to prove that the charities were not performed

---

(1) Bipradas Pal Chowdhury v. Monorama Devi, 45 C, 574, s. c, 22 C W. N., 396

(2) Dinanath Chandra v Nawab Ali, 49 I C, 984

(3) Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M, 73, 78 (1895).

(4) Madhavrao Appaji v. Deonak, 21 B, 695 (1896).

(5) Baldeo Das v. Gobind Das, 36 A, 161 (1914)

(6) Isab Mandal v R, 5 C W. N, 65 (1900), s c, 28 C., 348.

(7) Nandlal Pathak v. Mohanth Chanurpat Das, 17 C L J, 462 (1913); s c, 17 C W. N, 779 (1913)

(8) Seethapati Rao Dora v. Venkanna Dora, 45 M., 332 (1922).

(9) Muttu Ramlinga v. Perianayagum Pillai, 1 I. A., 209, 238, 239; Leelanund Singh v. Mussamat Lakhputtee, 22 W. R., 231 (1874), in which a report was rejected.

(10) Raman v. Secretary of State, 11 Mad L J., 315.

(11) Mussamat Parbati Kunwar v. Rani Chanderpal Kunwar, P. C. (1909), 36 I. A, 125 and v. Jigojamba Bai Sahiba v. Venkatasami Ammal, 7 M. L J., 117.

at that date.(1) A document purporting to be a certified copy of a will taken from the Protocol of Record in Ceylon was held not to be admissible under this section.(2) But a certified copy of an entry in a register of births and deaths has been admitted under this section(3) and a certified copy of an order of a Probate Court and grant of letters of administration has been held admissible under sections 66 and 74.(4) A passage in a district Gazetteer describing the lineage of one of the leading families of the district cannot supply the want of a pedigree showing the family and the members of it.(5) The peon's return in execution proceedings being an official record made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, is admissible in evidence (6)

Proof by Public Record

If the entry states a relevant fact, then the entry having stated that relevant fact, the entry itself becomes by force of the section a relevant fact; that is to say, it may be given in evidence as a relevant fact, because being made by a public officer or other person in performance of a special duty it contains an entry of a fact which is relevant (7) The entry is evidence, though the person who made it is alive and not called as a witness. For the proof of public and official documents, see sections 76 to 78 (post). Though the register may be primâ facie concluded by them. They are only received as evidence and are open to be answered, and the statements in them may be rebutted.(9)

Facts of which public records are evidence

This section does not make the public book evidence to show that a par-

Where a husband and wife gal Act I of 1876, setting as a "special condition" that the wife under certain circumstances therein set out might divorce her husband, it was held in a suit by the husband that the "special condition" was a matter which, under the provisions of the Act, it the person enjoined to make that entry has no personal knowledge of that fact, as where it is reported to him.(15)

(1) Mallikarjuna Dugget v. Secretary of State for India, 35 M, 21

(2) Ponnammal v. Sundaram Pillai, 23 M, 499, 503 (1900)

(3) Krishnamachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 38 M., 166 (1916).

(4) Habiram Das v. Hem Nath Sarma, 19 C. W. N., 1068 (1915).

(5) Balmakund v. Bishva Nath, 52 I. C., 851

(6) Heramba Nath Bandopadhyaya v. Surendra Nath Mitra, 53 I C, 20

(7) Lekraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, 5 C, 754; Parbutti Dassi v. Purno Chunder, ante

(8) Ram Das v Official Liquidator, 9 A, 386

(9) Lekraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh, 5 C., 755.

(10) In the matter of Jaggun Lall, 7 C L R, 356 (1880); and see R. v. Greesh Chunder, 10 C, 1024 (1884); Ali Nasir v Manik Chand, 25 A, 90 (1902)

(11) Doe d. France v. Andrews, 15 Q B, 756, Roscoe, N P., Ev., 124.

(12) Cf. Lekraj Kuar v. Mahpal Singh, ante, and Parbutty Dassi v. Purno Chunder, ante

(13) Lyell v Kennedy, supra The section does not extend to entries which a Public Officer is not expected to and is not permitted to make. Ali Nasir v. Manik Chand, 25 A., at p. 104; the presumption as to truth and accuracy cannot be extended to entries which were never intended to find a place in the record. Ib., at p. 103.

(14) Khadem Ali v. Tajimunissa, 10 C., 690 (1884)

(15) Doe d France v. Andrews, supra, per Garth C. J., contra (v. post).

The admissibility of this class of evidence does not depend upon personal knowledge (v ante). And so when the manner, in which certain wajib-ul-araiz (or village-papers), directed to be made by Regulation VII of 1882, were made up with respect to a custom, appeared to be that the officer recorded the statements of persons who were connected with the villages in the pargana in which the taluq in suit was situated, and objection was taken to their reception in evidence on the ground that they were not prepared or attested by the Settlement Officer in person, as required by the Regulation, and that the papers on the face of them did not show that the officers had passed any judgment upon the information they received, it was held that it was no valid objection that the papers had been prepared and attested by officers subordinate to the Settlement Officer, and that the fact that the officers recorded these statements and attested them by their signature amounted to an acknowledgment by them that the information they contained was worthy of credit and gave a true description of the custom (1) And in a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it was held that entries in a public register kept in the Survey Office for the public benefit and under sanction of official duty are admissible under this section, even when they appear to be copies of earlier entries, which had needed re-copying, and therefore presumably made without personal knowledge.(2)

In Saraswati Dasi v. Dhanpat Singh(3), Garth, C. J, said that he thought that entries in a register made by the Collector under Ben Act VII of 1876 (Bengal Land Registration) could never be evidence of title or even of possession, except perhaps in the case of entries made under the fifty-fifth section(4), and that he understood this section (section 35) to relate to that class of cases where a public officer has to enter in a register or other book some actual fact which is known to him as for instance, the fact of a death or marriage, but that the entry that any particular person is the proprietor of certain land, is not properly speaking, the entry of a fact, but is a statement that the person is entitled to the property, and is the record of a right, not of a fact.(5) But in a subsequent case(6), in which the plaintiffs tendered in evidence extracts from the Collector's Register, kept under the same Act, for the purpose of showing that certain persons were the registered proprietors of a block of land and the quantity of land held by them, and his evidence was rejected by the lower Courts on the authority of Saraswati Dasi v Dhanpat Singh, it was held [dissenting from the dictum of Garth, C J., which, it was pointed out, was not assented to by Field, J, and was opposed to the decision of the Privy Council in Lekhraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh(7),] that the entries being of matters which it was the Collector's duty to record, and in the form directed by the law to be kept, certified copies thereof were admissible in evidence quantum valeat.(8) In the undermentioned case(9), the Court said with regard to these entries "as evidence of ownership their value may be, and I think is, very small, but it is impossible to say that they are not evidence, and I therefore admitted them."(10)

(1) Lekraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, supra, 751, 753.

(2) Graham v. Phanindra Nath Mitra, 19 C W N, 1038 (1915).

(3) 9 C, 431

(4) Act VII of 1876 (B C), which provides for cases in which there is a dispute, between two persons, as to which is entitled to be registered, and the Collector has to ascertain which of those persons is in possession

(5) Saraswati Dasi v. Dhanpat Singh, supra, 434, 435, and see Ram Bhusan v. Jebli Mahto, 8 C, 853 (1882).

(6) Shoshi Bhoosun v. Girish Chunder, 20 C, 940 (1893).

(7) 5 C., 744

(8) Shoshi Bhusun v. Girish Chunder, supra, 942

(9) Gungamoyee Devi v. Apurba Chandra, Suit No 632 of 1901, Cal. H. C, 28 Nov, 1902

(10) Per Henderson, J—The value of these entries (which have frequently been admitted in other cases) must to some extent depend upon the circumstances proved In the case cited, the following documents were admitted —Collectorate Registers, Registers under the Land Registration Act, Land revenue challans, Municipal Bills, Collectorate Bill Registers, Mutation-proceedings, Assessment Register

And in a case where there was no settlement of rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act, Chapter X, it was held that the entry in the record of rights, if it was duly published, would be only primâ facie and rebuttable evidence in favour of the landlord (1) It has been held in Bombay that a Collector's book is kept for purposes of revenue, not for purposes of title, and the fact of a person's name being entered in the Collector's books as occupant of land, does not, necessarily of itself establish that person's title, or defeat the title of any other person (2)

In certain cases the law has expressly declared of what particular facts these entries shall be evidence, as in the case of Marriage Registers. A certified copy purporting to be so entered or of the facts purporting to be so certified therein.(6) A certified copy of certain registers of marriage made otherwise than in performance of a special duty is admissible under Act VI of 1886 for the purpose of proving the marriage to which the entry relates.(7) The solemnization of a marriage between Christians in British India may be proved in England by the production of a certificate of the marriage from the India Office.(8) Foreign Registers of marriages and baptisms or certified extracts from them are receivable in evidence in England as to those matters which are properly and regularly recorded in them when it sufficiently appears that they have been kept under the sanction of public authority and are recognized by the tribunals of the country where they are kept as authentic records (9) Births : Deaths. In the undermentioned case a certified copy of an entry in a Register of Births was produced in proof of the date of the birth of a party and admitted in evidence.(10) A copy certified by the Registrar-General is admissible for the purpose of proving the birth or death to which the entry relates (11) A copy given by the Registrar is admissible for the same purpose. A certified copy of certain registers of birth, baptism, naming, dedication, death or burial made otherwise tha ... VI of 1886 for the ... ath or burial to ... ths kept at the ... this section and a certified copy of an extract therefrom is admissible in evidence (13) An entry made in a Chaukidar's register of births and deaths is not admissible in evidence where it neither purports nor is proved to be signed by the station of Calcutta Municipality and pottah granted by Government As to the nature of the latter, see Freeman v. Fairlie, 1 M I A, 330, 338, 346.

(1) Abdul Rasheed v Jogesh Chandra Roy (1906), 11 C. W. N., 153.

(2) Fatma v. Durya, 10 Bom. H. C R, 187 (1873), Bhagoji v Bapuji, 13 B, 75 (1888), Bibi Khaver v. Bibi Rukha, 6 Bom L. R, 983 (1904).

(3) Act VI of 1886 (Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages), s 9.

(4) Act XV of 1865 (Parsi Marriage, and Divorce), ss 6, 8

(5) Act III of 1872 (Non-Christian Marriage), ss 13, 14

(6) Act XV of 1872 (Christian Marriage), ss 79, 80.

(7) Act VI of 1886, s. 35 [As to Mahommedan marriages, v. Act I of 1876 (B C), and Khadem Ali v. Tajimunissa, ante]

(8) Westmacott v. Westmacott, P. D (1899), 183; s. c, 3 C. W. N., cxlii

(9) Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437, 448

(10) In the estate of Mary Goodrich (deceased), Payne v Bennett (1904), 1 K B, 138, diss. from In re Wintle, L. R., 9 Eq, 373. See 1 All. L. J, 76*n*.

(11) Act VI of 1886, s. 9.

(12) Ib., s. 35 As to Mad Act III of 1899, see Ramalinga Reddi v. Kotayya, 41 M, 26

(13) Sheikh Tamizuddin v. Sheikh Tazu, 46 C, 152; s. c, 22 C. W. N, 822; 46 I. C., 237.

writer, the register not being one directed to be kept by any law.(1) The register of members of a Company is primâ facie evidence of any matters by the Indian Companies Act directed or authorized to be inserted therein(2) A certificate of shares or stock is primâ facie evidence of the title to the shares and stock.(3) The reports of Inspectors of Companies are admissible as evidence of the opinion of the Inspectors in relation to any matter contained in such report.(4) The minutes of all resolutions and proceedings of general to be therein recorded.(6) All copies given under section 52 of the Indian Registration Act are admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the original documents.(7) An office-copy of a declaration under the Printing Presses and News-papers Act is primâ facie evidence that the person whose name is subscribed to such declaration was printer $\frac{\text{or}}{\text{and}}$ publisher of the periodical work mentioned in the declaration (8) The registers of Patents and Designs shall be primâ facie evidence of matters inserted therein in accordance with the Act.(9) And a certificate under the hand of the Controller as to any entry, matter or thing (made by him in accordance with the Act or the Rules thereunder) shall be primâ facie evidence of the entry having been made, and of the contents thereof and

Certified copies of c

with the Registrar

Certified and sealed copies of proceedings taken and had under the Insolvent Debtors Act are, without proof of seal or other proof whatsoever, sufficient evidence of the same (12) Entries in registers prescribed to be kept by the various Municipal Acts, and the proceedings of Municipal Committees recorded in accordance with the provisions of the particular Act applicable thereto, will also be relevant under this section , as also will all other entries in any public kept by any law for the Appendix) In England can be received to prove incidental particulars concerning the main transaction, even where these are required by law to be included in the entry.

It is said that if such particulars are necessarily within the knowledge of the Registering Officer they will be admissible, otherwise they seem to be evidence only when expressly made so by Statute (13) But it is submitted from a consideration of the words of the section and on the authority of the cases previously cited, that (even where not so expressly declared) a public register in India is evidence of all particulars required by law to be inserted therein, whether they relate to the main or incidental fact or transaction. Under this section a statement made by a Survey Officer, in a Village Register of Lands, that the name of this or that person was entered as occupant, would be admissible, if relevant

---

(1) Mohamed Jafar v Emperor, 22 O C, 250, s c, 54 I C, 166

(2) Act VII of 1913 (Indian Companies), s 40, Ram Das v. Official Liquidator, ante

(3) Act VII of 1913, s 29, and Act XI of 1914.

(4) Ib, s 143.

(5) Act VII of 1913, s 83

(6) Ib, s 240.

(7) Act XVI of 1908, s 57 See also Act VII of 1876 (B C) (Bengal Land Registration), Ram Bhusun v Jebli Mahto, 8 C, 853, Saraswati Dasi v Dhanpat Singh, Soshi Bhoosan v Girish Chunder, ante

(8) Act XXV of 1867; ss. 7, 8

(9) Act II of 1911; ss 20(3), 46(3).

(10) Ib, s. 71

(11) Act XXI of 1860 (Registration of Literary, Scientific and Charitable Societies), s. 19

(12) 11 & 12 Vic, Cap. 21, s 74, and see s 78

(13) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 323; Doe v. Barnes, 1 M & R., 386; Huntley v. Donovan, 15 Q B, 96.

but it would not be admissible to prove the reasons for such an entry as facts in another case.(1) So also statements of facts made by a Settlement Officer in the column of remarks in the dharepatrak, but not his reasons for the same, (even though they may consist of statements of collateral facts, which it was no part of his duty to enquire into) are admissible in evidence.(2) A recital in a public record as to a statement made by a public servant with reference to a particular statement of the grant by the Government may be admitted under this section as proving that the public servant made the statement that [illegible]

[illegible] right is being dealt with.(3) When a register is clearly an official document it is admissible in evidence under this section. But, if it could be shown in [illegible]

[illegible] admissibility in evidence of the contents of a register of Minhaidari villages, held that the register being clearly an official document, in the absence of anything to show that any particular part of it was in excess of the official duty, by reason of which it came into existence, and that in consequence that part might not be admissible, was admissible in evidence under this section (4) As to register of previous conviction, see case cited (5)

Proof of identity of parties named in record

The identity of the parties named in the register must be proved independently. Thus in the case of a register of marriage, as the register affords no proof of the identity of the parties, some evidence of that fact must be given, as by calling the minister, clerk or attesting witnesses or others present; the handwriting of the parties may be proved (6) To prove the handwriting of the parties in the register, it is not necessary to produce the original register for that purpose, but the witness may speak to the handwriting in it without producing (7) A photographic likeness may often be used for the purpose of identification, this is constantly done in actions for divorce(8), and has been even allowed in a Criminal trial. So where a woman was tried for bigamy, a photograph of her first husband was allowed by Willes, J., to be shown to the witness present at the first marriage, in order to prove his identity with the person mentioned in the certificate of that marriage (9)

Relevancy of statements in maps, charts and plans

36. Statements of facts in issue or relevant facts, made in published maps or charts generally offered for public sale, or in maps or plans, made under the authority of Government, as to matters usually represented or stated in such maps, charts or plans, are themselves relevant facts.

Principle.—This section includes two classes of maps: (a) published maps or charts generally offered for public sale; and (b) maps or plans made

---

(1) Govindrav Deshmukh v Rogho Deshmukh, 8 B, 745 (1884), followed in Madhavrao Appaji v. Deonak, 21 B, 695 (1896); as to Collector's books as evidence of title, v. Fatma v. Darya Saheb, 10 Bom. H. C. Rep, 187 (1873); Bhogoji v. Bapuji, 13 B., 75 (1888).

(2) Madhavrao Appaji v. Deonak, 21 B, 695 (1896).

(3) Sankaracharya Swamigal v. Manali Saravana, 51 I C, 876.

(4) Rai Bhaiya Dirgaj v. Beni Mahto, 22 C W N, 439; s c, 23 C L J., 1: 47 I C., 1

(5) Maung Tha Can v. Emperor, 19 Cr L J, 11; s c, 42 I C, 923

(6) Roscoe, N P. Ev., 124

(7) Ib.; Sayer v. Glossop, 2 Exch, 409

(8) In Martin v. Martin, 3 C. W. N. lxxvii (1899), the respondent was identified by her photograph. However in Frith v Frith, L. R. P. D. (1896), 74, it was held that in matrimonial cases, except under very special circumstances, the Court will not act upon identification by a photograph only (9) Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 124; R v Tolson, 4 F. & F., 103.

under the authority of Government. The admissibility of the first class depends on the ground that the publication being accessible to the whole community and open to the criticism of all, the probabilities are in favour of any inaccuracy being challenged and exposed(1); and of the second class on the ground that being made and published under the authority of Government, they must be taken to have been made by, and to be the result of, the study or inquiries of competent persons: and further (in the case of surveys and the like), they contain or concern matters in which the public are interested (2)

s 3 ("Fact in issue.")
s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 (A map or plan is a "document")
s. 57 (13) (Reference to maps by Court)
ss. 74—77 (Proof of public documents)
s 83 (Presumption of accuracy in case of Government maps or plans) s 83 (Proof of maps or plans made for the purpose of any cause.) s 87 (Presumption as to any published map or chart) s 90 (Presumption as to map or plan 30 years old)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 1674, 1767—1773, 1777, Starkie, Ev, §§ 284—291, 404—408, Roscoe, N P. Ev, 194—196, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 358, Steph Dig, Art 35

COMMENTARY

Maps, Charts and Plans

This section is a considerable extension of the English rule.(3) In the well-known English case of R v Orton, maps of Australia were given in evidence to show the situation of various places at which the defendant said he had lived (4) So also in the case of Prahlad Sen v Rajendro Kishor Sing(5), the Privy Council compared one of the maps in the suit with "any good general map of India"(6) A mahaluari map is relevant under this section (7) As to the rule that maps drawn for one purpose are not admissible in a suit for another purpose, see Note to section 83. The maps and plans made under the authority of Government referred to in this section are (as has also been held in the case of section 83) maps or plans made for public purposes, such as those of the survey which have been in numerous cases referred to and admitted in evidence (v post) The provisions of the section are not applicable to a map made by Government for a particular purpose, which is not a public purpose, such as the settlement of the silted bed of a certain river (8) The statements must be as to matters usually represented or stated in such maps i e (generally speaking), in the first class of maps, the physical features of the country, the names and positions of towns, and the like; and in the second class, not only such features but also boundaries of villages, estates and (in khasra maps) fields (9) In a case decided under the 13th section, the corresponding section of Act II of 1855, it was held that "Government survey-maps are evidence not only with regard to the physical features of the country depicted but also with regard to the other circumstances which the Officers deputed to make the maps are specially commissioned to note down, and that an ordinary Government survey-map was for this reason evidence as to the boundaries of any plots or estates which stand under a separate number in the Collector's books Further than this, they are not evidence as to rights of ownership"(10) In the first(11) of the undermentioned

(1) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 166
(2) Cf Taylor, Ev, § 1767
(3) v Taylor, Ev, §§ 1770, 1771, Steph Dig, Art 35
(4) Steph Dig, Art 35, p 47, note and for recent case on admissibility of railway maps, see Blue & Deschamps v Red Mountain Railway Co, P C (1909), A C, 361
(5) 2 B L R (P C), 111 (1869), s c, 12 W R (P. C), 6
(6) Ib, at p 139
(7) Madhabi Sundari v Gajendra Nath, 9 C W N, 111 113 (1904)
(8) Kanto Prasad v Jagat Chandra, 23 C, 335 (1895)
(9) Whitley Stokes, Vol II, p 878
(10) Koomodinee Dabia v Poorno Chunder, 10 W R 300 (1868) Ref to in Choudhry Nazirul Haq v Abdul Wahab, 1 Pat 65 (1922)
(11) Shusee Mookhee v Bissessuree Dibia 10 W R, 343 (1868)

cases, pencil memoranda on a Government survey-map were held to be admissible. and in the second(1), the Court observed with reference to a chart of the River Hooghly :—" The chart to which I have already referred is issued under the authority of Government, and the notes thereon may be referred to as authoritative. I find one note which is worthy of attention worded thus: Owners of vessels are strongly advised not to risk their vessels laying at anchor awaiting orders at the Sandheads between the months of April to November inclusive. Vessels are recommended to go into Saugor Roads where there is a safe anchorage and telegraph station." The record of the proceedings and the maps of the survey, being public documents, are provable by means of certified copies.(2) Maps or plans made by Government are to be presumed to be accurate, but maps or plans made for the purpose of any cause must be proved to be so.(3) This provision refers to maps or plans made by Government for public purposes only; a map made by Government for a particular purpose, which is not a public purpose, may be admissible, but its accuracy must be proved by the party producing it.(4) The Court may, however, presume that any published map or chart, the statements of which are relevant facts, was written and published(5) by the person and at the time and place by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published The Court may resort for aid to maps as documents of reference (6) The presumption provided for by section 90 (post) is applicable to maps or plans as well as to any other document purporting or proved to be 30 years old (7) The thirteenth section, the corresponding section of Act II of 1855, included—but the present section is silent as to—maps made under the authority of any public municipal body

Survey-maps as evidence of possession.

There are numerous decisions as to the true effect and value which should be assigned to survey-maps(8) in evidence. " If these cases are carefully examined, it will be found there is no real conflict of decisions between them —reasonable allowance being made for observations, which were directed, not to the consideration of a general proposition, but to the particular facts of the case which happened to be at the time before the Court."(9) A survey in these provinces is not made under the authority of any enactment of the Legislature. It is a purely executive act At the same time the proceedings of the Survey-authorities have been recognized by the Legislature, and are referred to in Act IX of 1847 (Assessment of New Lands) (10) The co-operation of the parties interested in the measurement is required to be sought by the Survey Officers It is reasonable to presume that the parties were present at, and had notice of [illegible] ourse, it was [illegible] survey must [illegible] therefore is evidence between the parties quantum valeat.(12) That it is good evidence of

(1) In the matter of the German S S "Drachenfels," 27 C., 860, 871 (1900).

(2) Ss 74—77, post

(3) S. 83, post.

(4) Kanto Prashad v. Jagut Chandra, 23 C, 335 (1895).

(5) S 87, post.

(6) S 57, post

(7) Ss 3, Illust. ante, and 90, post. See Madhabi Sundari v. Gajendra Nath, 9 C W N, 111, 113 (1904).

(8) For a description of the maps of the Trigonometrical Survey, thakbast (boundary mark) and khasra (detailed measurement-maps) and chittahs, see Field, Ev, 4th Ed, 215, 216, ib, 6th Ed, 166—168, and Field's "Land-holding and the relation of Landlord and Tenant." As to maps other than those of the survey, see Junmajoy Mullick v. Dwarkanath Mytee, 5 C, 287 (1879); Kanto Prashad v. Jagat Chandra, 23 C, 335 (895); and Note to s 83, and remarks of Jackson, J, in Collector of Rajshahye v. Doorga Soonduree, 2 W. R, 211, 212 (1865).

(9) Nobo Coomar v. Gobind Chunder, 9 C L R (1881); per Field, J., at p 307.

(10) Ib., see also Acts XXXI of 1858 (Alluvial Lands, Bengal); IV of 1868 (B. C); V of 1867 (Bengal Survey).

(11) Ram Narain v. Mohesh Chunder, 19 W R, 202 (1873).

(12) Radha Chowdhrain v. Gireedharee Sahoo, 20 W. R, 243 (1873).

possession has been declared by many decisions.(1) When the question is simply one of title, and the available evidence is proof of possession at a particular period, a survey-map is, and ought to be, most cogent evidence.(2) But it is not conclusive evidence of possession.(3) A survey-map is evidence of possession at a particular time, the time at which the survey was made.(4)

But evidence of possession, however short, is evidence of title, and if evidence of possession, they are also therefore evidence of title (5) There are some cases which seem to imply the contrary.(6) "But the proposition which is to be deduced from all the cases is this : a survey-map is not direct evidence of title in the same way as a decree in a disputed cause is evidence of title, for the Survey Officers have no jurisdiction to enquire into or decide questions of title. Their instructions are to lay down the boundary according to actual possession at the time ; and this is what they do ascertaining such actual possession as well as they can ; and, if possible, by the admissions of all the parties concerned A survey-map is, therefore, good evidence of possession according to the bot

hy

the quoted this Court has (to my mind, very properly) refused to lay down any general rule as to the weight to be assigned to a survey-map as a piece of evidence . and in one case(7) a learned Judge of this Court declined to say whether in any particular case maps ought not to be corroborated by independent evidence A survey-map is then direct evidence of possession · and with reference to particular circumstances of each case, the Courts must decide whether this evidence of possession is sufficient to raise a reasonable presumption of title"(8)

---

(1) Gour Monee v Huree Kishore, 10 W R 338 (1868), Shusee Mookhee v Bissessuree Debee, 10 W R, 343 (1868), Prahlad Sen v Budhu Singh, 2 B L R (P C), 140 (1869), Gudadhur Banerjee v Tara Chand, 15 W R, 3 (1871), Radha Chowdhrain v Gireedharee Sahoo, 20 W R 243 (1873), Kashee Kishore Rofi v Bama Soondaree, 23 W R, 27 (1875); Jugdish Chunder v Chowdhry Zuhoor, 24 W R, 317 (1875) Charoo v Zobeida Khatoon, 25 W R, 54 (1876), Prosonno Chunder v Land Mortgage Bank, 25 W R 453 (1876) Mohesh Chunder v Juggut Chunder, 5 C 212 (1879) [discussed in 15 C, 353], Syam Lall v Lachman Chowdhry, 15 C, 353 (1888), Jaytara Dassee v Mohamed Mobarak, 8 C, 983 (1882) and see case cited, ante and post

(2) Mohesh Chunder v Juggut Chunder, 5 C, 212 (1879), per Jackson, J, at p 214

(3) Mahomed Meher v Sheeb Pershad, 6 W R, 267 (1866), and for a reason why it is not, see remarks of the court in the same Gudadhur Banerji v Tara Chand, 15 W R, 3 (1871), Prosonno Chunder v Land Mortgage Bank, 25 W R, 453 (1876)

(4) Syam Lall v Luchman Chowdhry, 15 C, 353 (1888)

(5) Shusee Mookhee v Bissessuree Debee, 10 W R, 343 (1868) per D N Mitter, J, at p 344, Gooroo Pershad v Bykunto Chunder, 6 W. R, 82 (1866), Oomut Fatima v Bhujo Gopal 13 W R, 50 (1870), Ram Narain v Mohesh Chunder, 1 W R, 202 (1873), Pogose v Mokoond Chander, 25 W R, 36 (1876), Syam Lall v Luchman Chowdhry, 15 C, 353 (1888) Satcouri Ghose v Secretary of State, 22 C 252, 258 (1894), Krishnacharya v Lingawa 20 B, 270 (1895)

(6) Mahima Chandra v Rajkumar Chuckerbutty 1 B L R (A C) 5 (1868) ["This decision, however, must be understood with reference to the facts of that particular case in which the award and the maps were the very subjects of litigation" Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 169, Gourmonee v Huree Kishore, 10 W R, 338 (1858), following Collector of Rajshahye v Doorga Sunduree, 2 W R, 210 (1865) Jackson J doubting [Explained in Oomut Fatima v Bhujo Gopal, 13 W R, 50 (1870) Ram Narain v Mohesh Chunder, 19 W R 202 (1873), and in Mohesh Chunder v Juggut Chunder, 5 C, 212 (1879)]

(7) Ram Narain v Mohesh Chunder, 19 W R, 202 (1873), ref to in Chowdhry Nazirul Haq v Abdul Wahab 1 Pat, 65 (1922)

(8) Nobo Coomar v Gobind Chunder, 9 C L R per Field, J at p 309 And so a survey or Kistwari map has been recently held to be evidence between the parties quantum valeat both as regards possession and title Chowdhury Nazirul Haq v Abdul Wahab, 1 Pat 65 (1922)

And in Syam Lal Saha v. Luchman Chowdry(1) the High Court said: "We are not prepared to say that in no case can the evidence of survey-maps be sufficient evidence of title. Each case must be decided upon its own merits." But though evidence of title, maps and survey-proceedings are not conclusive,(2) the Privy Council have held that maps and surveys made in India for revenue-purposes are official documents prepared by competent persons and with such publicity and notice to persons interested as to be admissible and valuable evidence of the state of things at the time they were made They are not conclusive, and may be shown to be wrong, but in the absence of evidence to the contrary they may be judicially received in evidence as correct when made.(3) This decision was followed in the undermentioned case(4), in which it was held that the object of the thak map being to delineate the various estates borne on the revenue-roll of the District, the entry in thak map that certain lands formed part of a certain estate becomes a relevant fact under this section, and such entries [illegible] Court [illegible] map(6), see the cases mentioned below In the undermentioned case it was held that a thakbust map was not only evidence but very good evidence as to what the boundaries of the property were at the time of the Permanent Settlement and also as to what they (by the admission of the parties) were in 1859, when the survey was made and maps prepared.(7) As to maps used in subsequent suit admitted to be correct in prior arbitration-proceedings(8), and as to the amount of accuracy to be expected in a thak map(9), see the undermentioned cases.

And in a case where the ownership of land was disputed and the plaintiff produced survey-maps of the year 1852-1853 and also a thakbust map which contained a statement supporting his case, and it was shown that the predecessor of the defendant had had full notice of the thak proceedings, it was held that the evidentiary value of the plaintiff's thakbust and survey-maps was greater than that of an unsupported survey-map of the year 1855-1856 produced by the defendant; and that the statements of zemindars or their agents contained in thakbust maps may amount to admissions that the land belonged to one village, and that such admissions should be greatly relied on as made at a time when there was no dispute as to boundaries.(10)

Evidential value of survey-maps.

"Thak maps are, as has been pointed out in many decisions of this Court, good evidence of possession, but the value of that evidence varies enormously. In the case of a thak map containing definite landmarks and undisputed boundaries signed by the parties or their accredited agents and representing land which has been brought under cultivation, and is in the possession of raiyats whose names are known or can be discovered from the zemindary papers, a thak

(1) 15 C, 353 (1888).

(2) Pogose v. Mokoond Chunder, 25 W R, 36 (1876), Luleet Narain v Narain Singh, 1 W R, 333 (1865), Thacoor Bromma v Thacoor Lullit, W. R. (1864), 120, Koylash Chunder v. Raj Chunder (Survey-award), 12 W. R., 180 (1869).

(3) Jagadindra Nath v Secretary of State, 30 C, 291 (1902), and Secretary of State for India v. Birendra Kishore Manikya, P C, 44 C, 328 (1917).

(4) Abdul Hamid v Kiran Chandra, 7 C. W. N, 849 (1903), and see Tajhoo Damor Singh v. Koluor Jagatpal Singh (1906), 11 C. W. N, 230

(5) Radha Churn v Annund Sein, 15 W. R., 445 (1871).

(6) Burn v. Archunbit Roy, 20 W. R, 14 (1873)

(7) Syama Sundari v. Jago Bhundu, 16 C, 186 (1888), see also Satcouri Ghose v Secretary of State, 22 C., 252, 258 (1894); had it not been questioned, it would have seemed almost unnecessary to state that oral evidence is sufficient to prove boundaries: Surat Soonduree v Rajendra Kishore, 9 W. R, 125 (1868).

(8) Huronath Sircar v. Preonath Sircar, 7 W. R, 249 (1867); v Note, s. 33, ante.

(9) Rani Monmohini v Watson & Co, 4 C W. N, 113 (1899); s c., 27 C., 336.

(10) Dunne v. Dharani Kanta Lahiri (1908), 35 C, 621, and see Abdul Hamid Mian v. Kiran Chandra Roy (1903), 7 C. W. N, 849.

map is very valuable evidence of possession. But the value of such a map is greatly diminished when we find that there are no natural landmarks delineated thereupon; that the land was jungle when measured, that the boundaries are not discoverable from a mere inspection of the map, and that neither the zemindars nor their agents have by their signatures admitted the correctness of the thak."(1) "The officers engaged in survey-operations are required to seek the co-operation of the parties interested in the measurement. These parties are to be induced, if practicable, to make themselves acquainted with the contents of the thak and khasra plans, and to sign them or state their objections in writing Persons who are familiar with what takes place in these provinces when Survey Officers commence operations in a locality, are well aware that neighbouring proprietors do, as a rule, carefully watch their proceedings; and if the persons interested consider that the boundary demarcated by those officers between any two estates is incorrect, they take immediate and prompt action to object and to have the map rectified We must then look at the matter somewhat in this way: the proprietors of estates have reasonable notice, and may be presumed to be well aware, that the boundaries are about to be demarcated upon a map made by imperial Government Officers, and which is by consent and usage regarded as important evidence in cases of boundary dispute, they are invited to co-operate and to point out to the Survey Officers what they admit to be true boundaries between their estates (2) If they or their agents point out the boundaries, and the boundaries so pointed out are demarcated on the survey-map, which is then signed by them, this map is good evidence of an admission as to the correctness of the boundaries shown thereon (3) If the proprietors or their agents do not actively point out the boundaries but afterwards sign the map, it is still evidence of an admission, though not of so strong a nature as in the case first put. If these Survey Officers, without active assistance from those interested, demarcate the boundaries, and no objection is raised to their correctness, the reasonable supposition is that objections would have been raised if the boundaries were not correct, and we have here admission by conduct If objections are raised and abandoned, or if objections taken before the Survey Officer unsuccessfully, are [illegible] rectified by a [illegible] conduct, a suit has

[illegible] ccessfully, there is a judicial decision as to the accuracy of the map or otherwise. The value of any particular survey-map in evidence will vary according as the above circumstances are or are not brought out in evidence, and of course as time passes on, and the production of living witnesses of what took place at the time of the [illegible] culty is increased value of a parti-ved that a person

---

(1) Joytara Dassee v Mahomed Mobaruck, 8 C, 975, per Field, J, at p 983, see also Radha Chowdhrain v Gireedharee Sahoo (conduct of parties important), 20 W R, 243 (1873), Brojonath Choudhry v Lal Meah, 14 W R, 391 (1870), (map not questioned), Romanath Roy v Kallu Proshad, 18 W R, 346 (1872) (map admitted to be correct), Radhika Mohun v Gunga Narain, 21 W R, 115 (1874) (map not objected to), and 5 C, 212, ante, Satcowri Ghosh v Secretary of State, 22 C 252, 257 (1894) Ref to in Choudhry Nazirul Haq v Abdul Wahab, 1 Pat. 65 (1922)

(2) See remarks of Jackson, J, in Collector of Rajshahye v Doorga Soondaree, 2 W R, 211 (1865)

(3) Ib, at p 212 "The map shows that at the time of the survey, the plaintiff alone laid claim to the land and that no one disputed his claim Such a public assertion of a right of ownership is also, I think important evidence of his title In the absence of direct title-deed, acts of ownership are the best proofs of title. In connection with the subject of this class of evidence, s 13 cl (b) ante, should be kept in mind

(4) Nobo Coomar v Gobind Chunder, 9 C, 305 (1881), per Field, J, at pp 308, 309 against whom a thak or survey is attempted to be used expressly consented to the delineation or admitted the correctness of such maps, they have no binding effect.(1) This class of evidence has been said to be valuable because it is not within the power of the parties to manufacture, and it comes from a public office.(2) But a survey-map is a piece of evidence like other evidence in a case and can be of no effect in determining the burden of proof (3) A thakbust map is in no sense a record of tenures subordinate to Government revenue-paying estates, and is of no value as evidence in a suit in which the extent of interest of shikmee talookdar is matter for determination.(4) In every case the question what lands are included in the Permanent Settlement of 1793 is a question of fact and not of law. The onus of proving that the Government Revenue fixed in 1793 is assessed on any particular lands as being included in the Permanent Settlement is on those who affirm that such is the case Assuming lands not to be within the Permanent Settlement of 1793, the last survey made under the third section of Act IX of 1817 is to be taken as the starting point for deciding when the next survey is made whether lands are within the fifth and sixth sections of that Act. But when the question is whether lands shown in a particular thak or survey-map made since 1793 were or were not included in the lands charged with the assessment permanently fixed in 1793, the last thak or survey-map cannot in all cases be acted upon or treated as decisive in the absence of evidence to the contrary.(5)

Chittahs

d made in the prese ags or parcels, and f each dag, its bour who holds it. It may be otherwise when the zemindar and raiyats are not amicable; but a chittah made when there is no dispute going on is valuable as an admission by the when there was no contro- vers l Moyee Dabia(7), certified copi epartment were received in evidence,(8) Bayley, J., remarking that these papers are the primary records out of which a survey-map is made and are originally component parts of the map and evidence of the fact of demarcation of lands and properties measured and 'e and to the rties; for legally they were present when they had the opportunity of being present. This was a decision under the 11th and 13th sections of Act II of 1855; but on the view there taken of the nature of chittahs they would also have been admissible under this section. But whether admissible or not under this section as component parts of maps or as plans, " a chittah of the revenue-survey is a public record; viz., the record of public work carried on by a public officer—the Superintendent of Survey—under the directions of the Government of

(1) Kristo Moni v Secretary of State, 3 C W. N, 99, 104 (1898) But in the absence of evidence to the contrary they may be judicially received in evidence as correct when made. Jagadindra Nath v Secretary of State, 30 C, 291 (1903).

(2) Gudadhur Banerjee v. Tara Chand, 15 W. R., 3 (1871)

(3) Narain Singh v Nurendro Narain, 22 W R, 2?7 (1874).

(4) M[illegible] Chunder v Wise, 22 W. R, 277 (1876).

(5) Jagadindra Nath v Secretary of State, 30 C., 291 (1903)

(6) Field, Ev., 737, 4th Ed., Appendix.

(7) 8 W. R, 167 (1867).

(8) In the following cases also survey chittahs were received as evidence: Sudukhina Chowdrain v Rajmohan Bose, 3 B L R (A C.), 381 (1869); Mahomed Fedye v Ozeeood-deen, 10 W. R, 340 (1868), Surrossuty Dossee v Umbica Nund, 24 W. R, 192 (1875); Taruknath Mookerjee v. Mohendranath Ghose, 13 W R, 56 (1870); Moocheeram Majhee v. Bissumbhur Roy, 24 W. R., 410 (1875): Arman Bibi v. Amiranissa (No 1294 of 1871, decided on 28th Feb, 1872 by the Calcutta High Court cited in Field, Ev. p 227; ib, 6th Ed, 168).

Bengal "(1), and is therefore admissible under the thirty-fifth section (2) Any chittah, moreover, if made by the persons and under the circumstances mentioned in the 18th section, may be admissible under that section as documentary admissions: or under the 13th section as an assertion of right.(3) The Privy Council in the case of Eclowrie Singh v. Heeralall Seal(4), speak of chittahs as no evidence of title in boundary disputes between rival proprietors when they are without further account, introduction or verification. "By these words," said Hobhouse, J., "it seems to me, their Lordships held that, if chittahs are relied upon without any account given or verification made of them, then they are not to be considered as evidence; but here an account was given of the chittahs and they were properly introduced and verified, and therefore that remark of their Lordships does not seem to me to apply to the chittahs now before us They were therefore, I think, properly used as evidence in this case."(5) "It may here be observed," says Mr. Field, "that the reports do not always show what was the precise nature of the chittahs offered in evidence in each particular case, and to this may be attributable some of the difference of opinion which seems to prevail upon the subject in question There is, and ought to be, a wide distinction as regards both weight and admissibility, between the chittah and other measurement papers of the revenue-survey of the country, designed and carried out as an executive act of State; the similar paper of a decennial survey made under the provisions of Act IX of 1847 (v. ante), the chittahs of a measurement of a particular khas mehal made by Government as zemindar (6), the chittahs of a measurement made by a private zemindar(7) at a time when the relations between him and his raiyats were friendly, and the chittahs of a measurement made by the same zemindar when disputes had arisen as to enhancement of rents. If the original records of the reported cases were examined with reference to this distinction, it is more than probable that any seeming difference of opinion may be found reconcilable with sound and uniform principle."(8) Where chittahs were produced by the plaintiff as evidence of certain lands being mal, it was held that they were sufficiently attested by the deposition of the village gomastah that they were the chittahs of the village while he was gomastah, and that he had been present when, with their assistance, a purtal (new, revised) measurement had been carried out in the village (9)

Relevancy of statement as to fact of public nature contained in certain Acts or Notifications

37. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any fact of a public nature, any statement of it, made in a recital contained in any Act of Parliament or in any Act of the Governor-General of India in Council, or of "any other legislative authority in British India constituted for the time being under the Indian Councils Act, 1861, the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 and 1892, or the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 to 1909 "(10), or in a

(1) Per Jackson, J, in Surrossuty Dossee v Umbica Nund, 24 W R., 192 (1875)

(2) See Girindra Chandra v Nagendronath Chatterjee, 1 C W N 530, 533 (1897)

(3) See remarks of Jackson, J, in Collector of Rajshahye v Doorga Soondurree, 2 W R, 211, 212 (1865), (v post), Taylor, Ev, § 1770 C

(4) 2 B. L. R (P C), 4 (1868), s c, 11 W R, (P C), 2

(5) Sudukhina Chowdrain v Rajmohan Bose, 3 B L R (A C), 381 (1869) See Dinomoni Choudrani v Brojomohini Choudrani, 29 C, 201 (1901)

(6) See Junmajoy Mullick v Dwarkanath Mytee 5 C, 287 (1875) Ram Chunder v Bunseedhur Naik, 9 C, 741 (1883), Tarucknath Mookerjee v Mohendranath Ghose 13 W R 56 (1870)

(7) As to chittahs other than those of the survey, see Gopal Chunder v Madhub Chunder, 21 W R, 29 (1874), Krishna Chunder v Meer Safdar, 22 W R, 326 (1874), Sham Chand v Ramkristo Gaurah, 19 W R, 309 (1873)

(8) Field, Ev, 226; ib, 6th Ed 168

(9) Dabee Pershad v Ram Coomar, 10 W R 443 (1868)

(10) The portion quoted has been substituted by Act X of 1914, Sch. I notification of the Government appearing in the Gazette of India or in the Gazette of any Local Government, or in any printed paper purporting to be the London Gazette or the Government Gazette of any colony or possession of the Queen, is a relevant fact.(1)

Principle.—These documents are admissible on grounds similar to those on which entries in public records are received. They are documents of a public character made by the authorized agents of the public in the course of official duty and published under the authority and supervision of the State, and the facts recorded therein are of public interest and notoriety. Moreover, as the facts stated in them are of a public nature, it would often be difficult to prove them by means of sworn witnesses.(2)

s 3 ("Fact")
s 3 ("Relevant")
s 57 (2) (Judicial notice of Acts) s 78 (Proof of Notifications)
s 81 (Presumption as to Gazettes, Newspapers and Private Acts.)

Steph Dig Art. 33; Taylor, Ev, § 1660, Starkie, Ev, 278; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 187, 188; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 318, 31 & 32 Vic, Cap. 37 (The Documentary Evidence Act, 1868, amended by the Documentary Evidence Act, 1882); Act XXXI of 1863 (Gazette of India), Act III of 1909, s. 116.

COMMENTARY.

Recitals in Acts and Notifications.

The fact as to the existence of which the Court has to form an opinion must be one of a public nature. A similar expression occurs in section 42, post, which speaks of "matters of a public nature."(3) The Gazette of India, the organ of the Government of India, was first published in 1863 only. Previous to that date the notifications of the Government of India were published in such of the Gazettes of the Local Governments as was necessary. By Act XXXI of 1863 publication in the Gazette of India was declared to have the effect of publication in any other Official Gazette in which publication was prescribed by the law in force at the date of the passing of the Act.(4) In the case of R. v. Amiruddin(5) the Gazette of India and the Calcutta Gazette containing official letters on the subject of hostilities between the British Crown and Mahomedan fanatics on the frontier were held to have been rightly admitted in evidence under the sixth and eighth sections(6) of the repealed Act II of 1855 as proof of the commencement, continuation and determination of hostilities. It was further held that it was not necessary that these documents should be interpreted to the prisoner It was sufficient that the purposes for which they were put in were explained In the subsequent trial of the Wahabi conspirators at Patna, the Gazette was used in evidence for a similar purpose (7) According to the English rule a recital in a public general Act is in general primâ facie, but not conclusive, evidence of the facts recited, because in judgment of law every subject is privy to the making of it; but a private Statute (though it contains a clause requiring it to be judicially noticed as a public one) is not evidence at all.

(1) The last portion of this section which was added by s 2, Act V of 1899 has been removed by Act X of 1914, Sch. II

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 1591; Starkie, Ev, 272, 273, et seq

(3) v Notes to ss. 13, 32 (4), ante and 42, post

(4) Act XXXI of 1863, s 1.

(5) 7 B L R, 63, s c, 15 W. R., Cr, 25

(6) S 6 of Act II of 1855, corresponds generally to s 57 (judicial notice) and s. 8 of the same Act to the present section

(7) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 172, for English cases, v Taylor, Ev., § 1660, and Starkie, Ev., 278.

against strangers either of notice, or of any of the facts recited.(1) The present section draws no distinction between public and private Acts of Parliament, merely requiring that the fact spoken to in either case should be of a public nature, but of course neither in the case of the Act nor of the Gazette in the section mentioned is any recital therein contained conclusive of the fact recited unless expressly declared to be so; and knowledge of a fact although it be of a public nature is not to be conclusively inferred from a notification in the Gazette; it is a question of fact for the determination of the Court (2)

By Statute the Gazette has been expressly rendered evidence of various matters.

Thus by the Documentary Evidence Act(3) the Gazette is made primâ facie evidence of any proclamation, order, or regulation, issued by Her Majesty, the Privy Council or any of the principal departments of State So also, by section 116 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the production of the Gazette containing the notice mentioned in the section is conclusive evidence of the order having been duly made, and of its date.(4)

Gazettes as medium to prove notice.

The Gazettes and Newspapers are often evidence as a medium to prove notice; as of the dissolution of a partnership which is a fact usually notified in that manner. But, unless the case is governed by some special Act, such evidence is very weak without proof that the party to be affected by the notice has probably read the particular Gazette in which it is contained, e g, that he section 350 of the repealed Act VIII of 1859 (Civil Procedure) the Government Gazette containing the advertisement of sale, and a printed paper purporting to be the conditions of sale alluded to in the Gazette, and issued from the Master's Office in the name of the Master, were admitted in evidence to prove the actual conditions of the deed of sale (7) Notice of a resolution of winding up a Company voluntarily must also be given by advertisement in the Local Official Gazette(8), in certain cases by the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act(9), and certain orders made thereunder will affect creditors after proof of notice given and the lapse of a certain time (10)

Relevancy of statements as to any laws contained in law books.

38. When the Court has to form an opinion as to a law of any country, any statement of such law contained in a book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of such country and to contain any such law, and any report of a ruling of the Courts of such country contained in a book purporting to be a report of such rulings, is relevant.

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1660, 1661, Steph Dig, Art 33, Roscoe, N. P Ev, 187, 188 See Baban Mayacha v Nagu Shravucha, 2 B, 38 (1876), Ballard v Way, 5 L J, Ex, 207

(2) Harratt v Wise, 9 B & C, 712; Starkie, Ev, 280

(3) 31 & 32 Vic, Cap, 37 (1868), s 2, amended by the Documentary Evidence Act, 1882, s 2

(4) Act III of 1909.

(5) Starkie, Ev, 280, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1665, 1666, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 131, 319, Whart, cited ib, ss 671—675; see s 14, ante, and Notes thereto. In rebuttal evidence may of course be given, as that the party is unable to read, etc

(6) Chundee Churn v Eduljee Cowasjee 8 C, 678 (1882)

(7) Jotendro Mohun v Ranee Brijo, W R, 1864, 50

(8) Act VII of 1913, s 206

(9) Act III of 1909, ss. 20, 69(4), Sch I ss 3 6 and the Insolvency Rules (Calcutta), ss 108, 129(1), 138, 142B and 142C

(10) Ib, s 73

Principle.—These statements in books of law and in Reports are admissible on grounds similar to those of the three preceding sections. Books containing the law of a country(1), whether in the form of Statute or case-law, deal with matters which are of public notoriety and interest, and when published under the authority of Government have the further guarantee of that authority; [illegible] the Courts, [illegible] its and the [illegible] comment, citation or otherwise, be reasonably presumed to be faithful and accurate.

s. 3 ("Relevant") s. 57 (Judicial notice.)
s. 45 (Proof of Foreign law) s. 84 (Genuineness of books here mentioned)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 1423—1425; Best, Ev., § 513; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 119—121; Steph Dig., Arts. 49, 50; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 367; Act XVIII of 1875, s. 3 (Indian Law Reports): 6 & 7 Vic., Cap. 94, s. 3 · 22 & 23 Vic, Cap. 63; 24 & 25 Vic., Cap. 11 (Ascertainment of Foreign and Colonial law). Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, 53 & 54 Vic, c., 37.

COMMENTARY.

Law [illegible] any [illegible]untry."

These words would by themselves include India as well as Great Britain and other Foreign Countries · but the words "form an opinion" and the fact that Courts of this country must take judicial cognizance of the laws they administer(2) which, therefore, require no proof, indicate that the countries referred to in the section are countries other than British India. Though, however, the Court must take judicial notice of laws in force in British India and of the Acts of Parliament, it may refuse, if called upon by any person, to do so, until such person produces any such appropriate book or document of reference as it may consider necessary to enable it to do so (3) Statements of law other than those contained in Reports must purport to be printed or published under authority. So a statement contained in an unauthorized translation of the Code Napoleon as to what the French law was upon a particular matter was held not to be relevant under this section(4): but reports of rulings need not be so published, if only the book containing them purport to be a report of the rulings of such country. As to the presumption of genuineness of the books in this section mentioned, see s. 84, post.

Though the Courts will take judicial congnizance of the laws they administer, Foreign and Colonial laws must be proved This section(5) is a departure from the English rule, under which Foreign law must (unless an opinion has been obtained under the statutory procedure mentioned below) be proved as a fact by skilled [illegible] tness, expert [illegible] of the books i[illegible] lition to the [illegible] rsons specially skilled in such law.(8) Further there exists a statutory procedure for the ascertainment of Foreign and Colonial law. By 22 and 23 Vic, Cap. 63, a case may be stated for the opinion of a superior Court in any of Her Majesty's

---

(1) Where it is necessary to refer to a Statute judicially noticeable, a copy is not given in evidence, but merely referred to, to refresh the memory.—Starkie, Ev, 274

(2) S. 57, post.

(3) S 57, post.

(4) Christian v. Delanney, 26 C, 931 (1899), s. c., 3 C. W. N, 614.

(5) v. definition of "Foreign Court" Civil Pr. Code, s 2, 2nd Ed, p 33.

(6) Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Hagg C. R., 216, Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C. & F., 114—117; Vanderdonckt v Thelluson, 8 C B, 812.

(7) Sussex Peerage Case, supra; Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp, 174; Roscoe, N. P. Ev, 119—121; Bater v. Bater (1907), P. 333 (expert evidence required to prove the validity of foreign marriage).

(8) v. s. 45, post.

dominions to ascertain the law of that part(1), and by 24 and 25 Vic., Cap. 11, a similar case may be stated for the opinion of a Court in any Foreign State with which Her Majesty may have entered into a Convention for the ascertainment of such law(2); and as to judicial notice of the territorial extent of the jurisdiction and sovereignty exercised de facto, see "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890."(3)

(1) Login v. Princess Victoria, 1 Jur O S., 109, in which the Court of Chancery in England forwarded a case on Hindu Law to the Supreme Court of Calcutta

(2) This Act is stated to be practically a dead letter, as no Convention has ever been made in pursuance of it Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 368 See also 6 & 7 Vic, Cap. 94, § 3, and R v Dossaji Gulam, 3 B, 334 (1878)

(3) 53 & 54 Vict c 37.

HOW MUCH OF A STATEMENT IS TO BE PROVED.

While on the one hand, in the case of a statement in a civil or criminal proceeding by way of admission or confession, the whole of it must be taken and read together, since thus alone can the whole of that which the person making the statement intended to convey be certainly arrived at: and since it would be obviously unfair to take that only which is against the interest of the declarant, while [illegible] on the other h [illegible] might occur if [illegible] to be given simply on the ground that the whole of the documents or conversations must be before the Court. The latter is, therefore, constituted the judge [illegible] ersation [illegible] so much [illegible] mstances

What evidence to be given when statement forms part of a conversation, document, book, or series of letters or papers

39. When any statement of which evidence is given forms part of a longer statement, or of a conversation or part of an isolated document, or is contained in a document which forms part of a book, or of a connected series of letters or papers, evidence shall be given of so much and no more of the statement, conversation, document, book, or series of letters or papers, as the Court considers necessary in that particular case to the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement, and of the circumstances under which it was made.

Principle.—The rule laid down by the present section (which is to the same effect as the English law on the same subject) is founded on the general grounds of convenience and justice (v. Introduction, supra).

s 21, 23 (Proof of Admissions) (Examination; Cross-examination: Re examination.) ss 137, 138, & Chap. X. passim

Taylor, Ev., §§732—734, 14, 4; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 179.

COMMENTARY.

Documents generally

"Though the whole of a document may, as a general rule, be read by the one party, when the other has already put in evidence a partial extract(2), this rule will not warrant the reading of distinct entries in an account-book(3), or [illegible] the particular entry [illegible] r admissible bundles [illegible] or a series of copies [illegible] adversary has read therefrom one or more papers or entries or letters.(5) If, indeed, the extract

(1) Norton, Ev., 203, 204; Taylor, Ev., §§ 732—734, 127—129; v. ante

(2) R v Queen's C. J.'s; Re Feeham, 10 L R., Ir, 294, cited in Taylor, Ev., p 527.

(3) Catt v. Howard, 3 Stark. R., 6; Reeve v. Whitmore, 2 Drew. & Sm., 446

(4) Darby v. Ousely, 1 H. & N., 1.

(5) Sturge v. Buchanan, 10 A. & E. 598.

put in expressly refer to other documents, these may be read also(1), but the mere fact that remaining portions of the papers or books may throw light on the parts selected by the opposite party will not be sufficient to warrant their admission; for such party is not bound to know whether they will or not, and moreover, the light may be a false one."(2) It may be inferred, it has been said, from this section, how much of a police-diary may be seen by an accused person when it is used to refresh memory or to contradict the police-officer. In such case the accused person is entitled to see only the particular entry and so much of the special diary as is, in the opinion of the Court, necessary in that particular matter to the full understanding of the particular entry, so used and no more.(3)

Conversation

"The same rule prevails in the case of a conversation in which several dis-deposed to, provided only that it related to the subject-matter of the suit(4) yet, a sense of the extreme injustice that might result from allowing such a course of proceeding has induced the Courts, in later times, to adopt a stricter rule and if a part of a conversation is now relied on as an admission, the adverse party can give in evidence only so much of the same conversation as may explain or qualify the matter already before the Court."(5) It is settled law, that proof, on cross-examination, of a detached statement made by or to a witness at a former time does not authorise proof by the party calling that witness of all that was said at the same time, but only of so much as can be in some way connected with the statement proved.(6) Therefore, where a witness has been cross-examined as to what the plaintiff had said in a particular conversation, it was held that he could not be re-examined as to other assertions, made by the plaintiff in the same conversation, that were not connected with the assertions to which the cross-examinations related, although they were connected with the subject-matter of the suit (7)

Letters.

"With regard to letters it has been held that a party may put in such as were written by his opponent, without producing those to which they were answers, or calling for their production; because, in such a case, the letters to which those put in were answers are in the adversary's hands, and he may produce them, if he thinks them necessary to explain the transaction (8) But while this is the strict rule, yet in practice if a party reads a letter from his opponent and is in possession of a copy of his own letter to which the opponent's is an answer, he is expected to read both If a plaintiff puts in a letter by the defendant on the back of which is something written by himself, the defendant is entitled to have the whole read(9), and where a defendant laid before the Court several letters between himself and the plaintiff, he was allowed to read a reply of his own to the last letter of the plaintiff, it being considered as a part of an entire correspondence "(10)

(1) Sturge v Buchanan, 10 A & E, 600, 605. The reference incorporates the two together Johnson v Gibson, 4 Esp, 21, Falconor v. Hanson, 1 Camp, 171

(2) Sturge v Buchanan, supra, 600—605, Taylor, Ev, § 732

(3) R v Mannu, 19 A, 405 (1897); per Edge, C. J; Dal Singh v Emperor, 44 I A, 137 (1917)

(4) The Queen's case, 2 B & E, 297, 298, per Abbott, C J.

(5) Prince v Samo, 7 A & E, 627, 634, 635, Taylor, Ev, § 733

(6) Prince v Samo, supra, 627, Sturge v Buchanan, 10 A & E, 605

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 1474, Prince v Samo, supra, 637 In this case the opinion of Lord Tenterden in The Queen's Case (2 B & B 298), that evidence of the whole conversation if connected with the suit, was admissible though it related to matters not touched in the cross-examination, was considered and overruled

(8) Lord Barrymore v Taylor, 1 Esp, 327, De Medina v Owen, 3 C & Kir, 72.

(9) Dagleish v Dodd, 5 C & P, 238

(10) Taylor, Ev, § 734, Roe v Dey, 7 C & P, 705

JUDGMENTS OF COURTS OF JUSTICE; WHEN RELEVANT.

Transactions unconnected with the facts in issue are, according to the general rule of relevancy, inadmissible in evidence. Judgments in Courts of Justice on other occasions form, however, in certain cases, an exception to the exclusion of evidence of transactions not specifically connected with facts in issue.(1) Sections 40—42 declare when, and in what manner, judgments, orders and decrees are admissible. Judgments, orders and decrees other than those mentioned in these sections are irrelevant, unless the existence of such judgment, order or decree is a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other provision of this Act.(2) Judgments are either domestic or foreign, and either of these may be in personam or in rem.

The general rules relating to judgments are as follows.

(a) In the first place, all judgments are conclusive of their existence as distinguished from their truth. Thus if the object be merely to prove the existence of the judgment, its date, or its legal consequences (and not the accuracy of the decision rendered), the production of the record, or of a certified copy is conclusive evidence of the facts against all the world.(3) In other words, the law attributes unerring verity to the substantive as opposed to the judicial portions of the record. And the reason is, that a judgment being a public transaction of a solemn nature, must be presumed to be faithfully recorded. In the substantive portion of a record of a Court of Justice, the Court records or attests its own proceedings and acts. Quod per recordum probatum, non debet esse negatum. In the judicial portion, on the contrary, the Court expresses its judgment or opinion on the matter in question, and in forming that opinion it is bound to have regard only to the evidence and arguments adduced before it by the respective parties to the proceeding. Such a judgment, therefore, with respect to any third person, who was neither party nor privy to the proceeding in which it was pronounced, is only res inter alios judicata; and hence the rule, that it does not bind, and is not in general, evidence, against anyone who was not such party or privy.(4) So also judgments are admissible in this connection where the record is matter of inducement, or merely introductory to other evidence.(5)

(b) All judgments are conclusive of their truth in favour of the judge, that is, for the purpose of protecting him who pronounced it and the officers who enforced it.(6)

(c) The admissibility and effect of judgments when tendered as evidence of their truth, that is, as evidence of the matters decided, or of the grounds of the decision for the purpose of concluding an opponent upon the facts determined, vary accord[illegible] in personam. Generally [illegible] rld and not only the [illegible] ies. It belongs to positive law to enact what judgments shall have such a character. Accordingly, the Act declares(7) that a judgment, in order to have this effect,

---

(1) Steph Introd., 164.

(2) S. 43, post.

(3) Abinash Chandra v. Poresh Nath, 9 C. W. N., 402, 410 (1904).

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 1667; Best, Ev., § 590; Steph Dig., Art 40; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 382—410, v. s 43, post. As to parties and privies, see cases cited in recent decision, Secretary of State v. Syed Ahmed, 44 M 778 (1921).

(5) See s. 43, post.

(6) Taylor, Ev., §§ 1669—1672; Steph. Dig., Art. 45; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 204, 205, 1194—1201; see Act XVIII of 1850.

(7) S. 41, post; see Norton, Ev., 206.

must have been pronounced by a competent Court in the exercise of Probate, Matrimonial, Admiralty, or Insolvency jurisdiction. Such a judgment is conclusive of certain matters against all the world, and not against the parties and their privies only. On the other hand, the judgment in personam (or the ordinary judgment between parties as in cases of contract, tort or crime) of a Court of competent jurisdiction is conclusive proof, in subsequent proceedings, between the same parties or their privies, only of the matter actually decided(1): but is no evidence of the truth of the decision between strangers, or a party and a stranger(2), except upon matters of a public nature, in which case, however, they are not conclusive evidence of that which they state (3) The reasons of this rule are commonly stated to rest on the ground expressed in the maxim [illegible] being considered unjust [illegible] e should be bound by proc [illegible] examine or appeal (4)

Foremost among the judgments, orders and decrees which are declared to be admissible by [illegible] a second suit or [illegible] for the purpose [illegible] res judicata(7), or that the claim advanced forms part of a former claim or that the remedy for which the plaintiff sues is one for which the plaintiff might have sued in a former suit in respect of the same cause of action.(8) Next, the judgments of certain Courts in the exercise of Probate, Matrimonial, Admiralty or Insolvency jurisdiction are declared to be relevant and conclusive proof of certain matters (9) The general nature of these judgments is not to define a person's rights against the particular individuals who are parties to the proceeding, but to declare his status generally as against all the world. And the broad principle of the rule is that public policy requires that matters of status should not be left in doubt, and a decision in rem not merely declares status, but ipso facto renders it such as it is declared (10) With the exception of [illegible] no [illegible] ties [illegible] are [illegible] ely, [illegible] ave [illegible] the [illegible] by [illegible] can, as he would any other piece of hostile evidence Further, apart from their admissibility under the preceding sections, the existence of a judgment, order or decree, may be a fact in issue in the case or a relevant fact under some of the other provisions of this Act as to relevancy (13) Thus where A sues B, because through B's fault A has been sued and cast in damages, the judgment

(1) See s 40, post

(2) v. ib; s 43, post, illusts (a), (b), (c).

(3) S 42, post, where the reasons for this Exception are considered

(4) See Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 405, where the grounds of this rule are considered.

(5) S 40, post

(6) Civ Pr Code, Part I, s 10, 2nd Ed, p 95, see s 40, post

(7) Ib, Part I, ss 11—14 2nd Ed., pp 99—101, Cr Pr Code, see s 403, s 40, post, Furness Withy Co v Hall (1909), Times L R, V 25, p 233.

(8) Woodroffe & A Ali's Civ Pr Code O II, r 2, 2nd Ed, p 573, see s. 40, post

(9) S 41, post

(10) See note to s 41, post.

(11) Norton, Ev, 204, 214

(12) S 42, post

(13) See s 43, post.

and decree by which such damages are given is a fact in issue; or where B is charged with the murder of A, the fact that A has obtained a decree of ejectment against B may be relevant as showing the motive in B for the murder of A.(1) Lastly, as fraud is an act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of Courts of Justice, and as a judgment delivered by an incompetent Court is a mere nullity, the Act provides that any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that any judgment, order or decree, which is relevant under sections 40—42, and which has been proved by the adverse party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion (2)

Relevancy of judgments, orders and decrees as barring second suit or trial

40. The existence of any judgment, order or decree, which by law, prevents any Court from taking cognizance of a suit(3) or holding a trial, is a relevant fact when the question is whether such Court ought to take cognizance of such suit, or to hold such trial.

Principle.—See Introduction ante and Notes, post.

ss 41—43 (Judgments, orders, and decrees.)
s 44 (Fraud: want of jurisdiction.)
s 3 ("Court.")
s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 ("Fact.")
ss. 74, 76, 77 (Public document, certified copies)

Steph. Dig, Arts. 39—47; Taylor, Ev., § 1684, et seq; Smith's L. C. Note to Duchess of Kingston's case; Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 175—179; Estoppel by Matter of Record in Civil suits in India by L. Broughton (1895); The Law of Estoppel in British India by A Caspersz (4th Ed., 1915); The Law of Res Judicata by Hukum Chand (1894.).

COMMENTARY.

Previous judgments relevant to bar a second suit or trial

This section provides for the admission of evidence for the purpose of showing that a suit or trial is barred, as for example on the ground :(a) that the matter in issue is the subject of a previously instituted pending suit(4); (b) that the relief sought forms part of a claim for which the plaintiff omitted to sue in former suit; or was one of several remedies in respect of the same cause of action, for which the plaintiff, in a former suit, omitted, without the leave of the Court, to sue(5); (c) that there is an estoppel by judgment, the matter in issue being res judicata.(6) Under the first of the above-mentioned grounds, the order admitting the plaint of the former suit, in the second and third. the judgment, and in either, such other portions of the record as are material to show that the matter is without the cognizance of the Court, would be relevant and admissible evidence under this section. Each of the above mentioned grounds of objection to a second suit or trial forms a portion of the law of Procedure, and as such is dealt with by the Civil or Criminal Procedure Codes. [illegible] question, and if so [illegible] ons which do not be [illegible] vince it is simply to provide the means by which parties to suits may prove any right to which the Legislature entitles them. The present section, accordingly, is so worded as to carry out whatever may be for the time the law of Procedure on

(1) Cunningham, Ev., 29—32; see s. 43, post, and illusts (d), (e), (f), thereto.
(2) S 44, post
(3) See Ranchoddas Krishnadass v. Bapu Narhar, 10 B, at p 443 (1886).
(4) Woodroffe and Ali's Civ. Pr Code Part I, s 10, 2nd Ed, p 95.
(5) Woodroffe and Ali's Civ. Pr. Code O II, r. 2, 2nd Ed, p 573
(6) Ib, Part I, s 11—14, 2nd Ed. pp. 99—100; Cr. Pr. Code, s. 403.

such questions.(1) It is therefore not intended in this work to deal with these subjects, but merely to cite the provisions of the Codes relating thereto.

The reception of this evidence is grounded upon the fact that, unless it were admitted, effect could not be given to the provisions of the law of Procedure which this section is intended to subserve. If that law declares that a Court shall not in particular circumstances hold or take cognizance of a judicial proceeding, it is plainly necessary to be able to show that these circumstances exist. The present section accordingly enables such proof to be given Pending suits.

Except where a suit has been stayed under the Civil Procedure Code, a Court shall not try any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit for the same relief between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, pending in the same or any other Court, whether superior or inferior, in British India, having jurisdiction to grant such relief, or any Court beyond the limits of British India established by the Governor-General in Council, and having like jurisdiction, or before Her Majesty in Council. Explanation —The pendency of a suit in a foreign Court(2), does not preclude the Courts in British India from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action (3) This section only provides that no suit shall be tried if the same issues are involved in a previously instituted suit It does not dispense with the institution of a suit within the proper time when the law requires such institution (4)

Omission to sue for relief or remedy

In respect of relief or remedies for which the plaintiff in a former action omitted to sue, the Civil Procedure Code enacts as follows —

Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action(5), but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court

If a plaintiff omit to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquish, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished

A person entitled to more than one remedy in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of his remedies, but, if he omits (except with the leave of the Court obtained before the first hearing) to sue for any of such remedies, he shall not afterwards sue for the remedy so omitted For the purpose of this section an obligation and a collateral security for its performance shall be deemed to constitute but one cause of action (6)

Res judicata.

The rule of estoppel by judgment or res judicata is that facts actually decided by an issue in one suit cannot be again litigated between the same parties and are conclusive between them for the purpose of terminating litigation (7)

---

(1) Cunningham, Ev, 175, 176

(2) See as to meaning of, Civ Pr Code, s 2

(3) Civ Pr Code, Part I s 10 2nd Ed, p 95, Fakeer-uddeen Mahomed v Official Trustee, 7 C, 82 (1881) · Balkishan v Kishan Lal, 11 A 148 (1888) Bissessur Singh v Ganput, 8 C L R 113 (1880) Mekjee Keshtu v Devachand, 4 C L R, 282 (1879) Ramalinga Chetti v Raghunatha Ram, 20 M, 418 (1897) Narnappa Chetti v Chidambaram, 21 M, 18 (1897), Venkata Chandrappa v Venkatarama Reddi, 22 M, 256 (1898)

(4) Nemaganda v Paresha, 22 B 640 (1897)

(5) Venkatarama Ayyar v Venkata Subrahmanian 24 M. 27 (1900)

(6) Civ Pr Code, O II, r 2, 2nd Ed. p, 573

(7) Boileau v Rutlin 2 Ex 665 681 per Park B, and per Lord Hardwicke in Gregory v Molesworth 3 Atkyns 625, cited in Soorjomonee Dayee v Suddanund Mohapatter 12 B L R 304 315 (1873) 'Estoppel by judgment results from a matter having been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit and having been therein heard and finally decided' Kali Krishna v Secretary of State, 16 C, 173 (1888) Poulton v Adjustable Cover and Boiler Block Co C A (1908) 2 Ch 240 For an apparent exception to this rule in the case of a petition to revoke a patent which exception seems based on the ground that such a petition is on behalf

There is nothing technical or peculiar to the law of England in this rule which is recognised by the Civil law and has been held to be consistent with the Code of Civil Procedure.(1) Independently of the provision in the Code of 1859, the Courts in India recognised the rule and applied it in a great number of cases, and the re-enactment of the provision in the Code of 1877 appears to have been made with the intention of embodying in the 12th and 13th sections of that Code, the law then in force in India, instead of the imperfect provision in the second section of Act VIII of 1859.(2) The provisions in the present Code(3), which embody the law of estoppel by judgment in civil suits in India(4), correspond very nearly with those in the Code of 1877 English text-writers deal with this subject under the head of 'Evidence,' as it is a branch of the law of estoppel but the authors of the Indian Codes have regarded it as belonging more properly to the head of Procedure.(5) Estoppel is regarded in these Codes as proceeding upon the equitable principle of altered situation and is distinguished from res judicata which is based on the principle that there must be an end to litigation (6) The principle of res judicata as remarked by West, J., in Sridhar Vinayak v. Narayan valad Babaji(7), is simple in its statement but presents considerable difficulty in its application. Very numerous cases have arisen in India upon the construction of the sections of the Code, dealing with this subject, and the reports contain a great number of decisions upon them. Many of them turn upon facts, and the difficulty has generally been to apply the principles to the facts. Even if the matter properly belonged to the subject of this work, it would be unprofitable and lead to confusion to enter into an examination of many of these decisions(8), for a case may perhaps be a binding authority as to the conclusion arrived at where the facts are identical but not otherwise; in any other case the tribunal must investigate the facts for itself and determine(9), referring to previous cases only for such propositions of law as are contained in them.

In a reported case in the Privy Council(10) it was said "Their Lordships desire to emphasize that the rule of Res Judicata while founded on recent precedent is dictated by a wisdom which is for all time. * * * * . Though the rule of the Code may be traced to an English source, it embodies a doctrine in no way opposed to the spirit of the law as expounded by the Hindu commentators. Vijnanesvara and Nilakantha include the plea of a former judgment among those allowed by law, each citing for this purpose the text of Katyayana, who describes the plea thus. "If a person, though defeated at Law, sue again, he should be answered, 'You were defeated formerly.' This is called the plea of the public, see in re Deely's Patent (1895), 1 Ch, 687, & Taylor, § 1685 (a) For bar in suit by members of public see Muhammed Amir v. Sumitra Kuar, 36 A., 424 (1914) (members of Mahomedan community).

---

(1) Khugolee Singh v. Hossein Bux, 7 B. L. R, 673, 678 (1871). But while consistent it was not identical with it, see Hukum Chand, Res. Jud., 7.

(2) Misir Raghbur v. Sheo Baksh, 9 C., 439, 445; 9 I. A., 197, 202, 204 (1882); Kameswar Pershad v. Rajkumari Ruttun, 19 I. A., 238; 20 C., 79 (1892).

(3) Act V of 1908, ss. 11—14, 2nd Ed., pp 99—101.

(4) Cf as to the law on this subject, Estoppel by matter of record in civil suits in India, by L. Broughton (1893); The Law of Estoppel in British India, by A. Caspersz (4th Ed., 1915); Field's Ev., 6th Ed., 175—190 The Law of Res Judicata by Hukum Chand (1894).

(5) See remark of Mahmood, J., in Sita Ram v Amir Begum, 8 A., 325, 331 (1886) followed in Ramchandra Dhondo v Malkapa, 40 B., 679 (1916).

(6) Casamally Jaurajbhai v Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim, 36 B., 214 (1912); Bai-shanker Nanabhai v. Morarji Keshavji, 36 B., 283 (1912).

(7) 11 Bom. H. C. R., 228 (1874).

(8) See Broughton, op. cit., 7.

(9) London Joint Stock Bank v. Simmons, App. Cas., 1892, at p. 222, per Lord Herschell v. ib., at p 210, per Lord Halsbury, L. C.: "I must make a protest that it is not a very profitable inquiry whether one case resembles another in its facts."

(10) Sheoparsan Singh v. Ramnandan Prasad Singh, P. C., 43 C., 694 (1916), per Sir Lawrence Jenkins of former judgment. And so the application of the rule by the Courts in India should be influenced by no technical considerations of forms, but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law."

With respect to the rule as applicable to Civil cases, the provisions of the present Code of Civil Procedure in regard to res judicata as contained in sections 11—14 are as follow :—

No Court shall try any suit or issue(1) in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties(2), or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit, or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised and has been heard and finally decided by such Court

Explanation I —The expression " former suit " shall denote a suit which has been decided prior to the suit in question, whether or not it was instituted prior thereto

Explanation II —For the purpose of this section the competence of a Court shall be determined irrespective of any provision as to a right of appeal from the decision of such Court.

Explanation III.—The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted expressly or impliedly by the other

Explanation IV —Any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in such former suit, shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit

Explanation V —Any relief claimed in the plaint, which is not expressly granted by the decree, shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed to have been refused

Explanation VI —Where persons litigate bonâ fide in respect of a public right or of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such rights shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed to claim under the persons so litigating (3)

The rule contained in this section applies equally to appeals and miscellaneous(4) [illegible] proceeding is not a suit, as for ins[illegible] a question arising in it cannot o[illegible] Madras High Court has held in two recent cases that the principle of constructive res judicata should not be applied to execution-proceedings unless the decision of the subsequent question was either expressly given or necessarily implied (6)

Where a plaintiff is precluded by rules from instituting a further suit in respect of any particular cause of action, he shall not be entitled to institute a suit in respect of such cause of action in any Court to which the Code applies (7)

---

(1) As to the propriety of the extension of the doctrine to exclude the trial of an issue, see Rai Churn v Kumud Mohon, 2 C W N, 287, 301 (1898), s c, 25 C, 571, and see Chandi Prasad v Mahendra Singh, 23 A, 5, 8, 11 (1900)

(2) See Secretary of State v. Syed Ahmad, 44 M, 778 (1921)

(3) Civ Pr Code, s 11

(4) Balkrishan v Kishan Lal, 11 A, 148 (1888)

(5) Srish Chandra Pal Chowdhry v Triguna Prasad, 40 C, 541 (1913)

(6) Somasundaram Pillai v Chokkalingam Pillai 40 M, 780 (1917), Lakshminarayana v Pallamraju 4 M L W, 101 (1916) See on this point Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's Civil Procedure Code, and Kashinath Krishna Joshi v Dhondshi, 40 B, 675 (1916) and Ajudhia Panda v Inayatullah, 35 A 111 (1913)

(7) Civ Pr Code s 12

A foreign judgment shall be conclusive as to any matter thereby directly adjudicated upon between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, except—

(a) where it has not been pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction;

(b) where it has not been given on the merits of the case(1);

(c) where it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international Law or a refusal to recognize the law of British India in cases in which such law is applicable;

(d) where the proceedings in which the judgment was obtained are opposed to natural justice;

(e) where it has been obtained by fraud;

(f) where it sustains a claim founded in a breach of any law in force in British India.(2)

The Court shall presume upon the production of any document purporting to be a certified copy of a foreign judgment that such judgment was pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction, unless the contrary appears on the record; but such presumption may be displaced by proving want of jurisdiction (3)

These sections, as also the present section of this Act, must be read as subject to any other enactments touching their subject-matter. Thus an entry of a record prepared under section 108 [illegible] Bombay Act V of 1879, by the Survey Officer, is by force of the seventeenth section of the [illegible] conclusive and final evidence of the liability thereby established, and shuts out the evidence of a prior decision under this section of the Evidence Act as proof of res judicata whereby a Civil Court adjudged the land to be dhara (4)

The rule with regard to previous judgments in Criminal cases is contained in the Criminal Procedure Code(5) and is as follows:—

A person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence, and convicted or acquitted of such offence, shall, while such conviction or acquittal remains in force, not be liable to be tried again for the same offence, nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he might have been convicted under section 237.

A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried for any distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 255, first paragraph.

A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which, together with such act, constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted, may be afterwards tried for such last-mentioned offence, if the consequences had not happened, or were not known to the Court to have happened, at the time when he was convicted.

A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction, be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he

(1) Keymer v Visvanatham Reddi, P C. 40 M, 112 (1917); 44 I. A, 6

(2) Civ. Pr. Code, s 13.

(3) Civ Pr Code, s 14

(4) Ramchandra Bhaskar v. Raghunath Buchaset, 20 B, 475 (1895). See also as to Khoti Act Balaji Raghunath v. Bulbin Rughoji, 21 B, 235 (1895); Gopal v Dasarath Set, 21 B, 244 (1895); Antaji Kashinath v. Antaji Madhav, 21 B, 450 (1896); Gopal v. Maghesvar, 21 B, 608 (1896)

(5) S 403.

may have committed, if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged.

Explanation.—The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 219, the discharge of the accused, or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purpose of this section.

The rule, as has been already seen, is applicable in Criminal cases also and a person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction and convicted or acquitted, cannot be tried again for the same offence.(1) The principle of the rule of res judicata is one that is well settled, namely, that a matter which has been put in issue, tried, and determined by a competent Civil or Criminal Court cannot be re-opened between those who were parties to such adjudication. The competency of the Court is essential (2) The test is not whether the decision was explicit, but whether the issue was one upon which the judgment of the former suit was based (3) And the grounds for the decision may be res judicata as well as the decision itself (4) Res judicata should not be inferred from a judgment; it must be clear from the pleadings and findings (5) The findings must be on points directly and substantially in issue (6) And a finding to be res judicata as between co-plaintiffs must have been essential for the purpose of the relief(7), while the Courts are reluctant to enforce the principle as between co-defendants (8) The grounds upon which parties and privies are precluded from re-litigating the same matter between them are, firstly, that of public policy, it being in the interest of the State that there should be an end of litigation (interest rei publicæ ut sit finis litium), secondly, that of hardship to the individual that he should be twice vexed for the same cause (nemo debet bis vexari pro una eadem causa), or twice punished for one and the same offence (nemo debet bis puniri pro uno delicto) (9) Inasmuch, however, as an estoppel shuts out enquiry into the truth, it is necessary to see that the principle of res judicata is not unduly enlarged (10) Although the plea of res judicata may be taken at any state of a suit, including first or second appeal, an Appellate Court is not bound to entertain the plea if it cannot be decided upon the record before that Court and if its consideration involves the reference of fresh issues for determination by the Lower Court (11)

41. A final judgment, order or decree of a competent Court, in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon or takes away from any person

Relevancy of certain judgments in probate, etc., jurisdiction

(1) Cr Pr Code, s 403, as to the mode of proving a previous conviction or an acquittal, see s 517, ib

(2) Abdul Kadir v Doolanbibi, 37 B, 563 (1913)

(3) Sri Gopal v Parthi Singh, P C 24 A, 429, Kali Kumar v Bidhu Bhusan, 16 C. L J, 89 (1912), Maharani Beni Pershad v Raj Kumar, 16 C L J, 124 (1912)

(4) Muthammal v Secretary of State, 39 M 1202 (1916), Krishna Behari Roy v Brojeswari Chowdranee, 2 I A, 283 (1875), Kamarujon v Secretary of State, F. B, 11 M., 309 (1888)

(5) Rutchmini v Dhondo Mahadev, 36 B, 207 (1912), Baiyyan Naidu v Suryanarayana, F. B., 37 M, 70 (1914), see Baiyya Naidu v Paradesi Naidu, 35 M, 216 (1912), Mahomed Ibrahim v Ambika Pershad, P C 39 C, 527 (1912), and for other recent decisions on Res Judicata see Mota Holiappa v Vithal Gopal, 40 B, 663 (1916), Bai Devali v Umedbhai Bhulabhai, 40 B, 614 (1916), Ramchandra Dhondo v Malkapa, 40 B, 679 (1916), Madhavrao v Anusuyabhai, 40 B, 606 (1916)

(6) Secretary of State v Saminatha, 37 M, 25 (1914)

(7) Ramchandra Narayan v Narayan Mahadev, 11 B, 216 (1886)

(8) Fakirchand Lallubhai v Naginchand Kalidas 40 B, 211 (1916)

(9) Lockyer v Ferryman, 2 App Cas, 519 Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 390, cited in Ranchod Marar v Bezanji Eduljі, 20 B, at p 91 (1894)

(10) Rai Churn v Kumud Mohan, 2 C W N 297, 301 (1898), s c, 25 C, 571

(11) Kanai Lall v Suraj Kunwar, 21 A., 446 (1899).

any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing, is relevant.

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof—that any legal character which it confers accrued at the time when such judgment, order or decree came into operation; that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment, order or decree(1) declares it to have accrued to that person; that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, order or decree(1) declared that it had ceased or should cease;

and that any thing to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, order or decree(1) declares that it had been or should be his property.

Principle.—A decision in rem not merely declares the status of the person or thing but ipso facto renders it such as it is declared. Public policy requires, that matters of social status should not be left in continual doubt; and as regards things every one, generally speaking, who can be affected by the decision, may protect his interests by becoming a party to the proceedings.(2) ss 40, 42, 43 (Judgments, orders and decrees) s. 3 ("Relevant")

s. 44 (Fraud and want of jurisdiction.) s. 4 ("Conclusive proof.")

Taylor, Ev, §§ 1673—1681; 1733—1738; Best, Ev, § 593; Pigott on Foreign Judgment (1879), Roscoe, N P. Ev, 193, 194; Everest and Strode on Estoppel; Bigelow on Estoppel, Story's Conflict of Laws, Westlake's Private International Law (1912); Wheaton's International Law, 216, 225 (1880), 4th Ed., 221, 230, 231; Foote's Private International Law; Broughton's Estoppel by Matter of Record in India, 114; Caspersz's Law of Estoppel, 4th Ed, 731; Hukum Chand's Res Judicata, 493; Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 179—181; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed. 385; Steph. Dig., Arts. 39—47, pp. 165—166.

COMMENTARY.

"Judgments in rem." Although the term "judgment in rem" is not used in this Act, yet this section incorporates the law on the subject of such judgments as explained in the decision of Sir Barnes Peacock in Kanhya Lall v. Radha Churn (3) Many

(1) The words "order or decree" in the last three paragraphs were added by s. 3, Act XVIII of 1872.

(2) Phipson, Ev, 365, and authorities there cited; 5th Ed, 386—387.

(3) 7 W. R., 338 (1867); see this judgment, Field, Ev., 329—333;—Yarakalamma v Annakala, 2 Mad. H. C. R., 276 (1864), Jogendra Deb v. Funindro Deb, 14 M I. A, 367; 11 B. L. R., 244 (1871), where the subject of judgments in rem, and the meaning of the terms 'in rem,' 'jura in rem' and 'status' are fully discussed. See also Broughton, op cit, 114; Caspersz, op. cit., 4th Ed, 734; Hukum Chand, op cit, 493; Bigelow on Estoppel; Pigott on Foreign Judgments (1879); Westlake's Private International Law; (1880), Wheaton's International Law; ib, 4th Ed, 221, 230, 231, Foote's Private International Law; Everest and Strode on Estoppel; Story's Conflict of Laws. With difficulties on the subject, at any rate so far as domestic judgments in rem are concerned, are removed by this section, which greatly simplifies the law relating to these judgments. For the section declares what are the judgments which are alone to have a conclusive character, and one of the main difficulties has always been to ascertain some principle upon which to rest this class of judgments so as to determine what cases fall within it. And the section is exhaustive, for instance, it has been recently held in the Punjab High Court that a previous judgment in a compromise-suit was not a judgment in rem not being included in the scope of this section, and was therefore no bar to a subsequent suit.(1) Foreign judgments in rem stand on a footing somewhat [illegible] well as from that of foreign [illegible] nforcement is still void of [illegible] ond the rule of res judicata enunciated in the Civil Procedure Code, there is nothing in this Act to directly indicate that its provisions relating to judgments in rem are to be construed so as to include foreign judgments. But it is apprehended that in analogy with the practice of the English Courts, such judgments given in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty, or insolvency jurisdiction will receive in India the same recognition as is accorded to domestic judgments of the same character (2)

It has been pointed out in the note to the last section that a judgment, as a rule, affects only parties and privies Judgments in rem form an exception to this rule, and are valid not only inter partes but inter omnes or against all the world Prior to the passing of the Evidence Act, conclusive effect was not infrequently, but erroneously, given to decisions which were really binding only [illegible] declares that a judgment, order, or decree in order to operate otherwise than inter partes, must be a final judgment of a competent Court made in the exercise of Probate, Matrimonial, Admiralty or Insolvency Jurisdiction Besides these, there are no other judgments of a conclusive character. Moreover, these judgments are conclusive proof of certain things only(6), namely reference to this section the Select Committee on the Bill remarked in their Report as follows —"For the sake of simplicity and in order to avoid the difficulty of defining or enumerating judgments in rem, we have adopted the statement of the law by Sir Barnes Peacock in Kanhya Lall v Radha Churn, 7 W R, 339"

(1) Ramat Ali Khan v Musst Babu Zuhra (1912), 47 P R, 14, p 49

(2) See Hukum Chand, op cit, 603, et seq; Pigott, op cit., Westlake, op cit.; Wheaton, op cit, supra, note (1)

(3) As to the history and position of judgments in rem in India prior to this Act, see Yarakalamma v Annakala, 2 Mad H C R, 276 (1864), Kanhya Lall v Radha Churn, 7 W R, 338 (1867), Jogendro Deb v Funindro Deb, 14 M I. A, 373 (1871), Ahmedbhoy v Vallebhoy, 6 B, 703 (1882)

(4) 2 Mad H C R, 276 (1864) The conclusion of Holloway, J —"That a decision by a competent Court that a Hindu family was joint and undivided, or upon a question of legitimacy, adoption, partibility of property, rule of descent in a particular family, or upon any other question in a suit inter partes, or more correctly speaking in an action in personam is not a judgment in rem, or binding upon strangers, or in other words upon persons who were neither parties to the suit nor privies," was approved of and confirmed by Peacock, C J delivering the judgment of the Full Bench in the case of Kanhya Lall v Radha Churn, 7 W R, 338, post

(5) 7 W R, 338 (1867), B L R, Sup Vol F B, 662

(6) See Kanhya Lall v Radha Churn, supra, where it is said of a decree of divorce—"It is conclusive upon all persons that the parties have been divorced, and that the parties are no longer husband and wife, but it is not conclusive nor even primâ facie evidence against strangers that the cause for which the decree was pronounced existed. For instance, if a the legal character to which a person may be declared to be entitled, or to which a person may be declared not to be entitled, and the title which a person may be declared to possess in a specific thing. This section not only therefore enumerates the diffrent kinds of judgments in rem, but also enacts what their effect shall be This effect is of a limited character and less extensive than that which has been allowed at times to judgments in rem, in English Courts(1), whose present tendency is, however, to narrow the effect of such judgments, making them binding for their proper purposes only, in accordance with the view which has been adopted by the Indian Legislature. For, according to recent English decisions(2) judgments in rem, tions of Admiralty Courts in prize causes(3), only so far as the judgment itself is concerne parties and their privies will be within the estoppel.(4) Under the provisions of the present section the judgments therein mentioned will operate in rem only in respect of those matters of which these judgments are declared to be conclusive proof. Beyond this only parties and privies will be within the estoppel In English law a judgment in rem is strong primâ facie evidence in a Criminal case on behalf of the person in whose favour such judgment was given; but it is not conclusive(5); and a Criminal conviction is not in a subsequent proceeding conclusive of the facts necessary to be proved to obtain the conviction, and is subject to the same rules of evidence as an ordinary judgment inter partes; indeed, such a judgment would not seem to be a judgment in rem at all, except in so far as a conviction for felony amounts to a judgment that divorce between A and B were granted upon the ground of the adultery of B with C, it would be conclusive as to the divorce, but it would not be even primâ facie evidence against C, that he was guilty of adultery with B, unless he were a party to the suit"

---

(1) According to English Law a domestic judgment in rem is conclusive inter omnes of the matters actually decided, and also in prize cases of the grounds of the decision, if these are plainly stated A foreign judgment in rem is generally conclusive against strangers only upon questions of prize, where the ground of condemnation is plainly stated, or of marriage and divorce where the marriage was solemnised and the parties domiciled in the foreign country; or of bankruptcy as to contracts made in such country, or of probate, administration and guardianship to a limited extent see Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 386, 387, where the authorities are cited.

(2) De Mora v. Concha, L. R., 29 Ch. D, 268, Concha v Concha, L. R., 11 App. Cas, 541.

(3) See Bernardi v. Motteux, Doug, 574, 580 "All the world are parties to a sentence of a court of Admiralty," per Lord Mansfield; Hughes v. Cornelius, 2 Sm L Ca., 9th Ed, 825; ib, 12th Ed., Vol II p 764, The Helena, 4 Rob Adm., 3 Such adjudications have been held conclusive not only for their own proper purposes but for other purposes as well, but it has been doubted whether, since the case of Concha v Concha, supra, the findings and grounds of the judgment as distinguished from the judgment itself, would be deemed conclusive upon all the world. Bigelow, on Estoppel, 5th Ed, 242 See Caspersz op. cit. (4th Ed., pp. 731, 737—739), and following note

(4) "The Court of Appeal in De Mora v Concha, L. R, 29 Ch D, 268 plainly intimate that none of the generally accepted kinds of judgment in rem are such, with the single exception of adjudication in prize causes in the admiralty, in the sense, that is to say, that the findings and grounds of decision bind inter omnes The judgment itself may operate in rem in a variety of cases, but nothing else than the judgment except in the case mentioned.... The result is that the discussion in regard to the distinction between judgments in rem and judgments in personam appears to have become for the greater part obsolete learning If the two cases referred to point aright (DeMora v. Concha, supra; Brigha v. Fayerweather, 140, Mass, 411), there is but one pure judgment in rem, carrying, that is to say, in its broadly conclusive effect, necessary findings and grounds of the decision; other judgments operate only so far as they have perfectly and completely against all persons—established a right in rem. Beyond the judgment, only parties and their privies are within the estoppel. Prize cases themselves are treated by both Courts, English and American, as exceptional: possibly the foundations even of Hughes v Cornelius (a prize case, v supra) are no longer secure" M. M. Bigelow in the "Law Quarterly Review," Vol. II, p 406 (1885).

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 1680.

the person convicted is a felon (1) But under this Act such a judgment will be conclusive in a Criminal, equally and to the same extent, as in a Civil proceeding (2) In a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it has been held that a verdict of acquittal can only be conclusive as regards persons actually tried and not as regards persons named in a charge of conspiracy but not brought to trial; and it was said that the technicalities of English Law based on the sacred character of Trial by Jury in England cannot be imported into India.(3) An order may be conclusive otherwise than under the provisions of this Act. Thus an order upon a contributory under the Companies Act is conclusive evidence that the moneys ordered to be paid are due, and all other pertinent matters stated in such order are to be taken to be truly stated as against all persons and in all proceedings whatsoever.(4) As in the case of judgments inter partes, a judgment in rem must be final and pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction.(5) It has been held by the Punjab High Court that a plaintiff was estopped under this section from pleading in a suit filed in the Punjab that property in the Punjab had been fraudulently transferred, because he had unsuccessfully opposed the defendant's application to the Bombay High Court to be declared an insolvent on the ground that the defendant had made a fraudulent disposition of this property. This decision was based on the fact that the Bombay High Court was a Court of competent jurisdiction under section 16 of the Civil Procedure Code, in which section "property" means property in British India (6)

Probate Jurisdiction.

The Courts exercise testamentary and intestate jurisdiction(7) under the Indian Succession Act(8), the Hindu Wills Act(9), and the Probate and Administration Act (10) This section is applicable to probates granted prior to the passing of the Hindu Wills Act.(11) In the case now cited, it was contended that, as the testator died before the Hindu Wills Act came into force and as the executor of the will of a Hindu dying before that Act came into force was a mere manager having no title to the estate, the probate of his will neither conferred a legal character, nor declared the executor to be entitled to any legal character But the Court held as above-mentioned and said :—" I have examined the cases which have been cited, but I am of opinion that section 41 of the Evidence Act applies to this case. It is quite true that a Hindu executor was, at any rate until the passing of the Hindu Wills Act, only

(1) Taylor, § 1674 & see Anderson v Collinson (1901), 2 K B, 107, an order made in affiliation proceedings is not a judgment in rem neither is an order to wind up a Company, In re Bowling & Welby's contract, 1895, 1 Ch, 663

(2) Field, Ev, 335, ib, 6th Ed, 181; see p 380, 381, post, notes (4) and (5)

(3) Manindra Chandra Ghose v. Emperor, 41 C, 754 (1914), approving Ramesh Chandra Bannerjee v Emperor, 41 C, 350 (1913) per Woodroffe, J

(4) Indian Companies Act VII of 1913, s. 198

(5) S. 41, see s 44, post, and s 40, ante And see Toronto Railway Co v Corporation of Toronto (1904); A C, 809.

(6) Ram Narain v Durga Dat (1912), 47 P R, 55, p 205

(7) As to the effect of probate and letters of administration, see De Mora v Concha, L. R, 29 Ch D, 268, Whicker v. Hume, 7 H. L. C A, 124, Concha v Concha, L. R., 11 App Cas, 541, and other cases cited in Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 411, 412; Taylor, Ev, §§ 1759—1761; Roscoe, N P Ev, 201, 202, Coote's Probate, 10th Ed, 352—356, Williams on Executors, 10th Ed, 431—434; see also pp 341, 472, 492—493, 1637—1638, Hukm Chand, op. cit, 513, Act X of 1865, ss 242, 188, 191, Act V of 1881, ss 59, 12, 14 and post Komol Lochun Dutt v Nilrutton Mundle, 4 C, 360 (1878), Ref to in Rakshab Mondol v. Sm Tarangini Devi, 25 C W N, 207 (1921); Teen Cowree v Hurcehur Mookerjee, 8 W R, 308 (1867), Hormusjee Novroji v Bai Dhanbaijee, 12 B, 164 (1887), Mayho v Williams, 2 N-W. P Rep, 268 (1870) [ref to in Rakshab Mondol v Sm Tarangini Devi, 25 C W. N., 207 (1921)]

(8) Act X of 1865, see Part XXXI, ss 242, 179, 331, as to the High Court, see Letters Patent, 1865, I (34), In the matter of Fackeroodeen Adam Saw, 11 W. R, 413 (1869)

(9) Act XXI of 1870

(10) Act V of 1881

(11) Girish Chunder v Broughton 14 C, 861, 874—876 (1887)

a manager, but as such manager he had certain powers over the estate, and for many purposes he represented the testator. It may be that the probate did not confer upon the executor any legal character, but I think that the effect of probate is to declare the person to whom probate is granted to be entitled to the powers of an executor, whatever his powers as such may be. The words 'legal character' are not anywhere defined, but I think that it is quite clear that they are intended to include the case of an executor. The fact that this section has been frequently applied to cases of persons dying after the Hindu Wills Act came into force shows this. The only legal character which the Probate Act declares a person to be entitled to is that of executor. It confers the character of administrator. It does not declare it. So the section would be meaningless unless 'legal character' included the office of an executor. I do not think that the circumstance that in the particular case the powers of the executor may be limited makes any difference in the construction of the section."(1)

The judgment of a Court refusing probate, it has been said, is as much a judgment in rem as one which grants it, for such a judgment takes away from the executors named in the will the legal character of executors and from the legatees and beneficiaries their legal character, and this result is final as against all persons interested under the will.(2) But in a recent Full Bench decision of the Bombay High Court it was held that this section did not apply to a judgment of an Appellate Court refusing probate(3) and it was said that the only kind of negative judgment contemplated in it is one which expressly takes away from a person a legal character which he has held till such judgment and that this cannot cover the case of a finding that an attempted proof of a right to such a character has failed.(4) In this case a will produced in a contentious proceeding for Probate had been held not proved in the grant refused and an appeal to the High Court had been dismissed, and the widow of the deceased had then brought a suit for the recovery of the property from the alleged executors of the rejected Will. It was held that while this section did not apply, the judgment in the Probate proceedings operated as res judicata between the parties under section 83 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) and section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code (5) Every refusal to grant probate does not conclusively show that the will propounded is not the genuine will of the testator. From a refusal to grant probate it by no means necessarily follows, that, in the opinion of the Court, the will propounded is not the genuine will of the testator. It may be based upon entirely different grounds. To operate conclusively there must have been a prior final decision against the genuineness of the will. A mere finding that sufficient evidence has not been given of the execution of the will, will not preclude a fresh application for probate on the part of the executors when they are in a position to support it with more complete proof.(6) Where the genuineness of the will is not disputed and the applicant is not legally incapable, the Court has no discretion to refuse probate (7) The judgment of a Probate Court granting probate is a judgment in rem, and, therefore, the judgment of any other Court in a proceeding inter partes cannot be pleaded in bar of an investigation in the Probate Court as to the factum of the will propounded in that Court. The only judgment that can be put forward in a Court of Probate in support of

(1) Girish Chunder v. Broughton, 14 C. P., 875, per Trevelyan, J.

(2) Chinnasami v. Harikarabadra, 16 M., 380, 383 (1893)

(3) Kalyanchand Lalchand v. Sitabai, F. B., 38 B., 309 (1914)

(4) Ib., per Scott, C J.

(5) Ib. and it was said that the contention that Probate proceedings are not a suit had not been addressed in Mirza Kurachilam v Peara Sahib, P. C., 33 C., 116 (1905); 32 I A., 244, nor at any time in the Bombay High Court.

(6) Ganesh Jagganath v. Ramchandra Ganesh, 21 B., 563 (1896).

(7) Hara Coomar v. Doorgamoni, 21 C., 195 (1892); Pran Nath v. Jadu Nath 29 A., 189 (1897).

the plea of res judicata is a judgment of a competent Court of Probate.(1) In the undermentioned case(2) it was held that the order of a Judge was ultra vires which was passed under section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, so long as the probate of the will in respect of which forgery was charged was unrevoked; and that it was for the Civil Court to determine the genuineness of a will, and that it was not open to a Criminal Court to find the contrary or to convict any person of having forged a will which had been found to be genuine by a competent Court, and that this section provides that in such matters the finding of the Civil Court is conclusive. A grant of letters of administration with the will annexed, does not make any question as to the title to property covered by, or as to the construction of the will, res judicata in a subsequent suit in which such title or construction comes in issue (3)

Matrimonial jurisdiction

The Courts exercise matrimonial jurisdiction under the Indian Divorce Act(4), and other Acts(5) relating to marriage and divorce A decree of divorce though conclusive inter omnes that the parties have been divorced, is not conclusive, nor even primâ facie, evidence against strangers that the cause for which the decree was pronounced existed (6) But such a decree in common with others may be re-opened on the ground of fraud or collusion (7) The general rule with regard to foreign judgments is that they are conclusive where the marriage was solemnized and the parties domiciled in the foreign country (8) Section 20 of the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869) does not make the proviso [illegible] the High Court of a [illegible] id such a decree may [illegible] from the pronounce- [illegible] applicable [illegible] before the [illegible] made by a [illegible] and 44 of the Evidence Act, and is therefore under section 41 conclusive proof that the marriage was null and void (9)

Admiralty jurisdiction.

[illegible]

(1) Chinnasami v Harikarabadra, 16 M, pp 383, 384

(2) Manjanali Debi v Ramdas Shome, 4 C W N, clxxvi (1900)

(3) Arunmoyi Dasi v Mohendra Nath, 20 C, 188 (1893) 'It has been held that in a proceeding upon an application for probate of a will the only question which the Court is called upon to determine is whether the will is true or not, and that it is not the province of the Court to determine any question of title with reference to the property covered by the will' Ib, 894, 895, Behary Lall v Juggo Mohun, 4 C, 1, Brij Nath v Chandar Mohan, 19 A, 458 (1897), Jagganath Prasad v Ranjit Singh, 25 C, 354, 369 (1897) [shebaitships] Ochanram v. Dolatram, 6 Bom, L R, 966 (1904)

(4) Act IV of 1869, as to the matrimonial jurisdiction of the High Courts, see Letters Patent, 1865, cl. (35)

(5) Acts XV of 1872 (Indian Christian Marriage), XV of 1865 as amended by Act XXXVIII of 1920 (Parsee Marriage and Divorce), XXI of 1866 (Native Convert's Marriage Dissolution), III of 1872 (relating to Marriage between persons not professing the Christian, Jewish, Hindu, Mahommedan Parsi, Buddhist, Sikh or Jaina religions)

(6) Kanhya Lall v Radha Churn, 7 W. R 338 (1867) As to the use of a decree in a previous suit, see Ruck v Ruck, L R P D (1896), 152

(7) S 44, post see Perry v Meddowcroft, 10 Beav, 138, 139

(8) Westlake, Private International Law, §§ 6 321, see Sinclair v Sinclair 1 Hagg, 294 —Roach v Garvan, 1 Ves Sr, 157, Shaw v Gould, 3 F & I, App, 55, Harvey v Fabnie, L R, 8, App Cas 43, Hukm Chand op cit, 527

(9) Caston v Caston, 22 A, 270 (1900), see s 44, post For a case of judgment without jurisdiction see Abdul Kadir v Doolanbibi, 37 B, 563 (1913)

(10) Letters Patent 1865, cls (32), (33)

(11) 53 & 54 Vict, 327 See in the matter of the British sailing ship "Falls of Ettrick," 22 C, 511 (1895) is for the time being declared in pursuance of this Act to be a Court of Admiralty, or which, if no such declaration is in force in the possession, has therein original unlimited civil jurisdiction, shall be a Court of Admiralty, with the jurisdiction in this Act mentioned, and may, for the purpose of that jurisdiction, exercise all the powers which it possesses for the purpose of its other civil jurisdiction, and such Court in reference to the jurisdiction conferred by this Act is in this Act referred to as a Colonial Court of Admiralty.(1) It is with reference to vessels condemned as prizes that questions concerned with this jurisdiction usually arise, and to such jugdments of condemnation, the last paragraph of this section will be applicable.

Insolvency Jurisdiction

The Presidency High Courts exercise this jurisdiction under their respective Charters(2), and Act III of 1909 and the Mofussil Courts under Act III of 1907.

Relevancy and effect of judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in section 41

42. Judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of a public(3) nature relevant to the inquiry; but such judgments, orders or decrees are not conclusive proof of that which they state.

Illustration.

A sues B for trespass on his land. B alleges the existence of a public right of way over the land, which A denies.

The existence of a decree in favour of the defendant, in a suit by A against C for a trespass on the same land, in which C alleged the existence of the same right of way is relevant, but it is not conclusive proof that the right of way exists.(4)

Principle.—This section also forms an exception to the general rule that no one shall be affected or prejudiced by judgments to which he is not party or privy.(5) In matters of public right, however, the new party to the second proceeding, as one of the public, has been virtually a party to the former proceeding.(6) Judgments of this character (which are regarded as a species of reputation) are said to be receivable on the same grounds as evidence of reputation, which in matters of public or general interests is admissible.(7) On account of the public nature of the earlier proceedings an exception is made to the rules which exclude res inter alios actæ.(8) But the earlier judgment is not conclusive; and the technical considerations by which the rule as to res judicata is narrowed, lose all their force when it is considered whether

---

(1) Ib, s. 2; see Broughton, op. cit, 149—158

(2) See Letters Patent, 1865 (Calcutta), cl 18; see Broughton, op. cit, 158

(3) Heiniger v. Droz, 25 B., 441 (1900).

(4) See Petri v. Nuttall, 11 Ex., 569.

(5) Judgments are relevant under this section not as res judicata, but as evidence, whether between the same parties or not: Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 174, 491, post For recent case of relevancy as res judicata see Muhammad Amir v. Sumitra Kuar, 36 A., 424 (1914) (suit by members of Mahommedan community).

(6) Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 171, 183 (1880); per Pontifex, J.

(7) Taylor, Ev., §§ 1682, 1683 (v. post); Norton, Ev., 216; see s. 32, 1 (4), ante When juries were summoned de vicineto, and assumed to be acquainted with the subject in controversy, their verdicts were properly evidence of reputation; but at the present day they are not so; see Taylor, Ev., § 624; Wills, Ev. 2nd Ed., 232—234.

(8) See Norton, Ev. 216; Mathab Chunder v. Tomee Bewah, 7 W. R., 213 (1867); Bai Baiji v. Bai Santok, 20 B. 53, 57, 58 (198) (1894).

the judgment may be used, not as a bar, but merely, as evidence in the cause.(1) s 40, 41, 43 (Judgments, orders, decrees.)

s. 3 ("Relevant")
s 4 ("Conclusive proof").

ss. 13, 32, cl (4), 48 (Public right and custom.)

Steph. Dig., Art. 44; Taylor, Ev., §§ 624—626, 1682, 1683, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 283, 406; Starkie, Ev., 386—388; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 190—192, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 232—234.

COMMENTARY.

Judgments upon matters of a public nature.

The English rule (which is reproduced by this section)(2) is that on questions of public or general interest, wherein reputation is evidence, the verdict, judgment or order, even inter alios, of a competent tribunal is admissible, not as tending to prove any specific fact existing at the time, but as evidence of the most solemn kind of an adjudication upon the state of facts and the question of usage at the time.(3) The relevancy of adjudications upon subjects of a public nature (which means subjects of public or general interest, and will thus include public or general rights and custom), such as custom, rights of ferry and the like, forms an exception to the general rule that judgments inter partes are not admissible either for or against strangers in proof of the facts adjudicated. In all cases of this nature, as evidence of reputation will be admissible, adjudications—which for this purpose are regarded as a species of reputation,—will also be received, and this too, whether the parties in the second suit be those who litigated the first or utter strangers (4) The effect, however, of the adjudication, when admitted, will so far vary that, if [illegible] ind by the previous judg-[illegible] ers to the parties in the [illegible] onclusive.(5) It ought to [illegible] e question of custom was [illegible] enforcement of a custom is a final decree based on the custom (7) The existence of local custom, such as a right of pre-emption, is a matter of a public nature, and previous jugdments will be admissible under this section in proof thereof.(8) Manorial customs may also be of a similar character.(9) Where a plaintiff sued for damages for

(1) Durga Dass v Norendro Coomar, 6 W R, 232 (1866)

(2) Norton, Ev, 216

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 624; as to the meaning of "public or general interest" see s 32, 1 (4), ante

(4) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1682, 1683, Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 76, 77; Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 232—234.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 1683, and see generally text-books cited, supra.

(6) Tota Ram v Mohun Lall, 2 Agra, 1120, 12 (1867), see also Laybourn v Crisp, 4 M & W, 42, 325, 326; as to reading of the decree in connection with the judgment, see Shri Gonesh v. Keshavrav, 15 B, 635 (1890), post

(7) Gurdyal Mal v Jhandu Mal, 10 A, 580 (1888), Luchman Rai v. Akbar Khan, 1 A, 445 (1877).

(8) Madhub Chunder v. Tomee Bewah, 7 W. R, 210 (1867); Tota Ram v Mohun Lall, 2 Agra, 120 (1867); [in this case, however, it was held that a previous decree made in pursuance of a compromise could not be cited as any judicial decision of the existence of the custom, or any admission by the defendant in that suit, that such a custom existed]; Shaikh Koodootoolah v Mohini Mohan, 5 Rev Civ. & Cr Rep, 290 (1867), [Decisions of local Courts, where not conflicting may be good proof of local customs See also as to conflicting decisions, Inder Narain v Mahomed Nasiroodin, 1 W R., 234 (1864), Gurdayal Mal v Jhandu Mal, 10 A, 585 (1888), [in this last mentioned case the Court appears to have admitted the previous judgments under s 13 (b)], Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari Singh, 12 A., 177, but they would have also been admissible under the present section

(9) Lachman Rai v Akbar Khan, 1 A, 440, 441 (1877), as to manorial rights, see Kalian Dass v. Bhagirathi, 6 A, 47 (1883), Lala v Hira Singh, 2 A., 49 (1878) Akbar Khan v Sheoratan, 1 A., 373 (1877), Sheobaran v Bhairo Prasad, value of timber carried away by Government, after being washed on to his timbers that

.t it was not me decree or decision of competent authority establishing the custom.(1) Where a custom alleged to be followed by any particular class of people is in dispute judicial Jains of another place; unless it is shown that the customs are different; and oral evidence of the same kind is equally admissible. There is nothing to limit the scope of the enquiry to the particular locality in which the persons setting up the custom reside.(3) In a suit brought by the trustee of a temple to recover from the owners of certain lands in certain villages money claimed under an alleged right as due to the temple, it was held that judgments in other suits against other persons in which claims under the same right had been decreed in favour of the trustees of the temple were relevant under this section as relating to matters of a public nature.(4) A custom under which lands are held is a matter of public and general interest to all the villagers, and a former decree is most cogent evidence against them of the existence and validity of the custom whose exercise a plaintiff seeks to enforce.(5) The existence of customs of succession in particular communities is a matter of public interest, and decrees of competent Courts are good evidence thereof.(6) In a suit by the landlords to avoid the sale of an occupancy-holding in their mouza and eject the purchaser thereof, one of the questions was as to the existence of a custom or usage under held that a judgmen an adjoining vi

usage under this section.(7) It has been held in England that neither interlocutory orders not involving any judgment upon the rights of the parties awards, nor claims not prosecuted to judgment, are admissible under the rule which is contained in this section.(8) Many matters may go to the weight of this class of evidence which will not, however, affect its admissibility. Thus it matters not with respect to the admissibility, though it may as to the weight

---

7 A., 880 (1885), in the case of the Lower Provinces see Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 74, 183.

(1) Chuttor Lall v. The Government, 9 W. R., 97 (1868) [rights of Lords of Manors]

(2) Shimbu Nath v. Gyan Chand, 16 A., 379 (1894); Harnath Pershad v. Mundul Dass, 27 C., 379 (1899).

(3) Harnath Pershad v. Mundul Dass, 27 C., 379 (1899).

(4) Ramasami v. Appavu, 12 M., 9 (1887), the judgments were also held to be relevant under s. 13, ante, as being evidence of instances in which the right claimed had been ascertained. See s. 13, ante, see also Nallathambi Battar v. Nellakumaba Pillai, 7 Mad. H. C. R., 306 (1873)

(5) Venkataswami Nayakkam v. Subba Rau, 2 Mad. H. C. R., 1, 6 (1864), per Scotland, C. J., as to judgment in regard to the nature of the interest of certain family and of a shrine in certain villages see Shri Ganesh v. Keshavrav Govind, 15 B., 625, 635 (1890).

(6) Bai Baiji v. Bai Santok, 20 B., 53, 57, 58 (1894).

(7) Dalglish v. Guzuffer Hossain, 23 C., 427 (1896).

(8) Taylor, Ev., § 626; the last mentioned claims though inadmissible as evidence of reputation may, however, be admissible as evidence of acts of ownership, thus old Bills and Answers in Chancery have been admitted on the latter ground to show claims made to a public right and abandoned; Malcolmson v. O'Dea, 10 H. L. C., 593; on the same grounds it has been held that an indictment whether submitted to or prosecuted to conviction was admissible as evidence of the right in suit being exercised; R. v. Inhabitants of Brightside, 14 Q. B., 933; as to awards, see Evans v. Rees, 10 A. & E., 151; but see also Tota Ram v. Mohan Lal, 2 Agra, 120, supra.

of such evidence, that the judgment has been suffered by default, or, though of a very recent date, is not supported by any proof of execution or of the payment of damages.(1) And judgments standing upon a different footing from ordinary declarations by private persons, the conditions as to lis mota do not, and indeed cannot, apply to them.(2)

Judgments, etc., other than those mentioned in ss. 40 to 42; when relevant.

43. Judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in sections 40, 41 and 42, are irrelevant, unless the existence of such judgment, order or decree, is a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other provisions of this Act.

Illustrations

(a) A and B separately sue C for a libel which reflects upon each of them. C in each case says, that the matter alleged to be libellous is true, and the circumstances are such that it is probably true in each case, or in neither

A obtains a decree against C for damages on the ground that C failed to make out his justification. The fact is irrelevant as between B and C (3)

(b) A prosecutes B for adultery with C, A's wife.

B denies that C is A's wife but the Court convicts B of adultery

Afterwards, C is prosecuted for bigamy in marrying B during A's lifetime. C says that she never was A's wife

The judgment against B is irrelevant as against C

(c) A prosecutes B for stealing a cow from him. B is convicted.

A afterwards sues C for the cow which B had sold to him before his conviction

As between A and C, the judgment against B is irrelevant.

(d) A has obtained a decree for the possession of land against B C, B's son, murders A in consequence

The existence of the judgment is relevant as showing motive for a crime.(4)

(e) A is charged with theft and with having been previously convicted of theft.

The previous conviction is relevant as a fact in issue (5)

(f) A is tried for the murder of B

The fact that B prosecuted A for libel and that A was convicted and sentenced is relevant under section 8 as showing the motive for the fact in issue (6)

Principle —Judgments considered as judicial opinions are only relevant under sections 40-42 under the circumstances mentioned in those sections. Other judgments when tendered against strangers, are sometimes said to be excluded as opinion evidence(7); sometimes as hearsay(8), but more commonly on the ground expressed in the maxims res inter alios acta vel judicata alteri nocere non debet, and res inter alios judicata nullum inter alios prejudicium facit (9) Such judgments are said not to be evidence for a stranger, even against

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 624.

(2) Starkie, Ev, 190, note (c)

(3) Cf Doorga Churn v Shoshee Bhoosun, 5 W R, S C C. Ref, 23 (1866), in which it was held that the finding in a previous judgment was not evidence of fraud

(4) Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., 181

(5) Illusts (e) and (f) have been added by s 5, Act III of 1891. See also Lakshman v. Amrit, 24 B, 591, 593 (1900).

(6) R v Fontaine Moreau, 11 Q B, 1028, 1035, per Lord Denman, C. J, Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M, 77 (1893); Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C., at p 188, per Garth, C. J.

(7) Steph. Dig, Art. 14; Whart., s. 280; but see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 405.

(8) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 405, where the grounds of this rule are considered; Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall, 6 C., at p. 189; Taylor, Ev, § 1682.

(9) Ib.

a party, because their operation would thus not be mutual. The propriety of this last ground has however been questioned.(1) But if the existence of the judgment is a fact in issue, or relevant under some other provision of this Act the judgment is not excluded.(2)

Steph. Dig., Arts, 40, 42, 44; Phipson, Ev. 5th Ed. 382—410; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1667, 1668, 1682, 1694; Best, Ev., § 590; Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 190-192.

COMMENTARY.

Judgments, orders and decrees, other than those already mentioned

It has been seen that section 40 deals with the effect of judgments as barring suits or trials, by reason amongst others, of their being res judicata: that section 41 deals with the effect of the so-called judgments in rem and section 42 with the admissibility of judgments relating to matters of a public nature. This section declares that judgments, orders, and decrees, other than those mentioned in those sections, are of themselves irrelevant, that is, in the sense that they can have any such effect or operation as mentioned in those sections qua judgments, orders and decrees, that is, as adjudications upon and proof of the particular points which they decide.(3) For a former judgment which is not a judgment in rem(4), nor one relating to matters of a public nature(5), is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit, either as a res judicata(6), or as proof of the particular point which it decides(7), unless between the same parties or those claiming under them.(8) But the present section expressly contemplates cases in which judgments would be admissible either as facts in issue or as relevant facts under other sections of the Act. And as to this Garth, C. J., in the case last cited, said: "This is quite true. But then I take it that the cases so contemplated by section 43 are those where a judgment is used not as a res judicata, as evidence more or less binding upon an opponent by reason of the adjudication whic of that kind had already been dealt with under preceding sections). But the cases referred to as the section itself illustrates, viz., when the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case. As for instance, if A sued B for slander, in saying that he had been convicted of forgery, and B justified upon the ground that the alleged slander was true, the conviction of A for forgery would be a fact to be proved by B like any other fact in the case, and quite irrespective of whether A had been actually guilty of the forgery or not. This, I conceive, would be one of the many cases alluded to in the forty-third section.(9) And though judgments, other than those mentioned in sections 40-42 are irrelevant qua judgments, this section does not make them absolutely inadmissible when they are the best evidence of something that may

---

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1682; as to bankruptcy, administration, and divorce proceedings, see Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 406-407.

(2) See Notes to s. 13, ante.

(3) Collector of Gorakhpore v. Palakdhari Singh, 12 A. (F. B), 1, 25 (1889). As to order of Board of Revenue, see Manno Choudhury v. Munshi Chowdhury, 3 Pat. L J., 188.

(4) Under s. 41, ante.

(5) Under s. 42, ante.

(6) Under s. 40, ante.

(7) S. 43, in effect declares that for such purpose they are irrelevant: see R. v Parbhudas, 11 Bom. H. C. R., 90, 96 (1874). The sole object for which it was sought to use the former judgment in Gujju Lall v Fatteh Lall (v. post) was to show that in another suit against another defendant the plaintiff had obtained an adjudication in his favour on the same right; and it was held that the opinion expressed in the former judgment was not a relevant fact within the meaning of the Evidence Act. Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M, 77 (1895).

(8) Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C. (F. B), 171, see ss. 13, 40, ante, and Notes thereto.

(9) Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, 6 C. at p. 192.

be proved aliunde (1) The existence of such judgment may be a fact in issue(2) or it may be a relevant fact(3), otherwise than in its character of a judgment.

With regard to the existence of the judgment, its date or its legal consequences, the production of the record or of a certified copy is conclusive evidence of the facts against all the world, the reason being that a judgment as a public transaction of a solemn nature must be presumed to be faithfully recorded.(4) "Therefore, if a party indicted for any offence has been acquitted, and sues the prosecutor for malicious prosecution, the record is conclusive evidence for the plaintiff to establish the fact of acquittal, although the parties are necessarily not the same in the action as in the indictment(5), but it is no evidence whatever that the defendant was the prosecutor, even though his name appear on the back of the bill(6) or of his malice or of want of probable cause(7); and the defendant, notwithstanding the verdict, is still at liberty to prove the plaintiff's guilt.(8) So a judgment against a master or principal [illegible] is conclusive evidence against the [illegible] or principal has been compelled to pay the amount of damages awarded; but it is not evidence of the fact upon which it was founded, namely, the misconduct of the servant or agent.(9) So, a judgment recovered against a surety will be evidence for him to prove the amount which he has been compelled to pay for the principal debtor; but it [illegible] action against a surety where the defence was that the plaintiff had received [illegible] to him by the principal in the way of fraudulent preference, but as showing that he had actually repaid the money to the assignees, and as generally explaining the transaction "(12) So if the object be to discredit a witness, by proving that he has given different testimony in a former trial, the judgment in that [illegible] strangers, will be admissible for the pur[illegible] former statements.(13) Judgments are [illegible] the purpose of contradicting the testimony of a witness So [illegible] 18th, i e, five days afte[illegible] reciting that A swore B [illegible] testimony though not to prove the bastardy or date of birth.(14) Upon an

---

(1) Collector of Gorakhpore v. Palakdhari Singh, 12 A (F B), 1, 25 (1889).
(2) See s 43, ill (c)
(3) See s 43, illusts (d) & (f), and s 54, explanation (2).
(4) v. ante, Introduction to ss. 40-44; Abinash Chandra v. Paresh Nath, 9 C. W. N., 402, 410 (1904); Taylor, Ev, s. 1667; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 382, as to certified copies, see s. 76, post
(5) Legatt v. Tollervey, 14 East., 302
(6) B N P., 14.
(7) Parcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 361; Incledon v. Berry, 1 Camp, 203; n a See Keramutoollah Chowdhry v. Gholam Hossein, 9 W. R., 77 (1868); Aghore Nath v. Radhica Pershad, 14 W. R., 339 (1870); the fact that the plaintiff has been convicted, even though acquitted in appeal, is evidence of reasonable and probable cause Jadubar Singh v Sheo Saran, 21 A, 26 (1898).
(8) B. N P, 15.
(9) Green v. New River Co, 4 T. R., 589; Pritchard v Hitchcock, 6 M. & Gr., 165, per Crosswell, J.
(10) King v. Norman, 4 C. B, 884, 898
(11) Powell v. Layton, 2 N. R., 371; Kip v. Brigham, 6 Johns, 158; 7 Johns., 168; Griffin v. Brown, 2 Pick., 304.
(12) Pritchard v. Hitchcock, 6 M. & Gr, 151; see Taylor, Ev, § 1667.
(13) Clarges v Sherwin, 12 Mod., 343; Foster v Shaw, 7 Serg. & R., 156.
(14) Watson v. Little, 5 H. & N, 472; see also R. v. M'Cue, Jebb, C. C., 120.

indictment for perjury committed in a trial, the record will be evidence to show that such a trial was bad(1) and if a party be indicted for aiding the escape of a felon from prison, the production of the record of conviction from the proper custody will be conclusive evidence that the prisoner was convicted of the crime stated therein (2) So where the judgment constitutes one of the muniments of the party's title to land or goods,—as where a deed was made under a decree in Chancery(3) or goods were purchased at a sale made by a sheriff upon an execution(4). the record may be given in evidence against a party who is a stranger to it. So, in an action to recover lands, a decree in a suit between the defendant's father, and other persons unconnected with the plaintiff, which directed that the father should be let into possession of the estate as his own property, has been held admissible on behalf of the defendant, not as proof of any of the facts therein stated, but for the purpose of explaining in what character the father, through whom the defendant claimed, had afterwards taken actual possession of the estate.(5) Many other instances might be given of the admissibility of judgments inter alios, where the record is matter of inducement, or merely introductory to other evidence ; but those cited will suffice to illustrate the principle (6) A judgment may be relevant as between strangers if it is an admission, being received in favour of a stranger against one of the parties as an admission by such party in a judicial proceeding with respect to a certain fact (7) This is no exception to the rule which requires mutuality, since the record is not received as a judgment conclusively establishing the fact but merely as the declaration of the party that the fact was so. Thus not appealing against an adverse judgment may operate as an admission by the party of its correctness (8) And a stranger to a judgment may also be estopped thereby, not directly but by his acquiescence therein (9) So if A pleads guilty to a crime and is convicted, the record of judgment upon this plea is admissible against him in a Civil action, as a solemn judicial confession of the fact.(10) But if A pleads not guilty to a crime, but is convicted ; the record of judgment upon this plea is not receivable against A in a Civil action as an admission to prove his guilt.(11) For the judgment contains no admission, and in conformity with the rule which rejects judgments inter partes as evidence either for or against strangers to prove the facts adjudicated [illegible] unless admissible as evidence in the [illegible] inction with the prosecution as an ac[illegible] a Civil action to establish the truth of [illegible] judgment in a Civil action, or an award, cannot be given in evidence for such a purpose in a Criminal prosecution (14) Technically, the judgments are inadmissible

(1) R. v Iles, Cas Temp Hardz, 118, B N. P, 243, R v. Hammond Page, 2 Esp, 649n, see Penal Code, s 193.

(2) R. v Shaw, R & R, 526; Taylor, Ev., § 1668; see Penal Code, ss. 222, 223

(3) Barr v Gratz, 4 Wheat, 213.

(4) St Ev., 255, Wstmer v. Schlatter, 2 Rawle, 359, Jackson v Wood, 3 Wind, 25, 34, Fowler v. Savage, 3 Conn, 90, 96.

(5) Davies v. Lowndes, 6 M & Gr, 471, 520

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 1688; see s. 13, ante

(7) Steph. Dig., Art. 4; Taylor, Ev, § 1694; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 406, 407; Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar, 18 M, 73, 77, 78 (1895).

(8) Eaton v. Swansea Waterworks, 17 Q B, 267

(9) Re Last, 1896, 2 Ch., 788

(10) R. v. Fontaine Moreau, 11 Q. B., 1028, 1033, per Lord Denman, C J.: "Why does what a man says of himself cease to be evidence by being said in Court"? As to a plea of guilty being evidence of an admission, see Shumboo Chunder v Madhoo Koybert, 10 W. R., 56 (1868) A plea of guilty in the Criminal Court may, but a verdict of conviction cannot, be considered in evidence in a civil case, Taylor, Ev, § 1694

(11) R v. Warden of the Fleet, 12 Mod, 339, and v. post.

(12) S. 42, ante; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1693, 624

(13) Taylor, Ev, § 1693.

(14) Taylor, Ev, § 1693, and cases there cited; Castrique v. Imrie, L. R., 4 E. & I, 434; Keramutoollah Chowdhry v. Gholam Hossein, 9 W. R., 77 (1868). [A proceeding of a Criminal Court is not admissible as evidence; a Civil Court is as not being between the same parties, the parties in the prosecution being the King-Emperor on the one hand, and the prisoner on the other, and in the civil suit the prisoner and some third party, and substantially, because the issues in a civil and criminal proceeding are not the same, and the burden of proof rests in each case on different shoulders.(1) Thus A is convicted of forging B's signature to a bill of exchange. B is afterwards sued by C to whom A has transferred the bill. A's conviction is not admissible to prove the forgery.(2) So again a [illegible]

[illegible] whether by such act [illegible] a judgment may also [illegible] ract to indemnify B against any damages recoverable against the latter by C, and B has bonâ fide defended the action and paid the amount, the judgment will be conclusive of A's liability But this does not apply where B has no contract with, but merely a claim against A for such indemnity.(5) In the absence of special agreement, a judgment or an award against a principal debtor is not binding on the surety, and is not evidence against him in an action by the creditor, but the surety is entitled to have the liability proved as against him in the same way as against the principal debtor (6) As to decrees considered as evidence of the necessity of alienation, see authorities cited below (7)

Fraud or collusion I obtaining judgment or incompe tency of Court, ma be proved.

44. Any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that any judgment, order or decree, which is relevant under section 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse bound to find the facts itself], Bishonath Neogy v Huro Gobind, 5 W R, 27 (1866) [The conviction in a criminal case is not conclusive in a civil suit for damages in respect of the same act], Nityanund Surmah v Kashinath Nyalunker, 5 W R, 26 (1866) [A Civil Court is not bound to adopt the view of a Magistrate as to the genuineness or otherwise of a document,] Doorga Dass v. Doorga Churn, 6 W R, Civ Ref, 26 (1866) [A suit for money forcibly taken from the plaintiff by the defendant is maintainable in Civil Court, notwithstanding defendants' acquittal in the Criminal Court on the charge of robbery]; Ali Buksh v Shaikh Samiruddin, 4 B L R, A. C., 13 (1869), 1 W R, 477 In a suit for damages for an assault, the previous conviction of the defendant in a Criminal Court is no evidence of the assault The factum of the assault must be tried in the Civil Court; R v Hedger (1852), at p. 135, Aghorenath Roy v. Radhika Pershad, 14 W R, 339 (1870); Gogun Chunder v R, 6 C, 247 (1880); Ram Lal v Tulla Ram, 4 A, 97 (1880). See Raj Kumari v. Bama Sundari, 23 C, 610 (1896), in which, however, Ghose, J, observed that he was not prepared to say that the decision in a Civil suit would not be admissible in evidence in a Criminal case, if the parties were substantially the same and the issues in the two cases identical. Rampini, J, contra Manjanali Debi v. Ramdas Shome, 4 C. W N., clxxvi (1900). For a case in which a Civil judgment was rejected in a Criminal proceeding, see R v Fontaine Moreau, 11 Q B, 1028 And for a case in which a Civil judgment was admitted in a Criminal proceeding see Markur (in re), 41 B, 1 (1917). Here the former plaintiff was the complainant with former defendant the accused and the issue substantially the same, and the Civil judgment in certain points now included in the Criminal charge was admitted in evidence of breach of trust

(1) Gogun Chunder v. R, 6 C, 247 (1880), per White, J

(2) Castrique v Imrie, L R, 4 E. & I, 234, Parsons v London County Council, 9 T L R, 619.

(3) Virgo v Virgo, 69 L T, 460. So also in the trial of A as accessory to a felony committed by R, the conviction of B though admissible to prove that fact, is no evidence of B's guilt See Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 407, et ibi casas.

(4) Vedanayagar Mudalier v. Vedaum, 14 Mad. L J, 297.

(5) Parker v. Lewis, 8 Ch. App, 1035, 1058, 1059.

(6) Ex-parte Young In re Kitchin, 17 Ch. D, 668

(7) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 184—186, Mayne's Hindu Law, §§ 323, 324, and cases there cited.

party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion.

Principle.—A judgment delivered by a Court not competent(1) to deliver it, as by a Court which had no jurisdiction over the parties or the subject-matter of the suit, is a mere nullity.(2) And though the maxim is stringent that no man shall be permitted to aver against a record, yet when fraud can be shewn [illegible] when a decree is passed [illegible] other.(4) Fraus et jus [illegible] lesiastical or temporal. It is an extrinsic collateral act, which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of Courts of Justice, which, upon being satisfied of such fraud, have a power to vacate and should vacate their own judgments.(5) In the application of this rule it makes no difference whether the judgment impugned has been pronounced by an inferior or by the highest tribunal; but in all cases alike, it is competent for every Court, whether superior or inferior, to treat as a nullity any judgment which can be clearly shown to have been obtained by manifest fraud.(6)

ss. 40—42 (Judgments orders and decrees.) s. 3 "(Court.")
s. 3 (" Relevant.")

Steph. Dig., Art 46, Taylor, Ev., §§ 1713—1717; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 384; Best, Ev., § 595; Field, Ev 6th Ed., 186—190; Norton, Ev., 218, 219; Wharton, Law Lexicon (1892); ib, 12th Ed. (1916); Hukm Chand's Res Judicata 484.

COMMENTARY.

ncom-petency. raud, collu-on

When one of the parties to a suit tenders or has put in evidence(7) a judgment, order or decree under the fortieth, forty-first, or forty-second section(8) it is open to the other party under this section to avoid its effect on any of the three grounds, (a) want of jurisdiction in the Court which delivered the judgment; (b) that the judgment was obtained through fraud, or (c) collusion.(9)

) Incom-petency.

A judgment delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it is a mere nullity, and cannot have any probative force whatever between the parties.(10)

(1) See Kettilamma v Kelappan, 12 M., 228 (1887), Sardarmal v Aranvayal Sabhapathy, 21 B., 205, 212 (1896).

(2) See cases cited, post

(3) Rogers v Hadley, 2 H. & C., 247; see Huffer v. Allen, L. R, 2 Ex, 18

(4) Bandon v Becher, 3 C & F., 510.

(5) Duchess of Kingston's Case, 2 Sm. L C, per Lord deGrey, C. J., Philipson v. The Earl of Egremont, 6 A. & E, 587: 605: Paranjpe v. Kanade, 6 B., 148 (1882)

(6) Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. H. L, 535; as to the procedure to be taken to set aside a decree obtained by fraud and collusion, see Mewa Lal v. Bhujun Jha, 13 B L R, App. 11 (1874); Ashootosh Chandra v. Tara Prasanna, 10 C., 612 (1884), Eshan Chundra v. Nundamoni Dassee. 10 C., 357 (1884); Karamali Rahimbhoy v Rahimbhoy Habibhoy, 13 B, 137 (1888); Bansi Lall v Ramji Lall, 20 A, 370, 374 (1898); Nistarini Dassee v Nundo Lall, 26 C., 907 (1899). See also Act IX of 1908, Sch i, Art. 95

(7) See Nistarini Dassi v. Nundo Lall, 30 C, 369, 382 (1902), where it was objected that the decree had not been proved by the adverse party.

(8) In Norton, Ev., 218, it is suggested that the same rule ought to apply in the case of a judgment, order or decree, tendered under s 43.

(9) Ib See Amedbhoy Habibhoy v Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy, 6 B, 716 (1882); it was suggested that the word may be read as equivalent to "fraud and collusion"; sed quære; see post.

(10) See Kalka Parshad v. Kanhaya Singh, 7 N. W. P., 99 (1875); Sookram Misser v. Crowdy, 19 W. R., 284 (1873); Gunnesh Pattro v. Ram Nidhee, 22 W. R., 361 (1874); R. v. Hussein Gaibu, 8 B., 307 (1884). Where an offence is tried by a Court without jurisdiction the proceedings are void, and the offender if acquitted is liable to be tried.

The words 'not competent' in this section refer to a Court acting without jurisdiction.(1) And although one Court cannot set aside the proceedings of another Court, for want of jurisdiction, yet when a matter arises before a Court in the ordinary course of its jurisdiction, and one of the parties relies on, or seeks to protect himself by, the proceedings of another Court, then in that way the jurisdiction of the Court whose proceedings are pleaded may be inquired into.(2) By the law both of this country and of England, anybody, whether or irregularity in the decision is a less evil than the total absence of finality which would be the only alternative (4) There is a distinction between an order

, even if erroneous in a decision afterwards

, judicata in a later execution-proceeding for a different relief.(6)

(ii) Frau

The Act contains no definition of the term "fraud" for the purposes of this section. It was held in one case that the fraud must not consist in the fact of a fraudulent defence having been set up; it must be fraud in procuring the judgment, such as collusion or the like between the parties, or fraud in the Court itself.(7) In a subsequent case it was said that the fraud must be actual fraud, such that there is on the part of the person chargeable with it the malus animus, putting itself in motion and acting in order to take an undue advantage of some other person for the purpose of actually and knowingly

(1) Kettilamma v Kelappan, 12 M., 228 (1887) Competency is here synonymous with jurisdiction. Sardarmal v. Anarvayal Sabhapathy, 21 B, 205, 212 (1896) See the same matter reported in 21 B, 297 (1897), see Abdul Kadir v. Doolanbibi, 37 B, 563 (1913) (incompetence and res judicata).

(2) Gunnesh Pattro v. Ram Nidhee, 22 W. R, 361 (1874).

(3) Rajib Panda v Lakhan Sendh, 27 C., 11, 21 (1899); Steph. Dig, Art. 46; Taylor, Ev, § 1714. According to English Law, while in the case of fraud or collusion strangers alone may show their existence, want of jurisdiction may be shown by anybody As to fraud and collusion in this country, v. post.

(4) This passage was cited with approval in Nathu Ram v. Kalyan Das, 1 All. L J., 21, 222 (1904); s. c., 26 A., 522. Caston v. Caston, 22 A., 270, 281 (1899); see s. 41, ante.

(5) Sardarmal v. Anarvayal Sabhapathy, 21 B, 205, 211 (1896)

(6) Baij Nath Goenka v Padmanand Singh, 39 C, 848 (1912).

(7) Cammell v. Sewell, 4 Jur. N. S, 978 (1858); s c, 3 H & N., 617; 5 H. & N, 728; see Story Eq. Jur., 258, § 252*a*; as to enquiries in the Bankruptcy Court guarding against fraud with regard to the consideration for a judgment-debt, see Ex-parte Revell; In re Tollemache, 13 Q. B. D, 720 Ex-parte Lennox, 16 Q. B. D., 315; Ex-parte Flatau, 22 Q B. D, 83; Ex-parte Bonham, 14 Q B. D, 605; Ex-parte Official Receiver. Re Miller, 67 L. T., 601; Re Fraser (1892), 2 Q B, 633; Re Hawkins, Ex-parte Troup (1895), 1 Q B., 404. As to the effect of fraud in judgments, see Hukm Chand, op. cit, 484.

(8) Patch v. Ward, L R., 3 Ch. D, 203, cited in Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sulliman, 21 C., 617 (1894) and recently followed in Nanda Kumar Howladar v. Ram Jiban Howladar, 41 C., 990 (1914); 19 C L. J, 457, which has been followed in Janki Kuar v. Lachmi Narain, 37 A., 535 (1915).

In a subsequent case(1) an action was brought for infringement of a patent, and judgment was recovered by the plaintiff, which was reversed by the Court of Appeal on the ground that the facts shewed no infringement Subsequently the plaintiff brought an action to impeach the judgment on the ground that when an expert sent down by the Court, and whose evidence was the only material evidence before the Court as to the nature of the defendant's process, examined the defendant's works, the defendant fraudulently concealed from him certain parts of the process, so that he had no opportunity of discovering the points in which it resembled that of the plaintiff. On the original trial the fraud was found to be proved and the judgment was set aside On appeal(2) by the defendant, in the Court of Appeal (James, Baggallay and Thesiger, L. JJ.) the judgment of the lower Court was reversed on the ground that the fraud was not proved. But James, L. J., added the following observations, in which Thesiger, L. J., concurred; Baggallay, L. J., dissenting: "Assuming all the alleged falsehood and fraud to have been substantiated, is such a suit as the present sustainable? That question would require very grave consideration indeed before it is answered in the affirmative. Where is litigation [illegible] be on one side or the other wilfully and corruptly perjured. In this case, if the plaintiffs had sustained in this appeal the judgment in their favour, the present defendants in their turn might bring a fresh action to set that judgment aside on the ground of perjury of the principal witness and subornation of perjury, and so the parties might go on alternately ad infinitum." These observations, which were obiter dicta, were cited by Petheram, C. J., in the case undernoted(3), where the plaintiff alleged that he was induced by the fraud of the defendant not to defend the action, and in which the following observations (which were also obiter, as fraud was negatived) were made :—The principle upon which these decisions rest is that where a decree has been obtained by a fraud practised upon the other side, by which he was prevented from placing his case before the tribunal which was called upon to adjudicate upon it in the way most to his advantage, the decree is not binding upon him and may be set aside in a separate suit, and not only by an application made in the suit in which the decree was passed to the Court by which it was passed; but I am not aware that it has ever been suggested in any decided case, and in my opinion it is not the law, that because a person against whom a decree [illegible] wrong and that it was obtained by perjury [illegible] of, the other party, which is of course fra[illegible] obtain a rehearing of the questions in dispute in a fresh action by merely changing the form in which [illegible] the first decree was given To so hold [illegible] not only of the law [illegible] judicata as well. The reasons why this cannot be the case are very clearly stated by James, L J, in the passage I have quoted......" Since the English decision cited, there have been several cases where the Court has under similar circumstances

(1) Flower v Lloyd, 6 Ch D., 297 (1877), cited in Nistarini Dassee v. Nurdo Lall, 26 C., 891 (1899).

(2) Flower v. Lloyd, 10 Ch. D., 327 (1878): see Abuloff v Oppenheimer, 10 Q B D., 295, 307, 308 (1882), in which this decision was criticized, and Janki Kuer v Lachmi Narain, 37 A, 535 (1915), in which it was stated to be no longer law.

(3) Mahomed Golab v Mahomed Sulliman, 21 C., 612, 619 (1894).

exercised jurisdiction. In the undermentioned case(1), B in an action brought in the Probate Division had propounded a will, and A had propounded the substance of a later will alleging that the earlier will had been obtained by undue influence. A compromise was effected under which the alleged earlier will was admitted to probate. Afterwards A discovered that the last-mentioned alleged will was a forgery and that B was a party or privy to the forgery and brought an action to set aside the compromise as having been procured by other case (2) the plaintiff the defendant, in that the rtain false and counterfeit documents and certain memorandum books containing false and fraudulent entries touching the matters in issue in the action, and the judgment so fraudulently obtained was set aside But in another, where the plaintiff, having obtained letters of administration to the estate of a deceased landlord, sued a tenant for rent, and the latter in his written statement objected that the letters of administration had been obtained upon a misrepresentation by the plaintiff as to his relationship with the intestate. it was held that assuming that the letters of administration could be regarded as an order within the meaning of this section, the allegations of the defendant were not such as would entitle him to go into evidence for the purpose of proving that the letters of administration were invalid in law, and also that such a defence could not be successfully to keep the parties and the Court in ignorance of the facts of the case and an obtaining of the decree by such contrivance (4)

With regard to the parties who may show fraud it is clear that a stranger h e n

no way privy to the fraud, and not by a party, since if the latter were innocent, he might have applied to vacate the judgment, and if guilty he cannot escape the consequence of his own wrong But the language of the section is wide enough to allow a party to the suit in which the judgment was obtained to aver and prove that it was obtained by the fraud of his antagonist though the judgment stands unreversed (7) And it has been accordingly held that a party to subsequent suit aver judgment remains possession of a tank

(1) Priestman v Thomas, 9 P D, 210 (1884) Ref to in Rakshab Mondal v Sm Tarangini Debi, 25 C W N, 207 (1921)

(2) Cole v Langford, 2 Q B (1898), 36, cited in Sri Rangammal, 23 M, 216, 219 (1899)

(3) Ambica Charan Das v Kala Chandra Das, 10 C W N, 422 Ref to in Rakshab Mondal v Sm Tarangini Debi, 25 C W N, 207 (1921)

(4) Janki Kuar v Lachmi Narain, 37 A., 535 (1915), following Nanda Kumar Howladar v Ram Jiban Howladar, 41 C, 990 (1914), per Jenkins, C J, which dissented from Venkatapa Nath v Sabha Naik, 29 M, 179 (1905); and see Munshi Mosaful Huq v Surendra Nath Ray, 16 C W N 1002 (1912), and Chinnaya v Ramanna, 38 M 203 (1915)

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 1713, Steph Dig, Art 46 Bigelow's Estoppel, 208 Huffer v Allen L R 2 Exch, 15 See Asini Kumar v Samaddar, 21 C W N, 594

(6) This view is by no means a clearly settled and accepted one, the rule with regard to innocent parties being treated as open to some doubt, Rajib Panda v Lakhan Sendh, 27 C, 23 (1899)

(7) Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy, 6 B, 703, 715 (1882)

(8) Rajib Panda v Lakhan Sendh, 27 C, 1 (1899), s c., 3 C W N., 660, Nistarini Dassee v Nundo Lall, 26 C, the plaintiff put in a decree based on a compromise in a previous suit between him and the defendant to prove his right to khas possession. The defence inter alia was that the decree was a fraudulent one. It was objected by the plaintiff that as the defendant was a party to the former decree, which was unreversed, he should not be allowed to prove that it was procured by fraud, but it was held that the defendant was entitled to do so (1) A party to a proceeding is never disabled from showing that a judgment or order has been obtained by the adverse party by fraud(2) ; and if it can be proved that the decree in the former suit was obtained by fraud there can be no question of res judicata.(3) In the [illegible] A mortgaged certain property to B, who obtained a decree therein. Subsequent [illegible] a third party, C. B having attempted to execute his decree against the property in the hands of C, the latter instituted a suit against A and B, for the purpose of having it declared that the property was not liable to satisfy the decree, because the mortgage-transaction was a fraudulent one, and the decree had been obtained by fraud and collusion. In such suit B contended that C having purchased subsequent to the decree was absolutely bound by it. But it was held that, having regard to the terms of this section, it was perfectly open to C to prove that the decree had been obtained by fraud and collusion.(4) The words of the section "any party to a suit, &c" are wide enough to include parties to the first suit, both innocent and guilty. But there can be no doubt that the benefit conferred by the section is given only to an innocent party not privy to the fraud. For though the words of the section would, by themselves and [illegible] -llow a party to set up his own fraud in procuri[illegible] to defeat it (which has been characterised as [illegible] clear that a guilty party would not be permitted to defeat a judgment by showing that in obtaining it he had practised an imposition on the Court.(6) But in that case a party is precluded, not by any rule of evidence but by the general principles of justice which forbid a person to plead his own fraud.(7) In a recent case where the nephew of a testator applied for a revocation of a grant of Probate on the ground of perjury and fraud, alleging that he could have proved this at the time of the grant but had refrained because the executor had promised him a payment which had since been withheld, his application was refused on the ground that on his own showing he had been a party to the fraud.(8) It is no

891 (1899), s c, 3 C. W. N, 670 In appeal, 30 C, 369; s. c, 7 C. W. N, 353, it was held that the High Court had original jurisdiction to entertain a suit to set aside a decree of a Mofussil Court on the ground of fraud and that even if this were not so, inasmuch as admittedly the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit so far as it was one for administration, if the decree was relied upon by the defendant the plaintiff might show that it was obtained by fraud [approved in Sri Rangammal v. Sandammal, 23 M., 216, 218 (1899)]; Bansi Lal v. Dhapo, 24 A., 242 (1902), in which cases this matter and prior decisions thereon will be found fully discussed. These three cases are supported by dicta in Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v Vulleebhoy, supra; Manchharam v. Kalidas, 19 B., 821, 826 (1894); Nilmoney Mukhopadhya v. Aimunissa Bibee, 12 C., 156 (1885). The case of Bansi Lal v. Ramji Lall, 20 A, 370 (1898), cannot be regarded as an authority, as the present section was not considered nor even mentioned in that decision. See Bansi Lal v. Dhapo, 24 A, 242, 245 (1902). As to foreign judgments, see Nistarini Dossee v. Nundo Lall, 26 C., at p 910 (1899)

(1) Rajib Panda v. Lakhan Sendh, 27 C, 11 (1899).

(2) Manchharam v. Kalidas, 19 B, 821 (1894).

(3) Krishnabhupati v. Ramamurti, 16 M, 198 (1892).

(4) Nilmoney Mukhopadhya v. Aimunissa Bibee, 12 C., 156 (1885).

(5) Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v. Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy, 6 B, 703 (1882), at p. 716, per Latham, J., having regard to the maxims Allegans suam turpitudinem non est audiendus and Nemo ex doloso proprio relevatur aut auxilium capeat

(6) Nistarini Dossee v. Nundo Lall, 26 C., 891, 907 (1899).

(7) Rajib Panda v. Lakhan Sendh, 27 C., 11, 22, 23 (1899).

(8) Kishorbhai Ravadas v. Ranchoda Dhulia, 38 B, 427 (1914).

actively in favour of a party udulent transaction, and this n estate. But the rule that a privy in estate cannot set up fraud as an answer is not of general application. There are cases which form an exception to it, such as cases in which the act in which the parties concur is against the principles of morality or public policy. In such cases the Court sees the necessity of supporting the public interest, however blameable the parties themselves may be. Another exception is where the collusive fraud has been on a provision of the law enacted for the benefit of the privies. The rule which prevents a person who is a party from pleading the illegality of his act does not hold good as against persons claiming through such party, if they are the parties sought to be defrauded. So where by means of a fraud practised on the Court the owner of considerable property caused a decree to be passed against himself as defendant in a collusive suit upholding a fictitious wakf-namah, by which it was intended to tie up the property in perpetuity for the benefit of the direct descendants of the waqif to the exclusion of his collateral heirs, it was held in a suit by such heirs to recover possession of their share by inheritance of the property so dealt with (a) that a Court, which was otherwise competent to entertain the suit, had jurisdiction, on the finding that it had been obtained by means of fraud, to treat the previous decree as a nullity, and (b) that the plaintiffs were not prevented from setting up the plea that the previous decree had been obtained by fraud by the fact that the person who practised such fraud was their predecessor in title.(1)

(iii) Collusion.

As in the case of the term "fraud," the Act contains no definition of the word "collusion;" for the purposes of this section "Collusion" is the uniting for the purposes of fraud or deception, and has been defined to be a deceitful agreement or compact between two or more persons to do some act in order to prejudice a third person or for some improper purpose Collusion in judicial proceedings is a secret agreement between two persons that the one should institute a suit against the other in order to obtain the decision of a judicial tribunal for some sinister purpose, and appears to be of two kinds: (a) When the facts put forward as the foundation of the sentence of the Court do not exist, (b) when they exist but have been corruptly pre-concerted for the express purpose of obtaining the sentence. In either case the judgment obtained by such collusion is a nullity.(2)

It is clear that a stranger to a judgment can avoid its effect by proof of collusion But a party who has himself procured the judgment by his collusion can by or neither of them can escape its consequences(5) Strangers no doubt may falsify

(1) Barkut-un-nissa v. Fazl Haq, 26 A., 227 (1904)

(2) Wharton's Law Lexicon (1892), sub loco "Collusion" p 151, ib 12th Ed. (1916), p 187. This definition is perhaps in some respects too limited Proof of collusion in the sense that the parties, even without fraud, were not really in contest, will vitiate the judgment Earl of Bandon v. Becher, 3 C. & F., 510, Girdlestone v. Brighton Aquarium Coy, 4 Ex D, 107 [referred to in Nistarini Dossee v. Nundo Lall, 26 C., at p. 909 (1899)]. The former action in the case last cited was one brought, not for the purpose of giving the person named as plaintiff the fruits of it or indeed any benefit whatever from it, but for the protection of the defendants It was held that there was no fraud in procuring the former judgment, but that it was no bar inasmuch as there had been collusion (deceit) and the defendants in the second action were in truth both plaintiff and defendants in the former action, the judgment in which was pleaded as a bar. In Sardarmal v Aravayal Sabhapathy, 21 B., 205, 215 (1896), it was held that there was no collusion.

(3) Chenvirappa v Putappa, 11 B., 708, 713 (1887)

(4) In cases cited, ante

(5) Chenvirappa v. Putappa, supra a decree by charging collusion; but a party to a decree not complaining of any fraud practised upon himself cannot be allowed to question it. It is not competent to a party to a collusive decree to seek to have it set aside.(1) A party to a collusive decree is bound by concerned that can be made tween fraud and collusion has

(iv) Generally

The question of fraud as affecting judgment and decree was considered by the Bombay High Court on general grounds of English law in the case of ...umbhoy(5), which must be read in con-
After a division of persons into three as affected by the judgment, viz.: (a) privies, (b) persons who, though not claiming under the parties to the former suit, were represented by them therein; (c) strangers, neither privies to, nor represented by, the parties to the former suit, the Court proceeded to consider the effect of a previous judgment on these three classes respectively with reference to their capacity to dispute it.

In the first place, the judgment may be an honest one, obtained in a suit conducted with good faith on the part of both plaintiff and defendant. In such a case the previous judgment is clearly binding both on class (a) and class (b); class (c) will be in no way affected by the judgment if it be inter partes; but if it be one in rem passed by a competent Court(6), they will be bound by and cannot controvert it.(7) In the second place, the judgment may be passed in a suit really contested by the parties thereto, but may be obtained by the fraud of one of them as against the other There has been a real battle, but a victory unfairly won. In this case again, class (a) and class (b) and as regards judgments in rem class (c) are in one and the same position, which is that of the parties themselves. The judgment is binding on them so long as it remains in force, but it
In the thir
and collusi
no battle, but a sham fight. As between the parties to such a judgment, it is binding. The same rule will apply between the privies of these parties(8); except probably where the collusive fraud has been on a provision of the law enacted for the benefit of such with the intent

a house in part-satisfaction creditors were consequently induced to remit part of their claims. A having died, his widow and legal representative under Hindu law sued B to have the note and conveyance set aside and to have the defendant restrained by injunction from executing the decree, but it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to relief in respect of

(1) Varadarajulu Naidu v. Srinivasalu Naidu, 20 M., 333 (1897).

(2) Chenvirappa v. Putappa, 11 B., 708 (1887).

(3) Varadarajulu Naidu v. Srinivasalu Naidu, 20 M., at p. 338.

(4) Ib, if it be proved that the decree was obtained by the collusion of others, there can be no res judicata, Krishnabhupatti v Ramamurti, 16 M., 198 (1892).

(5) 6 B., 703 (1882).

(6) v. s. 41, ante.

(7) Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v. Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy, supra.

(8) Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v. Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy, supra; Rangammal v. Venkatachari, 18 M., 378 (1895).

(9) Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v. Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy, supra.

the note and the decree, although she was not personally a party to the fraud, inasmuch as she claimed through A by whose contrivance and collusion the defendant was enabled to obtain the decree.(1) But as regards class (b) and (where a judgment in rem is in question) class (c) any member of either class may

It has been held, in the Calcutta High Court, that a consent decree cannot be set aside on motion on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and misrepresentation, but that a separate suit must be brought for that purpose.(3) And in a recent case in the Allahabad High Court, where it was alleged that a compromise was obtained by undue influence, it was held that a decree obtained by consent or on a compromise can be attacked in a separate suit, not only upon the ground of fraud, but upon any ground which would be sufficient for invalidating the agreement upon which the decree was based.(4) Semble: having regard to the wide terms of this section, it is not possible to say that it is not open to a Court other than the Court from which a grant has issued, in cases of fraud or collusion, to deal with the matter and decide whether the grant has been obtained by fraud or collusion. But the better course in such cases would be, when it is open to a party alleging fraud to apply to the Court from which the grant issued, to stay the suit to enable an application to be made to revoke the grant (5)

(1) Rangammal v Venkatachari, 18 M, 378 (1895)

(2) Ahmedbhoy Hubibhoy v. Vulleebhoy Cassumbhoy, 6 B, at pp 710—714, and see Baikanta Nath Roy Chowdhry v. Mohendra Nath Roy, 1 C L J, 65

(3) Foolcoomary Dasi v Woodoy Chunder, 2 S C, 649 (1898)

(4) Shamu Nath Chandri v Ravinas, 34 A, 143 (1911), following Huddersfield Banking Co v Henry Lister & Son, Ltd, L R, 2 Ch, 273 (1895), and v Musst Gulab Kuar v Badshah Bahadur, 13 C. W N, 1197 (1909), and Sarbish Chandra Basu v Hari Dayal Singh, 14 C W N, 451 (1910)

(5) Rakshab Mondal v Sm Tarangini Devi, 25 C W N, 207 (1921).

OPINIONS OF THIRD PERSONS; WHEN RELEVANT.

The opinions of any person, other than the Judge by whom the fact is to be decided, as to the existence of facts in issue or relevant fact, are, as a rule, irrelevant to the decision of the cases to which they relate. To show that such and such a person thought that a crime had been committed, or a contract made, would either be to show nothing at all, or it would invest the person whose opinion was proved with the character of a Judge. The use of witnesses being to inform the tribunal respecting facts, their opinions are not in general receivable as evidence, though what is matter of opinion is sometimes a question of some difficulty. In some few cases, the reasons for which are self-evident, it is otherwise. They are specified in the following sections 45—51.(1) A distinction must, however, be drawn between the cases where an opinion may be admissible under sections 6—11 (independently of its correctness as such) as forming a link in the chain of relevant facts to be proved, and those in which an opinion is tendered merely as such, and is sought to be made use of solely by reason of the correctness of its findings upon its subject-matter. In the last mentioned case the opinion will be excluded, unless it be one of those which are permitted to be given in evidence under the above-mentioned sections. That a man holds a certain opinion is a fact (section 3): and this fact when relevant must like others be proved by direct evidence. Subject to a proviso in favour of the opinions of experts who cannot be called as witnesses, oral evidence, if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds (section 60)

The weight of such evidence depends on the maxim cuilibet in arte sua credendum est, and the grounds of its admissibility are contained in the general rule " that the opinion of witnesses possessing peculiar skill is admissible, whenever the subject-matter of enquiry is such that inexperienced persons are unlikely to prove capable of forming a correct judgment upon it without such assistance , in other words, when it so far partakes of the character of a science or art, as to require a course of previous habit or study in order to obtain a competent knowledge of its nature."(2) On the other hand, it is equally clear that the opinions of skilled witnesses cannot be received, when the inquiry relates to a subject which does not require any peculiar habits or course of study in order to qualify a man to understand it.(3) Thus witnesses are not permitted to state their views on the construction of documents or on matters of moral or legal obligation, or on the manner in which other persons would probably have been influenced had the parties acted in one way rather than another, because on such points the Court is as capable of forming an opinion as the witnesses themselves.(4)

---

(1) Steph. Introd, 167; "Opinions in so far as they may be founded on no evidence, or illegal evidence, are worthless, and in so far as they may be founded on legal evidence, tend to usurp the functions of the tribunal whose province alone it is to draw conclusions of law or fact." Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 361; citing Best, Ev., § 511; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed. 37—55: Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 1; Wigmore, Ev., § 1917 et seq

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 1418; as to the meaning of the term "expert," see Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 1905

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 1419; see Pranjivandas v Mojaram, 1 Bom. H C. R, at p 155 (1863). See remarks to Lord Bramwell in G. v. M. I. R., 10 App Cas. 171, 200; and of Vaughan Williams, J. in R. v. Silverlock, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. (1894), 766, 769.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 1419; Greenleaf, Ev., § 441.

Opinion when admissible.

The opinions of skilled witnesses are admissible in evidence, not only where they rest on the personal observation of the witnesses themselves, and on facts within their own knowledge, but even where they are merely founded on the case as proved by other witnesses at the trial. But here the witness cannot in strictness be asked his opinion respecting the very point which the Court or jury are to determine. So if the question be whether a particular act, for which a prisoner is tried, were an act of insanity, a medical man, conversant with that disease, who knows nothing of the prisoner, but has simply heard the trial, can not be broadly asked his opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime; because such a question involves the determination of the truth of the facts deposed to, as well as the scientific inference from those facts. He may, however, be asked what judgment he can form on the subject, assuming the facts stated in evidence to be true. (1) An expert may refer to text-books to refresh his memory, or to correct or confirm his opinion(2), e g., a doctor to medical treatises, a valuer to price-lists, a foreign lawyer to codes, text-writers, and reports. If he describe particular passages therein as accurately representing his views, they may be read as part of his testimony, though not (in England) as evidence per se.(3) The opinion of an expert is open to corroboration or rebuttal(4), and when the opinion is relevant the grounds upon which such opinion is based are also relevant (5) The evidence of experts is to be received with caution, because they may often come with such a bias in their minds to support the cause in which they are embarked that their judgments become warped, and they themselves become [illegible] (6) [illegible]

Distinction between "matter of fact" and "matter of opinion."

Accurately to distinguish 'matter of fact' from 'matter of opinion' is not less difficult than to distinguish it from 'matter of law.' In all supposed statements of facts the witness really testifies to the opinion formed by the judgment upon the presentment of the senses. Statement of opinion is, therefore, necessarily involved in statement of fact. An instance erroneously supposed to be simply an 'opinion,' is found in cases where the phenomena being too numerous or intangible to permit of correct or effective individual statement, witnesses are permitted to state simply the impression such phenomena produced in their minds. This, apparently, is simply another method of stating facts (8) Thus a witness can testify as to whether a person appeared to be in 'good health' or the reverse; or seemed "hostile" or 'friendly;' or appeared "intoxicated" or looked 'excited;' or 'scared,' 'old,' or 'young,' or was of a particular age, 'pleased,' or 'agitated;' or that two persons seemed to be 'attached'

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 1421 M Roghuni Singh v R, 9 C, 455, 461 (1882), R v Meher Ali, 15 C, 589 (1888); McNaghten's Case, 10 C & F, 200

(2) S 159, post

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 1422; Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C. & F, 85, 114, Collier v Simpson, 5 C. & F., 74, Nelson v Bridport, 8 Beav, 527; Concha v Murietta, 40 Ch D, 543.

(4) S 46, post

(5) S 51, post.

(6) See Best, Ev, § 514, et seq, and per Lord Campbell, Tracey Peerage Case, 10 C & F., 191. See remarks of Jessel, M. R., in Abinger v Ashton, L R, 17 Eq. 373 "An expert is not like an ordinary witness, who hopes to get his expenses, but he is employed and paid in the sense of gain, being employed by persons who call him Undoubtedly there is a natural bias to do something serviceable for those who employed you and adequately remunerate you"—Ib, at p 374 See also Goday Narain v Sri Ankatam, 6 Mad H C R, 85, 87, 88 (1871), Hari Chintaman v Moro Lakshman, 11 B, 101 (1886) And as to criminal cases, see Srikant v R, 2 All L J, 444 (1904), Panchu Mondal v R, 1 C L J, 385 (1905)

(7) Venkata Row (in re), 36 M., 159 (1913)

(8) Best Ev, 473, Amer Notes. See Cornewall Lewis "Influence of authority," 1, Sully's Illusions, 328 Wigmore, Ev., § 1919 It is, of course, not intended under the Act to exclude evidence of this description See Cunningham, Ev, 190, and s 3 ante, definition of "fact."

to each other, or that a building or document was 'in good or bad preservation,' or the like. Such persons are not experts properly so-called; though experts with the same facilities for observation, may, of course, testify in the same manner and to the same points. The obvious, and perhaps, the only, limitation placed on evidence of this nature, which may be described as the opinions of non-experts, is that the witness will not be allowed unnecessarily to invade the province of the Judge [illegible] ion for theirs (1) But such evidence is admitted [illegible] nd direct testimony is unattainable (2) As all [illegible] some sort, it is not possible to wholly dissociate statements of opinion from statements of fact. The evidentiary test has been said to be, that if the fact stated necessarily involves the component facts, it will b [illegible] does not necessarily inv [illegible] phases of fact the particu [illegible] though a witness might, [illegible] B,' yet the statement that 'A killed B' would be improper; as involving a conclusion that might be remote and doubtful, and apply equally to a variety of different incidents."(3) So it was held that a witness's statement that a party 'is in possession' is no evidence of that fact; that the question of possession is a mixed one of law and fact; and that the evidence produced must give the various acts of ownership which go to constitute possession; so that the Court may arrive at its own conclusion.(4) In, however, a subsequent case it was laid down that a statement by a witness that a party is in possession, is, in point of law, admissible evidence of the fact that such party was in possession (5) Such general and vague statements are, however, as a rule of but little value. (6) A common instance of such opinion-evidence of non-experts is that which is given [illegible] the genuineness [illegible] remarked: "in [illegible] man you have seen with the man you see at the trial. The same rule of comparison belongs to every species of identification," as for instance, to the indentification of

(1) Best, Ev, 473, 474, § 517; Taylor, Ev, § 1416, Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, post, see next note; James' Law of Experts, 32; Wharton, Ev, § 502

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 1416. Such opinions have been described as "opinions from necessity," and the rule stated as follows "the opinions of ordinary witnesses derived from observations are admissible in evidence, when from the nature of the subject under investigation, no better evidence can be obtained, or in fact cannot otherwise be presented to the tribunal, e.g., question relating to time, quantity, number, dimensions, height, speed, distance or the like, and to the facts stated in the text: Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 460.

(3) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 378; citing Best, Ev, Amer. Notes to § 511, supra; Whart, §§ 15, 509—513; Stephen, J, in 3 Southern Law Rep. (Amer.), 567; and see Taylor, Ev., § 1416; "On some particular subjects positive and direct testimony is often unattainable. In such cases a witness is allowed to testify to his belief or opinions, or even to draw inferences respecting the fact in question from other facts which are within his personal knowledge," see also Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 54; Best, Ev., § 517.

(4) Ishan Chunder v. Ram Lochun, 9 W R, 79 (1868).

(5) Maniram Deb v. Devi Charan, 4 B. L R (F. B), 97 (1869).

(6) See notes to s. 110, post.

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 1416 Witnesses may not only state their belief as to the identity of persons present in Court or not, but may identify them by photographs (Frith v. Frith, 1896, p. 74) produced and proved to be theirs. The same rule applies to the identification of things (Fryer v. Gathercole, 13 Jur., 542), e.g., opinion may be given as to the resemblance of an engraving to a picture not produced (Lucas v. Williams, 1892, 2 Q. B, 113, 116); or even of a portrait that is produced to one of the parties in Court (Mills v. Lamson, "Times," Oct 29, 1892, McQueen v. Phipps, "Times," July 1, 1897), Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed. 376; Wigmore, Ev., § 1917.

(8) v. s. 47, post.

(9) 13 Jur., 542.

handwriting.(1) The opinions of witnesses are also admissible to prove the innuendoes of libel, where ordinary words are used in a peculiar sense, or where a slanderous ... t language. But in such cases a found ... itness whether there was anything in ... conduct or tone of the speaker, to prevent the words conveying their ordinary meaning. The question may then be put, "What did you understand by the words?"(2) A person may always testify to his own mental and physical condition; his testimony being based not on inference but consciousness(3), but it is not so with respect to the mental condition of others. Thus, neither the opinion of non-experts nor general reputation is admissible to prove insanity(4); the proper course being for the witness to state the facts which he considers gave rise to that conclusion Witnesses may, however, as has been already observed, describe the apparent condition of people or things, e.g., that a person appeared to be drunk or sober or a building or document in good or bad preservation, and the like (5) Another case in which the opinions of witnesses are received is when they are allowed to speak to character (6) Value may also be proved by the opinion of any witness possessing knowledge of the subject. There are many things in almost universal use, the value of which any one may testify to, it being a matter of common knowledge. In other cases the opinion of an ordinary witness would not be sufficient. The market-value of land is not a question of science and skill upon which only an expert can give an opinion. Persons living in the neighbourhood may be presumed to have a sufficient knowledge of the market-value of property from the location and character of the land in question, and so also witnesses may express their opinions as to the value of goods and chattels "Market-value," said Mr. Justice Story, in an early case, "is necessarily a matter of opinion as well as of fact, or rather of opinions gathered from facts How are we to arrive at it? Certainly not by the mere purchase made by a single person; or by purchases made by a few persons; for in either case they may have purchased above or below the market-price, or the market-price may be fluctuating and the sales too few to justify any general conclusion. Buyers may refuse to buy at a particular price, sellers may refuse to sell at a lower price. In this state of things we must necessarily resort to opinions of merchants and others conversant in trade for opinions what under all the circumstances is the fair market-price or value of the goods In the next case the knowledge of their market-price being thus, in fact, a matter of skill, judgment and opinion, it is in no just sense mere hearsay; but is in the nature of the evidence of experts."(7) In the case cited it was

(1) See Best, Ev, § 233, s 47, post See Harris Law of identification (1892) [Treating of persons, name, idem sonans; identity of prisoner photographs; opinion evidence, murder identification; ancient records and documents, handwriting, identity of real estate, identification of personal property; view of premises by jury, compulsory physical examination, mistaken identity, etc.]

(2) Odgers on Libel, 567, Starkie on Libel, 5th Ed, 465, Wharton, s. 975, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 376, Daines v. Hartley, 3 Ex, 200, referred to in Cunningham, Ev, 191, Burnswick v. Harmer, 3 C & K, 10, Barnett v. Allen, 3 H. & N, 376, Simmons v. Mitchell, 6 App. Cas, 155, 163, Curtes v. Peek, 13 W R. (Eng), 230

(3) v. ante, p 197.

(4) Wright v. Tatham, 7 A & E., 313; R v Nevill, Cr & Dix Ab Cas, 96, Greenslade v Dare, 20 Beav, 284, nor under this Act, Field, Ev, 346, note

(5) v Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 376—378

(6) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 378, see Notes to s 55, post

(7) Albonso v United States, 2 Story, 421 (1843) (Amer), Lawson's Expert Evidence, 431—456, 439, it is no objection to the evidence of a witness testifying as to market value that such evidence rests on hearsay Wharton, Ev, 449 Wigmore, Ev, § 1940 See as to market-rate, Narain Chunder v Cohen, 10 C, 56 (1884), and as to market-value under Municipal and Land Acquisition Acts see Manindra Chandra Nandi v Secretary of State, 41 C 967 (1914), and Harish Chunder Neogy v Secretary of State, 11 C W N, 875 (1907).

said that the market-value of land may be roughly defined as the price which a vendor, willing but not compelled to sell, might reasonably except to obtain from a willing purchaser.(1)

Summary.

The rule upon evidence in matter of opinion has been thus summarised.(2) The general rule is that a witness must only state facts; and his mere personal opinion is not evidence. But this rule is subject to the following exceptions, namely:—(a) On questions of identification, a witness is allowed to speak as to his opinion or belief. (b) A witness's opinion is receivable in evidence to prove the apparent condition or state of a person or thing. (c) The opinions of skilled or scientific witnesses are admissible evidence to elucidate matters which are of a strictly professional or scientific character. Sections 45, 46, 51 of this Act deal with the last exception, and sections 47, 51 with the first, in so far as it bears on the question of identification of handwriting. Sections 48-50 add further exceptions relating to opinions on general customs and rights(3) to usages, tenets, and the like(4), and to opinions on relationship, provided such opinions are expressed by conduct.(5)

Opinion of experts

45. When the Court has to form an opinion upon a point of foreign law, or of science or art, or as to identity of handwriting or finger-impressions, the opinions upon that point of persons specially skilled in such foreign law, science or art, or in questions as to identity of handwriting or finger-impressions are relevant facts.

Such persons are called experts.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is whether the death of A was caused by poison.

The opinions of experts as to the symptoms produced by the poison by which A is supposed to have died are relevant.

(b) The question is whether A at the time of doing a certain act, was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law.

The opinions of experts upon the question whether the symptoms exhibited by A commonly show unsoundness of mind, and whether such unsoundness of mind usually renders persons incapable of knowing the nature of the acts which they do, or of knowing that what they do is either wrong or contrary to law, are relevant.

(c) The question is, whether a certain document was written by A. Another document is produced, which is proved or admitted to have been written by A.

The opinions of experts on the question whether the two documents were written by the same person or by different persons, are relevant.

Facts bearing upon opinion of experts

46. Facts, not otherwise relevant, are relevant if they support or are inconsistent with the opinions of experts, when such opinions are relevant.

(1) Kailas Chandra Mitra v. Secretary of State, 17 C. L. J., 34 (1913).
(2) Powell, Ev, 111, et seq.
(3) S 48, post.
(4) S. 49, post.
(5) S. 50, post.

(6) The portion in brackets was added by s 3, Act V of 1899.
(7) Id; finger-impressions of course include thumb-impressions See Report of Select Committee cited, 3 C. W. N. xc.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is whether A was poisoned by a certain poison.

The fact that other persons who were poisoned by that poison exhibited certain symptoms which experts affirm or deny to be the symptoms of that poison is relevant.

(b) The question is whether an obstruction to a harbour is caused by a certain sea-wall

The fact that other harbours similarly situated in other respects, but where there were no such sea-walls began to be obstructed at about the same time, is relevant.(1)

Principle.—The use of witnesses being to inform the tribunal respecting facts, their opinions are not in general receivable as evidence Facts should be stated and not inferences. The rule, however, is not without its exceptions. Being based on the presumption that the tribunal is as capable of forming [illegible] when circumstances rebut this presump[illegible] the opinions of specially skilled persons [illegible]ndation on which expert testimony rests is the supposed superior knowledge or experience of the expert in relation to the subject-matter upon which he is permitted to give an opinion as evidence.(3)

s. 3 ("Court")
s. 3 ("Relevant")
s 3 (That a man holds a certain opinion is a fact)
s. 3 ("Fact")
s. 60 (Evidence of opinion must be direct) s 60 Proviso (Opinion of expert who cannot be called as a witness) s 74 (Opinion as to handwriting)
s 51 (Grounds of opinion) s 73 (Comparison of handwriting)
s 159 (Expert refreshing memory)
s 57 (Reference by Court to books of experts)

Steph Dig. Arts. 49, 50, Taylor, Ev, §§ 1423—1425, 1417—1419, 1425, 1445, 337, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 363—376; Norton, Ev, 225, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 191—193; Best, Ev., 511, et seq; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 40—50; Roscoe, N.P Ev, 84, 175, 176, Rogers on Expert Testimony (1883), 2nd Ed., 1891, Lawson, on Expert and Opinion Evidence (1886) James Ohio, Law of Opinion Evidence (1889), Wigmore, Ev, § 1917, et seq., Harris, Law of Identification (1892); Hagan on Disputed Handwriting (1894).

COMMENTARY.

The phrase "expert" testimony is not applicable to all species of opinion evidence. A witness is not giving expert testimony who without any special personal fitness or special intelligence simply testifies as to the impressions produced in his mind or senses by that which he has seen or heard, and which can only be described to others by giving the impression produced upon the witness. Neither is he giving such testimony, strictly speaking, when he is testifying as to matters which require no peculiar intelligence and concerning which any person is qualified to judge according to his opportunities of observation. Expert testimony properly begins with testimony(4) concerning those branches where some intelligence is requisite for judgment and when opportunities and habits of observation must be combined with some practical experience An expert is one who is skilled in any particular art, trade or profession, being possessed of peculiar knowledge concerning the same (5) Many "Expert."

(1) Folkes v. Chadd, 3 Dougl, 157

(2) Best, Ev, §§ 511—513 See Introduction, ante, and Notes post

(3) Rogers on Expert Testimony, 21

(4) As to the relative value of testimony and extracts from scientific treatises, see Sheo Bahadur Singh v Beni Bahadur Singh 6 O L J, 178, s c., 51 I. C., 419

(5) Rogers, op cit, § 1

definitions have been given(1), but for the purposes of this Act the term is defined by section 45 (see post).

Competency. The competency of an expert should be shown before his testimony is properly admissible.(2) The competency of an expert, that is, that he is possessed of the necessary qualifications, is a preliminary question for the Judge ; though in practice considerable laxity prevails upon the point. Though the expert must be skilled by special study or experience, the fact that he has not acquired his knowledge in the course [illegible] erely to weight and not to admissibility. Th [illegible] pital students and dressers, have been permitt [illegible] and on questions of handwriting not only specialists but post-office officials, lithographers and bank clerks and a solicitor " who had for some years given considerable attention and study to the subject and [illegible] writing for purposes of evidence, though never [illegible] have been permitted to testify as experts. [illegible] (there being no separate preliminary examination according to the practice of Indian Courts) clearly shows no competency, the opinion-evidence of the witness will be excluded. In primâ facie cases of competency, the witness will be allowed to give his evidence and also probably in doubtful cases for what the evidence is worth. It is not easy for an incompetent person to sustain himself in the character of an independent witness. The want of qualification may be shown by cross-examination(5) or otherwise.(6) The peculiar knowledge or

---

(1) Rogers, op cit, § 1, Lawson's Expert Evidence, 2 In Vander Donckt v Thelluson, 8 C B, 112; Maule, J, said "All persons, I think, who practise a business or profession which requires them to possess a certain knowledge of the matter in hand are experts, so far as expertness is required"

(2) Jarat Kumari Dassi v. Bissessur Dutt (1911), 39 C, 245.

(3) R v Silverlock, 2 R. B (1834), 766

(4) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 364; and cases there cited, Best, Ev, § 576

(5) Rogers, op cit, 41

(6) Ib. In America upon the preliminary examination, the Court may examine other witnesses to determine whether the expert whose opinion is to be offered is qualified, but the parties cannot, it appears, after a witness has been admitted to testify as an expert, give evidence of the mere opinion of other experts as to the qualifications of the first; Rogers, op cit., 85, Section 163, post, excludes evidence to contradict answers to questions tending to shake the credit of the witness by injuring his character. Even assuming that there is a distinction between competency and credit, the Act makes no provision allowing evidence of the opinions of one expert upon the qualifications of another. It has, however, been held in America competent for one expert to testify as to the skill of another where the knowledge of the witness was derived from personal observations as distinguished from an opinion based on such expert's general reputation: Laros v. Com, 84 Pa. St, 200 (1877), cited in Lawson's Expert Evidence, 236; Roger's Expert Testimony, 85, 86. In this case A on a trial gave an opinion as an expert. The opinion of B, an expert in the same department derived from personal knowledge as to the skill of A, was held admissible; the Court remarking "that it was not a question of mere reputation but of B's own knowledge acquired from full opportunity of observations. If I have seen a workman doing his work frequently and know his skill myself surely if I am myself a judge of such work, I can testify to his skill." The Act does not appear to admit of evidence of this character, either as corroborating (see ss. 156, 157), or impeaching the credit (see ss. 146, 153, 155) of a witness Sections 46 and 51 deal with the opinions and not with the competency of the expert The sections cited deal with the corroboration of his testimony or with his credit, not with his competency Of course his competency is assailable directly by cross-examination and indirectly by evidence of the opinions of other experts who give contrary conclusions on the facts, and by proof of facts inconsistent with his opinions. But there appears to be no provision for direct impeachment of his competency otherwise than by cross-examination.

The observations as to evidence in corroboration or impeachment of a party's wart of skill refer merely to evidence in support of impeachment of his testimony Of course such evidence may be given where the question of skill is a fact in issue in the case. It has also been held that where persons offer themselves as experts to testify respecting a business is skill may be derived from experience(1) in the particular matter in question whether gained in the way of his business or not(2), or the study(3) of a matter without practical experience in regard to it may qualify a witness as an expert. But it has been held in America that a witness cannot testify as an expert in a particular matter when that matter does not pertain to his special calling or [illegible] has been derived from [illegible] principle that a person [illegible] y devoting himself to a study of the authorities for the purpose of giving such testimony when such reading or study is not in the line of his special calling or profession. Thus where the question was whether the editor of a stock journal who had read extensively on the subject of "foot-rot" could testify as an expert in relation to that disease, it was held that he could not (4) Of course no exact test can be laid down by which one can determine with mathematical precision how much skill or experience a witness must possess to qualify him to testify as an expert That question rests within the fair discretion of the Court, whose duty it is to decide whether the experience or study of the witness has been such as to make his opinions of any value (5)

Subjects of expert testimony.

The subjects of expert testimony mentioned by the section are foreign law, science, art, and the identity of handwriting The words 'science or art' if interpreted in a narrow sense would exclude matters upon which expert testimony is admissible both in England and America, such as questions relating to trades and handicrafts (6) But it is apprehended that these words are to be broadly construed, the term 'science' not being limited to the higher sciences and the term 'art' not being limited to the fine arts but having its original sense of handicraft, trade, profession and skill in work, which, with the advance of culture, has been carried beyond the sphere of the common pursuits of life into that of 'artistic' and 'scientific' action In some cases it may be difficult to determine whether the particular question be one of a scientific nature or not, and consequently, whether skilled witnesses may or may not pass their opinions upon it. The following tests may be applied .— Is the subject-matter of inquiry such that inexperienced persons are unlikely to prove capable of forming a correct judgment upon it without the assistance of experts? Does it so far partake of the character of a science or art as to require a course of previous habit or study in order to obtain a competent knowledge of its nature, or is it one which does not require such habit or study?(7)

Foreign law

Foreign law must, according to the English rule, unless an opinion has been obtained under the statutory procedure mentioned below(8) be proved as a fact by skilled witnesses, and not by the production of the books in which it is contained (9) But when an expert has vouched a foreign Code, an English which their experience has not been very great, it is competent to call persons of greater experience and enquire of them how much time and experience are necessary to make one an expert in respect to that business Mason v Phelps, 48 Mich., 127 (Amer.), cited in Lawson's Expert Testimony, 236

---

(1) Rogers, op cit, § 18, but the opinion of an expert is not confined to matters or questions which he has actually seen or heard of, Lawson, op cit, 225, see post, "Scope of the Opinion"

(2) R. v. Silverlock, 2 Q B (1894), 766

(3) Rogers, § 19.

(4) Ib, p 48 [see argument, R v Silverlock, supra, at p 768, Bristow v Sequeville, 5 Ex, 275]

(5) Ib § 21

(6) "On questions of science or skill, or relating to some art or trade persons instructed herein by study or experience may give their opinions, such persons are called experts Every business or employment which has a particular class devoted to its pursuit is an 'art' or 'trade' Lawson op cit, 2, Taylor, Ev, § 1417.

(7) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1418, 1419

(8) v Notes to s 38 ante, and see Field, Ev., 6th Ed 191—193

(9) Ib, Taylor, Ev., §§ 1423, 1425

Court may construe it for itself.(1) In India such law may not only be proved under this section by the evidence of persons specially skilled in it, but also, under section 38, by the production of a book printed or published under the authority of the Foreign Government.(2) Foreign customs and usages may be proved by any witness, whether expert or not, who is acquainted with the fact.(3)

Science and Art

"The opinions of medical men are admissible upon questions within their own province, e.g., insanity, the causes of disease or death or injuries, the effects of injuries, medicines, poisons, the consequence of wounds, the conditions of gestation, the effects of hospitals upon the health of a neighbourhood, the likelihood of recovery; those of actuaries as to the average duration of life with respect to the value of annuities; those of naturalists as to the ability of fish to overcome obstacles in a river; those of chemists as to the value of a particular kind of guano as a fertiliser; the safety of a 'non-explosive camphene and fluid lamp;' the consti the effects of a particular poison;
as to the existence of coal seams;
coke ovens upon trees in the neighbourhood; those of persons specially skilled in insurance-matters, such as the opinion of an insurance agent and examiner that a partition in a room increased the risk in a fire-policy; and so with other branches of science.

The opinions of artists are admissible as to the genuineness and value of a work of art; the opinion of a photographer as to the good execution of a photograph, though a non-expert might speak to its being a good likeness, the opinion of an engraver or professional examiner of writings as to erasure in a docu ... harbour; that the ... ed
by back ... r;
that a cc ... or
... should practice; those of post-office clerks as to post-marks; those of ship-builders, marine surveyors and engineers as to the strength and construction of a ship, and (when the Court is not sitting with assessors) those of nautical men as to the proper navigation of a vessel."(4)

Trade.

Mechanics, artizans, and workmen are experts as to matters of technical skill in their trades, and their opinions in such cases are admissible. So the opinion of a mason as to how long it takes to dry the walls of a house; of a miner as to the cause of the settling of the walls of a mine; of a blacksmith as to whether a horse was properly shod; of the foreman of a mill as to the running order of the machinery; of a road-builder as to the necessity of a railing along an elevated part of a road, of a railroad man as to questions of railroad management, such as whether a rail was properly laid; as to the

(1) Concho v. Murietta, C. A. (1889), 40 Ch. D., p 543.

(2) v. Notes to s. 38, ante, et seq; and as to s 60, v. post.

(3) Ganes v. Lanesborough, 1 Peake, R., 18; Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C. & F., 124; Mostyn v. Fabrigas, 1 Cowp, 174, Vander Donckt v. Thellusson, 8 C. B, 812; Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Hagg C. R, 216; see s. 49, post As to the construction of foreign documents, see Di Sora v. Phillipps, 10 H. L. C., 624; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 367—368; Taylor, Ev., § 1424

(4) Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence. See passim, Index; Wharton, Ev., §§ 441, 446; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 366—367; Taylor, Ev., §§ 1417, 1418, et seq. and cases there cited. As to evidence of medical witnesses and reports of chemical examinations, see Cr. Pr. Code, ss. 509, 510.

cause of a train being thrown from the track; as to the distance within which a train can be stopped; whether the boiler of an engine was safe; whether coupling appliances were defectively constructed; have been held to be admissible. So also are the opinions of farmers and agriculturists on matters peculiarly within their knowledge; as that of a grazier on the effect of disturbance in the value of cattle; of a farmer as to the quality of the soil of a farm.

[illegible] e, a merchant [illegible] According to [illegible] to prove the average waste resulting from the retail sale of goods, those of persons conversant with a market to prove a market-value; and those of business-men to prove the meaning of trade-terms and the like (1)

Experts may give their opinions upon the genuineness of a disputed handwriting after having compared it with specimens proved to the satisfaction of the Judge to be genuine.(2) In a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it has been held that while the writing with which the comparison is made must first be admitted or proved to be that of the person alleged, the comparison must be made in open Court and in the presence of such person This decision was based on the ground that though these conditions are not expressly laid down in this section they are indicated by Illustration (C) (3) But independent of all cases in which handwriting is sought to be proved by actual comparison, the testimony of skilled witness will be admissible for the purpose of throwing light upon the document in dispute, as upon the question whether a writing is in a feigned or natural hand, or the probable date of an ancient writing, or as to whether interlineations were written contemporaneously with the rest of a document, or whether the writing is cramped, or one document exhibits greater ease or facility than another, or whether a writing has been touched by the pen a second time as if done by some one attempting to imitate, or whether the writing has been made over pencil-marks, or whether a document could have been made with a pen, or whether two documents were written with the same pen and ink, and at the same time, or whether two parts of a writing were written by the same person or the like (4) But opinion as to handwriting is not confined to experts, but may be given by any person who is duly acquainted with it (5) Handwriting

By nature and habit, individuals contract a system of forming letters which give a character to their writing as distinct as that of the human face (6) The general rule which admits of proof of handwriting of a party is founded on the reason that in every person's manner of handwriting there is a peculiar prevailing character which distinguishes it from the handwriting

---

(1) Phipson Ev, ib, and see last note and s 49, post

(2) v s 73, post, for a case in which a judge was held to have wrongly called expert testimony, see Bindessuree Dutt v Doma Singh, 9 W R, 88 (1868)

(3) Suresh Chandra Sanyal v R (1912), 39 C, 606 and see Sreemutty Phoodee Bibi v Gobind Chunder Roy (1874), 22 W R, 212 and Cresswell v. Jackson (1860), 2 F & F, 24 and Cobbett v. Kilminster (1860), 2 F & F, 490

(4) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1877, 1417, Best, Ev, § 246 See notes to s 47, post

(5) See notes s 47, post, and Surendra Narayan Adhicary v R (1911), 39 C, 592

(6) Lawson's Expert Ev 277 "Men are distinguished by their handwriting as well as by their faces, for it is seldom that the shape of their letters agree any more than the shape of their bodies,' Buller's Nisi Prius, 236, 2 Evans Pothier on Obligations "The handwriting of every man has something peculiar and distinct from that of every other man and is easily known by those who have been accustomed to see it." Peake's Ev, 67, "Almost everybody's usual handwriting possesses a peculiarity in it and distinguishing it from other people's writing' Ram on Facts, 68 See at p 69, citation from Cowper's work (Letters), Vol V, 217, Ed 1836 of every other person. (1) In the Tichborne trial, Cockburn, C. J., in his charge to the jury said: "Manifold as are the parts of difference in the infinite variety of nature in which one man differs from another, there is nothing in which men differ more than in handwriting; and when a man comes forward and says, 'you believe that such a person is dead and gone; he is not, I am the man,' if I knew the handwriting of the man supposed to be dead, the first thing I would do would be to say 'Sit down and write, that I may judge whether your handwriting is of the man you assert yourself to be'; if I had writing of the man with whom identity was claimed, I should proceed at once, to compare with it the handwriting of the party claiming it. For that reason I shall ask you carefully to look at and consider the handwriting of the defendant and to compare it with that of the undoubted Roger Tichborne and with that of Arthur Orton"(2) "Calligraphic experts have for years asserted the possibility of investigating handwriting upon scientific principles, and the Courts have consequently admitted such persons to testify in cases of disputed handwriting. It is claimed that experiment and observation have disclosed the fact that there are certain general principles which may be relied upon in questions pertaining to the genuineness of handwriting. For instance, it is asserted that in every person's manner of writing, there is a certain distinct prevailing character which can be discovered by observation, and being once known, can be afterwards applied as a standard to try other specimens of writing, the genuineness of which is disputed. Handwriting, notwithstanding it may be artificial, is always, in some degree, the reflex of the nervous organisation of the writer. Hence there is in each person's handwriting some distinctive characteristic, which, as being the reflex of his nervous organisation, is necessarily independent of his own will, and unconsciously forces the writer to stamp the writing as his own. Those skilful in such matters affirm that it is impossible for a person to successfully disguise in a writing of any length this characteristic of his penmanship, that the tendencies to angles or curves developed in the analysis of this characteristic may be mechanically measured by placing a fine specimen within a coarser specimen, and that the strokes will be parallel if written by the same person, the nerves influencing the direction which he will give to the pen. So too it is claimed that no two autograph signatures will be perfect fac-similes. Experts, therefore, claim that if, upon superimposition against the light, they find that two signatures perfectly coincide, that they are perfect fac-similes, that it is a probability amounting practically to a certainty that one of the signatures is a forgery."(3) In determining the question of authorship of a writing, the resemblance of characters is by no means the only test. The use of capitals, abbreviations, punctuation, mode of division into paragraphs, making erasures and interlineations, idiomatic expressions, orthography, underscoring(4), style of composition and

(1) Strong v Brewer, 17 Ala., 706—710 (Amer) cited in Lawson, op. cit, 278.

(2) R v. Castor, 762.

(3) Rogers, op cit, 290, 292. With reference to the last observation it is stated that in the Howland Will Case (4 Am. Law Review, 625, 649) Prof. Pierce, Professor of Mathematics in Harvard University, testified that the odds were just exactly 2,866,000,000,000,000,000,000 to 1 that an individual could not with a pen write his name three times so exactly alike as were the three alleged signatures of Sylvia Ann Howland, the testatrix, to a will and two codicils: Hagan, op. cit., 91, 92.

(4) See following passage from Cowper's work (Letters), Vol. V, p. 217, 1836: "Hours and hours have I spent in endeavours altogether fruitless to trace the writer of the letter that I send, by a minute examination of the character, and never did it strike me until this moment that your father wrote it. In the style I discover him, in the scoring of the emphatic words—his never-failing practice—in the formation of many of the letters, and in the adieu at the bottom so plainly, that I could hardly be more convinced had I seen him write it." Cited in Ram on Facts, 69.

the like, are all elements upon which to form the judgment.(1) "Conclusions from dissimilitude between the disputed writing and authentic specimens are not always entitled to much consideration, such evidence is weak and deceptive, and is of little weight when opposed by evidence of similitude The reason why dissimilitude is evidence inferior to similitude is that it requires great skill to imitate handwriting, especially for several lines, so as to deceive persons well acquainted with the genuine character and who give the disputed writing a careful inspection; while, on the other hand, dissimilitude may be occasioned by a variety of circumstances,—by the state of the health and spirit of the writer, by his position, by his hurry or care, by his material, by the presence of a hair in nib of the pen, or the more or less free discharge of ink from the pen which frequently varies the turn of the letters,—circumstances which deserve still more consideration when witnesses rest their opinion on a fancied dissimilarity of individual letters"(2)

It being granted that there is such a thing as a science of handwriting, it follows that the opinions of witnesses who are skilled in the science, who by study, occupation and habit have been skilful in marking and distinguishing the characteristics of handwriting may be received in evidence These may be experts in handwriting, strictly so-called, that is persons who have made the study of handwriting a speciality; or others whose avocations and business-experience have been such as naturally qualify them to judge of handwriting And so writing-engravers, lithographers, tellers, cashiers and other officers of banks(3), post-office officials, book-keepers, and cashiers of commercial houses, writing-masters(4) and a solicitor(5) "who had for some years given considerable attention to the subject and had several times compared handwriting for purposes of evidence, though never before testified as an expert," have been admitted to give evidence on this subject (6)

Finger-impressions.

The palms of the hands are covered with two totally distinct classes of marks The most conspicuous are the creases or folds of the skin which interest the followers of palmistry and which show the lines of most frequent flexure and nothing more The least conspicuous marks, but the most numerous by far, are the so-called papillary ridges which produce finger-impressions These ridges form patterns considerable in size and of a curious variety [illegible] unique merit of retaining all their pecu- [illegible] in consequence afford a surer criterion [illegible] ture So far as the proportions of the patterns go, they are not absolutely fixed, even in the adult, inasmuch as they change with the shape of the finger. The measurements vary at different periods, but, on the other hand, the numerous 'bifurcations,' 'origins,' 'islands' and 'enclosures' in the ridges that compose the pattern are said to be almost beyond change. Practice is, however, required before facility can be gained in reading and recognising finger-prints.(7)

Those who have made finger-prints their special study have come to the conclusion that their similarity is, as a rule, evidence of personal identity, and

---

(1) Lawson, op cit, 277, 278, note

(2) Lawson, op cit, 278, 279*n*, citing, Young v Brown, 1 Hag Ecc R., 555, 569, 571, Constable v Libel, 1 Hag Ecc R, 56, 60, 61, 2 Phillips, Ev (Cow and Hill's Notes), 608 and 482, and American cases See also Hagan, op cit, 73.

(3) As to the competency, however, of these, see remarks in Hagan, op cit, 30.

(4) Ib, 33, where it is stated that these as a class furnish experts of the least ability

(5) R v Silverlock (1894), 2 Q B, 766

(6) Rogers, op cit, 297, 298, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 364, Best, Ev § 246 and as to expert evidence of writing in Criminal cases, see Srikant v R, 2 A L J, 444 (1904) Panchu Mondal v R, 1 C L J, 385 (1905) and see Venkata Row (in the matter of) 36 M 159 (1913) (value of handwriting expert evidence discussed)

(7) Galton on Finger-prints. Introduction passim their dissimilarity will, therefore, as a rule, be evidence of the reverse.(1) Therefore when in the case last cited, one of the main questions for determination was whether a document impugned was or was not presented before the Registrar by the complainant, one N S, a comparison of the thumb-impression of the person who presented the document with that of N S, was held admissible under the 9th section of this Act, if the similarity of those impressions could establish the identity of that person with N S, or under the second clause of the 11th section of this Act if their dissimilarity made such identity improbable. It was, however, held that, though the comparison of thumb-impressions was allowable, such comparison must be made by the Court itself; and that the opinion of an expert as to the sin [illegible] under the present section.(2) Tl [illegible] to the present sections by Act V c [illegible] of which Act contains the following paragraph:—"The system of identification by means of such impressions is gaining ground and has been introduced with considerable success, especially in the Lower Provinces of Bengal. It seems desirable that expert evidence in connection with it should be admitted, and with that object it is proposed by the third clause of the Bill expressly to amend the law on the subject."(3) Evidence of a witness is now therefore admissible; but the evidence must be that of a person specially skilled in questions of identity of finger-impressions. By the same Act, section 73, as amended, applies also, with any necessary modifications, to finger-impressions. In order, therefore, to ascertain whether a finger-impression is that of the person of whom it is said to be, any finger-impression admitted or proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be the finger-impression of that person may be compared with the former impression, although that impression has not been produced or proved for any other purpose. The Court may also direct any person present in Court to make a finger-impression for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare the impression so made with any impression alleged to be the finger-impression of such person.

The opinions of experts are not receivable upon the question of the construction of documents whether domestic or foreign; though it is otherwise [illegible] intelli- [illegible] Their [illegible] ay, and frequently do, testify to matters of facts as well.

Scope of the opinion

The opinions of experts are admissible in evidence, not only where they rest on the personal observation of the witness himself, and on facts within his own knowledge, but even when they are merely founded on the case as proved by other witnesses at the trial. An expert may give his opinion upon facts proved either by himself(4) or by other witnesses at the trial(5), or upon

(1) R v Fakir Mahomed, 1 C. W. N, 33, 34 (1896)—per Banerjee, J, citing Galton on Finger-Prints, Chs VI, VII [but see article on "Expert Evidence on Finger-Impressions" in 3 C. W. N., iv; it may further be observed that, inasmuch as the decision quoted ruled that expert evidence could not be given under s. 45, it implied that the subject or knowledge of the identity of finger-impressions did not constitute a "science."

(2) Ib.

(3) Statement of Objects and Reasons cited in 3 C. W. N., xxiv; see also ib, pp iv & lxxxii.

(4) Bellefontaine, etc, Ry Co. v. Bailey, 11 Ohio St., 333 (Amer) cited in Lawson's Expert Ev, 221. In this case the question was whether a certain railroad train could have been stopped in time to avoid running over a team at a crossing The opinion of the engineer of the train was held admissible; the Court saying that if an expert may give his opinion on facts testified to by others there was no reason why he might not do so on facts presumably with his own personal knowledge if his knowledge was defective the parties could show it by cross-examination or by testimony aliunde.

(5) e g, the question is as to the value of a clock. A is a dealer in clocks, but has never seen the clock in question, which is described to him by other witnesses hypotheses based upon the evidence, that is, the expert may give his opinion on facts put before him in the form of a hypothetical case (1) But his opinion is not admissible as to facts stated out of Court which are not before the Court or Jury(2), or which have merely been reported to him by hearsay(3) and purely speculative hypothetical questions having no foundation in the evidence are excluded.(4) The meaning of the last-mentioned rule is this: In examination-in-chief it would tend to confusion if facts were assumed in hypothetical questions which did not bear upon the matters under inquiry or which were not fairly within the scope of any of the evidence The testimony must tend to establish the facts embraced in the question The Court should not, however, reject a question which Counsel claims embraces facts which the evidence tends to prove, simply because in its opinion the facts assumed are not established by a preponderance of the evidence. The question is properly allowable if there is any evidence tending to prove the fact assumed, it will not be allowed if the evidence does not prove or tend to prove the fact assumed. So in a case involving the value to the plaintiff of a contract which the defendant had broken, a question which did not accurately state the terms of the contract was held inadmissible (5) A question may, however, be allowed

His opinion is admissible, Whiton v Snyder, 88 N Y, 299 (1882), cited in Lawson, op cit, 221

(1) Lawson's Expert Evidence, Rule 42, p 221 The following is an example of a hypothetical question which was propounded by the defence to the experts in the trial of Guiteau charged with shooting President Garfield (cited in Rogers' Expert Testimony, 73) "Assuming it to be a fact that there was a strong hereditary taint of insanity in the blood of the prisoner at the bar, also that at or about the age of thirty-four years his own mind was so much deranged that he was a fit subject to be sent to an insane asylum, also that at different times after that date during the next succeeding five years, he manifested such decided symptoms of insanity, without stimulation, that many different persons conversing with him and observing his conduct, believed him to be insane, also that in or about the month of June 1881, at or about the expiration of said term of five years, he became demented by the idea that he was inspired of God to remove by death the President of the United States, also that he acted on what he believed to be such inspiration, and as he believed to be in accordance with the divine will in the preparation for and in the accomplishment of such a purpose, also that he committed the act of shooting the President under what he believed to be a divine command which he was not at liberty to disobey, and which belief made out a conviction which controlled his conscience and overpowered his will as to that act, so that he could not resist the mental pressure upon him; also that immediately after the shooting he appeared calm and as if relieved by the performance of a great duty; also that there was no other adequate motive for the act than the conviction that he was executing the divine will for the good of his country—assuming all of these propositions to be true, state, whether in your opinion, the prisoner was sane or insane at the time of shooting President Garfield" The question propounded by the prosecution was too long to permit of its reproduction In Woodbury v Obear, 7 Gray, 467 (Amer), Shaw, C J, said that the proper form of question was this· "if certain facts assumed by the question to be established should be found true by the jury what would be your opinion upon the facts thus found true as to, etc" But in a subsequent case it was said that this form was not to be regarded as an exclusive formula Lawson's Expert Ev, 223, where at p 222 another instance of the hypothetical question is given The question may be put in a great variety of forms Rogers, op cit, 62.

(2) Wharton, Ev, § 452, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 365

(3) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 365, citing R v. Staunton, "Times," Sept 26th, 1877, Tidy's Legal Medicine, 8, 17, 25; Gardner Peerage, Le Marchant, 75—80

(4) Wharton, Ev, § 452; Best, Ev, American notes (f) to § 511; Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 365; Rogers' Expert Testimony, 67.

(5) Lawson's Expert Ev, 222; Rogers' Expert Testimony, 64—68 A hypothetical question is a question which assumes as a hypothesis, the truth of the facts given in evidence by a particular party and embraced in the question Such a question may be asked either simply as to facts given in evidence or as to relevant hypotheses arising on these facts, i.e., facts given in evidence So in a salvage case where the evidence had shown that a steam vessel was lying at anchor in the month of September at the Sandheads at the mouth of the River Hooghly without which assumes facts which the evidence already in the case neither proves nor tends to prove, provided Counsel in putting the question declares that they will by subsequent testimony supply the necessary evidence to warrant the facts so assumed. When this course is pursued if such testimony is not afterwards given, it would be the duty of the Court to strike out the answer to the question.(1)

Questions should be so framed as not to call on the witness for a critical review of the testimony given by the other witnesses, compelling the expert to draw inferences or conclusions of fact from the testimony or to judge of the credibility of witnesses. A question which requires the witness to draw a conclusion of fact should be excluded. Such a witness is called not to determine the truth of the facts, giving his opinion as to the effect of the evidence in establishing controverted facts, but to obtain his opinion on matters of science or skill in controversy.(2) "A question should not be so framed as to permit the witness to roam through the evidence for himself, and gather the facts as he may consider them to be proved, and then state his conclusions concerning them."(3) Inasmuch as an expert is not allowed to draw inferences or conclusions of fact from the evidence, his opinion should generally be asked upon a hypothetical statement of facts The question need not be hypothetical in two cases—(a) where the issue is substantially one of science or skill merely, the expert may, if he has himself observed the facts, be asked the very question which the Court or Jury have to decide(4); (b) possibly also according to the dictum in the celebrated Macnaghten's Case(5) where the issue is substantially one of science or skill, such a question may be put if no conflict of evidence exists upon the material facts, even in cases where the expert's opinion is based merely upon facts proved by others. In this case, however, the question can only be put as a matter of convenience and not of right, the correct course being to put the facts to the witness hypothetically, asking him to assume one or more of them to be true and to state his opinion upon them

It is always, however, improper where the facts are in dispute, and the opinion of the expert is based merely on facts proved by others, to put to the a rudder which she had lost in a previous gale, that the weather which had been bad prior to the anchoring of the vessel had calmed down at the time of the salvage service; that cyclonic storms were likely to occur at that time of year and that the shore off which the vessel was anchored was a dangerous one: a nautical expert was, after objection, allowed to be asked a question which after assuming the above-mentioned facts, proceeded "what would have been the condition of such a vessel lying rudderless at that time of year at the Sandheads in the event of a cyclonic storm coming on before assistance could be procured" If closely examined the objection here appears fundamentally to have been not so much to the form of the question or the admissibility of expert testimony but to the relevancy of the evidence having regard to the facts of the case, and the salvage law applicable; it being contended by the objectors, but unsuccessfully, that to earn salvage reward the danger from which a vessel has been rescued must have been actual present peril, and that it was not sufficient that the ship was in a dangerous position in the sense that in certain events which did not actually happen she must have been in actual peril. It was, however, held that the term 'danger' was not so limited (see "The Charlotte," 3 Wm. Rob. 71; "The Albion," Lush. 282), and that the hypothetical question which was relevant and based on the evidence was admissible. In the matter of the German steam ship "Drachenfels," Retriever v. Drachenfels; Hugh v. Drachenfels, 27 C. 860 (31st Jan., 1900).

---

(1) Rogers' Expert Testimony, 68.

(2) Rogers' Expert Testimony, 60—64.

(3) Dolz v. Morris, 17 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 202 (Amer.) cited, ib., 61.

(4) So where a medical expert had made a personal examination of the uterus of a deceased woman, it was held proper to ask him, "what in your opinion caused the death of the person from whom the uterus was taken." State v. Glass, 5 Oreg. 73 (Amer.) See Rogers, op. cit., 75, 76.

(5) 10 C. & F., 200.

witness the very question which the Court or Jury have to decide(1), since such a question practically asks him to determine the truth of the testimony as well as to give an opinion on it (2) So it was held that the evidence of a medical man who has seen, and has made a post-mortem examination of the corpse of the person, touching whose death the inquiry is, is admissible, firstly, to prove the nature of injuries which he observed; and, secondly, as evidence of the opinion of an expert as to the manner in which those injuries were inflicted, and as to the cause of death A medical man who has not ask the witness's opinions on those facts (3) So also a medical man who has not seen a corpse which has been subjected to a post-mortem examination, and who is called to corroborate the opinion of the medical man who has made such post-mortem examination, and who has stated what he considered was the cause of death, is in a position to give evidence of his opinion as an expert. The proper mode of eliciting such opinion is to put the signs observed at the post-mortem to the witness, and to ask what in his opinion was the cause of death, on the hypothesis that those signs were really present and observed (4)

[illegible]

In order to obtain the opinion of the witness on matters not depending upon general knowledge, but on facts not testified to by himself, one of two modes is pursued, either the witness is present and hears all the testimony, or the testimony is summed up in the question put to him, and in either case the question is put to him hypothetically, whether if certain facts testified to are true he can form an opinion and what that opinion is. The question may be based on the hypothesis of the truth of all the evidence, or on an hypothesis especially framed on certain facts assumed to be proved for the purpose of the inquiry. Inasmuch as it is no part of the expert to determine the truth of the evidence, care must be taken in framing the questions not to involve so much or so many facts in them, that the witness will be obliged in his own mind to settle other disputed facts in order to give his answer (5) The witness should ordinarily not be left to form an opinion on such facts as he can recollect where the evidence is at all voluminous, and where it is not entirely harmonious, it is improper to permit a question to be put which requires the expert to give an opinion upon his memory of what the evidence was and upon his conclusions as to what the evidence proved.(6) Though in examination-in-chief the general rule is that it is error to include in the hypothetical question an assumed state of facts which the evidence in the case does not prove or tend to prove, Counsel on the cross-examination of the witness are not similarly restricted. Any question may be put which tests the skill

(1) So on a question whether a particular act for which a prisoner is on his trial, were an act of insanity, a medical man conversant with that disease who knows nothing of the facts, but has simply heard the trial, cannot be broadly asked his opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime. The proper and usual form of question is to ask him whether, assuming such and such facts, the prisoner was sane or insane The Court or Jury are then left to say whether the assumed facts exist or not. Macnaghten's Case, 10 C. F., 200 Taylor, Ev, § 1421.

(2) Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 369—370 and cases there cited Rogers, op. cit, § 31; Taylor, Ev, § 1421; Wharton, Ev., § 452

(3) Roghuni Singh v. R., 9 C., 455, 461 (1882).

(4) R. v. Meher Ali, 15 C., 589 (1888); and see also Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 369—371 where the authorities are collected and analysed.

(5) Rogers, op cit, 61—69.

(6) Ib, 70, 71. [So in the matter of the German steamship Drachenfels, 27 C., 860 (31st Jan, 1900), in which the evidence was very voluminous the Court required Counsel to read to the experts specific portions of the evidence in which their opinion was required even though they had heard the evidence being given.]

and accuracy of the witness, whether the facts assumed in such questions have been testified to by witnesses or not.(1)

Grounds of, and corroboration and rebuttal of, opinion.

Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant, the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant.(2) Thus an expert may give an account of experiments performed by him for the purpose of forming his opinion.(3) When a skilled witness says that in the course of his duty he formed a particular opinion on certain facts, he may further be asked by examination-in-chief how he went on to act upon that opinion. For the acting on it is a strong corroboration of the truth of his opinion(4), and what a person does is usually better evidence of his opinion than what he says.(5) Section 46 is but a roundabout way of stating that the opinion of an expert is open to corroboration or rebuttal. The illustrations sufficiently exemplify the proposition that for this purpose evidence of res inter alios actæ is receivable.(6) This section is in accordance with the rule of English law.(7)

Refreshing memory.

An expert who is called as a witness may refresh his memory by reference to professional treatises(8) ; or to any other document made by himself at the time.(9) So a medical man in giving evidence may refresh his memory by referring to a report which he has made of his post-mortem examination, but the report itself cannot be treated as evidence, and no facts can be taken therefrom.(10)

Credit of experts.

An expert witness like any other may on cross-examination be asked questions to test his veracity, to discover his position, and to shake his credit by injuring his character.(11) Independent evidence may be given to show his conviction of a criminal offence or to impeach his impartiality.(12) His credit may be impeached by the evidence of persons who testify that they believe him to be unworthy of credit and by proof that he has been corrupted or that he has expressed a different opinion at other times.(13)

Opinion of expert not called as a witness.

Section 60 enacts a proviso relating to the opinions of experts, to the general rule that oral evidence must be direct. Under this proviso the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, may be proved by the production of such trea- [illegible] ble of giving [illegible] or expense

Opinion as to handwriting when relevant.

47. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion

(1) Ib., 79.

(2) S. 51, post.

(3) Ib., illust , see R v. Hesseltine, 12 Cox, [404], on a charge of arson, evidence of experiments made subsequently to the fire is admissible in order to show the way in which the building was set fire to. Not only may pre existing objects be inspected, but the Court may order scientific experiments to be performed (Bigsby v. Dickinson, 4 Ch. D , 24), artistic tests undertaken (Belt v. Lawes, Times, 1882), or specimens of handwriting executed (s 73) in its presence, Phipson, Ev., 3rd Ed , 4, 345; ib., 5th Ed , 4, 369.

(4) Stephenson v. River Tyne Commissioner, 71 W. R. (Eng.), 390.

(5) Field, Ev , 6th Ed., 198, where it is said: "The evidence would doubtless be admissible under s 8. or under s. 11 ante" See Phipson, Ev., 3rd Ed., 94; ib, 5th Ed , 101.

(6) Norton, Ev., 225; illust. (b) is the case of Folkes v. Chadd, 3 Dougl , 157; illust. (a) is precisely like it in principle; ib., s. 46 is analogous to s. 11.

(7) See Taylor, Ev , § 337; Field, Ev , 347; Steph. Dig , Art. 50. See s 51, post, see also ss. 156, 157.

(8) S. 159, post.

(9) Ib.

(10) Roghuni Singh v. R, 9 C, 455 (1882).

(11) Ss. 146—152, post.

(12) S. 153, post

(13) S. 155, post; Taylor, Ev , § 1445

(14) S 60, post; as to the inadmissibility of mere medical certificates, see R v Ram Rutton, 9 W. R., Cr., 23 (1868); as to the necessity of direct evidence, v. post.

of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed, that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is a relevant fact.

Explanation.—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write, or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written by himself or under his authority and addressed to that person, or when, in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him.

Illustration.

The question is, whether a given letter is in the handwriting of A, a merchant in London B is a merchant in Calcutta who has written letters addressed to A and received letters purporting to be written by him. C is B's clerk, whose duty it was to examine and file B's correspondence D is B's broker, to whom B habitually submitted the letters purporting to be written by A for the purpose of advising with him thereon.

The opinions of B, C and D on the question whether the letter is in the handwriting of A are relevant, though neither B, C, nor D ever saw A write.

Principle—The opinion or the belief of a witness is here admissible because all proof of handwriting, except when the witness either wrote the document himself, or saw it written, is in its nature comparison:—It being the belief which a witness entertains, upon comparing the writing in question with an exemplar formed in his mind from some previous knowledge.(1)

s 45 Illust (c) (Opinion of experts as to identity of writing)
s 3 (That a man holds a certain opinion is a fact)
s. 51 (Grounds of opinion)
s 3 ("Court")
s. 73 (Comparison of handwriting)
s 3 ("Document")
s. 67 (Proof of signature and handwriting.)
s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 ("Fact")

Taylor, Ev. §§ 1862—1868, Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 277; Best, Ev., §§ 232—238, Rogers on Expert Testimony, 285, Steph. Dig, Art 50; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 376, Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 54; Harris Law of Identification, 231.

COMMENTARY.

Proof of handwriting and signature.

As to the general characteristics of handwriting, see commentary to section 45, ante. The word "handwriting" in the sentence "any person acquainted with the handwriting, etc.," presumably includes both handwriting in general and signature. One person's knowledge of the handwriting of another may be confined to his general style and may not extend to his signature. A signature may and very often does possess a great peculiarity. Although, therefore, a person can recognise another's general style, it may not follow that he can recognise his style of signature; this he may have never seen. On [illegible] another's style of si[illegible] style of writing; for [illegible] and the one may be [illegible] in the ordinary style of writing, one not acquainted with that style except in the signature cannot recognise his style in any other writing unless he assumes

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1869; Doe v. Suckermore, 5 A. & E., 731; and see Fryer v. Gathercole, 13 Jur., 542, ante, Introd. to ss. 45—51; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed., 54.

and accuracy of the witness, whether the facts assumed in such questions have been testified to by witnesses or not.(1)

Grounds of, and corroboration and rebuttal of, opinion.

Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant, the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant.(2) Thus an expert may give an account of experiments performed by him for the purpose of forming his opinion.(3) When a skilled witness says that in the course of his duty he formed a particular opinion on certain facts, he may further be asked by examination-in-chief how he went on to act upon that opinion. For the acting on it is a strong corroboration of the truth of his opinion(4), and what a person does is usually better evidence of his opinion than what he says.(5) Section 46 is but a roundabout way of stating that the opinion of an expert is open to corroboration or rebuttal. The illustrations sufficiently exemplify the proposition that for this purpose evidence of res inter alios actœ is receivable.(6) This section is in accordance with the rule of English law.(7)

Refreshing memory.

An expert who is called as a witness may refresh his memory by reference to professional treatises(8); or to any other document made by himself at the time.(9) So a medical man in giving evidence may refresh his memory by referring to a report which he has made of his post-mortem examination, but the report itself cannot be treated as evidence, and no facts can be taken therefrom.(10)

Credit of experts.

An expert witness like any other may on cross-examination be asked questions to test his veracity, to discover his position, and to shake his credit by injuring his character.(11) Independent evidence may be given to show his conviction of a criminal offence or to impeach his impartiality.(12) His credit may be impeached by the evidence of persons who testify that they believe him to be unworthy of credit and by proof that he has been corrupted or that he has expressed a different opinion at other times.(13)

Opinion of expert not called as a witness.

Section 60 enacts a proviso relating to the opinions of experts, to the general rule that oral evidence must b [illegible] the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise c[illegible] on which such opinions are held, may [illegible] tises, if the author is dead or cannot be found, or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable.(14)

Opinion as to handwriting when relevant.

47. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion

(1) Ib, 79.

(2) S. 51, post

(3) Ib., illust, see R v Hesseltine, 12 Cox, [404], on a charge of arson, evidence of experiments made subsequently to the fire is admissible in order to show the way in which the building was set fire to Not only may pre-existing objects be inspected, but the Court may order scientific experiments to be performed (Bigsby v. Dickinson, 4 Ch. D, 24), artistic tests undertaken (Belt v Lawes, Times, 1882), or specimens of handwriting executed (s. 73) in its presence, Phipson, Ev., 3rd Ed., 4, 345; ib., 5th Ed., 4, 369.

(4) Stephenson v. River Tyne Commissioner, 71 W. R. (Eng), 390.

(5) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 198, where it is said: "The evidence would doubtless be admissible under s. 8, or under s. 11 ante" See Phipson, Ev, 3rd Ed., 94; ib, 5th Ed, 101.

(6) Norton, Ev., 225: illust. (b) is the case of Folkes v. Chadd, 3 Dougl, 157; illust. (a) is precisely like it in principle; ib., s. 46 is analogous to s. 11.

(7) See Taylor, Ev., § 337; Field, Ev, 347; Steph. Dig, Art. 50. See s 51, post, see also ss. 156, 157.

(8) S 159, post.

(9) Ib.

(10) Roghuni Singh v. R, 9 C, 455 (1882).

(11) Ss. 146—152, post.

(12) S. 153, post.

(13) S. 155, post; Taylor, Ev, § 1445

(14) S 60, post; as to the inadmissibility of mere medical certificates, see R. v. Ram Rutton, 9 W. R., Cr, 23 (1868), as to the necessity of direct evidence, v. post.

of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed, that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is a relevant fact.

Explanation.—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write, or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written by himself or under his authority and addressed to that person, or when, in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him.

Illustration

The question is, whether a given letter is in the handwriting of A, a merchant in London.

B is a merchant in Calcutta who has written letters addressed to A and received letters purporting to be written by him. C is B's clerk, whose duty it was to examine and file B's correspondence D is B's broker, to whom B habitually submitted the letters purporting to be written by A for the purpose of advising with him thereon

The opinions of B, C and D on the question whether the letter is in the handwriting of A are relevant, though neither B, C, nor D ever saw A write.

Principle—The opinion or the belief of a witness is here admissible because all proof of handwriting, except when the witness either wrote the document himself, or saw it written, is in its nature comparison:—It being the belief which a witness entertains, upon comparing the writing in question with an exemplar formed in his mind from some previous knowledge.(1)

s 45 Illust (c) (Opinion of experts as to identity of writing)
s 3 (That a man holds a certain opinion is a fact)
s. 51 (Grounds of opinion)
s 3 ("Court")
s 73 (Comparison of handwriting)
s. 3 ("Document")
s. 67 (Proof of signature and handwriting.)
s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 3 ("Fact")

Taylor, Ev §§ 1862—1868; Lawson's Expert and Opinion Evidence, 277; Best, Ev., §§ 232—238, Rogers on Expert Testimony, 285; Steph Dig, Art 50; Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 376; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 54, Harris Law of Identification, 231

COMMENTARY.

As to the general characteristics of handwriting, see commentary to section 45, ante. The word "handwriting" in the sentence "any person acquainted with the handwriting, etc.," presumably includes both handwriting in general and signature. One person's knowledge of the handwriting of another may be confined to his general style and may not extend to his signature A signature may and very often does possess a great peculiarity. Although, therefore, a person can recognise another's general style, it may not follow that he can recognise his style of signature; this he may have never seen. On the other hand, a person may be competent to recognise another's style of signature, although quite unable to recognise his general style of writing; for of his style beyond his signature he may be quite ignorant and the one may be very different from the other. Where the signature is in the ordinary style of writing, one not acquainted with that style except in the signature cannot recognise his style in any other writing unless he assumes Proof of handwriting and signature.

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 1869; Doe v. Suckermore, 5 A & E., 731; and see Fryer v. Gathercole, 13 Jur., 542, ante, Introd. to ss. 45—51; Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 54.

or it be conceded that the style in his signature is the style of his usual writing; and supposing that assumption or concession to be made, it is obvious that one or even a hundred signatures may lead to mistake, the number of small and capital letters in the signature being few, and many letters which occur in the general handwriting not occurring in the signature. On the contrary if one is acquainted with the style of another's writing except his signature, if that style be in the signature he can as well recognise it in the signature as he can in any other words composed of the same letters (1)

In India a great number of persons are marksmen. In England a witness has been allowed to express his opinion that a mark on the document is the mark of a particular person.(2) Handwriting ordinarily means whatever the party has written (i e., formed into letters) with his hand(3), though Parke, B, in the case undermentioned(4), said: "I think you may prove the identity of the party by showing that this mark was made in the book and that mark is in his handwriting," thereby including the affixing of a mark in the term 'handwriting'. It may, however, reasonably be doubted whether the term should be so extended, and though the words 'signed' and 'signature' have been defined for the purposes of other Acts as including marks(5) there is no such definition in this Therefore, though proof of a mark may be given by calling the person [illegible] xed, opinion-evidence would not appear [illegible] with regard to mark or a seal, which r [illegible] person who affixed it or who saw the seal affixed(6), or by comparison with a seal already admitted or proved (7) [illegible] provided for the [illegible] actice a witness [illegible] seal appearing [illegible] though he was not present and saw the seal affixed. Such evidence is relevant to prove identity of the thing, viz., the seal in question.(8) In every question of identification, whether of a person's handwriting or other thing, the evidence of a witness [illegible] thing [illegible] The [illegible] ubject of handwriting, one of common occurrence requiring in many cases on the part of the witness considerable ju[illegible] difficulty, and has treated opinion-evidence [illegible] of other things or persons, or upo [illegible]

(1) Ram on Facts, 72, 73. That one is not acquainted with another's general writing does not disqualify him from proving his signature. Lawson, op cit., 298, and a witness may be acquainted with the signature of a firm without being able to identify the handwriting of either or any, partner, ib, and cases there cited

(2) A M is sued on a bill of exchange which she had endorsed with her mark; the writing "A M her mark" being in the plaintiff's handwriting. W testifies that he has frequently seen A M make her mark, points out some peculiarity in it and expresses the opinion that the mark on the bill is hers His opinion is admissible. George v Surrey, M. & M., 516; See Lawson, op. cit, 206, 297; Pearce v Decker, 13 Jur., 997. S, to prove an obligation which is signed by E B in her handwriting and by I B her husband, by his making a mark in the shape of a cross, calls their son who testifies to the handwriting of his mother; that he knows the mark of his father and that the mark attached to the foot of the instrument he believes to be his father's mark. This was held sufficient. Strong v. Brewer, 17 Ala., 710 (Amer). See Best Ev., § 34

(3) Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. 301 (Amer.).

(4) Sayer v. Glossop, 12 Jur, 465.

(5) e g, Civil Pro. Code, s 2; Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s 3. On the other hand, the Succession Act (X of 1865) draws a distinction between a mark and a signature (s 50).

(6) Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 307.

(7) S. 73, post

(8) See s 9, ante, and s 3, definition of "fact."

(9) v. ante, Introd. to ss. 45—51.

(10) v. ante, ib

in the sense in which that term is used in the Act Similar observations are applicable in the case of marks; the only difference between the two cases being that there is nearly always a distinguishing feature in a seal while the usual mark (a cross) is not generally distinguishable from a cross made by another, though a mark may and sometimes does contain a peculiar and distinctive feature.(1) If there is something peculiar to identify the mark as being that of a particular person, it is impossible to distinguish the case from any other f[illegible] eady stated such evidence has b[illegible] If there is nothing to identify t[illegible] sible(4) or if admissible, of no value whatever.

Section 67 enacts that if a document is alleged to be signed or to have been written wholly or in part by any person, the signature or the handwriting of so much of the document as is alleged to be in that person's handwriting must be proved to be in his handwriting Handwriting may be proved or disproved in the following ways:—(a) by calling the writer; or (b) any person, e g, an attesting witness, who actually saw him write the document(5); or (c) by the evidence of the opinion of experts under the provisions of section 45, ante, which differs from the present in this that under its provisions the witness is required to be skilled in the art of distinguishing writings, while under the present section he must be acquainted with the handwriting of the person alleged to have written the document; or (d) by the opinion-evidence of non-experts, namely, under the present section by the evidence of a person who has acquired a knowledge of the character of the handwriting in one of the ways specified in this section. A witness who has such knowledge may testify to his belief that a writing shown to him is in the hand of another person, though he cannot swear positively thereto. Such knowledge may be acquired (a) by having at any time seen the party write.(6) The frequency and recentness of the occasions and the attention paid to the matter by the witness will affect the value and not the admissibility of the evidence. Thus, in England, such evidence has been admitted though the witness had not seen the party write for twenty years, and in another case, had seen him write but once, and then only his surname (7) The witness's knowledge must not, however (it has been said), have been acquired for the express purpose of qualifying him to testify at the trial, because the party might through design write differently from his common mode of writing his name(8); and if it should appear that the belief rests on the probabilities of the case, or on the character or conduct of the

---

(1) Thus in Yashwadabai v. Ramchandra, 18 B, at p 73 (1893), the mark was that of a plough.

(2) Best, Ev, § 234.

(3) v ante, p 438 However, in Currier v. Hampton, 11 Ired, 311 (Amer.), Ruffin, [illegible] writing, and it has been held in two cases in Pennsylvania that a 'mark' to a will cannot be proved by one who did not witness it, but who testifies that he is acquainted with the mark on account of certain peculiarities, Lawson, op. cit, 297. The correct view, however, is that stated in Best, Ev, § 234, and other cases above cited. As to wills, in this country the attesting witnesses must affix their signature and not a mark See notes to ss 68—72, post In Yeshwadabi v. Ramchandra, 18 B, 73 (1893), a witness in cross-examination stated that his father could not write or sign his name but used to make a mark (the mark of a plough), and that the paper then shown to him was not his mark

(4) Best, Ev, § 234.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 1862 For a case in which the writer was called and while denying the execution of the document admitted that the writing was exactly like his own, see Grish Chunder v Bhugwan Chunder, 13 W. R, 191, 193 (1870).

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 1863, Best, Ev., § 233

(7) Ib.; Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 194.

(8) Ib.; Stranger v. Searl, 1 Esp, 15; Best, Ev, § 236; R v Crouch, 4 Cox, 163; for exceptions, see Lawson, op. cit., 307.

supposed writer, and not on mony will be rejected (1) written by the party, in ans his authority and addressed to that party. This evidence will be strengthened by acquescence by the parties in the matters, or some of them, to which these documents relate (2) (c) By having observed in the ordinary course of business documents purporting to be written by the person in question. Thus the clerk who has constantly read the letters, or the broker who has been consulted upon them, is as competent as the merchant to whom they were addressed, to judge whether another signature is that of the writer of the letters; and a servant who has habitually carried his master's letters to the post, has thereby had an opportunity of obtaining a knowledge of his writing, though he never saw him write or received a letter from him (3) In whichever of these two latter ways the witness has acquired his knowledge, proof must be given of the identity of the person whose writing is in dispute with the person whose hand is known to the witness.(4) It has been held by the Bombay High Court, following the English rule, that a witness need not state in the first instance how he knows the handwriting, since it is the duty of the opposite party to explore in cross-examination the sources of his knowledge, if he be dissatisfied with the testimony as it stands. It is, however, permissible and may often be expedient that the matters referred to in the explanation should be elicited on the examination-in-chief; and it is within the power of the presiding Judge and often may be desirable to permit the opposing advocate to intervene and cross-examine so that the Court may at that stage be in a position to come to a definite conclusion on adequate materials as to the proof of the handwriting.(5) The witness need not swear to his belief, his bare opinion being admissible, though a mere statement that the writing is like that of the supposed writer is insufficient For such a statement may be perfectly true, and yet within the knowledge of the witness, the paper may have been written by an utter stranger (6) The evidence, being primary and not secondary in its nature, will not become inadmissible because the writer himself or some one who saw the document written, might have been called.(7) And evidence is admissible though the disputed document cannot be produced, as where it is lost or incapable of removal (8) (d) Lastly, handwriting may be proved by comparison of two or more writings, as to which see section 73, post: and as to comparison by experts, see section 45, ante, and Illustration (c) thereto.

Opinion as to existence of right or custom; when relevant.

48. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right(9), the opinions, as to the existence of such custom or right, of persons who would be likely to know(10) of its existence if it existed, are relevant.

---

(1) R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P, 306, 307; DaCosta v. Pym, Pea Add. Cas, 144; Taylor, Ev., § 1863.

(2) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1864—1866; see the Illustration to the section.

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 1864, Lawson, op. cit, 288; Smith v. Sainsbury, 5 C. & P., 196; see the Illustration to the section and Lohit Mohon v R, 22 C., 322, 323 (1894), see observations on evidence of handwriting by Sir Lawrence Peel, C. J., in R. v. Hedger, supra at pp. 133, 134

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 1867; Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed., 369, 370.

(5) Shankar Rao v. Ramjee, 28 B, 58 (1903)

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 1868

(7) Taylor, Ev., § 1862, Best, Ev, § 232.

(8) Sayer v. Glossop, 2 Ex, 409; see Lucas v. Williams, 2 Q. B (1892), 113, 116, 117.

(9) As to the meaning of the term 'right,' see Gujju Lall v. Fateh Lall, 6 C., 186, 187, 180 (1880).

(10) See Jugmohan Das v. Sir Mangaldas, 10 B, 542, 543 (1886).

Explanation.—The expression 'general custom or right' includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons.

Illustration

The right of the villagers of a particular village to use the water of a particular well is a general right within the meaning of this section

Principle.—Upon such questions the opinions of persons who would be likely to know of the existence of the custom or right are the best evidence. Such persons are, so to speak, the depositaries of customary law; just as the text-books are the depositaries of the general law (1)

s. 3 (That a man holds a certain opinion is a fact) ss. 60 (Evidence of opinion must be direct)
s. 3 ("Court")
s. 3 ("Relevant")
s 13 (Facts relevant where right or custom is in question)
s. 51 (Grounds of opinion) s 33 Cl (4) (Opinion of witness as to public right or custom or matter of general interest) s 42 (Judgments relating to matters of a public nature)
s 32 Cl. (7) (Statements contained in certain documents)

Norton, Ev, 227, Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 195, 196, Cunningham, Ev., 193 194.

COMMENTARY.

The thirteenth section applies to all rights and customs, public, general, and private, and refers to specific facts which may be given in evidence. Fourth clause of s 32 refers to the reception of second-hand opinion-evidence in cases in which the declarant cannot be brought before the Court, whether in consequence of death or from some other cause, upon the question of the existence of any public right or custom or matter of public or general interest made ante litem motam: and the seventh clause to statements contained in certain documents The present section also deals with opinion-evidence, but refers to the evidence of a living witness produced before the Court, sworn, and subject to cross-examination. For this section, when read with section 60, post, requires that the person who holds the opinion should be called as a witness; Opinion as to usage customs.

[illegible]

that having regard to the reasons for which these terms are used by English writers the distinction between them is not of importance in this country.(4) The present section further differs from the fourth clause of section 32 inasmuch as it is not governed by the limitation ante litem motam.

Evidence as to usage will also be admissible under this section which is not limited to ancient custom (5) The word 'usage' would include what the

(1) v ib, observations on Opinion Evidence and see Luchman Rai v. Akbar Khan, 1 A, 441 (1887), Bai Baiji v. Bai Santok, 20 B, 59 (1894) As to this and the next section and English law see Thakur Garuradhwaja v. Kunwar Shaparandhwaja, 4 C. W N, xxxvii (1900).

(2) See pp 167—170, ante

(3) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 195, 196; Cunningham, Ev, 194

(4) See pp. 169—170, ante

(5) Sariatullah Sarkar v. Pran Nath, 26 C, 184, 187 (1898), following Dalglish v. Guzuffer Hassain, 23 C, 427 (1896); Fitshardinge v. Purcell (1908), 2 Ch., 139; Bajrangi Singh v Manikarnika Baksh Singh (1908), L. R., I. A., 35.

people are now or recently were in the ha... It may be that this particular habit is only ... which has existed for a long time. If it ... tised by the inhabitants of the place wh... 'usage' within the meaning of the section (1)

Ordinarily speaking, a witness must, in his examination-in-chief, speak to facts only, "but under this section he will be allowed to give his opinion as to the existence of the general right or custom. He will not be confined to instances in which he has personally known the right or custom exercised as a matter of fact. Custom is not a matter to be submitted to the senses. It is made up of an aggregated repetition of the same fact, whenever similar conditions arise, and though a bare opinion is worth nothing without we can ascertain the data on which it is founded, yet it is always to be remembered that section 51 is to be read with this section, and that the grounds for the witness's opinions are sure to be elicited in cross-examination, even if they should not be elicited in the examination-in-chief, or demanded by the Judge. A boundary between villages; the limits of a village or town; a right to collect tolls; a right to trade to the exclusion of others; a right to pasturage of waste lands; liability to repair roads or plant trees; rights to water-courses, tanks, ghauts for washing; rights of commons and the like, will be found the most ordinary in Mofussil practice. The Explanation excludes private rights from the operation of this section. Opinion or reputation evidence is not receivable to prove such rights. They must be proved by facts, such as acts of ownership. This kind of evidence is admissible to disprove as well as to prove a general right or custom."(2) Wajib-ul-arz or village papers made in pursuance of Regulation VII of 1822, regularly entered and kept in the office of the Collector and authenticated by the signatures of the officers who made them were held to be admissible, under section 35, in order to prove a custom. The Privy Council further put it as a query, whether they were not also admissible under the present section as the record of opinion as to the existence of such custom by persons likely to know of it, or under the following section.(3) And the Privy Council held them to be so admissible under this section in the undermentioned case.(4) In a suit by the landlords to avoid the sale of an occupancy-holding in their mauza, and eject the purchaser thereof, one of the questions was as to the existence of a custom or usage under which the raiyat was entitled ... evidence of such a ... In the ... sought to obtain khas possession of certain jote lands which purported to have been conveyed by the jotedars, the first set of defendants, to the second set of defendants, although there was no custom or usage in the village recognizing the transferability of occupancy-rights. Held that in order to establish usage under ss. 178, 183, of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it was not necessary to require proof of its existence for any length of time Held also that the statements

---

(1) Ib. The distinction between custom and usage has been said to be that "usage is a fact and custom is a law. There can be usage without custom, but not custom without usage Usage is inductive, based on consent of persons in a locality. Custom is deductive, making established local usage a law" Wharton, § 965. See notes to s. 13, ante

(2) Norton, Ev., 227; "The opinions of persons likely to know about village-rights to pasturage, to use of paths, water-courses, or ferries, to collect fuel, to use tanks and bathing ghâts, mercantile usage and local customs, would be relevant under this section." Cunningham, Ev., 193.

(3) Lekraj Kuar v Mahpal Singh, 7 I A, 63, 71 (1879); 5 C., 744

(4) Mussamat Lall v. Murli Dhar, 10 C W. N, 730.

(5) Dalglish v Guzuffer Hossain, 23 C. 247 (1896), followed in Sanatullah Sarkar v. Pran Nath, 26 C., 184 (1898).

(6) Sanatullah Sarkar v. Pran Nath, 26 C., 184 (1898).

made by the persons who were in a position to know the existence of a custom or usage in their locality were admissible under this section (1)

Opinion as to usages, tenets, etc when relevant.

49. When the Court has to form an opinion as to—the usages and tenets of any body of men or family(2), the constitution and government of any religious or charitable foundation, or the meaning of words or terms used in particular districts or by particular classes of people, the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge thereon, are relevant facts.(3)

Principle—On such questions the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge are the best evidence

s. 3 ('Court')
s. 3 ('Relevant')
s. 3 ("Fact")
s. 3 (That a man holds a certain opinion is a "fact")
s. 91 Prov (5) (Usage and custom in contracts)
s. 98 (Evidence as to technical expressions, &c.)
s. 51 (Grounds of opinion)
s. 60 (Evidence of opinion must be direct)

Rogers' Expert Testimony, §§ 117, 118, Norton, Ev, 228, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 196; Cunningham, Ev, 194

COMMENTARY.

Opinion as to usages, tenets, etc.

Under this section a witness may give his 'opinion' upon—(a) The usages of any body of men. This will include usages of trade and agriculture, mercar [illegible] l the opinions of [illegible] sage is proved by [illegible] eir knowledge ob [illegible] others in the trade to which it relates. But their conclusion or inference as to its effect, either upon the contract or its legal title or rights of parties is, not competent to show the character or force of the usage"(4) The section only requires that the persons testifying should have "special means of knowledge." It does not in any manner limit the character of such special means of knowledge, which may be derived only from the witness's own business if that has been sufficiently extensive and long continued(5), or from his knowledge of the same or different business carried on by others if he has been connected with such business.(6) So it has been held that a London stockbroker is a competent witness as to the course of business of London Bankers.(7) A person

(1) "For example, a person who had been in the habit of writing out deeds of sale, or one who had been seeing transfers frequently made, would certainly be in a position to give his opinion whether there was a custom or usage in that particular locality, and we think that the opinion of such persons would be admissible [under this section]" ib, 187, 188

(2) See Lekraj Kuar v. Mahpal Sing, 7 I. A, 63, 71 (1879), 5 C, 744; Garuradhuaja Prasad v. Superundhuaja Prasad, 23 A, 37, 51 (1900); Sarabjit Partab v Indarjit Partab, 2 All L J, 720, 732 (1904).

(3) See also generally as to this section, the Notes to s 13, and Chapter VI, post

(4) Haskins v. Warren, 115 Mass, 514, 535 (Amer), cited in Rogers' Expert Testimony, § 117.

(5) Roger, op cit

(6) Ib.

(7) Adams v Peters, 2 C. & K., 722.

may be competent to testify as to the usage which prevails in a certain business, without himself being engaged in that business. So that when the question was as to the custom of the New York Banks in paying the cheques of dealers, it was held proper to call as witnesses persons who were not employed in Banks (1) On the issue whether an alleged commercial usage exists, a witness may be asked to describe how, under the usages in force, a transaction like the one in question would be conducted by all the parties thereto from its inception to its conclusion.(2) Usage may annex incidents to a contract which are not repugnant to or inconsistent with its express terms.(3) The testimony of those engaged in a particular business that they never heard of an usage is admissible.(4) This section deals with 'opinion': specific facts as to usages are provable under the 13th section, ante. (b) Tenets of any body of men. This will include any opinion, principle, dogma, or doctrine which is held or maintained as truth. It will apply to religion, politics, etc. (c) Usages of a family. Such for instance, as the custom of primogeniture in the families of anceint zemindars; any peculiar course of descent; the usages of native convert families and the like.(5) Custom is of two kinds,—kulachar, or family custom, and desachar, or local custom.(6) (d) Tenets of a family. (e) The aritable foundation. As to the see note.(7) (f) The meaning by particular classes of people.

Under section 98, post, evidence may be given with reference to a document to show the meaning of 'technical, local, and provincial expressions, abbreviations, and of words used in a peculiar sense.' For this purpose, as for others, the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge on the subject would be the best evidence.(8) This portion of the section is particularly valuable in a country like India, in which there are so many different languages, and in which justice is largely administered by Englishmen in languages other than English.(9) A Judge may also consult a dictionary as to the meaning of a word, as to which see the penultimate paragraph of section 57, post. This section, like the others, must be read with section 51, post, for the opinion, with-a living witness to state his opinion on the existence of a family custom and to state as the grounds of that opinion information derived from deceased persons, and the weight of the evidence would depend on the position and character of the witness and of the persons on whose statements he has formed his opinion. But it must be the expression of the independent opinion based on hearsay and not mere repetition of hearsay.(11)

---

(1) Criffin v. Rice, 1 Hilton, 1 N. Y., 184 (Amer), in which it was said:—"Although not employed in banking business, the witnesses were dealers with the banks, and had knowledge of the ordinary course of dealing with them There is no necessity for showing a man to be an expert in banking in order to prove a usage. He should know what the usage is, and then he is competent to testify whether he be a banker, or employed in a bank, or a dealer with banks There is no reason why a dealer should not have as much knowledge in such a subject as a person employed in a bank." Rogers, op. cit.

(2) Kirshaw v. Wright, 115 Mass., 361 (Amer.).

(3) S 92, Proviso (5), post.

(4) Evansville, etc, R. R. Co. v. Young, 28 Ind., 516 (Amer.).

(5) See Garuradhwaja Prasad v. Superundhwaja Prasad, 23 A., 37 (1900), v. post.

(6) See Notes to s. 13, ante; Field, Ev., 112-114; ib, 6th Ed, 503, 505

(7) Beng. Reg XIX of 1810; Mad Reg VII of 1817; Act VII (Bom) of 1865; Act XX of 1863.

(8) Cunningham, Ev., 194; Norton, Ev., 228, See notes to s. 98, post

(9) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 186

(10) Norton, Ev, 228

(11) Garuradhwaja Prasad v. Superundhuaja Prasad, 23 A, 37, 51, 52 (1900): s. c., 5 C. W. N., 33.

50. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship(1) of one person to another, the opinion, expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship, of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact : Opinion on relationship when relevant.

Provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act(2) or in prosecutions under section 494, 495, 497, or 498 of the Indian Penal Code.(3)

Illustrations

(a) The question is whether A and B were married

The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife is relevant.

(b) The question is whether A was the legitimate son of B

The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family is relevant

Principle —As the opinion in this case is to be evidence by the conduct [illegible] there is an additional guarantee for its trustworthiness, besides [illegible] ...ted because [illegible] ...gs under the [illegible] jurisdiction

s. 3 ("Court")

s. 3 (That a man holds a certain opinion is a 'fact')

s 3 ("Relevant")

s. 32 Cl (5) (Statement on relationship by non-witness)

s 32 Cl (6) (Statement relating to relationship in family document, etc)

s 51 (Grounds of opinion)

Taylor, Ev §§ 649, 578 ; Norton, Ev., 229, 230 , Field, Ev , 6th Ed , 197, 140—143 , Phipson, Ev , 5th Ed., 101, 362 , Steph. Dig , Art 53 , Act IV of 1869 (Indian Divorce) . Penal Code, ss. 494, 495, 497, 498

COMMENTARY.

So far as opinion is expressed by conduct, that is, by evidence of specific facts of the character mentioned in the illustrations, this section is in accordance with English law upon the subject, according to which " family conduct," —such as [illegible] ...ribution and devolution of [illegible] which the opinion and belief of the family may be inferred, and as resting ultimately on the same Opinion on relationship.

(1) It will be noted that the words " by blood, marriage or adoption " have not been inserted after the word " relationship " by Act XVIII of 1872, as in the case of s 32, Cls (5) and (6) Illustration (a) refers to the case of marriage, and illustration (b) to relationship by blood Relationship by adoption is not expressly mentioned but is no doubt included within this section See Notes to s 114, with reference to Hindu and Mahomedan Law

(2) Act IV of 1869

(3) Act XLV of 1860, v post

(4) Norton, Ev , 229, and see Taylor, Ev , § 578, 649, and notes post

(5) R v Kallu, 5 A , 233 (1882)

(6) See R v. Pitambur Singh, 5 C , 566 (1897) , Norton, Ev , 233 "The proviso is inserted because in divorce and bigamy cases the marriage must be strictly proved that is, by the evidence of a witness who was present at the marriage, or by the production of the register or examined copy of the register or of such other record as the law of a country, or custom of a class, may provide "—Ib basis as evidence of family tradition. For, since the principal question in pedigree cases turns on the parentage or descent of an individual, it is obviously material in order to resolve this question, to ascertain how he was treated and acknowledged by those who sustained towards him any relations of blood or of affinity. Thus, in the Berkeley Peerage Case, Sir James Mansfield remarked that "if the father is proved to have brought up the party as his legitimate son, this amounts to a daily assertion that the son is legitimate.(1) So the concealment of the birth of a child from the husband(2), the subsequent treatment of such child by the person who, at the time of its conception, was living in a state of adultery with the mother,—and the fact that the child and its descendants assumed the name of the adulterer and had never been recognised in the family as the legitimate offspring of the husband,—are circumstances that will go far to rebut the presumption of legitimacy, which the law raised in favour of the issue of a married woman (3) Again, if the question be whether a person, from whom the claimant traces his descent, was the son of a particular testator, the fact that all the members of the family appear to have been mentioned in the will, but that no notice is taken of such person, is strong evidence to show, either that he was not the son, or at least that he had died without issue before the date of the will (4) and if the object be to prove that a man left no children, the production of his will, in which no notice is taken of his family, and by which his property is bequeathed to strangers or collateral relations is cogent evidence of his having died childless "(5) A person claiming as an illegitimate son must establish his alleged paternity like any other disputed question of relationship, and can, of course, rely upon statements of deceased persons under the fifth clause of s. 32, upon opinion expressed by conduct under this section and also upon such presumptions of fact as may be warranted by the evidence.(6) The section is not limited to the opinion of members of the family. The opinion may be of any person who, as such member or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject. When the legitimacy of a person in possession has been acquiesced in for a considerable time, and is afterwards impeached by a party, who has a right to question the legitimacy, the defendant in order to defend his status, is allowed to invoke against the claimant every presumption which arises from long recognition of his legitimacy by members of his family.(7) That portion of section 60 which provides that the person who holds an opinion must be called does not apply to the evidence dealt with by this section, nam ly, opinion expressed

(1) 4 Camp., 416, Wharton, Ev., § 211 As to treatment and acknowledgment under Mahomedan Law, see Ameer Ali's Mahomedan Law, II, 215, 2nd Ed. (1894); Bailie's Digest of Mahomedan Law (1875), Part I, 406, Part II, 289, Field, Ev., 351, and cases cited, ib., at pp. 161, 162, and Abdul F[illegible] v. Aga Mahomed, 21 C, 666 (1893) [illegible] 21 I. A., 56. (Acknowledgment [illegible] sense meant by that law is requ[illegible] of antecedent right, and not a me[illegible] n of paternity): Aizunissa [illegible] v. Karimoonnissa Khatoon, 23 C, [illegible]

(2) Hargrave v. Hargrave, [illegible] 701.

(3) Goodright v. Saul, 4 T. [illegible] per Ashhurst, J: Morris v. Da[illegible] & Fin, 163, 21, et seq; Banbury [illegible] App. n, c. to Le-Marchants Gardner Peerage, 389, 432, 433; [illegible] St., 153; s. c., R. v. Mansfield, [illegible] 444; Townshend Peerage, 10 Cl. [illegible] 298; Atchley v. Spring, 33 L. J, Ch [illegible]

"This eviden[illegible] admissible in India under ss 8, 9, [illegible], and under s 50, post;" Field, [illegible] 140-143

(4) Tracy [illegible] Cl & Fin, 100, per Lord Ca[illegible] v. Att-Genl., id, 498-500 [illegible] ottenham. See Taylor, Ev., § [illegible]

(5) Taylor, [illegible]; Hungate v. Gascoigne, 2 [illegible], 414, s. c., De Ross Peer[illegible]: and see examples of t[illegible] B[illegible] Bahadur v. [illegible], 17 456, 462 (18[illegible]) Vencataswara [illegible] (1868); s c, [illegible] R, P. C., 15, [illegible] Nath, 14 M. I[illegible] R., P. C., 41; [illegible] [illegible]ee Sabhao, [illegible] L. R., 113; [illegible]

[illegible]6) Gopalasa[illegible], 32, 34, 3[illegible] [illegible]) Rajendro [illegible] I. A., 67 [illegible]

by conduct, which, as an external perceptible fact, may be proved either by the testimony of the person himself whose opinion is so evidenced, or by that of some other person acquainted with the facts which evidence such opinion. As the testimony in both cases relates to such external facts and is given by persons personally acquainted with them, the testimony is in each case direct within the meaning of the earlier portion of that section.(1) According to English law general reputation (except in petitions for damages by reason of adultery and in indictments for bigamy where strict proof of marriage is required) is admissible to establish the fact of parties being married. Accordingly, general evidence of reputation in the neighbourhood, even when unsupported by facts, or when partially contradicted by evidence of a contrary repute, has been held receivable in proof of marriage (2) The present section is limited to opinion as expressed by conduct, and there appears to be no other provision in the Act under which such evidence of general reputation would be receivable. But it has been held by the Privy Council that where there is no direct proof of consent to a marriage in Burmah it may be inferred from the conduct of the parties or established by general reputation (3)

Divorce or Criminal Proceedings

The proviso to the section enacts that opinion expressed by conduct is not sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Divorce Act, or in prosecutions for certain offences under the Penal Code The framers of the Evi- [illegible] bject, exactly to follow the [illegible] bigamy the first marriage, [illegible] iage, must be proved with the same strictness as any other material fact In the case of offences relating to marriage, the marriage of the woman is as essential an element of the crime charged as the illicit intercourse And the provisions of this section show that where marriage is an ingredient in an offence, as in bigamy, adultery and the enticing of married women, the fact of the marriage must be strictly proved (4) And this is so not only having regard to the provisions of this section, but to the principle that strict proof should be required in all criminal cases.(5) " In the English Courts a marriage is usually proved by the production of the parish or other register, or a certain certified extract therefrom ; but

(1) In R v Subbarayan, 9 M, 9, 11 (1885), it seems to be suggested by Hutchins, J, that proof of the opinion by other than the person holding it can only be given when the latter is dead or cannot be called But if this be so, it is submitted that such a limitation is incorrect, for amongst others, the reason given above.

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 578 So the uncorroborated statement of a single witness, who did not appear to be related to the parties, or to live near them, or to know them intimately, but who asserted that he had heard they were married was held sufficient primâ facie, to warrant the jury in finding the marriage, the adverse party not having cross-examined the witness, nor controverted the fact by proof: Evans v Morgan, 2 C & J, 453.

(3) Mi Me v Mi Mohwe Ma, 39 C., 392, and s c (1912), 39 I. A, 57.

(4) R v. Pitambar Singh, 5 C, 566, F B (1879), 5 C L R, 597 [this case must be taken to have overruled R v. Wazira, 8 B L R, App 63 (1872),] followed in R. v. Arshed Ali, 13 C. L. R, 125 (1883); R v Kallu, 5 A, 233 (1882), discussed in R v Subbarayan, 9 M, 9 (1885), in which Hutchins, J, said that if the learned Judges meant to decide in the preceding cases that a husband or wife is precluded from proving his or her marriage he expressed his dissent It is submitted that the learned Judges did not so decide, but that a vague assertion by either to the effect 'I am married,' or the like is insufficient proof; in fact the statement assumes the very question to be proved The existence of a valid marriage is a mixed question of law and fact A witness therefore must speak to the facts which are said to constitute the marriage, so that the Court may determine whether what the witness states to have taken place did take place in fact and, if so, whether it constituted a marriage in point of law In this country there is no statutory marriage law for natives and the validity of any particular marriage depends chiefly on the usages of the caste to which the parties belong v ib, at p 11

(5) R v. Kallu, 5 A., 233 (1882).

basis as evidence of family tradition. For, since the principal question in pedigree cases turns on the parentage or descent of an individual, it is obviously material in order to resolve this question, to ascertain how he was treated and acknowledged by those who sustained towards him any relations of blood or of affinity. Thus, in the Berkeley Peerage Case, Sir James Mansfield remarked that "if the father is proved to have brought up the party as his legitimate son, this amounts to a daily assertion that the son is legitimate (1) So the concealment of the birth of a child from the husband(2), the subsequent treatment of such child by the person who, at the time of its conception, was living in a state of adultery with the mother,—and the fact that the child and its descendants assumed the name of the adulterer and had never been recognised in the family as the legitimate offspring of the husband,—are circumstances that will go far to rebut the presumption of legitimacy, which the law raised in favour of the issue of a married woman (3) Again, if the question be whether a person, from whom the claimant traces his descent, was the son of a particular testator, the fact that all the members of the family appear to have been mentioned in the will, but that no notice is taken of such person, is strong evidence to show, either that he was not the son, or at least that he had died without issue before the date of the will (4) and if the object be to prove that a man left no children, the production of his will, in which no notice is taken of his family, and by which his property is bequeathed to strangers or collateral relations is cogent evidence of his having died childless."(5) A person claiming as an illegitimate son must establish his alleged paternity like any other disputed question of relationship, and can, of course, rely upon statements of deceased persons under the fifth clause of s. 32, upon opinion expressed by conduct under this section and also upon such presumptions of fact as may be warranted by the evidence.(6) The section is not limited to the opinion of members of the family. The opinion may be of any person who, as such member or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject. When the legitimacy of a person in possession has been acquiesced in for a considerable time, and is afterwards impeached by a party, who has a right to question the legitimacy, the defendant in order to defend his status, is allowed to invoke against the claimant every presumption which arises from long recognition of his legitimacy by members of his family.(7) That portion of section 60 which provides that the person who holds an opinion must be called does not apply to the evidence dealt with by this section, namely, opinion expressed

(1) 4 Camp, 416, Wharton, Ev, § 211 As to treatment and acknowledgment under Mahomedan Law, see Ameer Ali's Mahomedan Law, II, 215, 2nd Ed. (1894); Baillie's Digest of Mahomedan Law (1875), Part I, 406, Part II, 289, Field, Ev, 351, and cases cited, ib, at pp 161, 162, and Abdul Razak v. Aga Mahomed, 21 C, 666 (1893); s c, 21 I A, 56. (Acknowledgment in the sense meant by that law is required, viz, of antecedent right, and not a mere recognition of paternity) · Azizunissa Khatoon v Karimoonnissa Khatoon, 23 C, 130 (1895).

(2) Hargrave v. Hargrave, 2 C. & Kir, 701

(3) Goodright v. Saul, 4 T. R., 356, per Ashhurst, J. Morris v. Davies, 5 Cl. & Fin, 163, 21, et seq; Banbury Peerage, App n, e to Le-Marchants Rep. of Gardner Peerage, 389, 432, 433; 1 Sim. & St, 153; s. c, R. v. Mansfield, 1 Q. B., 444; Townshend Peerage, 10 Cl. & Fin, 298; Atchley v. Spring, 33 L. J, Ch, 345: "This evidence will be admissible in India under ss 8, 9, or 11, ante, and under s 50, post," Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 140-143

(4) Tracy Peerage, 10 Cl & Fin, 100, per Lord Campbell: Robson v. Att-Genl, per id, 498-500, per Lord Cottenham. See Taylor, Ev., § 620 ad fin.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 649; Hungate v. Gascoigne, 2 Phill, 25; 2 Coop, 414, s c, De Ross Peerage, 2 Coop, 540; and see as examples of this class of evidence, Bajal Bahadur v Bhupindar Bahadur, 17 A, 456, 462 (1895); Mutusawmy Jagavera v. Vencataswara Yetaya, 12 M. I. A., 203 (1868); s. c., 11 W R, P. C., 62 B. L R, P. C., 15; Rajendro Nath v. Jogendro Nath, 14 M I. A. (1871), 67 s. c., 15 W. R, P. C, 41; Maharajah Pertab v. Maharanee Sabhao, 3 C., 626 (1877); s c. 1 C L R, 113; 4 I. A., 228.

(6) Gopalasami Chetti v. Aruna Chellam, 27 M, 32, 34, 35 (1903).

(7) Rajendro Nath v. Jogendro Nath, 14 M. I. A., 67 (1871).

by conduct, which, as an external perceptible fact, may be proved either by the testimony of the person himself whose opinion is so evidenced, or by that of some other person acquainted with the facts which evidence such opinion. As the testimony in both cases relates to such external facts and is given by persons personally acquainted with them, the testimony is in each case direct within the meaning of the earlier portion of that section.(1) According to English law general reputation (except in petitions for damages by reason of adultery and in indictments for bigamy where strict proof of marriage is required) is admissible to establish the fact of parties being married. Accordingly, general evidence of reputation in the neighbourhood, even when unsupported by facts, or when partially contradicted by evidence of a contrary repute, has been held receivable in proof of marriage (2) The present section is limited to opinion as expressed by conduct, and there appears to be no other provision in the Act under which such evidence of general reputation would be receivable. But it has been held by the Privy Council that where there is no direct proof of consent to a marriage in Burmah it may be inferred from the conduct of the parties or established by general reputation (3)

Divorce or Criminal Proceedings

The proviso to the section enacts that opinion expressed by conduct is not sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Divorce Act, or in prosecutions for certain offences under the Penal Code The framers of the Evi-follow the marriage, ·oved with the same strictness as any other material fact. In the case of offences relating to marriage, the marriage of the woman is as essential an element of the crime charged as the illicit intercourse. And the provisions of this section show that where marriage is an ingredient in an offence, as in bigamy, adultery and the enticing of married women, the fact of the marriage must be strictly proved (4) And this is so not only having regard to the provisions of this section, but to the principle that strict proof should be required in all criminal cases (5) " In the English Courts a marriage is usually proved by the production of the parish or other register, or a certain certified extract therefrom , but

---

(1) In R v Subbarayan, 9 M. 9, 11 (1885), it seems to be suggested by Hutchins, J, that proof of the opinion by other than the person holding it can only be given when the latter is dead or cannot be called But if this be so, it is submitted that such a limitation is incorrect, for amongst others, the reason given above.

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 578 So the uncorroborated statement of a single witness, who did not appear to be related to the parties, or to live near them, or to know them intimately, but who asserted that he had heard they were married was held sufficient primâ facie, to warrant the jury in finding the marriage, the adverse party not having cross-examined the witness, nor controverted the fact by proof· Evans v Morgan, 2 C. & J, 453.

(3) Mi Me v Mi Mohwe Ma, 39 C., 392; and s c (1912), 39 I A., 57.

(4) R v. Pitambar Singh, 5 C., 566, F. B (1879), 5 C L R, 597 [this case must be taken to have overruled R v Wazira, 8 B L R., App. 63 (1872),] followed in R. v. Arshed Ali, 13 C. L. R, 125 (1883), R v Kallu, 5 A, 233 (1882), discussed in R v. Subbarayan, 9 M, 9 (1885), in which Hutchins, J, said that if the learned Judges meant to decide in the preceding cases that a husband or wife is precluded from proving his or her marriage he expressed his dissent It is submitted that the learned Judges did not so decide, but that a vague assertion by either to the effect 'I am married,' or the like is insufficient proof; in fact the statement assumes the very question to be proved. The existence of a valid marriage is a mixed question of law and fact A witness therefore must speak to the facts which are said to constitute the marriage, so that the Court may determine whether what the witness states to have taken place did take place in fact and, if so, whether it constituted a marriage in point of law In this country there is no statutory marriage law for natives and the validity of any particular marriage depends chiefly on the usages of the caste to which the parties belong v ib, at p 11

(5) R. v Kallu, 5 A., 233 (1882).

if celebrated abroad, it may be proved by any person who was present at it though circumstances should also be proved, from which the jury may presume that it was a valid marriage according to the law of the country in which it was celebrated. Proof that the ceremony was performed by a person appearing and officiating as a priest, and that it was understood by the parties to be the [illegible] customs of the foreign country [illegible] see R. v. Inhabitants of Bramp- [illegible] mus of impugning its validity [illegible] pp. 1234, 1237). And even a [illegible] rson who was actually present and saw the ceremony performed; it is not necessary to prove its registration or the license or publication of banns [Ibid, quoting R. v. Allison (2) R v. Manuaring.(3)]"(4)

unds of ion, n rele-

51. Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant, the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant.

Illustration

An expert may give an account of experiments(5) performed by him for the purpose of forming his opinion.

Principle.—A test of the value of such evidence is thus provided. The correctness of the opinion or otherwise can better be estimated in many instances when the grounds upon which it is based are known. The value of the opinion may be greatly increased or diminished by the reasons on which it is founded.(6)

ss. 45, 47-50 (Opinions when relevant) s. 3 ("Relevant.") Lawson's Expert Ev., 231; Field, Ev., 6th Ed., 198; Cunningham, Ev., 196.

COMMENTARY.

unds of ion.

The present section applies to the opinions of "any living persons" whether those opinions be the opinion of "experts" under ss. 45, 46 or of others under ss. 47, 48, 49. Quære—whether the section is applicable to opinion "expressed by conduct" under s. 50 The section to some extent repeats the principles involved in s. 46. The present section, however, deals with the subjective grounds upon which the opinion is held which can only generally be proved by the testimony of the person whose opinion is offered, whereas s. 46 deals with objective external facts provable either by that person or others which support or rebut the opinion of an expert. With regard to the latter it has been said(7) that the consideration that the opinions may be given on the assumption of facts not proved is a reason why the grounds and reasons of the opinion should be stated, in order that the Court and jury may see that it is not founded on hearsay, general rumour, or facts of which some evidence may have been given but being controlled by other evidence, are not found true by the Court or the jury This inquiry is perhaps more frequently made in cross-examination, but it is also competent evidence in chief.(8) In the same way when in Reference

(1) 10 East, 282
(2) R & R, 109.
(3) Dears & B, 132; s c., 26 L. J. (M C), 10.
(4) R. v. Subbarayan, 9 M., 9, 11 (1885)
(5) v ante, p 436
(6) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 198; Cunningham, Ev., 196; Lawson's Expert Ev., 231.
(7) Dickinson v. Inhabitants of Fitchburg, 13 Gray, 555 (Amer), cited in Lawson, Ev., 232, 233
(8) Ib, see also Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed., 370, 371.

the Court has to consider the opinions of a divided jury, it should also consider their reasons, and for this purpose a Judge should note such reasons after telling the jury of his intention to refer the case. But even if the Judge has omitted to note such reasons, this will not warrant the Court in declining to go into the evidence (1)

(1) R v Annada Charan Thakur, 36 629 R v Chellan (1905) 29 M 91

CHARACTER, WHEN RELEVANT.

The rules with regard to evidence of character(1) are divisible firstly into those which concern the character of witnesses, and those which concern the character of parties.

In respect of the first, the rule is, that the character of a witness, whether party or not, is always material as affecting his credit. The credibility of a witness is always in issue.(2) For, as witnesses are the media through which the Court is to come to its conclusion on the matters submitted to it, it is always most material and important to ascertain whether such media are trustworthy, and as a test of this, questions, amongst others, touching character are allowed to be put to the witnesses in the cause.(3)

In respect of the character of a party, two distinctions must be drawn, namely between the cases when the character is in issue and is not in issue and when the cause is civil or criminal When a party's general character is itself in issue, whether in a civil(4) or criminal(5) proceeding, proof must necessarily be received of what that general character is, or is not.(6) But when general character is not in issue but is tendered in support of some other issue it is as a general rule, excluded. So in civil proceedings evidence of character to prove conduct imputed is declared by the Act to be irrelevant (7) The two exceptions to this rule are, that in civil proceedings evidence of character as affecting damages, is admissible(8); and in criminal proceedings, for reasons which will be found considered in the Notes to sections 53 and 54, the fact that the person accused is of a good character, is relevant, but the fact that he has a bad character is, except in certain specified cases, irrelevant (9) Evidence of character in criminal proceedings "is, generally speaking, only a make-weight, though there are two classes of cases in which it is highly important:— (a) Where conduct is equivocal or even presumably criminal. In this case evidence of character may explain conduct and rebut the presumptions which it might raise in the absence of such evidence. A man is found in possession of stolen goods. He says he found them and took charge of them to give them to the owner. If he is a man of very high character, this may be believed. (b) When a charge rests on the direct testimony of a single witness, and on the [illegible] indecent assault a [illegible] t [illegible] irty prosecuting is made relevant by the Act. When a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character.(11)

---

(1) As to the meaning of the term 'character,' see s. 55, Explanation, post and the Notes to that section.

(2) Best, Ev., § 263.

(3) See ss 145-153, post.

(4) See Notes to s 52, post

(5) See s 54, Explanation (1) and Notes to that section

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 355; Best, Ev, § 258.

(7) S. 52, post.

(8) S 55, post

(9) Ss 53, 54.

(10) Steph. Introd., 167, 168

(11) S 155, cl. (4), post.

52. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person concerned is such as to render probable or improbable any conduct imputed to him is irrelevant, except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant.

In civil cases character to prove conduct imputed irrelevant.

Principle.—Evidence of character is excluded in civil cases as being too remote, and at the best affording but slight assistance towards the determination of the issue.(1) Such evidence is foreign to the point in issue and only calculated to create prejudice.(2)

s. 55 (Meaning of term "character")
s. 3 Illust (e) ("Fact")
s. 55 (Character as affecting damages)
s. 140 (Witnesses to character may be cross-examined and re-examined)

Steph. Dig. Art. 55, Taylor Ev, §§ 354, 355, Wharton, Ev, §§ 47–56, Roscoe, N P. Ev, 87; Best on Ev, § 256, et seq, Norton Ev, 230

COMMENTARY

Character in civil cases.

The meaning of the term "character," as used in this and the following section, is defined in the Explanation to section 55, post, which must be read in conjunction with the present section (3) The term "persons concerned" is vague, but this section, it is presumed, refers to the character of parties to the suit, and not to the character of witnesses(4), whose credibility is always in issue(5), and represents the old state of the law, according to which, in actions unconnected with character, the character of either of the parties is irrelevant and evidence introduced with the sole object of exposing the character of a party to the view of the Court is excluded (6)

But under this section, as under section 51, a distinction must be drawn between cases (a) where the character of a party is in issue, and (b), where it is not in issue, but is tendered in support of some other issue (6)

In case (a), the party's general character being itself in issue, proof must necessarily be received of what the general character is or is not (7) This section only excludes evidence of character for the purpose of rendering probable or improbable any conduct imputed to him So where the question in a suit was whether a governess was "competent, lady-like and good tempered" while in her employer's service, witnesses were allowed to assert or deny her general competency, good manners and temper (8) And in such cases it is not only competent to give general evidence of the character of the party with reference to the issue raised, but even to enquire into particular facts tending to establish it (9) These cases, however, can scarcely be deemed an exception to the rule of exclusion, for it is clear that, as in cumulative offences, such as treason, or a conspiracy to carry on the business of common cheats, many acts are given in evidence because such crimes can be proved in no other way; so where general behaviour of a party is impeached, it is only by general evidence that the charge can be rebutted (10)

In case (b), where character is not in issue but is tendered in support of some other issue, it is excluded as irrelevant, except so far as it affects the

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 354, \ note, post
(2) Roscoe, N P Ev, 87
(3) v Notes to s 55, post
(4) Norton, Ev, 330
(5) Best, Ev, § 263; see as to witnesses, ss 145, 146, 153, post
(6) Norton, Ev, 230.
(7) Taylor, Ev, 355: Best Ev, 258; Roscoe, N P Ev, 87
(8) Fountain v. Boodle, 3 Q B, 5. And see Brine v Bazalgette, 3 Ex R 692; R v Weering, 5 Esp, 41.
(9) Best, Ev, § 258, Wharton, Ev, § 48
(10) Taylor, Ev, § 355, and see Best, Ev., § 258.

amount of damages.(1) As evidence of general character, can, at best, afford only glimmering light where the question is whether a party has done a certain act or not, its admission for such a purpose is exclusively confined to criminal proceedings(2), in which it was originally received in favorem vitæ.(3) So in an action of ejectment brought by the heir-at-law against a devisee, where the defendant was charged with having imposed a fictitious will on the testator in extremis, he was not permitted to call witnesses to prove his general good character, and a similar rule was laid down in an action for slander, where the words charged the plaintiff with stealing money from the defendant, though the latter, by pleading truth as a justification, had put the character of the former directly in jeopardy.(4) So also in a divorce case, the husband cannot in disproof of a particular act of cruelty, tender evidence of his general character for humanity.(5)

"Except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant."

That is to say when facts relevant, otherwise than for the purpose of showing character, are proved, and those facts, in addition to their primary inferences, raise others concerning the character of the parties to the suit, they become relevant not only for the purposes for which they were directly tendered, but also for the purpose of showing the character of the parties concerned. The Court may, of course, form its own conclusion as to the character of the parties or witnesses from their conduct as exhibited by the relevant facts proved in the case; and it is perfectly legitimate for a Court to draw, from the opinion which it has so formed of the character of a party or witness, the inference that he might probably enough have been guilty of the conduct imputed to him or that he is not worthy of credit.(6)

In criminal cases previous good character relevant.

53. In criminal proceedings the fact that the person accused is of a good character is relevant.

Previous bad character not relevant except in reply.

54. In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant.

Explanation 1.—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.

Explanation 2.—A previous conviction is relevant as evidence of bad character.(7)

Principle.—Evidence of good character is allowed to be given on grounds of humanity for the purpose of raising a presumption of innocence, and as tending to explain conduct(8); but evidence of bad character is in general excluded as being too remote(9), and as tending to prejudice(10) the accused whose guilt must be established by proof of the facts with which he is charged and not by presumptions to be raised from the character which he bears (11)

(1) See s. 55, post.
(2) S. 53, post
(3) Taylor, Ev., § 354.
(4) Ib, and cases there cited
(5) Naracott v. Naracott, 33 L. J. P. & M. 61 and see Jones v. James, 18 L. T. N. S., 243.
(6) Norton, Ev., 230
(7) This section was substituted for the original s. 54 by Act III of 1891, s. 6.
(8) Taylor, Ev., § 352; Stephen's General View of the Criminal Law of England, pp. 311, 312
(9) Stephen's op. cit., 399, 310
(10) R. v. Bykunt Nath, 10 W. R., Cr. 17 (1868); R. v. Kartick Chunder, 14 C., 721 (1887)
(11) R. v. Tuberfield, 10 Cox, 1; Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, 42 C., 957 (1915).

The exceptions are, firstly, where the character is itself a fact in issue, as distinguished from cases where evidence of character is tendered in support of some other issue. Being a fact in issue, it must necessarily be proved. Secondly, where the accused has by giving evidence of good character challenged enquiry it is as fair that such evidence, like any other, should be open to rebuttal, as it is unjust that he should have the advantage of a character which in point of fact is undeserved (1)

s. 3 Illust (e) ("Fact.")
s. 3 ("Relevant.")
s. 55 Explanation (Meaning of term "character.")
s. 155 Cl. (4) (Character of prosecutrix) s 14 Explanation (2) Illust (b) Relevancy of previous conviction)
s. 3 ("Evidence.")
s 3 ("Fact in issue") s 140 (Witness to character may be cross-examined and re-examined.)

Taylor, Ev., §§ 349—353, Wharton, Cr Ev, §§ 57, 84, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 86, Phipson, Ev., 5th Ed, 172, Steph Dig, Art 56, Best, Ev § 256 et seq, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 84, Norton, Ev., 231-233; Stephen's General view of the Criminal Law of England, loc cit.; Cr Pr Code, ss. 310, 311, 221, 511, Penal Code, s. 75, Act VI of 1864, ss 3, 4, Act V of 1859 Art. 117.

COMMENTARY

Previous good character. Section 53 is in accordance with the English rule. "Though general evidence of bad character is not admitted against the prisoner, general evidence of good character is always admitted in his favour" This would, no doubt be an inconsistency justifiable, or at least intelligible, on the ground of the humanity of English law, if such evidence were not often of great importance as tending to explain conduct. A loses his watch, B is found in possession of it next day, and says he found it, and was keeping it for the owner If A and B are strangers, and if B can call no one to speak to his character, this is a very poor excuse; but if B is a friend of A's and of the same position in life, and if he calls many respectable people, who have known him from childhood and say he is a perfectly honest man, the story becomes highly probable If the same thing happened to a thoroughly respectable, well-established inhabitant of the town, say, for instance, to the Rector of the Parish being a man of first-rate character and large fortune, no one would think twice of it. These illustrations give the true theory of evidence of character Judges frequently tell juries that evidence of character cannot be of use where the case is clearly is that evidence of character may explain conduct, but cannot alter facts"(3)

(1) v notes, post, Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed, 84

(2) "When the point at issue is whether the accused has committed a particular criminal act, evidence of his general good character is obviously entitled to little weight, unless some reasonable doubt exist as to his guilt, and, therefore, in this event alone will the jury be advised to act upon such evidence" Taylor, Ev, § 351, See also Norton, Ev, 231, in which the case is given of an Irish Judge who summed up thus "Gentlemen of the Jury, there stands a boy, of most excellent character,

[no importance can be attached to evidence of this kind when the case against the accused is clear]

(3) Stephen's General View of the Criminal Law of England, pp 311, 312; and see Best, Ev, § 262, Taylor, Ev, 351; Wharton, Cr Ev, § 66

Where the act done is in itself indifferent, or, in other words, where the act amounts to an offence only by reason of being done with a vicious intention, evidence of character is valuable as to the probability or otherwise of the existence of such an intention. Where, on the other hand the intention is not of the essence of the act, such evidence may be of use, only if it be doubtful whether the prisoner was the person who committed the act.(1) Evidence of the good character of the accused may be given either by cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution, or by calling separate witnesses on behalf of the accused.(2) This section must be read in conjunction with the Explanation to section 55, post. According to English and American law, the character proved must be of the specific kind impeached, as honesty where dishonesty is charged, good character in other respects being irrelevant (3), and must relate to a period proximate to the date of the charge.(4)

Previous bad character

By the provisions of section 54, evidence of bad character, except in reply is inadmissible, for a man's guilt is to be established by proof of the facts, and not by proof of his character.(5) Such evidence might create a prejudice but not lead a step towards substantiation of guilt. This principle has been carried so far that, on a prosecution for an infamous offence, evidence of an admission by the accused, that he was addicted to the commission of similar offences, was rejected as irrelevant (6) This section is in accordance with English law(7) and its provisions were followed in India even before the enactment of this Act.(8) " A man's general bad character is a weak reason for believing that he was concerned in any particular criminal transaction, for it is a circumstance common to him and hundreds and thousands of other people, whereas the opportunity of committing the crime and facts immediately connected with it are marks which belong to very few, perhaps only to one or two persons If general bad character is too remote, à fortiori, the particular transactions, of which that general bad character is the effect, are still further removed from proof; accordingly it is an inflexible rule of English Criminal Law to exclude evidence of such transactions "(9) And when in England a person charged with an offence is called as a witness in his own defence in pursuance of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, he can only be cross-examined as to character subject to the provisions set out in that Act. It is sufficiently clear from this section that in criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is not relevant for the purpose of raising a general inference from such bad character that the accused person is likely to have committed the crime charged.(10)

---

(1) Field, Ev, 6th Ed., 200.

(2) Cf. s. 140, post

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 551; Wharton, Cr. Ev, § 60

(4) R v. Swendsen, 14 How. St. Tr, 596 "A man is not born a knave; there must be time to make him so, nor is he presently discovered after he becomes one" —ib., per Lord Holt.

(5) Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, 42 C, 957 (1915).

(6) S 54: R. v. Ram Saran, 8 A, 304, 314 (1886), Norton, Ev, 232, R v. Tuberfield, 10 Cox., 1; Best, Ev., § 257; as to evidence in rebuttal, see Taylor, Ev, § 352; Best, Ev., § 261, 91; the subject is fully considered in R. v. Rowton, 34 L. J. M. C, 57.

(7) v post; and see also Taylor, Ev, § 352; to this general rule the Statute 32 & 33 Vic, cap 99, s 11, which allows evidence of previous convictions to be given in order to prove guilty knowledge in cases of receiving stolen goods, forms an exception; Taylor, Ev, § 353; see R v. Kartick Chunder, 14 C., 721 (1887).

(8) R. v. Gopal Thakoor, 6 W R., Cr., 72 (1866); R v. Behary Dosadh, 7 W. R., Cr (1867), R. v. Phoolchand, 8 W. R., Cr, 11 (1867); R. v. Bykunt Nath Banerjee, 10 W. R, Cr., 17 (1868). [Evidence of character and previous conduct of a prisoner, being matters of prejudice and not direct evidence of facts relevant to the charge against the prisoner, ought not to be allowed to go to the jury]; R. v Kalum Sheikh, 10 W. R., Cr, 39 (1868).

(9) Stephen's General View of the Criminal Law of England, pp 309, 310

(10) R. v. Alloomiya, 5 Bom. L. R., 805, 819 (1903); s c., 28 B., 129 (1903).

This section, as originally framed(1), allowed a previous conviction to be in all cases admissible in evidence against an accused person for the purpose of prejudicing him, and in so doing deliberately departed from the rule of English law already mentioned.(2) The framers of the Act gave as their reason for such departure that they were unable to see why a prisoner should not be prejudiced by such evidence if it was true (3) In consequence of the decision of the Full Bench in the case of R v. Kartick Chunder Das(4), the present section was amended by Act III of 1891, so as to bring it into more general accordance with the English law on the same subject.(5) And now a previous conviction is not admissible against an accused person under this section, except where evidence of bad character is relevant(6); i e, (a) when evidence of bad character is admissible to rebut evidence given of good character, for here the accused challenges or invites enquiry, and the reply of a previous conviction by the prosecution is fair and legitimate enough(7); and (b) where the fact of bad character is itself a fact in issue, namely, where the charge itself implies the bad character of the accused (8) But a previous conviction may be admissible otherwise than under this section Thus, firstly, a previous conviction is admissible in evidence in cases in which the accused is liable to enhanced punishment on account of having been previously convicted (9) Secondly, where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence, the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of section 14, ante, the previous conviction of such person is also a relevant fact. So it has been held that having regard to the character of the offence under s. 400 of the Penal Code (punishment for belonging to a gang of dacoits) previous commissions of dacoity are relevant under the fourteenth section, and

(1) The original section ran as follows —

In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has been previously convicted of any offence is relevant, but the fact that he has a bad character is irrelevant unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant Explanation—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue

(2) See R v Kartick Chunder, 14 C, 721 (1887) Notwithstanding the express provisions in the original section, the Calcutta High Court, in the earlier case of Roshun Dosadh v R, 5 C, 768 (1880), refused to allow a previous conviction to be given in evidence

(3) See First Report of the Select Committee on the Evidence Bill, p 239, cited in R v Kartick Chunder, supra at p. 729 It was apparently also considered that in such cases the matter had been reduced to legal certainty by the conviction, see R v Parbhudas, 11 Bom H C R, 90 (1874), R v Ram Saran, 8 A, 304, 314 (1886), but as pointed out in Norton, Ev, 231, the language of the original section was so wide as to include acts not relevant in any real sense of the word at all For what bearing would a previous conviction for theft have on a question of guilt on a charge of rape? And see I Phill, Ev, 606, 10th Ed; Best, Ev., § 259

(4) 14 C, 721 (1887). See as to the effect of this decision R v Naba Kumar, 1 C W N, 146, 148 (1897)

(5) Ib, s 14, ante Explanation (2) and Illust (b) must be considered in dealing with the effect of this amendment, which, while removing the latitude relating to the introduction of evidence of previous convictions which prevailed under this section as it originally stood, has yet not made such previous convictions wholly inadmissible, v post

(6) S 54 Explanation (2) cf the following earlier cases as to previous convictions R v Thakoordas Chootur, 7 W R, Cr 7 (1867), R v Phoolchand, 8 W. R, Cr, 11 (1867), R v Shiboo Mundle, 3 W R, Cr, 38 (1865), Roshun Dosadh v R, 5 C, 768 (1880)

(7) S 54, Norton, Ev, 232, in England previous conviction is allowed to be given in reply in certain cases only, Roscoe, Cr Ev, 13th Ed, 86, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 172, Steph Dig, Art 56

(8) S 54, Explanation (1), v. post

(9) See Cr Pr Code, s 310 [Notwithstanding anything in this section, evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence, if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, Act III of 1891, s 9]; Cr. Pr. Code, s. 221, Penal Code, s 75; Act VI of 1864, ss. 3, 4 (Whipping Act); Act V of 1869, Art. 117 (Indian Articles of War), Cr. Pr. Code, s. 511 (mode of proving previous convictions).

convictions previous to the time specified in the charge or to the framing of the charge are relevant under the second explanation to that section: aliter as to subsequent convictions.(1) Thirdly, a previous conviction may be admissible as a fact in issue or relevant otherwise than under section 14 or 54, as for example, under the eighth section as showing motive.(2) In a recent case in the Calcutta High Court it was said that proof of previous convictions must always be strict (3) And it was held that a register produced from the Central Bureau and purporting to contain prisoner's thumb-impressions and descriptive rolls and list of previous convictions was insufficient in the absence of evidence to show how it was made and lodged in the Central Bureau.

Where, with a view of raising a presumption of innocence, witnesses to good character are called by the defence, the prosecution may rebut this presumption either by cross-examining these witnesses(4) as to particular facts or as to the grounds of their belief, or by calling separate witnesses to prove the bad character of the accused, though such evidence is seldom resorted to in English practice.(5) And in England when a prisoner elects to give evidence on his own behalf under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, he may be cross-examined as to character if he has been put forward as a man whose character is unblemished.(6)

The present section must be read in conjunction with the Explanation to section 55, post. The words " unless evidence has been given " are ambiguous. They may refer either to the evidence of witnesses called for the defence or to evidence elicited in cross-examination from the witnesses for the prosecution.(7)

Explanations. The section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.(8) The first Explanation aims at that class of cases in which the charge itself implies the bad character of the accused.(9) Under the second Explanation a previous conviction is made relevant as evidence of bad character. Therefore, whenever evidence of bad character is admissible, a previous conviction will be admissible, namely, to rebut evidence which has been given of good character, and in cases under the preceding Explanation where the bad character is itself a fact in issue.(10) It has been

---

(1) R v Naba Kumar, 1 C W N, 146 (1897), s 14, Explanation (2) and Illust (b) [added by Act III of 1891, s. 1], see p. 192, ante, and note (5), p 455, supra For recent case where previous conviction was taken into consideration in awarding punishment see Emperor v Ismail Ali Bhai, 39 B, 326 (1915).

(2) S. 43, ante; see Illustrations (e) and (f); it cannot be said that these two illustrations are exhaustive, and that in no other cases except those mentioned can a previous conviction be relevant; this is shown by Explanation (2) to s. 14; R v. Naba Kumar, 1 C. W N., 146, 149 (1897)

(3) Emperor v. Sheikh Abdul, 43 C., 1128 (1916).

(4) S. 140, post; Taylor, Ev, § 352

(5) Taylor, Ev., § 352; though in Best, Ev., § 262, criticising this practice, it is said that witnesses to the characters of parties are in general treated with great indulgence—perhaps too much.

(6) R v. Hollamby (1908), C. C. C., v 149, p. 168.

(7) It was held upon the repealed Statute 14 and 15 Vic, c 19, that if a prisoner's counsel elicited, on cross-examination from the witnesses for the prosecution, that the prisoner has borne a good character, a previous conviction might be put in evidence against him in like manner as if witnesses to character had been called. R. v. Gadbury, 8 C. & P., 676; it was "giving evidence" within the meaning of that Act; R. v. Shrimpton, 2 Den C C. R, 319; Roscoe Cr. Ev, 12th Ed, 89

(8) Explanation (1).

(9) Norton, Ev., 233; Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 201; cf. Cr. Pr. Code, Ch VIII, relating to the taking of security from persons of bad character; under s. 117 ib. the fact that a person is a habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute. Rai Isri v. R, 23 C., 621 (1895) See as to Evidence of general repute; Rup Sing v. R, 1 All. L. J., 616 (1904). See also Best, Ev., § 258; and cf. Act XXVII of 1871 (Criminal Tribes), Alep Pramanick v R. (1906), 11 C. W. N., 413 & Chintaman Singh v. R. (1907), 35 C., 243

(10) v. ante, p. 452; the amended section clears up an obscurity which existed in the old section; see Norton, Ev., 232.

held that the character of the accused not being a fact in issue in the offence of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft punishable under section 401 of the Indian Penal Code, evidence of bad character whether by proof of previous conviction or otherwise is inadmissible.(1) But this decision has been questioned in a later case in which it was held that when in a case under section 401 of the Penal Code the other evidence sufficed to establish association for the purpose of habitually committing theft, then under section 14 of this Act evidence of previous conviction or of bad livelihood was admissible to prove the habit of such offences (2) And evidence of commission of offences other than dacoities brought against persons accused of belonging to a gang of dacoits, has been held to be evidence of bad character and as such excluded by this section (3) A charge under cl. (f), s 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, could not formerly be proved by general reputation, but there must be evidence of the facts charged (4) It is only in the case of a person who is an habitual offender and is called upon to furnish security for good behaviour that the fact of his being an habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute, for a provision of law which is in itself an exception to the general rules of Evidence must be only applied to the cases to which it is expressly confined.(5) Where a person is called upon to furnish security to keep the peace, evidence of general repute cannot be made use of to show that such person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity. Upon the objection that the evidence given before a Magistrate was not that of "general repute," but of specific acts spoken to by witnesses from mere mitted by a person, the action taken against him by way of prosecution is one of a punitive character; but when the object of the Legislature is simply to provide preventive measures, evidence of repute, though hearsay, is admissible (7) The second Explanation does not say that a previous conviction is never relevant unless evidence of bad character is relevant or is itself a fact in issue Evidence that the accused had been previously convicted of the same offence is admissible to show guilty knowledge or intention.(8)

Character of party prosecuting—See Notes to section 155, clause ,4 post

55. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive is relevant. Character as affecting damages.

Explanation :—In sections 52, 53, 54 and 55, the word "character" includes both reputation and disposition; but

(1) Mankura Parsi v R, 27 C, 139 (1899), s c, 4 C W N, 957, sub-nom Dwarka Bunia v R In this case the previous convictions were rejected as evidence of bad character, it does not appear to have been argued or considered whether such convictions were admissible under s 14 (as was held in R v Naba Patnaik, I C W N, 146 (1897), which was a trial for the commission of a cognate offence under s 400 of the Penal Code), or under other sections of the Act, v ante

(2) Bhona v. R. (1911), 38 C, 408 & R v Naba Patnaik (1897), 1 C W N, 146

(3) The Public Prosecutor v Bonigiri Pottigadu (1908), 32 Mad, 179

(4) Kalai Haldar v R, 29 C, 779 (1901), aliter now.

(5) Muthu Pillai v R (1910), 34 M, 255

(6) R v Bidhyapati 25 A 273 (1903)

(7) R v Raoji Fulchand, 6 Bom L R., 34 (1903)

(8) R v Alloomiya, 5 Bom L. R., 805 819, 821 (1903), see ss 14, 15 ante except as provided in section 54 evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.

Principle.—In suits in which damages are claimed, the amount of the damages is a fact in issue.(2) Therefore, if the character of the plaintiff is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, such character becomes relevant for the purpose of the determination of that fact in issue. As to the reasons for the definition given of the term 'character,' see Notes post

s 3 (Relevant.)
s 12 (Facts tending to determine the amount of damages)
s. 140 (Witnesses to character.)

Steph., Dig., Art, 57, Taylor, Ev., §§ 356—362, Mayne on Damages, 8th Ed, 536, 572, 579, 582, 586, Roscoe, N. P. Ev., 87, Wharton, Ev., §§ 47—56; Wigmore, Ev., § 1608, et seq

COMMENTARY.

Character as affecting damages.

In a suit for damages, evidence of the character of the plaintiff, if it affects (that is, increases or diminishes) (3) the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant under this section According to the section, the person whose character is made relevant is the person who is to receive the damages

he previous general character of the wife or admissible in a petition by the husband for or in an action by the father for seduction.
idence of general bad character admissible in mitigation of damages, but the defendant may even prove particular acts of immorality or indecorum.(4) But in such a suit for damages for adultery or seduction, evidence of the character of the wife or daughter will not be admissible under the present, though perhaps it may be so under the twelfth section of this act, because in such cases the character is that of a third person and the person who is to receive the damages is not the person whose character would affect the amount of damages to be recovered.(5) Character may be admissible in mitigation of damages, in the following, amongst other, cases: (a) Breach of promise of marriage.(6) Promises must be kept to persons of bad character as well as to those of good character. But when a woman claims that her ich of promise, o character to shocked. (b) n for defamation, evidence impeaching the plaintiff's previous general character, and showing that at the time of the publication, he laboured under a general suspicion

(1) The words and figures in brackets in the explanation to this section were inserted by Act III of 1891, s. 7

(2) v. ante

(3) Norton, Ev., 233; Taylor, Ev., § 356.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 356, and cases there cited Compensation in such cases is in reality sought for the pain which the defendant has caused the plaintiff to suffer by disgracing the latter's family and ruining his domestic happiness. The damages should therefore be commensurate with this pain, which must vary according as the character of wife or daughter had been previously unblemished or otherwise. Ib

(5) Field, Ev., 6th Ed, 202 "The person whose character is in question is therein assumed to be the same as the person who claims damages."

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 358: Wharton, Ev., § 52.

defendant, is admishowever, to be now had before the pub-
to whether report has credited him with having committed the particular offence laid to his door by the defendant. "In every case of slander or libel the defendant, without justifying that the words published were true in substance and in fact, may say that whether they were or not the plaintiff had a bad reputation."(2) The English rule, as gathered from the case-law, has been stated to be that, in civil cases the fact that a person's general reputation is bad, may, it seems, be given in evidence in reduction of damages; but evidence of rumours that his reputation was bad, and evidence of particular facts showing that his disposition was bad, cannot be given in evidence.(3) And it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that evidence of bad character is admissible in mitigation of damages but that evidence of suspicions or rumours of bad character is not (4) The plaintiff's general character is in issue in this section and the defendant may show that the plaintiff's reputation has sustained no injury, because he had no reputation to lose. (c) Petition for damages for adultery The husband's general character for infidelity may be proved, for in such a case he can hardly complain of the loss of that society upon which he has himself placed so little value (5)

In aggravation of damages the plaintiff cannot, according to the English rule, give evidence of general good character, unless counter-proof has been first offered by the defendant, for until the contrary appear, the presumption of law is already in his favour (6)

Meaning of the word "character."

The Act includes in the term 'character' both reputation and disposition and thus departs from the Engish law, according to which character is confined to reputation only The subject is considered at length in R. v. Rowton (7) The Indian Legislature has adopted the opinion of Erle, C J., and Willes, J., in that case, who held that evidence of character extended to disposition as well as reputation, and of Taylor(8), who says that the ruling of the majority in this case rests more upon authority than reason (9)

"Reputation"

There is a distinction between 'character' and 'reputation', 'character' signifying the reality, and reputation what merely is reported, or understood from report to be the reality about a person (10) 'Reputation' means what is thought of a person by others, and is constituted by public opinion; it is the general credit which a man has obtained in that opinion.(11) When a man swears that another has a good character in this sense, he means that he has heard many people, though he does not particularly recollect what people

---

(1) See Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed, 176, 177, Scott v Sampson, L R, 8 Q B D, 491; Wood v Durham, 21 Q B D, 501, Field, Ev, 356, ib, 6th Ed, 202

(2) Per Manisty, J, in Wood v Earl of Durham (1888), 21 Q B D, 505 & Taylor, § 359

(3) Steph Dig, Art 57, see Scott v Sampson, L R, 8 Q B D, 491, in which all the older cases are examined in the judgment of Cave, J, Wharton, Ev, § 53, followed in Woods v. Cox (1888), 4 Times L. R, 655.

(4) The Englishman, Ltd. v Lajpat Rai (1910), 37 C, 760.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 358

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 362, Jones v James, 18 L T N. S, 243, Narracott v Narracott, 33 L J P & M, 61, in Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 203, it is suggested that it may be that this rule will be affected by the above section

(7) 1 L & C, 520, 10 Cox, 25

(8) Taylor, Ev, § 350, see Steph Dig, pp 78, 179

(9) Norton, Ev, 334

(10) Per Durfee, C J, in State v Wilson, 15 R I, 180, 1 All, 415 (Amer); see Wigmore, Ev, § 1608, et seq

(11) Taylor, Ev, § 350, Wharton, Ev, § 49 "It is possible for a man to have a fair reputation who has not in reality a good character, although men of really good character are not likely to have a bad reputation" Crabb's Synonyms See Rai Isri v R, 23 C, 621 (1895)

except as provided in section 54 evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.

Principle.—In suits in which damages are claimed, the amount of the damages is a fact in issue.(2) Therefore, if the character of the plaintiff is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, such character becomes relevant for the purpose of the determination of that fact in issue. As to the reasons for the definition given of the term 'character,' see Notes post

s 3 (Relevant.)
s. 12 (Facts tending to determine the amount of damages)
s. 140 (Witnesses to character.)

Steph, Dig., Art, 57; Taylor, Ev., §§ 356—362; Mayne on Damages, 8th Ed., 536, 572, 579, 582, 586, Roscoe, N P. Ev, 87, Wharton, Ev., §§ 47—56, Wigmore, Ev., § 1608, et seq

COMMENTARY.

Character as affecting damages

In a suit for damages, evidence of the character of the plaintiff, if it affects (that is, increases or diminishes) (3) the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant under this section. According to the section, the person whose character is made relevant is the person who is to receive the damages [illegible] he previous general character of the wife or admissible in a petition by the husband for or in an action by the father for seduction And in these cases not only is evidence of general bad character admissible in mitigation of damages, but the defendant may even prove particular acts of immorality or indecorum.(4) But in such a suit for damages for adultery or seduction, evidence of the character of the wife or daughter will not be admissible under the present, though perhaps it may be so under the twelfth section of this act, because in such cases the character is that of a third person and the person who is to receive the damages is not the person whose character would affect the amount of damages to be recovered.(5) Character may be admissible in mitigation of damages, in the following, amongst other, cases: (a) Breach of promise of marriage (6) Promises must be kept to persons of bad character as well as to those of good character. But when a woman claims that her character has been damaged, and her feelings crushed by such breach of promise, then in mitigation of damages it may be shown that she had no character to be hurt by the breach and no feelings that would be particularly shocked. (b) Defamation. It has been much discussed, whether, in an action for defamation, evidence impeaching the plaintiff's previous general character, and showing that at the time of the publication, he laboured under a general suspicion

(1) The words and figures in brackets in the explanation to this section were inserted by Act III of 1891, s. 7.

(2) v ante.

(3) Norton, Ev, 233; Taylor, Ev., § 356

(4) Taylor, Ev, § 356, and cases there cited Compensation in such cases is in reality sought for the pain which the defendant has caused the plaintiff to suffer by disgracing the latter's family and ruining his domestic happiness The damages should therefore be commensurate with this pain, which must vary according as the character of wife or daughter had been previously unblemished or otherwise Ib

(5) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 202. "The person whose character is in question is therein assumed to be the same as the person who claims damages"

(6) Taylor, Ev, § 358; Wharton, Ev., § 52.

speak well of him, though he does not recollect all that they said.(1) One consequence of the view of the subject taken by English law is "that a witness may with perfect truth swear that a man, who to his knowledge has been a receiver of stolen goods for years, has an excellent character for honesty, if he has had the good luck to conceal his crimes from his neighbours. It is the essence of successful hypocrisy to combine a good reputation with a bad disposition, and according to R. v. Rowton the reputation is the important matter. The case is seldom if ever acted upon in practice. The question always put to a witness to character is,—What is the prisoner's character for honesty, morality or humanity? as the case may be: nor is the witness ever warned that he is to confine his evidence to the prisoner's reputation. It would be no easy matter to make the common run of witnesses understand the distinction." (2)

"Disposition."

'Disposition' comprehends the springs and motives of actions, is permanent and settled, and respects the whole frame and texture of the mind.(3) When a man swears that another has a good character in this sense, he gives the result of his own personal experience and observation or his own individual opinion of the prisoner's character, as is done by a master who is asked by another for the character of his servant.(4) From this section it thus appears that there are two forms in which a question as to character may be put to a witness. So if an accused be charged with theft a witness to character might be asked either—What was the general reputation of the accused for honesty? or he might be asked—Was the accused generally of an honest disposition? These two questions differ very widely. The witness would answer one from what was generally known about the accused in the neighbourhood where he lived, but he would, or might, answer the second from his own special knowledge of the accused.(5)

Both must be general.

In either case evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition. Both lie in the general habit of the man rather than in particular acts or manifestations. When it is said that the reputation must be general, it is meant "that the community as a whole must be agreed on this opinion in order that it may be regarded as a reputation. If the estimates vary and public opinion has not reached the stage of definite harmony, the opinion cannot be treated as sufficiently trustworthy. On the other hand it must be impossible to exact unanimity, for there are always dissenters. To define precisely that quality of public opinion thus commonly described as general is therefore a difficult thing. . . . . there is on this subject often an attempt at nicety of phrase which amounts in effect to mere quibbling, because the witness will not ordinarily appreciate the discriminations. Such requirements of definition should be avoided as unprofitable."(6) Where evidence of character is offered, it must be confined, to general character; evidence of particular acts, as of honesty, benevolence, or the like, are not receivable. "For, although the common reputation in which a person is held in society may be undeserved and the evidence, in support of it must, from its very nature, be indefinite, some inference varying in degree according to circumstances, may still fairly be drawn from it; since it is not probable that a man who has uniformly sustained a character for honesty or humanity will forfeit that character by the commission of a dishonest or a cruel act. But the mere proof of isolated facts can afford no such presumption. 'None are all evil'

(1) Steph. Dig., p. 181.
(2) Steph. Dig., p. 179.
(3) Field, Ev., 357, citing Crabb's Synonymes, ib., 6th Ed., 203.
(4) Taylor, Ev., § 350.
(5) Markby, Ev., 45, 46. In the leading case, R. v. Rowton, 1 L. & C., 520, supra, there was as already stated, a difference of opinion amongst the Judges as to which of these two was the proper form of question; strong reasons are given in favour of both, and no doubt this is why the Act admits both, ib.
(6) Wigmore, Ev., § 1612.

and the most consummate villain may be able to prove, that on some occasion he has acted with humanity, fairness or honour,"(1) Negative evidence such as "I never heard anything against the character of the man" is cogent evidence of good character, because a man's character is not talked about, till there is some fault to be found with it (2) The words and figures inserted in the Explanation by Act III of 1891 were so inserted because by section 54, in certain cases, a previous conviction which is a particular act by which character is shown, is made admissible And further, particular acts may be relevant when the bad character is itself a fact in issue (3)

---

(1) Ib., § 351

(2) R v Rowton, 1 L & C, 520, 535, 536, Wigmore Ev, § 1614

(3) v ante, notes to ss 53, 54

PART II.

ON PROOF.

One of the main features in the Act consists in the distinction drawn by it between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving facts(1), which is effected by the evidence of witnesses, inspection, presumptions and judicial notice and which is subject to a few exceptions, generally the same in civil and criminal cases. Its first part deals with the relevancy of facts or with the answer to the question 'what facts may you prove?' while the present part proceeds to enact rules as to the manner in which a fact, when relevant, is to be proved.(2) "This introduces the question of proof. It is obvious that, whether an alleged fact is a fact in issue or a collateral fact, the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist; and it is also obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceeding in which its existence is to be determined. The question is whether A wrote a letter. The letter may have contained the terms of a contract. It may have been a libel. It may have constituted the motive for the commission of a crime by B It may supply proof of an alibi in favour of A It may be an admission or a confession of crime; but whatever may be the relation of the fact to the proceedings, the Court cannot act upon it unless it believes that A did write the letter, and that belief must obviously be produced, in each of the cases mentioned, by the same or similar means. If, for instance, the Court requires the production of the original when the writing of the letter is a crime, there can be no reason why it should be satisfied with a copy when the writing of the letter is a motive for a crime. In short, the way in which a fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact and not on the relation of the fac[illegible] ...trument by which the Court is convinced of a fac[illegible]; being either direct or circumstantial. [illegible] If the distinction is that direct evidence establishes a fact in issue, whereas circumstantial evidence establishes a collateral fact, evidence is classified, not with reference to its essential qualities, but with reference to the use to which it is put, as if paper were to be defined, not by reference to its component elements, but as being used for writing or for printing We have shown that the mode in which a fact must be proved, depends on its nature, and not on the use to be made of it. Evidence, therefore, should be defined, not with reference to the nature of the fact which it is to prove, but with reference to its own nature. Sometimes the distinction is stated thus: direct evidence is a statement of what a man has actually seen or heard. Circumstantial evidence is something from which facts in issue are to be inferred. If the phrase is thus used, the word evidence in the two phrases (direct evidence and circumstantial evidence) opposed to each other, has two different meanings. In the first, it means testimony; in the second, it means a fact which is to serve as the foundation for an inference. It would indeed be quite correct, if this view is taken, to say circumstantial evidence must be proved by direct evidence. This would be a most clumsy mode of expression, but it shows the ambiguity of the word 'evidence,' which means either—(a) words spoken or things produced in order to convince the Court of the existence of facts; or (b) facts of which the Court is so convinced which suggest some inference as to other facts. We use the word 'evidence' in the first of these senses only, and so used it may be reduced to three heads:—(a) oral evidence, (b) documentary evidence, (c) material evidence."(1)

(1) See Proceedings in Council on the Evidence Bill, 31st March, 1871.

(2) Draft Report of the Select Committee on the Evidence Bill (Gazette of India, July 1, 1871).

In the first place, the fact to be proved may be one of so much notoriety that the Court will take judicial notice of it; or it may be admitted by the parties. In either of these cases no evidence of its existence need be given. Chapter III, which relates to judicial notice, disposes of this subject. It is taken in part from Act II of 1855, in part from the Commissioner's draft bill, and in part from the Law of England If may be so given by either oral, or document proceeds in Chapters IV and V to deal wit kinds of evidence

With regard to oral evidence, it is provided that it must in all cases whatever, whether the fact to be proved is a fact in issue or collateral fact, be direct. That is to say, if the fact to be proved is one that could be seen, it must be proved by some one who says he saw it If it could be heard, by some one who says he heard it, and so with the other senses It is also provided that, if the fact to be proved is the opinion of a living and producible person, or the grounds on which such opinion is held, it must be proved by the person who holds that opinion on those grounds If, however, the fact to be proved is the opinion of an expert who cannot be called (which is the case in the majority of cases in this country), and if such opinion has been expressed in any published treatise, it may be proved by the production of the treatise. This provision taken in connection with the provisions on relevancy contained in Chapter II, sets the whole doctrine of hearsay in a perfectly plain light, for their joint effect is this —

(a) the sayings and doings of third persons are, as a rule, irrelevant, so that no proof of them can be admitted;

(b) in some excepted cases they are relevant;

(c) every act done, or word spoken, which is relevant on any ground, must (if proved by oral evidence) be proved by some one who saw it with his eyes, or heard it with his own ears

With regard to the Chapters which relate to the proof of facts by documentary evidence, and the cases in which secondary evidence may be admitted, the Act has followed with few alterations, the previously existing law. The general rule is that primary evidence must, if possible, be given, subject to certain exceptions in favour of 'public documents.' Chapter V further contains certain presumptions, which in almost every instance will be true—as to the genuineness of certified copies, gazettes, books purporting to be published at particular places, copies of depositions, etc.(2) Two sets of presumptions will sometimes apply to the same document. For instance, what purports to produced. It must, by section 76, record of evidence. By section 80 e circumstances under which it was taken, e g., that it was read over to the witness in a language which he understood, must be presumed to be true (3) Lastly, Chapter VI deals with certain cases in which writings are exclusive evidence of the matters to which they relate.(4)

---

(1) Draft Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, July 1, 1871); see as to material evidence, ante, pp 108, 109.

(2) Draft Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, July 1, 1871).

(3) Steph. Introd, 170, 171.

(4) Ib.

The rules with regard to proof may be thus summarised

(a) Judicial notice; facts admitted.—Certain facts are so notorious in themselves, or are stated in so authentic a manner in well-known and accessible publications, that they require no proof. The Court, if it does not know them, can inform itself upon them without formally taking evidence. These facts are said to be judicially noticed. Further, facts which are admitted need not be proved. (b) Oral evidence All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence which must, in all cases, be direct. That is, it must consist of a declaration by the witness that he perceived by his own senses the fact to which he testifies. (c) Documents. The contents of documents must be proved either by the production of the document, which is called primary evidence, or by copies or oral accounts of the contents, which are called secondary evidence. Primary evidence is required, as a rule, but this is subject to seven important exceptions in which secondary evidence may be given. The most important of these are (a) cases in which the document is in the possession of the adverse party, in which case the adverse party must in general (though there are several exceptions) have notice to produce the document before secondary evidence of it can be given; and (b) cases in which certified copies of public documents are admissible in place of the documents themselves. (d) Presumptions as to documents. Many classes of documents which are defined in the Act are presumed to be what they purport to be, but this presumption is liable to be rebutted. (e) Writings when exclusive evidence. When a contract, grant, or other disposition of property is reduced to writing, the writing itself, or secondary evidence of its contents, is not only the best, but is the only admissible evidence of the matter which it contains. It cannot be varied by oral evidence, except in certain specified cases.

It is necessary in applying these general doctrines in practice to go into considerable detail, and to introduce provisos, exceptions, and qualifications which are mentioned in the following sections.(1)

(1) Steph Introd, 170, 171.

CHAPTER III.

FACTS WHICH NEED NOT BE PROVED.

ALL facts in issue and relevant facts must, as a general rule, be proved by evidence, that is, by the statements of witnesses, admissions or confessions of parties and production of documents (1) To this general rule there are two exceptions which are dealt with by this chapter, viz, (a) facts judicially noticeable, (b) facts admitted Neither of these classes of facts need be proved.(2)

Facts judicially noticeable.

Of the private and peculiar facts, on which the cause depends, the Judge is (as in trial by jury, the jury are) bound to discard all previous knowledge; but it is in the nature of things that many general subjects to which an advocate calls attention should be of so universal a notoriety as to need no proof.(3) Certain facts are so notorious in themselves, or are stated in so authentic a manner in well-known and accessible publications, that they require no proof The Court, if it does not known them, can inform itself upon them without formally taking evidence These facts are said to be judicially noticed (4) 'Universal notoriety' is a term which is vague and scarcely susceptible of definition "It must depend upon many circumstances, in one case perhaps upon the extent upon ated"

"Still more must the limits vary (in reality, according to the extent of knowledge and pr who had made chemistry his study, would n of scientific chemists; one to whom a foreign language was familiar, would read a document without translations, or comments; one who had resided in India, of course Other Judges which they could rely, t ts on which were it not for the learning of the Judge, any quantity of evidence would fail of supplying the defect."(5) The list of matters made judicially noticeable by section 57 is not complete.(6) It may be doubted whether an absolutely complete list could be formed, as it is practically impossible to enumerate everything which is so notorious in itself, or so distinctly recorded by public authority, that it would be superfluous to prove it (7)

Facts admitted

The English Courts take judicial notice of numerous facts, which it is therefore unnecessary to prove Theoretically, all facts which are not judicially noticed must be proved; but there is an increasing tendency on the part of Judges to import into cases heard by them their own general knowledge of matters which occur in daily life.(8)

These need not be proved (9) And obviously so, for a Court has to try the questions on which the parties are at issue not those on which they are

(1) See p 112, ante

(2) Ss. 56, 58

(3) Gresley, Ev, 395, Wharton, Ev, § 276, et seq

(4) Steph. Introd, 170. See Wigmore, Ev, § 2565.

(5) Gresley, Ev., 396, 395; and v. passim, ib, 395—420

(6) v. notes to s 57, post.

(7) Steph. Dig, p 179

(8) Powell, Ev, 9th Ed., 146 In San Hla Baw v Mikkhoron, 45 I C, 734; s c, 9 L B R, 160: it was held that the judge was justified in alluding to his experience of the plaintiff's litigation in his Court agreed.(1) Facts may be so admitted (a) by agreement at the hearing, or (b) before the hearing, or (c) by the pleadings.(2)

(9) S 58, post.

(a & b). It often happens that it is advisable for each party to waive the necessity of proof, and to admit certain facts insisted upon by the other, but insufficiently proved by the pleadings. This may be either for the purpose of mutually avoiding the expense and delay of a commission for examining witnesses, or for the sake of respectively purchasing advantages by concessions, or of saving some expense to the estate; or there may be a mixture of these and other motives.(3) Formal proof of a document, even when it is required to be proved in a certain way, may be waived by the party whose interest it may affect, although such waiver does not affect the legal character of the document or its validity.(4) There is no provision in the Indian Law of Procedure as in England, for enabling one party in a suit to call upon the other to admit a fact, other than the genuineness of a document(5), and in the event of the other party not doing so to throw upon him the expense of the proof. Some such provision might be a useful addition to the Code, and a clause to this effect was proposed when the Code of 1877 was drafted. It was, however, probably, considered, to be too much in advance of the general intelligence; and section 117 of the Code now provides that at the first hearing the Court shall ascertain from the parties what facts they respectively admit or deny.(6) There is, however, nothing to prevent such a notice being given. And if the parties either upon such notice, or without such notice, agree in writing to admit a fact, the latter need not be proved.(7) If the party to whom such a notice is given does not agree to admit the fact in question, the Court may possibly, where the circumstances so warrant, take that matter into consideration in dealing with the costs of the suit or application.

(c). The function of admissions made on the pleadings is to limit the issues and therewith the scope of the evidence admissible.(8) But the effect given in the English Courts to admissions on the pleadings has always been greater than that given to admissions in the less technical pleadings in the Courts in India.(9) The function of pleadings in narrowing the issues and limiting the number of facts which it is necessary to prove is, in India, mainly fulfilled by the procedure which regulates the settlement of issues.(10) Where, however, by any rule of pleading in force at the time, a fact is deemed to be admitted by the pleadings, it is unnecessary to prove such fact.(11) The Court may, however, in all these cases, in its discretion, require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions.(12)

Fact judicially noticeable need not be proved.

56. No fact of which the Court will take judicial notice need be proved.

s. 3 ("Fact.") s. 3 ("Court.") s. 3 ("Proved.") Principle.—See Introduction, ante.

COMMENTARY.

"Need not be proved."

According to the definition contained in the third section "a fact is said to be proved when after considering the matters before it, the Court believes it to exist." Such matters are those brought before the Court by the parties

(1) Burjorji Cursetji v. Munchorji Kuverji, 5 B, 152 (1880).
(2) S 58, post
(3) Gresley, Ev, 47
(4) Baijnath Singh v. Mt Biraj Koer, 2 Pat, 52 (1923).
(5) As to which, see Civ. Pr. Code, s 129.
(6) Cunningham, Ev, 205.
(7) S. 58, post.
(8) Wills, Ev, 2nd Ed., 150.
(9) v notes to s. 58, post
(10) v. notes to s. 58, post.
(11) S. 58.
(12) Ib.

or otherwise appearing in the particular proceedings In the case of the facts dealt with by this section, the Judge's belief in their existence is induced by the general knowledge acquired otherwise than in such proceedings and independently of the action of the parties therein. This section and the last two paragraphs of the next come to this:—With regard to the facts enumerated in section 57, if their existence comes into question, the parties who assert the existence or the contrary need not in the first instance produce any evidence in support of their assertions They need only ask the Judge to say whether these facts exist or not, and if the Judge's own knowledge will not help him, then he must look the call upon the parties to is emancipated entirely gation of facts in general He may resort to any source of information which he finds handy, and which he thinks helps him. Thus, he might consult any book or obtain information from a bystander. Where there is a jury, not only the Judge, but the jury also, must be informed as to the existence or non-existence of any fact in question *In the cases mentioned in section 57, there*fore, the Judge must not only inform himself, but he must communicate his information to the jury(1), and when he relies on any document or book of reference under this section he should also inform the parties during the trial and so give them a chance to contradict its authority.(2)

Facts of which Court must take judicial notice.

57. The Court shall take judicial notice of the following facts:—

(1) All laws or rules having the force of law now or heretofore in force, or hereafter to be in force, in any part of British India.(3)

(2) All public Acts passed or hereafter to be passed by Parliament and all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament to be judicially noticed.(4)

(3) Articles of War for Her Majesty's Army or Navy.(5)

(4) The course of proceeding of Parliament(6) and of the Councils for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations established under the Indian Councils Act(7), or any other law for the time being relating thereto:

Explanation.—The word 'Parliament,' in clauses (2) and (4), includes—

(1) the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland;

(2) the Parliament of Great Britain;

(3) the Parliament of England;

---

(1) Markby's Evidence Act, 49. See generally as to Judicial Notice, Wharton, Ev, §§ 276–340.

(2) Weston v Peary Mohan Das, 40 C, 898 (1913), per Woodroffe, J, see Durga Prasad v Ram Doyal Chaudhuri, 38 C, 154 (1910).

(3) See Taylor, Ev, § 5.

(4) Taylor, Ev, §§ 7, 8, 1523

(5) Ib, § 5.

(6) Ib, §§ 5, 18

(7) Printed in the collection of Statutes relating to India.

(4) the Parliament of Scotland; and

(5) The Parliament of Ireland.

(5) The accession and the sign manual of the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland(1):

(6) All seals of which English Courts take judicial notice(2), the seals of all the Courts of British India, and of all Courts out of British India, established by the authority of the Governor-General or any Local Government in Council: the seals of Courts of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction and of Notaries Public, and all seals which any person is authorized to use by any Act of Parliament or other Act or Regulation having the force of law in British India:

(7) The accession to office, names, titles, functions and signatures of the persons filling for the time being any public office in any part of British India, if the fact of their appointment to such office is notified in the Gazette of India, or in the Official Gazette of any Local Government:

(8) The existence, title and national flag of every State or Sovereign recognized by the British Crown(3):

(9) The divisions of time, the geographical divisions of the world, and public festivals, fasts and holidays(4) notified in the Official Gazette:

(10) The territories under the dominion of the British Crown.(5):

(11) The commencement, continuance and termination of hostilities between the British Crown and any other State or body of persons(6):

12) The names of the members and officers of the Court, and of their deputies and subordinate officers and assistants, and also of all officers acting in execution of its process, and of all advocates, attorneys, proctors, vakils, pleaders and other persons authorized by law to appear or act before it:

(1) Taylor, Ev., § 14; Mighell v. Sultan of Johore, 1 Q. B. (1894), 149.

(2) Taylor, Ev., § 6, v. post.

(3) Taylor, Ev., § 5; Mighell v. Sultan of Johore, 1 Q. B. (1894), 161.

(4) Ib., § 16.

(5) Ib., § 17; Damodar Gordhan v. Deoram Kanji, 1 B., 404 (1876); Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partab, 2 A., 17 (1878).

(6) Taylor, Ev., § 18.

(13) The rule of the road [on land or at sea].(1)

In all these cases(2) and also on all matters of public history, literature, science or art, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference.

If the Court is called upon by any person to take judicial notice of any fact, it may refuse to do so unless and until such person produces any such book or document as it may consider necessary to enable it to do so.(3)

Principle.—See Introduction, ante, and Notes, post.

s 3 ("Fact")	s. 37 (Presumption as to books of reference.) s 3 ("Court")	s. 114 (The Court may presume the existence of certain facts.)
s 3 ("Proved.")

Wharton, Ev, §§ 276—340, Taylor, Ev, §§ 4—21; Steph, Dig., Art, 58; Best, Ev., §§ 253, 254, Phipson, Ev, 5th Ed., 11, Wills, Ev., 2nd Ed, 19—27, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 216—222, Roscoe, N P Ev, 80—84, Powell, Ev., 9th Ed, 146—149; Gresley, Ev, 395—420, Wigmore, Ev, § 2565, et seq.

COMMENTARY.

Judicial notice.

It has been pointed out(4) that the list given in this section of the facts of which the Court shall take judicial notice is far from complete, and that, "Anglo-Indian Courts take judicial notice of the ordinary course of nature(5) the meaning of English words(6) and all other matters which they are directed by any Act to notice(7), such as in Bengal, lists of landholders who have not [illegible] (Ben. Act IX of 1880, section 10); in Madras, bye-laws [illegible]

XXXVIII of 1920)."(8) It is submitted that since (as was pointed out with regard to the corresponding section of Act II of 1855(9) the section does not forbid the Courts to take notice of any facts other than those mentioned, the Courts may and will take judicial notice of, generally speaking, all those other facts, at least, of which English Courts, take judicial notice Thus, though the section does not expressly so provide, the Court here as in England will,

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 5, the words in brackets in s 57, para (13), were inserted by Act XVIII of 1872, s. 5

(2) Taylor, Ev, § 21; for an additional case see Act XIV of 1882, s 431 Now see Act V of 1908, s 84 and v post, Notes to section

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 21; Van Omeron v. Dowick, 2 Camp, 44.

(4) Whitley Stokes, Anglo-Indian Codes ii, 888, note.

(5) Taylor, Ev, § 16; e g, that a man is not the father of a child, where non-access is already proved until within six months of the woman's delivery Nor it is necessary to prove the course of the heavenly bodies, or the like, ib With respect to this criticism it may, however, be observed that some matters which might appear to have been omitted are dealt with by s 114 (presumptions), post; e g, the common course of natural events

(6) Ib; so in R. v. Woodward, 1 Moo. C C, 323, the Judges held that they were bound to notice that beans were a kind of pulse.

(7) So a Court must take judicial notice of the fact that a Foreign State has not been recognized by Her Majesty, or by the Governor General in Council, Civ. Pr. Code, Part IV, s 84 (2), 2nd Ed, p 349.

(8) Whitley Stokes, loc cit.

(9) R v Nabadwip Goswami, 1 B. L. R O Cr, at pp 27, 28 (1868)

it is apprehended, take judicial notice of matt . . . ings (1) An enlargement ance with that tendency of made.(2)

Clause (1). Under this provision by which the Courts are required to take judicial notice of all laws(3) or rules having the force of law, now or heretofore in force or thereafter to be in force, in any part of British India, notice will be taken of the Statute and Common Law and of all customs when settled by judicial determination or certified by proper authority to the Court, though not of all customs indiscriminately.(4) Thus in a recent case it was held by the Privy Council that the Mahomedan law of pre-emption has long been judicially recognized as existing among the Hindus of Bihar.(5) In other cases customs must ordinarily be proved. So while the Courts will take judicial notice of the general recognised principles of Hindu law, the Court will not, it has been said, take judicial notice of what the Hindu law is with regard to Hindu custom, which must always be proved.(6)

The judgment of the Privy Council in the case of the Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga(7) . . . ler to bring a case under any . . . indus generally, evidence mu . . . nt of fact the people subject to that general law, regulate their lives by it. Special customs may be pleaded by way of exception, which it is proper to prove by evidence of what is actually done But to put one who asserts a rule of law under the necessity of proving that in point of fact the community living under the system of which it forms part is acting upon it, or defeat him by assertions that it has not been universally accepted or acted upon, would go far to deny the existence of any general Hindu law, and to disregard the broad foundations which are common to all schools, though divergencies have grown out of them (8) As by the Bengal Civil Courts Act(9), the Legislature has enacted that the Mahomedan law shall be administered with reference to all questions regarding any religious usage or institution, the Courts must take judicial cognisance of the Mahomedan Ecclesiastical Law, and the parties are relieved of the necessity of proving that law by specific evidence (10) To ascertain the law, the Courts may refer to appropriate books or documents of reference. Sworn translations of little known Sanskrit works embodying Hindu law together with the futwâs, or opinions, of pundits versed in that law, have thus been referred to (11) With regard to law reports under the provisions of the Indian Law Reports Act(12), no Court is bound to hear cited, or to receive or treat as an authority binding on it, the report of any case decided by any of the High Courts (established under 24 & 25 Vict., cap. 104) on or after the day on which the Act came into force, other than a report published under the authority of

---

(1) Taylor, Ev, § 5.

(2) See Introduction, ante; Powell, Ev, 9th Ed, 146, and remarks in note, ante.

(3) See as to the law in force in India, Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 2, 3, 216, 220.

(4) Taylor, Ev., § 5; Goodeve, Ev, 310; as to mercantile custom, see Taylor, Ev., § 5, Sheikh Faizulla v. Ramkamal Mitter, 2 B L. R., O. C. J., 7, 9 (1868).

(5) Jadu Lal Sahu v Janki Koer, P. C. 39 C., 915 (1912), see 35 C., 575 (1908).

(6) Juggut Mohinee v. Dwarka Nath, 8 C, 592, 587 (1882); per Garth, C. J., the custom may be of such antiquity and so well known that the Court will take judicial notice of it. See Gokal Prasad v. Radho, 10 A, 374, 383 (1888); Jadu Lal Sahu v. Janki Koer (1908), 35 C., 575: as to the methods of ascertaining the general law, see Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 21 A., 412, 433 (1898)

(7) 12 Moo I. A, 437 (1868)

(8) Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 21 A., 412, 423, 424 (1898), P. C.

(9) Act XII of 1887, s. 37.

(10) R. v. Ramzan, 7 A, 461 (1885)

(11) Collector of Madura v Mootoo Ramalinga, 12 Moo I A., 397 (1868), see the penultimate paragraph of s 57, [illegible] post.

(12) Act XVIII of 1875, s 3

the Governor-General in Council But the Act does not prevent a High Court from looking at an unreported judgment of other Judges of the same Court (1)

Statutes are either public or private. Public Statutes apply to the whole community, and are noticed judicially, though not formally set forth by a party claiming an advantage under them They require no proof, being supposed to exist in the memories of all, though for certainty of recollection, reference may be had to a printed copy Private or local and personal Acts operate upon particular persons and private concerns only. The Courts were formerly not bound to judicially notice them, unless as was customary, a clause was inserted that they should be so noticed The effect of this clause was to dispense with the necessity of pleading the Act specially. Since, however, the commencement of the year 1851 this clause has been omitted, the Legislature having enacted that every Act made after that date shall be deemed a public Act and be judicially noticed as such, unless the contrary be expressly declared (2) As to the presumptions which exist in the case of Gazettes, newspapers and private Acts of Parliament, see section 81, post Clause (2).

The Courts must judicially notice the Articles of War for His Majesty's Army or Navy The Articles of War for the Government of the Native officers, soldiers and other persons in His V of 1869. With regard to the whether in the naval, marine or —that is, the militia, the yeoma forces, see note below.(3) Clause (3).

The course of proceeding of Parliament and of the Indian Councils is also the subject of judicial notice under this Act The course of proceeding of Parliament may be proved by the
to be printed by order of Governm that the Courts will notice the law and course of proceedings of each stated days of general political el of the Legislature, and, in short, " all public matters which affect the Government of the country."(6) So also both English and Indian tribunals notice the accession (as also in the case of English Courts, the demise) of the Sovereign(7), the Royal sign manual and matters stated under it (8) Clauses (4) and (5).

"The English Courts take judicial notice of the following seals:—The great Seal of the United Kingdom, and the Great Seals of England, Ireland and Scotland respectively, the Queen's Privy Seal and Privy Signet, whether in England, Ireland, or Scotland, the Wafer Great Seal, and the Wafer Privy Seal, framed under the Crown Office Act, 1877; the Seal, and Privy Seal of the Duchy of Lancaster; the Seal and the Privy Seal of the Duchy of Cornwall; the seals of the old superior Courts of Justice; and of the Supreme Court, and its several divisions; the seals of the old High Court of Admiralty, whether for England or Ireland; of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, and of the Court of the Vice-Warden of the Stannaries; the seals of all Courts con- Clause (6).

(1) Mahomed Ali v. Nazar Ali, 28 C, 289 (1901).

(2) Taylor, Ev, §§ 1523, 5.

(3) Taylor, Ev, § 5, and authorities there cited.

(4) The Englishman, Ltd. v. Lajpat Rai (1910), 37 C., 760.

(5) Ib, as to proof of the proceedings of the Legislatures, see s 78, cl. (2), post.

(6) Ib, § 18; Taylor v. Barclay, 2 Sim., 221.

(7) Taylor, Ev, § 18

(8) Ib, § 14; Mighell v. Sultan of Johore, 1 Q B. (1894), 149 office of the Royal Courts of Justice, and of its several departments, of the Principal Registry, and of the several District Registries of the Supreme Court of judicature; of the Principal Registry, and of the several District Registries of the old Court of Probate in England and of the present Court of Probate in Ireland; of the old and new Courts of Bankruptcy; of the Insolvent Debtor's Court, now abolished; of the Court of Bankruptcy and Insolvency in Ireland (which since the 6th of August 1872, has been called 'The Court of Bankruptcy in Ireland'), of the Landed Estates Court, Ireland; of the Record of Title Office of that Court; and of the County Courts; Courts of law also judicially notice the seal of the Corporation of London Various Statutes(1) render different other seals admissible in evidence without proof of their genuineness "(2) Many bodies are by particular Statutes created corporations and given a seal, for instance County Councils, yet in each such case the seal must be formally proved in the absence of statutory provision that judicial notice shall be taken of it (3) According to English law, the seal of a foreign or colonial Notary Public will not generally be judicially noticed, although such a person is an officer recognised by the whole commercial world (4) The present clause, however, draws no distinction between domestic and foreign Notaries Public. And so the official seal of a British Notary Public has been judicially recognised (5) The other seals of which Indian Courts are required to take judicial notice will be found mentioned in this clause. They will not, however, take notice of any seal which is not distinctly legible.(6) In Kristo Nath Koondoo v. T. F Brown(7), a registered power of attorney was admitted under section 57 of this Act without proof, the Registering Officer being held to be a Court under the third section of the Act. But this decision has been dissented from in a later case, in which it was pointed out that mere registration of a document is not in itself sufficient proof of its execution.(8) Clause (7). The provisions of this clause are in advance of, and more extensive than those of the English law(9), according to which it has been said to be doubtful whether the Courts would recognise the signatures of the Lords of the Treasury to their official letters (10) So the Court, prior to the passing of this Act, took judicial notice of the fact that a person was a Justice of the Peace(11), and of the signature of a jailor under the 16th section, Act XV of 1869 (Prisoners' Testimony Act) (12) But this clause requires that the facts of the appointment to office be notified in the Gazette. So where the Court was asked to presume that A was Kazi or Sudder Ameen of Chittagong in 1820, it was said—" there is no evidence that any person named A held such appointment in July 1820 We think that we cannot take judicial notice of this fact under the seventh clause, section 57 of the Evidence Act, for there is nothing to show that A was gazetted to the appointment of Sudder Ameen in or about that year. The Gazette of India was not in existence, and was not introduced until Act XXXI

(1) See Taylor, Ev., § 6, where these Statutes will be found collected.

(2) Ib., § 6

(3) Ib., § 14

(4) Ib., there have been decisions to a contrary effect, ib., a distinction must be drawn between cases of judicial notice of seals and those in which (whether his seal be or be not noticeable) the powers of the Notary Public with respect to the certification of documents are in question So according to the law of England, the mere production of the certificate of a Notary Public stating that a deed had been executed before him would not in any way dispense with the proper evidence of the execution of the deed. Nye v. Macdonald, L. R., P. C., 331, 343.

(5) In the goods of Henderson, 22 C. 491, 494 (1895); and see cases cited in s. 82, post.

(6) Jakir Ali v. Raj Chunder, 10 C. L. R., 469, 476 (1882)

(7) 14 C., 176, 180 (1886).

(8) Salimatul Fatima v. Koylashpati Narain, 17 C., 903 (1890).

(9) Field, Ev., 376; ib., 6th Ed., 2[illegible]

(10) Taylor, Ev., § 14

(11) R. v. Nabadwip Goswami 1 B. L. R., O. Cr., 15, 27, 28, 33, 34 (1869); 15 W. R. Cr., 75, note.

(12) Tamur Sing v. Kaldas Roy 4 B. L. R., O. C. J., 51 (1869) See now Act III of 1900 (The Prisoners' Act).

of 1863 was enacted, and we are not shown that there was, in the year 1820 or thereabouts, any official gazett ... eens were usually notified; or that ... any such gazette, ' and the Court ... the appointment (1)

Clauses (8—12).

Clauses (8—12) are in general acc... Under the eighth section, the existence, title a ... reign recognised by the British Crow ... a foreign Sovereign is a matter, of ... judicial cognizance—that is to say a matter which the Court is either assumed to know or to have the means of discovering without a contentious enquiry, as to whether the person cited is or is not, in the position of an independent Sovereign Of course the Court will take the best means of informing itself on the subject, if there is any kind of doubt, and the matter is not as notorious as the status of some great monarch such as the Emperor of Germany."(3) Under the ninth clause the Bengali, Willaiti, Fasli, Sambat or Hindi, Hijri and Jalus, Eras will be judicially noticed in those districts in which they are current, and reference may be made to the usual almanacs when occasion requires (4) If it be true that the Indian Courts must take judicial notice of the territories of the King in India, then if there has been a cession of territory they must take notice of that, and they must do so independently of the Gazette, which is no part of the cession but only evidence of it.(5) The Court will take judicial notice of hostilities between the British Crown and any other State (6) But the existence of war between foreign countries will not be judicially noticed (7) It was held that the Court might, for the purpose of taking judicial notice of hostilities between the British Crown and others, refer to a printed official letter from the Secretary to the Government of the Punjab to the Secretary to the Government of India; though it was observed that the letter was not evidence of the facts mentioned in detail by the writer (8)

Clause (13).

The custom or rule of the road on land in England, which is followed in this country, is that horses and carriages should respectively keep on the near or left side of the road except in passing from behind when they keep to the right (9) At sea the general rule is that ships and steamboats, on meeting, "end on, or nearly end on in such a manner as to involve risk of collision," should port their helms, so as to pass on the port, or left side of each other; next, that steamboats should keep out of the way of sailing ships; and next that every vessel overtaking another should keep out of its way.(10)

The penultimate paragraph of ... law, so far as it enables the Court ... of reference upon matters it is dire ... advance of such law, in so far as it permits the Court to refer to such books

(1) Jakir Ali v Raj Chunder, 10 C L R, 469, 475, 476 (1882).
(2) Taylor, Ev, §§ 4, 16, 17, 18
(3) Mighell v. Sultan of Johore, 1 Q B. (1894), 149, 161, per Kay, L J. In this case the person cited was the Sultan of Johore, and the means which the Judge took of informing himself as to his status (and which was held to be a proper means) was by enquiry at the Colonial Office, v post, Lachmi Narain v Raja Partab, 2 A, 17 (1878)
(4) Field, Ev, 6th Ed, 220
(5) Damodar Gordhan v Deoram Kanji, 1 B, 367, 404 (1876), per Lord Selbourne. See s 113, post.
(6) S 57, cl (11).
(7) Dolder v Huntingfield, 11 Ves, 292
(8) R. v. Amiruddin, 7 B L R, 63, 70 (1871)
(9) See Taylor, Ev, § 5
(10) Ib · and for the regulations for preventing collisions at sea, v ib, note (7) See also Abbott's Merchant Shipping, 13th Ed, p 832, et seq ib, 14th Ed, 908, etc
(11) Taylor, Ev, § 21; see as to reference upon such matters, R. v. Amiruddin, 7 B. L R, 63, 70 (1871).

and documents on matters of public history, literature, science or art. For, in England, while the Courts may refer to such books and documents upon matters which are the subject of judicial notice, they may not consult them for any other purpose.(1) By the introduction of the words "and also on all matters of . . . . . . science or art," it is not meant that the Court is to take judicial notice of all such matters. It has been said that if this be so, the provisons as to expert evidence in section 45, and as to the use of treatises in section 60, would be unmeaning, and that what perhaps is meant is that though the parties must obey the law as laid down in sections 45 and 60, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books without any restriction (2) These words will also include reference to matters of science or art which are of such notoriety, as to be the subject of judicial notice.(3) The Courts have under the present section, or the corresponding provisions of Act II of 1855(4), referred or permitted reference to Mill's Political Economy(5), Tod's Rajpootana(6), Malcolm's Central India(7), Buchanan's Journey in Mysore(8), Elphinstone's History of India(9), Harr[illegible] Sir John Shore and Lord Cornwall[illegible] tions for Revenue Officers in the [illegible] Glossary(14), The Institutes of the C[illegible] than(17), Lord Palmerston's speech i[illegible] the Protectorate of the Ionian Islands(18), the speech of Lord Thurlow in the debate in the House of Lords on the cessions made at the Peace of Versailles reported in the History of Parliament(19), British and Foreign State Papers; Hertslet's Commercial Treaties(20), Grant's Observations on the Revenue

(1) Collier v Simpson, 5 C & P, 74

(2) Markby, Ev. Act, 49

(3) The Courts will take notice of the demonstrable conclusions of science as of the movements of the heavenly bodies, the gradations of time by longitude, the magnetic variations from the true meridian, the general characteristics of photography, etc But conclusions dependent on inductive proof, not yet accepted as necessary, will not be judicially noticed Thus the Court has refused [Patterson v McCausland 3 Bland (Ind), 69 (Amer)] to take judicial notice of the alleged conclusion that each concentric layer of a tree notes a year's growth Wharton, Ev, § 335

(4) S 11 [All Courts and persons aforesaid may, on matters of public history, literature, science, or art, refer, for the purposes of evidence, to such published books, maps, or charts as such Courts or persons shall consider to be of authority on the subject to which they relate], and see s 6, ib [In all cases in which the Court is directed to take judicial notice, it may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference]

(5) Thakooranee Dossee v. Bisheshur Mookerjee, 3 W. R, Act X, 29 at p 40 (1865); Ishore Ghose v Hills, W R, Sp No 48, 51 (1862).

(6) Thakooranee Dossee v. Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, at p 56 "The three greatest and best authorities on the modern Native States, Tod's Rajpootana for the North of India, Malcolm's Central India for the Centre, and Buchanan's Journey in Mysore for the South," per Pheac, J.

(7) Ib

(8) Ib

(9) Ib, 31, 55; Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B, 448 (1892), Forester v. Secretary of State, 18 W. R, 354 (1872).

(10) Thakooranee Dossee v. Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, 31, 84.

(11) Ib., 33, 84; Hills v. Ishore Ghose, W. R, Sp. No 40; Ishore Ghose v Hills, W. R., Sp No. 48; s. c, 1 Hay, 350

(12) Thakooranee Dossee v Bisheshur Mookerjee, 3 W. R, Act X, Rul 91, 72, 101, Ishore Ghose v. Hills, W. R, Sp No 48, 52

(13) Thakooranee Dossee v Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, 102, 114

(14) Ib, 103; Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B, 443, 444 (1892); Cherukunneth v. Vengunat, 18 M, 2 (1894); Jivandas Keshavji v Framji Nanabhai 7 Bom H. C. R, 45, 56 (1870); Ramasami Reddi v Guana Sammantha, 22 M, 267 (1898).

(15) Thakooranee Dossee v Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, 104; see observations of Sir Barnes Peacock on the Civil Law, ib

(16) Ib, Jotindromohun Tagore v Ganendromohun Tagore, 18 W R, 359 (1872)

(17) Maharana Shri v Vadilal Vakhatchand, 20 B, 61, 72 (1894)

(18) Damodar Gordhan v Deoram Kanji, 1 B, 380 (1876).

(19) Ib, 386

(20) Ib, 387, 394, 395

of Bengal(1), Colebrooke's Remarks on the Husbandry of Bengal(2), Maine's Ancient Law(3), A Memoir on the Land Tenure and Principles of Taxation in Bengal published by a Bengal Civilian in 1832(4), Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence(5), Wigram on Malabar Law and Custom, Logan's Treatise on Malabar and Glossary(6), Chever's Medical Jurisprudence(7), Lyon's Medical Jurisprudence, Playfair's Science and Practice of Midwifery(8), Shakespeare's Dictionary(9), Morley's Glossary inserted in his Digest(10), Minutes of Sir Thomas Munro(11), Clark's Early Roman Law(12), Aitchison's Treatise(13), Grant Duff's History of the Mahrattas(14), a Portuguese work by Fra Antonio de Goneca published at Coimbra in 1606, the India Orientalis Christiana, by Father Paulinus, Hough's History of Christianity in India(15), Fergusson's History of Architecture(16), Hunter's Imperial Gazetteer of India(17), the Duncan Records, Wynyard's Settlement Report, Robert's Settlement Report(18), McCulloch's Commercial Dictionary(19), Smith's Wealth of Nations(20), Simcox's Primitive Civilization(21), Wilk's History of Mysore(22), Buchanan-Hamilton's Eastern India, Rajendra Lal Mitra's Budha-Gya(23), Prinsep's Tables(24), Koch and Schaell, Histoire des Traites de Paix; Dumont's Corps Diplomatique(25), Annual Register(26), Kattywar Local Calendar and Directory(27), Borrodaile's Caste Rules(28), Lord Mahon's History of England(29), Smollett's History(30), Hallam's Middle Ages(31), Maudsley's Responsibility in Mental Disease, and Bucknill and Tuke's Psychological Medicine(32), Crokes on Castes and Tribes of the N. W. P. and Oudh(33), Srinivasa Ayyangar's Progress in the Madras Presidency and Arbuthnot's Selections from the Minutes

---

(1) Hills v Ishore Ghose, W. R, Sp No 40

(2) Ib

(3) Ishore Ghose v Hills, W R, Sp No 48, 49.

(4) Ib

(5) Hatim v R, 12 C L R, 86 (1882), Hurry Churn v R, 10 C, 140, 142 (1883), R v Dada Ana, 15 B, 452, 457 (1889), R. v Kader Nasyer, 23 C., 608 (1896); Tikam Singh v Dhan Kunwar, 24 A, 449 (1902).

(6) Cherukunneth Nilkandhen v Vengunat Padmanabha, 18 M, 8, 11 (1894); Augustine v. Medlycott, 15 M, 247 (1892), Ramasami Bhagabhathar v. Nagendrayyan, 19 M, 33 (1895).

(7) R v Dada Ana, 15 B, 457 (1889)

(8) Tikam Singh v Dhan Kunwar, 24 A, 448, 449 (1902)

(9) Gajraj Puri v. Achaibar Puri, 16 A, 191, 194 (1893).

(10) Jivandas Keshavji v Framji Nanabhai, 7 Bom H. C R, 45, 56 (1870)

(11) Sheikh Sultan v Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B, 447 (1892)

(12) Jotendramohan Tagore v Ganendromohun Tagore, 18 W. R, 366 (1872)

(13) Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B, 439; Damodar Gordhan v Deoram Kanji, 1 B, 388, 389, 395, 397, 430, 431, 432, 433, 454, 456, 458 (1876); Lachmi Narain v Raja Partab, 2 A, 17 (1878)

(14) Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B, 439.

(15) Augustine v Medlycott, 15 M, 241 (1892).

(16) Secretary of State v Shunmugaraya Mudalier, 20 I A, 84 (1893)

(17) Ib, 83, arg, his description of the estuary of the River Hughli was referred to by the Court in the salvage action, In the matter of the German Steamship Drachenfels, 27 C, 860 (1900).

(18) Bejai Bahadur v Bhupindar Bahadur, 17 A, 460 (1895).

(19) Hormasji Karsetji v. Pedder, 12 Bom H C R., 206 (1875)

(20) Ib, 207

(21) Ramasami Bhagvathar v Nagendrayyan, 19 M, 33 (1895).

(22) Fakir Muhammad v Tirumala Chariar, 1 M, 213 (1876).

(23) Jaipal Gir v Dharmapala, 23 C, 74 (1895)

(24) Forester v The Secretary of State, 18 W R, 354.

(25) Damodhar Gordhan v. Deoram Kanji, 1 B, 393 (1876)

(26) Ib, 436

(27) Ib, 454, 455

(28) Verabhai Ajubhai v. Bai Hirabhai, 7 C W N, 716 (1903)

(29) Lachmi Narain v Raja Partab, 2 A, 21 (1878); in which also it was held that histories, firmans, treaties and replies from the Foreign Office could be referred to

(30) Ib, 15

(31) Ib, 23, 24.

(32) R v Kader Nasyer, 23 C., 608 (1896).

(33) Mariam Bibee v Sheikh Mahomed Ibrahim, 28 C. L. J, 306

and documents on matters of public history, literature, science or art. For, in England, while the Courts may refer to such books and documents upon matters which are the subject of judicial notice, they may not consult them for any other purpose.(1) By the introduction of the words "and also on all matters of . . . . . . science or art," it is not meant that the Court is to take judicial notice of all such matters. It has been said that if this be so, the provisons as to expert evidence in section 45, and as to the use of treatises in section 60, would be unmeaning, and that what perhaps is meant is that though the parties must obey the law as laid down in sections 45 and 60, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books without any restriction.(2) These words will also include reference to matters of science or art which are of such notoriety, as to be the subject of judicial notice.(3) The Courts have under the present section, or the corresponding provisions of Act II of 1855(4), referred or permitted reference to Mill's Political Economy(5), Tod's Rajpootana(6), Malcolm's Central India(7), Buchanan's Journey in Mysore(8), Elphinstone's History of India(9), Harr [illegible]
Sir John Shore and Lord Cornwalli [illegible] tions for Revenue Officers in the [illegible] Glossary(14), The Institutes of the Civil Law(15), Domat(16), Tod's Rajasthan(17), Lord Palmerston's speech in the debate on the relinquishment of the Protectorate of the Ionian Islands(18), the speech of Lord Thurlow in the debate in the House of Lords on the cessions made at the Peace of Versailles reported in the History of Parliament(19), British and Foreign State Papers; Hertslet's Commercial Treaties(20), Grant's Observations on the Revenue

---

(1) Collier v Simpson, 5 C & P., 74

(2) Markby, Ev Act, 49.

(3) The Courts will take notice of the demonstrable conclusions of science as of the movements of the heavenly bodies, the gradations of time by longitude, the magnetic variations from the true meridian, the general characteristics of photography, etc But conclusions dependent on inductive proof, not yet accepted as necessary, will not be judicially noticed Thus the Court has refused [Patterson v McCausland 3 Bland (Ind), 69 (Amer)] to take judicial notice of the alleged conclusion that each concentric layer of a tree notes a year's growth Wharton, Ev, § 335

(4) S 11 [All Courts and persons aforesaid may on matters of public history, literature, science, or art, refer, for the purposes of evidence, to such published books, maps, or charts as such Courts or persons shall consider to be of authority on the subject to which they relate], and see s 6, ib [In all cases in which the Court is directed to take judicial notice, it may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference]

(5) Thakooranee Dossee v. Bisheshur Mookerjee, 3 W R, Act X, 29 at p 40 (1865); Ishore Ghose v Hills, W. R, Sp No. 48, 51 (1862)

(6) Thakooranee Dossee v. Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, at p 56 "The three greatest and best authorities on the modern Native States; Tod's Rajpootana for the North of India, Malcolm's Central India for the Centre, and Buchanan's Journey in Mysore for the South," per Phear, J

(7) Ib.

(8) Ib

(9) Ib, 31, 55; Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B, 448 (1892); Forester v. Secretary of State, 18 W. R., 354 (1872).

(10) Thakooranee Dossee v. Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, 31, 84.

(11) Ib, 33, 84; Hills v. Ishore Ghose, W. R, Sp No 40; Ishore Ghose v. Hills, W. R, Sp No 48; s c, 1 Hay, 350

(12) Thakooranee Dossee v Bisheshur Mookerjee, 3 W. R, Act X, Rul. 91, 72, 101, Ishore Ghose v. Hills, W. R, Sp No 48, 52

(13) Thakooranee Dossee v Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, 102, 114

(14) Ib, 103; Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B, 443, 444 (1892); Cherukunneth v. Vengunat, 18 M, 2 (1894); Jivandas Keshavji v. Framji Nanabhai 7 Bom H. C. R., 45, 56 (1870); Rangasami Reddi v Guana Sammantha, 22 M, 257 (1898).

(15) Thakooranee Dossee v Bisheshur Mookerjee, supra, 104; see observations of Sir Barnes Peacock on the Civil Law, it

(16) Ib, Jotindromohun Tagore v Ganendromohun Tagore, 18 W R, 361 (1872)

(17) Maharana Shri v Vadilal Vakhtchand, 20 B, 61, 72 (1894).

(18) Damodar Gordhan v Deoram Kanji, 1 B, 380 (1876)

(19) Ib, 386

(20) Ib, 387, 394, 395.

of Bengal(1) Colebrooke's Remarks on the Husbandry of Bengal(2), Maine's Ancient Law(3), A Memoir on the Land Tenure and Principles of Taxation in Bengal published by a Bengal Civilian in 1832(4), Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence(5), Wigram on Malabar Law and Custom, Logan's Treatise on Malabar and Glossary(6), Chever's Medical Jurisprudence(7), Lyon's Medical Jurisprudence, Playfair's Science and Practice of Midwifery(8), Shakespeare's [illegible] tes of Sir [illegible] reatise(13), [illegible] Antonio de [illegible] by Father Paulinus, Hough's History of Christianity in India(15), Fergusson's History of Architecture(16), Hunter's Imperial Gazetteer of India(17), the Duncan Records, Wynyard's Settlement Report, Robert's Settlement Report(18), McCulloch's Commercial Dictionary(19), Smith's Wealth of Nations(20), Simcox's Primitive Civilization(21), Wilk's History of Mysore(22), Buchanan-Hamilton's Eastern India, Rajendra Lal Mitra's Budha-Gya(23), Prinsep's Tables(24), Koch and Schaell, Histoire des Traites de Paix, Dumont's Corps Diplomatique(25), Annual Register(26), Kattywar Local Calendar and Directory(27) Borrodaile's Caste Rules(28), Lord Mahon's History of England(29), Smollett's History(30), Hallam's Middle Ages(31), Maudsley's Responsibility in Mental Disease, and Bucknill and Tuke's Psychological Medicine(32), Crokes on Castes and Tribes of the N. W. P. and Oudh(33), Srinivasa Ayyangar's Progress in the Madras Presidency and Arbuthnot's Selections from the Minutes

---

(1) Hills v. Ishore Ghose, W. R., Sp No. 40.

(2) Ib.

(3) Ishore Ghose v. Hills, W. R., Sp No. 48, 49.

(4) Ib.

(5) Hatim v. R. 12 C. L. R., 86 (1882), Hurry Churn v. R. 10 C., 140, 142 (1883), R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B., 452, 457 (1889), R. v. Kader Nasyer, 23 C., 608 (1896), Tikam Singh v. Dhan Kunwar, 24 A., 449 (1902).

(6) Cherukunneth Nilkandhen v. Vengunat Padmanabha 18 M., 8, 11 (1894), Augustine v. Medlycott, 15 M., 247 (1892), Ramasami Bhagabhathar v. Nagendrayyan, 19 M., 33 (1895).

(7) R. v. Dada Ana, 15 B., 457 (1889).

(8) Tikam Singh v. Dhan Kunwar, 24 A., 448, 449 (1902).

(9) Gajraj Puri v. Achaibar Puri, 16 A., 191, 194 (1893).

(10) Jivandas Keshavji v. Framji Nanabhai, 7 Bom. H. C. R., 45, 56 (1870).

(11) Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B., 447 (1892).

(12) Jotendramohan Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore, 18 W. R., 366 (1872).

(13) Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B., 439; Damodar Gordhan v. Deoram Kanji, 1 B., 388, 389, 395, 397, 430, 431, 432, 433, 454, 456, 458 (1876); Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partab, 2 A., 17 (1878).

(14) Sheikh Sultan v. Sheikh Ajmodin, 17 B., 439.

(15) Augustine v. Medlycott, 15 M., 241 (1892).

(16) Secretary of State v. Shunmugaraya Mudalier, 20 I. A., 84 (1893).

(17) Ib., 83, arg., his description of the estuary of the River Hughli was referred to by the Court in the salvage action, In the matter of the German Steamship Drachenfels, 27 C., 860 (1900).

(18) Bejai Bahadur v. Bhupindar Bahadur, 17 A., 460 (1895).

(19) Hormasji Karsetji v. Pedder, 12 Bom. H. C. R., 206 (1875).

(20) Ib., 207.

(21) Ramasami Bhagvathar v. Nagendrayyan, 19 M., 33 (1895).

(22) Fakir Muhammad v. Tirumala Chariar, 1 M., 213 (1876).

(23) Jaipal Gir v. Dharmapala, 23 C., 74 (1895).

(24) Forester v. The Secretary of State, 18 W. R., 354.

(25) Damodhar Gardhan v. Deoram Kanji, 1 B., 393 (1876).

(26) Ib., 436.

(27) Ib., 454, 455.

(28) Verabhai Ajubhai v. Bai Hirabhai, 7 C. W. N., 716 (1903).

(29) Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partab, 2 A., 21 (1878); in which also it was held that histories, firmans, treaties and replies from the Foreign Office could be referred to.

(30) Ib., 15.

(31) Ib., 23, 24.

(32) R. v. Kader Nasyer, 23 C., 608 (1896).

(33) Mariam Bibee v. Sheikh [illegible] omed Ibrahim, 28 C. L. J., 306.

of Sir Thomas Munro(1), Dubois' Hindu Manners, Customs and Ceremonies(2), Atkinson's Gazetteer and Settlement Reports of Alighur(3), Balfour's Cyclopædia of India, Thomas' Report on Chank and Pearl Fisheries; Thurston's Notes on Pearl and Chank Fisheries and Marine Fauna of the Gulf of Manaar; Emerson's Tennant's "Ceylon;" Cosmos Indico pleustes; Abu Zaid "Voyages Arabes," Nelson's "Manual of the Madura Country"(4), Hunter's Statistical Account of Bengal; Stirling's A [illegible] of Orissa(5), the Oxford New [illegible] and other similar books and dc [illegible] relied on Sangunni Menon's History of Travancore as an authority with regard to certain alleged local usages, the High Court did not consider it regular to have relied on this book, which had not been made an exhibit in the cause, without first having called the attention of the parties to it, and heard what they had to say about the matter to which the book referred.(8) In the case of Sajid Ali v. Ibad Ali(9), the Privy Council adversely observed upon a judgment of a Lower Court which appeared to them to have had the unsafe basis of speculative theory derived from medical books, and judicial dicta in other cases, and not to have been founded upon the facts proved in this. In Dorab Ally v. Abdool Azeez(10), the Privy Council held that the fact "that the Province of Oudh was not, when first annexed to British India, or at the date of the execution, annexed to the Presidency of Fort William, was, if not one of those historical facts of which the Courts in India are bound, under the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, to take judicial notice, at least an issue to be tried in the cause." In the undermentioned criminal trial, the Court took judicial notice of the fact that at the period when the offence of dacoity was alleged to have been committed, the district of Agra was notorious as the scene of frequent and recent dacoities (11) And in Ishri Prasad v. Lalji Jas(12), the Court said with reference to a document. "It is common knowledge, of which we are entitled to take notice, that the original records of the Agra Divisions were destroyed during the Mutiny of 1857, and, therefore, under s. 56, cl. (c) of the Indian Evidence Act, the copy is admissible as secondary evidence of the original" There is a real but elusive line between the Judge's personal knowledge as a private man and his knowledge as a Judge. A Judge cannot use from the Bench under the guise of judicial knowledge that which he knows only as an individual observer.(13) Where to draw the line between knowledge of notoriety and knowledge of personal observation may sometimes be difficult, but the principle is plain.(14) The Court may presume that any book to which it refers for information on matters of public or general interest, was written and published by the person, and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published.(15) In questions of public history

---

(1) Venkatanarsimha Naidu v Dandamudi Kottaya, 20 M. 302 (1897).

(2) Ramasami Aiyar v. Vengudisami Ayyar, 22 M., 113, 215 (1898).

(3) Garuradhwaja Prasad v Superundhwaja Prasad, 27 I A., 248 (1900).

(4) Anna Kurnam v Muttupayal, 27 M., 557 (1903).

(5) Shyamanand Das v. Rama Kanta, 32 C., 6, 13 (1904)

(6) In re Dadabhai v Jamsedji, 24 B., 293, 299 (1899).

(7) Ib., 295.

(8) Vallabha v. Madusudanam, 12 M., 495 (1889)

(9) 23 C., 1, 14 (1895)

(10) 5 I A., 116, 124 (1878).

(11) R. v. Bholu, 23 A., 124, 125 (1900)

(12) 22 A., 302 (1900).

(13) Durga Prasad Singh v. Ram Dayal Chaudhuri, 38 C., 153, and see Lakshmana v Sri Raja Viradaraja Appason 36 M. 168 (1913); a Judge can use general knowledge as in determining the value of evidence but not his knowledge of particular facts.

(14) Wigmore, Ev., § 2569, for the case of a Judge giving his own personal experience, see In re Dhanpat Singh 23 C., 796, and as regards his experience in his Court, see San Hla Pan v. Mi Khin 45 I C., 734.

(15) S 87, post

